the same direction from behind the feet of the horse or from below its body; or the rider may spit it, when the ball is in front of the horse; or he may lift himself upon the back leather of the horse and propel the ball from between the feet of the animal.

His Majesty is unrivalled for the skill which he shews in the various ways of hitting the ball; he often manages to strike the ball while in the air, and astonishes all. When a ball is driven to the hál, they beat the naqqárah, so that all that are far and near may hear it. In order to increase the excitement, betting is allowed. The players win from each other, and he who brought the ball to the hál wins most. If a ball be caught in the air, and passes, or is made to pass, beyond the limit (míl), the game is looked upon as burd (drawn). At such times, the players will engage in a regular fight about the ball, and perform admirable feats of skill.

His Majesty also plays at chaugán in dark nights, which caused much astonishment even among clever players. The balls which are used at night, are set on fire.[1] For this purpose, palás wood is used which is very light, and burns for a long time. For the sake of adding splendour to the games, which is necessary in worldly matters, His Majesty has knobs of gold and silver fixed to the tops of the chaugán sticks. If one of them breaks, any player that gets hold of the pieces may keep them.

It is impossible to describe the excellency of this game. Ignorant as I am, I can say but little about it.

'Ishqbází (pigeon-flying).

His Majesty calls pigeon flying 'ishqbází (love-play). This occupation affords the ordinary run of people a dull kind of amusement; but His Majesty, in his wisdom, makes it a study. He even uses the occupation as a way of reducing unsettled, worldly-minded men to obedience, and avails himself of it as a means productive of harmony and friendship. The amusement which His Majesty derives from the tumbling and flying of the pigeons reminds of the ecstacy and transport of enthusiastic dervishes: he praises God for the wonders of creation. It is therefore from higher motives that he pays so much attention to this amusement.

The pigeons of the present age have reached a high state of perfection. Presents of pigeons are sent by the kings of Irán and Túrán; but merchants also bring very excellent ones in large numbers.

---

[1] "In the beginning of 974 (July 1566), the emperor returned (from Jaunpur) to Ágrah, and passed his time in amusements. He went to Nagarchín, a new town which he had built near Ágrah, and enjoyed the chaugán game, dog-hunting, and pigeon-flying. He also invented a fire ball with which he could play at chaugán during dark nights." Bad. II, p. 48.

The town of Nagarchín was subsequently deserted.

When His Majesty was very young, he was fond of this amusement; but afterwards, when he grew older and wiser, he discontinued pigeon-flying altogether. But since then, on mature consideration, he has again taken it up.

A well trained pigeon of bluish colour, formerly belonging to the Khán i A'zam Kokaltásh ('Azíz, Akbar's foster-brother) fell into His Majesty's hands. From the care which was bestowed upon it by His Majesty, it has since become the chief of the imperial pigeons, and is known under the name of Mohanah. From it descended several excellent pigeons as Ashkí (the weeper), Parízád (the fairy), Almás (the diamond), and Sháh 'údí (Aloe Royal). Among their progeny again there are the choicest pigeons in the whole world, which have brought the trained pigeons of 'Umar Shaikh Mírzá (father of Bábar), Sulṭán Husain Mírzá (vide p. 101, note 4) into oblivion. Such improvement, in fact, has been made in the art of training, as to astonish the amateurs of Írán and Túrán, who had to learn the art from the beginning.

In former times pigeons of all kinds were allowed to couple; but His Majesty thinks equality in gracefulness and performance a necessary condition in coupling, and has thus bred choice pigeons. The custom is to keep a male and a female pigeon, if not acquainted with each other, for five or six days together, when they become so familiar, that even after a long separation, they will again recognize each other. The hen generally lays her eggs from eight to twelve days after coupling, or more if she be small or sickly. Pigeons couple in Mihrmáh (September—October), and separate in Farwardín (February—March). A hen lays two eggs, but sometimes only one. The cock will sit upon the eggs by daytime, and the hen during the night, and thus they keep them warm and soft. In winter they hatch for twenty-one days; but if the air be warm, they only take seventeen or eighteen. For about six days, the pigeons feed their young ones with falak, which means grain reduced to pap in the crops of the old ones. Afterwards they feed them from the grain in their crops, which they bring up before it is fully digested. This they continue for about a month, and as soon as they see that the young ones can pick up their own grain, the old ones will go away. Eggs, or even young ones, are sometimes given to other pigeons to take care of. Home bred young ones are trained. Some are kept in a tor (?) till they get stronger, and get acquainted with the place. As soon as these two things have been attained, the pigeons only get one-third or one-fourth of their daily allowance of food. When they have got a little accustomed to hunger, they are gradually allowed to take flights. They take daily about forty hawás (air), i. e. forty flights. At, this period, the trainers pay no regard to what is called charkh and bází (vide below). Of feathers, they count ten, and if eight of them have fallen out, the keepers no longer allow the pigeons to fly, but keep them at rest (khábánidan). After two months, the pigeons get new feathers, and become very strong. They are then again let off. This is the best time for shewing their skill. As soon as the pigeons learn to perform the bází and the charkh, they are sent to His Majesty for inspection, and are kept for four months in readiness, to exhibit their skill. Charkh is a lusty movement ending with the pigeon throwing itself over in a full circle. If this circular turn be not completely carried out, the movement is called katif (shoulder), and is held in no esteem. Bází is the same as mu'allaq zadan (lying on the back with the feet upwards, and quickly turning round, in Hind. Kalá). Some thought that the two wings (katif) meet, which appears to the observer as if it were a mu'allaq; but His Majesty had one wing of a pigeon blackened, when the erroneousness of that opinion became evident. Some pigeons get confused during the bází and charkh, and come stupified to the ground. This is called gulúlah, and is disliked. Sometimes pigeons hurt themselves and fall down; but often they get all right again when they come near the ground; and taking courage and collecting their strength, they fly up again. A pigeon of the kháçah pigeon cots will perform fifteen charkhs and seventy bázís, a feat which will certainly astonish the spectators. In former times, they let eleven or twenty-one pigeons fly at a time; but now-a-days they let off as many as one hundred and one. From the attention which His Majesty has bestowed upon pigeons, they are now so carefully trained as to be let fly at night, even to great heights.

At the time of departure and the breaking up of the camp, the pigeons will follow, the cots being carried by bearers (kuhár). Sometimes they will alight and take rest for a while, and then rise again.

It would be difficult to count the pigeons at Court; but there are more than twenty thousand. Five hundred of them are kháçah. They have a great reputation, and remarkable stories are told of their skill.

Pigeon trainers of former times, in order to determine the value of a pigeon, used to twist the foot, or looked to the slit of the eyes, or the openings on the top of the bill; but they failed to discover more signs of the value of a breed. His Majesty has discovered many more; and fixing the value of a pigeon, in former times a matter of great difficulty, has now become very easy. First. His Majesty subdivided the three signs of former trainers as follows: the two eyes, and their upper and lower signs; the eight claws; the two sides of the beak, above and below. The mutual comparison of these signs has led to many additional means of fixing the value of a pigeon. Secondly. His Majesty looks to the variety and the colour of the annular protuberances on the feet of pigeons. A book has been made, in which the systematic order of these signs has been laid down. According to them, His Majesty distinguishes ten classes, for each of which separate aviaries have been constructed. The price of pigeons in the first house has not been limited. Many a poor man anxious to make his way, has found in the training of superior pigeons a means of getting rich. A pair of second class pigeons has a value of 3 R.; third class, 2½ R.; fourth class, 2 R.; fifth class, 1½ R.; sixth class, 1 R.; seventh class, ¾ R.; eighth class, ½ R.; ninth and tenth classes, ¼ R.

When inspections are held, the stock of Mohanah first pass in review; then the young ones of Ashkí. Though the latter belong to the former, they are now separately counted. Then come the four zirihí pigeons; they are the stock of a pigeon which belonged to Hájí 'Alí, of Samarqand, which coupled with an 'Udí hen, of which I do not know the owner; their stock has become famous. The precedence of all other pigeons is determined by their age or the time they were bought.

The Colours of Khâçah Pigeons.

Magasí (fly-bitten); zirihí (steelblue); amírí (?); zamírí (a colour between zirihí and amírí; His Majesty invented this name); chíní (porcelain blue); naftí (grey like naphta); shafaqí (violet); 'udí (aloewood coloured); surmaí (dark grey, like powder of antimony); kishmishí (dark brown, like currants); halwáí (light-brown like Halwá sweetmeat); çandalí (light-brown, like sandelwood); jigarí (brown); nabátí (greyish white); dúghí (bluish-white, like sour milk); wushkí (of the same colour as the gum called wushk;) jilání (chílání?); kúraí (brown, like a new earthen pot?); nílúfarí (bluish-white); azraq (a colour between yellow and brown; His Majesty applies this name in this sense); átashí (black brown); shaftálú (peach coloured); gul i gaz coloured (?); yellow; kághizí (yellowish, like native paper); zágh (grey like a crow); agrí (a colour between white and brown); muharraqí (a dirty black); khizrí (a colour between greenish and 'údí); ábí (water coloured); surmag (a name invented by His Majesty to express a colour between surmaí and magasí).

Pigeons of these colours have often different names, as gulsar (whose head resembles a flower); dumgházah (stumptail); yakrang (of one colour); halqúmsafíd (white throat); parsafíd (white wing); kallah (big head); ghazghazh (wild chick); mágh (name of an aquatic bird); bábarí (?); álpar (red wing?); kaltah par (short wing); máhdum (moontail); ṭauqdár (ring-bearer); marwáridsar (pearl head); mash'alahdum (torchtail); &c.

Some trainers of the present age gave pigeons such names as indicate their colours. His Majesty rather calls them according to their qualities, as bughur (?), qarapilk (with black eyelids); abyárí; palangnigárí; rekhtah pilk.

There are also many pigeons which do not perform charkhs and bázis, but are distinguished by their colours, or by peculiar tricks. Thus the Kokah pigeon, the voice of which sounds like the call to prayer. 2. The Baghah, which utters a peculiar voice in the morning, to wake up people. 3. The Luqqán, which struts about proudly, wagging its head, neck, and tail. 4. The Loṭan. They turn it about, and let it off on the ground, when it will go through all the motions which a half killed fowl goes through. Some pigeons will do so when the keeper strikes his hand against the ground, and others will shew the same restlessness, when on leaving the cage their beak is made to touch the ground. 5. The K'herní. The cock shews a remarkable attachment to the hen. Though he fly up so high as to be no longer visible, if the hen be exposed in a cage, he will get restless and drop himself instantly down to join her. This is very remarkable. Some of them come down with both wings spread, others close one; some close both; or they change alternately the wing which they close in flying. 6. The Raṭ'h pigeon is chiefly used for carrying letters, though any other kind may be trained to bring letters even from great distances. 7. The Nisháwarí pigeon will fly up, and follow its cage to whatever place it be taken. It will fly out of sight, and stay away for a day or two, when it comes down, and remains in its cage. 8. The Parpá (having feet covered with feathers) will inhale air (?) and act as if it sighed.

Some pigeons are merely kept for the beauty of their plumage, the colours of which receive peculiar names. Thus some are called shírází, shústarí, káshání, jogiyah, rezahdahan, magasí, and qumrí. Wild pigeons are called golah. If some of them are caught, they will be joined by a thousand others; they soon get domesticated. They return daily to the fields, and get on their return salt water to drink. This makes them vomit the grain which they had eaten on the fields. The grain is collected and given as food to other pigeons.

People say that pigeons will but rarely live above thirty years.

Four sers of grain will be sufficient for one hundred of such pigeons as are made to fly; but for other pigeons, five sers are required; or seven and a half, if they pair. But flying pigeons get millet, not mixed with other grain; the others get a mixture of the seven kinds of grain, viz., rice, dál i nukhúd (gram), múng dál, millet, karar, lahdarah, juwár, (vide p. 63). Though most servants of His Majesty keep pigeons and shew much skill in training them, there are a few that have risen to eminence, as Qul 'Alí of Bukhárá, Mastí of Samarqand, Mullázádah, Púr i Mullá Ahmad Chand, Muqbil Khán Chelah, Khwájah Çandal Chelah, Múmín of Harát, 'Abdullaṭíf of Bukhárá, Hájí Qásim of Balkh, Habíb of Shahrsabz, Sikandar Chelah, Máltú, Maqçúd of Samarqand, Khwájah P'húl, Chelah Híránand.

The servants attached to the pigeon houses draw their pay on the list of the army. The pay of a foot soldier varies from 2 R. to 48 R. per mensem.

The game of Chaupar.

From times of old, the people of Hindústán have been fond of this game. It is played with sixteen pieces of the same shape; but every four of them must have the same colour. The pieces all move in the same direction. The players use three dice. Four of the six sides of each dice are greater than the remaining two, the four long sides being marked with one, two, five, and six dots respectively. The players draw two sets of two parallel lines, of which one set bisects the other at right angles. These parallel lines are of equal length. The small square which is formed by the intersection of the two sets in the centre of the figure is left as it is; but the four rectangles adjoining the sides of the square are each divided into twenty-four equal spaces in three rows, each of eight equal spaces, as shewn in figure (XVII).. The game is generally played by four players, of whom two play against the other two. Each player has four pieces, of which he puts two in the sixth and seventh spaces of the middle row of the parallellogram before him, and the other two in the seventh and eighth spaces of the right row. The left row remains empty. Each player moves his pieces, according to his throw, in the outer row, always keeping to the right, till he arrives at the outer left row of the parallelogram from which he started; and from there he moves to the middle row. When arrived at the latter place, he is pukhtah (ripe), and from here, he must throw for each of his pieces the exact number which will carry them to the empty square in the centre of the figure. He is now rasídah, or arrived.

When a player is pukhtah or rasídah, he may commence to play from the beginning, which leads to amusing combinations. As long as a player keeps two of his pieces together, the adversary cannot throw them out. If a player throws a double six, he can move two pieces over twelve spaces, provided the two pieces stand together on one field; but he is allowed to move them only six fields onwards, should he prefer doing so. A similar rule holds for double fives, &c. A throw consisting of a six, a five, and a one, is called khám (raw); and in this case, two pieces, provided they are together on the same field, may each be moved six fields forwards, and every single piece twelve fields. If a player throws three sixes, and three of his four pieces happen to stand on one field, he may move each of them over twelve fields. A similar rule holds, if a player throw three twos, or three ones. There are many other rules for particular cases. If a player has brought his four pieces into the central square, he throws, when his turn comes, for his companion, to get him out too. Formerly the custom was that when a piece had come to the last row, and....[1]. His Majesty thinks it proper to do so from the very eighth field. If the throws of two players are the same as the throw of the preceding players, His Majesty counts them as qáim, or standing. Formerly he did not allow such equal throws. If the four pieces of an opponent are pukhtah, and he yet lose his bet, the other players are entitled to double the amount of the bet. Should any of the players leave the game for some reason, he may appoint anyone to play for him; but he will have to be responsible for the betting of his substitute. Of all winnings, the substitute is entitled to two per cent; if a player loses a bet, his substitute has to pay one per cent. If a player drops one of his pieces, or any of the players be late or inattentive, he is fined one rupee. But a fine of a muhur is exacted if any one prompts the other, or moves his pieces over too many fields, or tries to get two throws.

Formerly many grandees took part in this game; there were often as many as two hundred players, and no one was allowed to go home before he had finished sixteen games, which in some cases lasted three months. If any of them lost his patience and got restless, he had to drink a cup of wine.

Superficially considered, all this is mere play; but His Majesty has higher aims: he weighs the talents of a man, and teaches kindness.

The game of Chandal Mandal.

This game was invented by His Majesty. The figure, or board, which is required, consists of sixteen parallelograms, arranged in a circular form round a centre. Each parallelogram is divided into twenty-four fields, every eight of which form a row; vide Figure XVIII. The number of pieces is sixty-four, and four dice are used, of which the four longer sides are marked with one, two, ten, and twelve points respectively. The number of players is sixteen. Each gets four pieces, which are placed in the middle. As in Chaupar, the pieces are moved to the right, and pass through the whole circle. The player who is out first, is entitled to receive the stipulated amount from the other fifteen players; the second that is out, from fourteen players, and so on. The first player; therefore, wins most, and the last loses most; the other players both lose and win. His Majesty plays this game in several ways; one way in which the pieces are moved as if the fields were squares of a chess board, is very often played. I shall give a few particulars and directions how to play the different kinds of this game.

First kind, no piece can throw out another piece, but moves on by itself. Second way, single pieces may be thrown out. Each player whose piece has

---

[1] The MSS. have az khánah i hashtum páyán shawad, hangám i khám shudan ámádah gardad, which words are not clear to me.

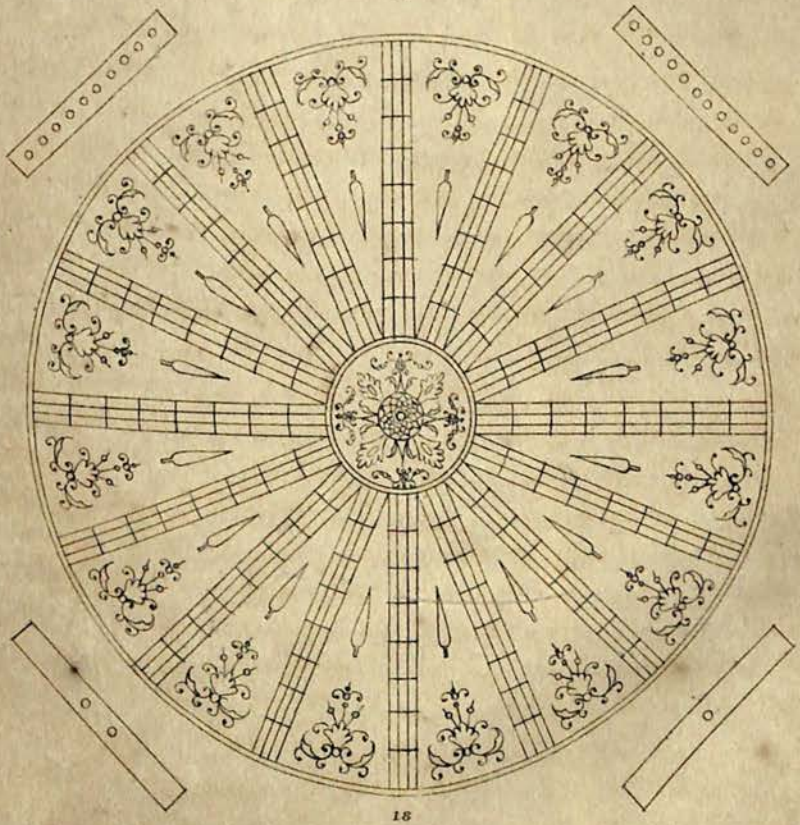
17



18

thus been thrown out, commences again from his starting point. Third way, at each throw two pieces are moved at a time, either with or without the permission of throwing out pieces. Fourth way, the preceding rule is applied to three or four pieces at a time. Fifth way, the dice are thrown four times, and four pieces are moved at each throw. These different ways may, moreover, be varied by some players playing to the right, others to the left, or all in the same direction. Sixth way, a player is out when he comes to the place from which the player opposite to him commenced to play, moving from the middle row of his opponent into the empty space in the centre of the board. Or the game ends when each player arrives at the place from which his left hand neighbour commenced to play. Seventh way, each player puts his pieces before himself, and has three throws. At the first throw, he moves two of his pieces; at the second, one of his own pieces and one belonging to his right hand neighbour; at the third throw, he moves any piece of his own, and allows his left hand neighbour to move one of his pieces. In this way of playing, no player throws out the pieces of his neighbours; and when the game is in full swing, he allows each piece which happens to come into the row in which he is, to move according to his own throw, as a sort of compliment to a guest. Eighth way, two pieces when together may throw out another set of two pieces; but single pieces do not throw out each other. Ninth way, four pieces together may throw out three together; three together, sets of two; and two together, single ones; but single pieces do not throw out each other. Tenth way, each player moves his pieces according to the number of points which he throws; but at the same time, the player who sits opposite to him moves his pieces according to the number of points on the reverse sides of the dice, whilst the two players to the right and left of the player who threw the dice, move their pieces according to the number of points on the right and left sides of the dice. Eleventh way, the players use five dice and four pieces. Each player, in his turn, throws the five dice, and moves his pieces according to the sum of the two highest points of his throw. The next highest point is taken by his vis-à-vis, and the two lowest points by his right and left hand neighbours. Twelfth way, the players have each five dice and five pieces. At every throw, he gives the points of one die to his right hand neighbour, and uses the others for himself. Sometimes the thrower mentions beforehand the names of four players to whom he wishes to give the points of four dice, he himself taking the points of the fifth die. And when a player requires only a few points, to get pukhtah, he must give the remaining points to those near whom the dice fall.

The game may also be played by fifteen or less players, the figure being lessened accordingly. So also may the number of the dice be increased or decreased.

Cards.

This is a well known game. His Majesty has made some alterations in the cards. Ancient sages took the number twelve as the basis, and made the suit to consist of twelve cards; but they forgot that the twelve kings should be of twelve different kinds. His Majesty plays with the following suits of cards. 1*st*, Ashwapati, the lord of horses. The highest card represents a king on horseback, resembling the king of Dihlí, with the umbrella (chatr), the standard ('alam), and other imperial ensigns. The second highest card of the same suit represents a vazír on horseback; and after this card come ten others of the same suit with pictures of horses, from one to ten. 2*nd*, Gajpati, the king whose power lies in the number of his elephants, as the ruler of Oṛísah. The other eleven cards represent, as before, the vazír, and elephants from ten to one. 3*rd*, Narpati, a king whose power lies in his infantry, as is the case with the rulers of Bíjápúr. The card represents a king sitting on his throne in imperial splendour; the vazír sits on a foot stool (çandalí), and the ten cards completing this suit have foot soldiers, from one to ten. 4*th*, Gaḍhpati. The card shews a man sitting on a throne over a fort; the vazír sits on a çandalí over a fort; and the remaining ten cards have forts from one to ten, as before. 5*th*, Dhanpati, the lord of treasures. The first card of this suit shews a man, sitting on a throne, and gold and silver heaps; the vazír sits upon a çandalí, as if he took account of the Treasury, and the remaining cards shew jars full of gold and silver, from one to ten. 6*th*, Dalpati, the hero of battle. The first card of this suit shews a king in armour, sitting on his throne and surrounded by warriors in coats of mail. The vazír sits on a çandalí, and wears a jaibah (breast armour); the ten other cards shew individuals clad in armour. 7*th*, Nawápati, the lord of the fleet. The card shews a man sitting on a throne in a ship; the vazír sits, as usual, on a çandalí, and the other ten cards have boats from one to ten. 8*th*, Típati, a queen sitting on the throne, surrounded by her maids. The second card shews a woman as vazír on a çandalí, and the other ten cards have pictures of women, from one to ten. 9*th*, Surapati, the king of the divinities (deotah), also called Indar, on a throne. The vazír sits on a çandalí, and the ten other cards have pictures of divinities from one to ten. 10*th*, Asrpati, the lord of genii (deo). The card represents Sulaimán, son of Dáúd, on the throne. The vazír sits on a çandalí, and the other ten cards have genii. 11*th*, Banpati, the king of wild beasts. The card represents a tiger (sher) with some other animals. The vazír is drawn in the shape of a leopard (palang) and the other ten cards are pictures of wild beasts, as usual from one to ten. 12*th*, Áhipati, the king of snakes. The first card shews a serpent mounted on a dragon, whilst the vazír is a serpent riding on another serpent of the same kind. The remaining ten cards shew serpents, from one to ten.

The first six of these twelve suits are called bishbar (powerful), and the six last, kambar (weak).

His Majesty has also made some suitable alterations in the cards. Thus the Dhanpati, or lord of treasures, is represented as a man distributing money. The vazír sits on a çandálí, and inspects the Treasury; but the ten other cards of this suit are representations of the ten classes of workmen employed in the Treasury, viz., the jeweller, the melter, the piece-cutter (muṭallas-sáz), the weighman, the coiner, the muhur counter, the bitikchí (writer) of dhan pieces (vide p. 30, No. 17), the bitikchí of man pieces (vide p. 30, No. 20), the dealer, the qurçgar (vide p. 23, No. 15). His Majesty had also the king of assignments painted on the cards, who inspects farmáns, grants, and the leaves of the daftar (vide p. 260); the vazír sits on a çandalí with the daftar before him; the other cards show officers employed in the Financial Department, as the paper maker, the misṭar maker (vide p. 52, Note 5), the clerk who makes the entries in the Daftar, the illuminator (muçawwir), the naqqásh (who ornaments the pages), the jadwalkash (who draws blue and gold lines on the pages), the farmán writer, the mujallid (bookbinder), the rangrez[1] (who stains the paper with different colours). The Pádisháh i qimásh also, or king of manufactures, is painted in great state, looking at different things, as Thibetan yaks, silk, silken stuffs. The vazír sits near him on a çandalí, enquiring into former proceedings. The other ten cards represent beasts of burden. Again, the Pádisháh i Çhang, or lord of the lyre, is painted sitting on a throne, and listening to music; the vazír sits before him, enquiring into the circumstances of the performers, of whom pictures are given on the remaining cards. Next, the Pádisháh i zar i safíd, or king of silver, who is painted distributing rupees and other silver coins; the vazír sits on a çandalí, and makes enquiries regarding donations. On the other cards, the workmen of the silver mint are depicted, as before those of the gold mint. Then comes the Pádisháh i shamsher, or king of the sword, who is painted trying the steel of a sword. The vazír sits upon a çandalí, and inspects the arsenal; the other cards contain pictures of armourers, polishers, &c. After him comes the Pádisháh i Táj,[2] or king of the diadem. He confers royal insignia, and the çandalí upon which the vazír sits, is the last of the insignia. The ten other cards contain pictures of workmen, as tailors, quilters, &c. Lastly, the Pádisháh i Ghulámán, or king of the slaves, sits on an elephant, and the vazír on a cart. The other cards are representations of servants, some of whom sit, some lie on the ground in worship, some are drunk, others sober, &c.

[1] This is the Hindústání corruption of the Persian rangraz.

[2] Táj is often translated by a crown; but táj is a cap worn by oriental kings instead of the crown of occidental kings. Hence the word diadem does not express the meaning of táj either.

Besides these ordinary games of cards, His Majesty also plays chess, four-handed and two-handed. His chief object is to test the value of men, and to establish harmony and good fellow-feeling at Court.

ÁÍN 30.

THE GRANDEES OF THE EMPIRE.[1]

At first I intended, in speaking of the Grandees of the Court, to record the deeds which raised them to their exalted positions, to describe their qualities, and to say something of their experience. But I am unwilling to bestow mere praise; in fact, it does not become the encomiast of His Majesty to praise others, and I should act against my sense of truthfulness, were I but to mention that which is praiseworthy, and to pass in silence over that which cannot be approved of. I shall therefore merely record, in form of a table, their names and the titles which have been conferred upon them.

I. Commanders of Ten Thousand.

1. Shah'za'dah Sulta'n Sali'm, eldest son of His Majesty.

II. Commanders of Eight Thousand.

2. Sha'hz'adah Sulta'n Mura'd, second son of His Majesty.

III. Commanders of Seven Thousand.

3. Sha'hza'dah Sulta'n Da'nya'l, third son of His Majesty.

Akbar had five sons—

1. Hasan } twins, born 3rd Rabí' I, 972. They only lived one month.
2. Husain }
3. Sulṭán Salím [Jahangir],
4. Sulṭán Murád.
5. Sulṭán Dányál.

Of daughters, I find three mentioned—(a.) Sháhzádah Khánum, born three months after Salím, in 977. (b.) Shukrunnisá Begum, who in 1001 was married to [1] From the fact that Abulfazl mentions in his list of Grandees Prince Khusrau, (vide No. 4) who was born in 995, but not Prince Parwíz, who was born in 997, we might conclude that the table was compiled prior to 997. But from my note to p. 246, it would appear that the beginning of the list refers to a time prior to 993, and Abulfazl may have afterward added Khusrau's name, though it is difficult to say why he did not add the names of Parwíz and Sháhjahán, both of whom were born before the Áín was completed.

Again, Mírzá Sháhrukh (No. 7) and Mírzá Muzaffar Husain (No. 8) are mentioned as a Commanders of Five Thousand, though they were appointed in 1001 and 1003 respectively, i. e., a short time before the Áín was completed.

The biographical notices which I have given after the names of the more illustrious grandees are chiefly taken from a MS. copy of the Maásir ul Umará (No. 77 of the MSS. of the As. Soc. Bengal), the Tuzuk i Jahángírí, the Ṭabaqati Akbarí, Badáoní, and the Akbarnámah. For the convenience of the student of Indian History, I have added a genealogical table of the House of Tímúr, and would refer the reader to a more detailed article on the Chronology of Tímúr and his Descendants, published by me in the Proceedings of the Asiatic Society of Bengal for August, 1869.

Mírzá Sháhrukh (No. 7, below, p. 312); and (c.) Árám Bánú Begum; both born after Sulṭán Dányál. Regarding the death of the last Begum, vide Tuzuk, p. 386.

Of Akbar's wives the following are mentioned:—1. Sulṭán Raqiyah Begum (a daughter of Mírzá Hindál), who died 84 years old, 7th Jumáda I, 1035, (Tuzuk, p. 401). She was Akbar's first wife (zan i kalán), but had no child by him. She tended Sháhjahán. Núr Jahán (Jahángír's wife) also stayed with her after the murder of Sher Afkan. 2. Sulṭán Salímah Begum. She was a daughter of Gulrukh (?) Begum[1] (a daughter of Bábar) and Mírzá Núruddín Muhammad. Humáyún had destined her for Bairám Khán, who married her in the beginning of Akbar's reign. After the death of Bairám, Akbar, in 968, married her. She died 10th Zí Qa'dah, 1021. As a poetess, she is known under the name Makhfí (concealed), and must not be confounded with Zebunnisá[2] (a daughter of Aurangzeb's), who has the same poetical name. 3. The daughter of Rájah Bihárí Mal and sister of Rájah Bhagawán Dás. Akbar married her in 968, at Sáṉbbar. 4. The beautiful wife of 'Abdulwási', married in 970, (vide Bad. II, 61). 5. Jodh Bái, or Princess of Jodhpúr, the mother of Jahángír. Her name is not mentioned by any Muhammadan historian. As Akbar's mother had the title of Maryam Makání, so was Jodh Bái called Maryam uzzamání. She died in the month of Rajab 1032, A. H. (Tuzuk, p. 361). The Tuzuk expresses a hope 'that God will receive her in His mercy; for Jahángír's mother, though a Hindú, could not well 'be sent to hell.' 6. Bíbí Daulat Shád, mother of (b.) and (c.); vide Tuzuk, p. 16. 7. A daughter of 'Abdullah Khán Mughul (964). 8. A daughter of Mírán Mubárik Sháh of Khandes; vide p. 13, note.

Sulṭán Salím. Title as Emperor, Jahángír. Title after death, Jannatmakání. Born at Fathpúr Síkrí, on Wednesday, 17th Rabí' I, 977, or 18th Shahríwar of the 14th year of Akbar's Era. He was called Salím, because he was born in the house of Shaikh Salím i Chishtí. Akbar used to call him Shaikhú Bábá (vide Tuzuk, p. 1). For his wives and children, vide below, No. 4. Jahángír died on the 28th Çafar 1037 (28th October, 1627) near Rájor on the Kashmír frontier. Vide my article on Jahángír in the Calcutta Review for October, 1869.

Sulṭán Murád, Akbar's fourth son, was born on Thursday, 3rd Muharram, 978, and died of delirium tremens in 1006, at Jalnápúr in Barár (Tuzuk, p. 15; Akbarnámah II, p. 443; Kháfí Khán, p. 212). He was nicknamed Paháṛí (Bad. II, 378). He was sabzrang (of a livid complexion), thin, and tall (Tuzuk). A daughter of his was married to Prince Parwíz, Jahángír's son (Tuzuk), p. 38.)

Sulṭán Dányál was born at Ajmír, on the 10th Jumáda I., 979, and died of delirium tremens, A. H. 1013. Kháfí Khán, I. p. 232, says, the news of his death reached Akbar in the beginning of 1014. He was called Dányál in remembrance of Shaikh Dányál, a follower of Mu'ín i Chishtí, to whose tomb at Ajmír Akbar, in the beginning of his reign, often made pilgrimages. Dányál married, in the beginning of 1002, the daughter of Qulij Khán (No. 42), and towards the end of 1006, Jánán Begum, a daughter of Mírzá 'Abdurrahím Khán Khánán (Kháfí Khán, p. 213), and was betrothed to a daughter of Ibráhím 'Ádilsháh of Bíjápúr; but he died before the [1] Regarding her, vide Journal, A. S. of Bengal for 1869, p. 136, note.

[2] Her charming Díwán was lithographed at Lucknow, A. H. 1284. She was the eldest daughter of Aurangzeb and was born in 1048, A. H.

marriage was consummated. He had three sons :—1. Ṭahmúras, who was married to Sulṭán Bahár Begum, a daughter of Jahángír. 2. Báyasanghar (بايسنغر). 3. Hoshang, who was married to Hoshmand Bánú Begum, a daughter of Khusrau. Besides, he had four daughters whose names are not mentioned. One of them, Buláqí Begum, was married to Mírzá Wálí (Tuz., p. 272). Ṭahmúras and Hoshang were killed by Áçaf Khán after the death of Jahángír (vide Proceedings, As. Society of Bengal, for August 1869). Nothing appears to be known regarding the fate of Báyasanghar. Vide Calcutta Review for October, 1869.

Dányál is represented as well built, good looking, fond of horses and elephants, and clever in composing Hindústaní poems.

IV. Commanders of Five Thousand.

4. Sulta'n Khusrau, eldest son of Prince Salím [Jahángír].

Jahángír's wives (Tuzuk, p. 84, and Preface, p. 6). A daughter of Rájah Bhagawán Dás, married in 993, gave birth, in 994, to Sulṭánunnisá Begum [Kháfí Khán, Sulṭán Begum], and in 995 to Prince Khusrau. She poisoned herself with opium in a fit of madness apparently brought on by the behaviour of Khusrau and her younger brother Madhú Singh, in 1011 (Khátí Khán, p. 227). 2. A daughter of Rái Rái Singh, son of Rái Kalyan Mal of Bíkánír, married 19th Rajab 994. Bad. II, p. 353. She is not mentioned in the Tuzuk among Jahángír's wives. 3. A daughter of Odai Singh, [Mot'h Rájah], son of Rájah Máldeo, married in 994. The Tuzuk (p. 5) calls her Jagat Gosáyiní. She is the mother of Sháhjahán, and died in 1028, (Tuzuk, p. 268). 4. A daughter of Khwájah Ḥasan, the uncle of Zain Khán Kokah. She is the mother of Prince Parwíz. She died 15th Tír, 1007. 5. A daughter of Rájah Keshú Dás of Rát'hor. She is the mother of Bahár Bánú Begum (born 23rd Shahríwar 998). 6. and 7. The mothers of Jahándár and Shahryár. 8. A daughter of 'Alí Rái, ruler of little Thibet (Bad. II, 376), married in 999. 9. A daughter of Jagat Singh, eldest son of Rájah Mán Singh (Tuzuk, p. 68). 10. Mihrunnisá Khánum, the widow of Sher Afkan. On her marriage with Jahángír she received the title of Núr Mahall, and was later called Núr Jahán. (Tuz. p. 156). Jahángír does not appear to have had children by Núr Jahán.

Jahángír's children. 1. Sulṭán Khusrau. 2. Sulṭán Parwíz. 3. Sulṭán Khurram (Sháhjahán). 4. Sulṭán Jahándár. 5. Sulṭán Shahryár. Two daughters are mentioned :—(a.) Sulṭán Nisár Begum ; (b.) Sulṭán Bahár Bánú Begum. There were 'several children' after Parwíz ; but the Tuzuk (p. 8) does not give their names. They appear to have died soon after their birth.

* Sulṭán Khusrau was born on the 24th Amurdád 995, (Tuzuk, Preface) ; but Kháfí Khán says 997. He was married to a daughter of A'zam Khán Kokah. His sons—1. Baland Akhtar, who died when young, Tuzuk, p. 73. 2. Ḍáwar Bakhsh, (also called Buláqí)* whose daughter, Hoshmand Bánú Begum, was married to Hoshang, son of Dányál. 3. Garshasp.

Khusrau died on the 18th Isfandiyármuz, 1031. He lies buried in the Khusrau Gardens in Allahabad. Dáwar Bakhsh was proclaimed Emperor by Áçaf Khán after the death of Jahángír; but at the order of Sháhjahán, he was killed, together with his brother Garshasp, by Áçaf Khán.

---

* The MSS. spell this name بلاقي and بولاقي.

Sulṭán Parwíz, born 19th Ábán, 997. He was married to a daughter of Mírzá Rustam i Çafawí (No. 9) and had a son who died when young (Tuz. p. 282). A daughter of Parwíz was married to Dárá Shikoh. Parwíz died of delirium tremens in 1036.

Sulṭán Khurram [Sháhjahán] was born at Láhor on the 30th Rabí' I, 1000 A. H. Regarding his family, vide Proceedings A. S. of Bengal, for August 1869, p. 219. He was Akbar's favorite.

Sulṭán Jahándár had no children. He and Sulṭán Shahryár were born about the same time, a few months before Akbar's death (Tuz. Preface, p. 17). Shahryár was married, in the 16th year of Jahángír, to Mihrunnisá, the daughter of Núr Jahán by Sher Afkan, and had a daughter by her, Arzání Begum (Tuzuk, p. 370). The Iqbál-námah (p. 306) calls her ارزلي بيگم. From his want of abilities, he got the nickname Náshudaní (fit for nothing). Khusrau, Parwíz, and Jahándár died before their father.

Shahryár, at the instigation of Núr Jahán, proclaimed himself Emperor at Láhor a few days after the death of Jahángír. He was killed either at the order of Dáwar Bakhsh or of Áçaf Khán; vide Proceedings A. S. Bengal for August 1869, p. 218.

5. Mi'rza' Sulaima'n, son of Khán Mírzá, son of Sulṭán Mahmúd, son of Abú Sa'íd.

6. Mi'rza' Ibra'him, son of Mírzá Sulaimán (No. 5.)

Mírzá Sulaimán was born in 920, and died at Láhor in 997. He is generally called Wálí i Badakhshán. As grandson of Abú Sa'íd Mírzá, he is the sixth descendant from Tímúr. Abú Sa'íd killed Sulṭán Muhammad of Badakhshán, the last of a series of kings who traced their descent to Alexander the Great, and took possession of Badakhshán, which after his death fell to his son, Sultán Mahmúd, who had three sons, Báyasanghar Mírzá, 'Alí Mírzá,[1] Khán Mírzá. When Mahmúd died, Amír Khusrau Khán, one of his nobles, blinded Báyasanghar, killed the second prince, and ruled as usurper. He submitted to Bábar in 910. When Bábar took Qandahár, in 912, from Sháh Beg Arghún, he sent Khán Mírzá as governor to Badakhshán. Mírzá Sulaimán is the son of this Khán Mírzá.[2]

After the death of Khán Mírzá, Badakhshán was governed for Bábar by Prince Humáyún, Sultán Uwais (Mírzá Sulaimán's father-in-law), Prince Hindál, and lastly, by Mírzá Sulaimán, who held Badakhshán till 17 Jumáda II, 948, when he had to surrender himself and his son, Mírzá Ibráhím, to Prince Kámrán. They were released by Humáyún in 952, and took again possession of Badakhshán. When Humáyún had taken Kábul, he made war upon and defeated Mírzá Sulaimán who once in possession of his country, had refused to submit; but when the return of Kámrán from Sind obliged Humáyún to go to Kábul, he reinstated the Mírzá, who held Badakhshán till 983. Bent on making conquests, he invaded in 967 Balkh, but had to return. His son, Mírzá Ibráhím, was killed in battle.[3]

---

[1] The Maásir ul Umará calls the second son, Mírzá Mas'úd.

[2] The Maásir says, Khán Mírzá died in 917; but this is impossible, as Mírzá Sulaimán was born in 920, the Táríkh of his birth being the word بخشي.

[3] Hence he never was a grandee of Akbar's Court, and has been put on the list according to the rules of etiquette.

In the eighth year when Mírzá Muhammad Hakím's (Akbar's brother) mother had been killed by Sháh Abul Ma'álí, Mírzá S. went to Kábul, and had Abul Ma'álí hanged; he then married his own daughter to M. M. Hakím, and appointed Umed 'Alí, a Badakhshán noble, M. M. Hakím's Vakíl (970). But M. M. Hakím did not go on well with Mírzá Sulaimán, who returned next year to Kábul with hostile intentions; but M. M. Hakím fled and asked Akbar for assistance, so that Mírzá S., though he had taken Jalálábád, had to return to Badakhshán. He returned to Kábul in 973, when Akbar's troops had left that country, but retreated on being promised tribute.

Mírzá Sulaimán's wife was Khurram Begum, of the Qibchák tribe. She was clever and had her husband so much in her power, that he did nothing without her advice. Her enemy was Muhtarim Khánum, the widow of Prince Kámrán. M. Sulaimán wanted to marry her; but Khurram Begum got her married, against her will, to Mírzá Ibráhím, by whom she had a son, Mírzá Sháhrukh (No. 7). When Mírzá Ibráhím fell in the war with Balkh, Khurram Begum wanted to send the Khánum to her father, Sháh Muhammad of Káshgar; but she refused to go. As soon as Sháhrukh had grown up, his mother and some Badakhshí nobles excited him to rebel against his grandfather M. Sulaimán. This he did, alternately rebelling and again making peace. Khurram Begum then died. Sháhrukh took away those parts of Badakhshán which his father had held, and found so many adherents, that M. Sulaimán, pretending to go on a pilgrimage to Makkah, left Badakhshán for Kábul, and crossing the Níláb went to India (983). Khán Jahán, governor of the Panjáb, received orders to invade Badakhshán, but was suddenly ordered to go to Bengal, as Mun'ím Khán had died and Mírzá Sulaimán did not care for the governorship of Bengal, which Akbar had given him.

M. Sulaimán then went to Ismá'íl II. of Persia. When the death of that monarch deprived him of the assistance which he had just received, he went to Muzaffar Husain Mírzá (No. 8) at Qandahár, and then to M. M. Hakím at Kábul. Not succeeding in raising disturbances in Kábul, he made for the frontier of Badakhshán, and luckily finding some adherents, he managed to get from his grandson the territory between Táiqán and the Hindú Kush. Soon after Muhtarim Khánum died. Being again pressed by Sháhrukh, M. Sulaimán applied for help to 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak, king of Túrán, who had long wished to annex Badakhshán. He invaded and took the country in 992; Sháhrukh fled to Hindústán, and M. Sulaimán to Kábul. As he could not recover Badakhshán, and rendered destitute by the death of M. M. Hakím, he followed the example of his grandson, and repaired to the court of Akbar who made him a Commander of six thousand.

A few years later, he died at Láhor, at the age of seventy-seven.

7. Mi'rza' Sha'hrukh, son of Mírzá Ibráhím.

Vide Nos. 5 and 6. Akbar, in 1001, gave him his daughter Shukrunnisá Begum, and made him governor of Málwah, and he distinguished himself in the conquest of the Dak'hin. Towards the end of Akbar's reign, he was made a Commander of seven thousand, and was continued in his Mançab by Jahángír.

He died at Ujain in 1016. His wife, Kábulí Begum, was a daughter of Mírzá Muhammad Hakím. She wanted to take his body to Madínah, but was robbed by the Badawís; and after handing over the body to some 'scoundrels,' she went to Baçrah, and then to Shíráz. In 1022, Sháh 'Abbás married her to Mírzá Sulṭán 'Alí, his uncle, whom he had blinded; but the Begum did not like her new husband.

Sháhrukh's Children. 1. Hasan and Husain, twins. Hasan fled with Khusrau and was imprisoned by Jahángír. 2. Badí'uzzamán (or Mírzá Fathpúrí), 'a bundle of wicked bones,' murdered by his brothers in Patan (Gujrát). 3. Mírzá Shujá' rose to honours under Sháhjahán, who called him Najábat Khán. 4. Mírzá Muhammad Zamán. He held a town in Badakhshán, and fell against the Uzbaks. 5. Mírzá Sulṭán, a favorite of Jahángír. He had many wives, and Jahángír would have given him his own daughter in marriage, if he had not perjured himself in trying to conceal the number of his wives. He fell in disgrace, was appointed governor of Gházípúr, where he died. 6. Mírzá Mughul, who did not distinguish himself either. The Tuzuk (p. 65) says that after the death of Sháhrukh, Jahángír took charge of four of his sons, and three of his daughters, 'whom Akbar had not known.' 'Sháhrukh, though twenty years in India, could not speak a word of Hindí.'

8. Mirza Muzaffar Husain, son of Bahrám Mírzá, son of Sháh Ismá'íl i Çafawí.

In 965, Sháh Ṭahmásp of Persia (930 to 984) conquered Qandahár, which was given, together with Dáwar and Garmsír as far as the river Hírmand, to Sulṭán Husain Mírzá, his nephew. Sulṭán Husain M. died in 984, when Sháh Ismá'íl II (984 to 985) was king of Persia, and left five children, Muhammad Husain Mírzá, Muzaffar Husain Mírzá, Rustam Mírzá, Abú Sa'íd Mírzá, and Sanjar Mírzá. The first was killed by Sháh Ismá'íl in Írán. The other four in Qandahár had also been doomed; but the arrival of the news of the sudden death of the Sháh saved their lives. The new Sháh, Khudábandah, gave Qandahár to Muzaffar Husain Mírzá, and Dáwar as far as the Hírmand to Rustam Mírzá, who was accompanied by his two younger brothers, their Vakíl being Hamzah Beg Zul Qadr, or Kor Hamzah, an old servant of their father. The arbitrary behaviour of the Vakíl caused Muzaffar Husain Mírzá to take up arms against him, and after some alternate fighting and peace-making, Muzaffar had the Vakíl murdered. This led to fights between Muzaffar and Mírzá Rustam who, however, returned to Dáwar.

Not long after, the invasion of Khurásán by the Uzbaks under Dín Muhammad Sulṭán and Báqí Sulṭán (a sister's son of 'Abdullah Khán of Túrán) took place, and the Qandahár territory being continually exposed to incursions, the country was unsettled. Most Qizilbásh grandees fell in the everlasting fights, and the Sháh of Persia promised assistance, but rendered none; Mírzá Rustam who had gone to Hindústán, was appointed by Akbar Governor of Láhor, and kept Qandahár in anxiety; and Muzaffar hesitatingly resolved to hand over Qandahár to Akbar, though 'Abdullah Khán of Túrán advised him not to join the Chagatái kings (the Mughuls of India). At that time Qará Beg (an old servant of Muzaffar's father, who had fled to India, and was appointed Farráshbegí by Akbar) returned to Qandahár, and prevailed upon Muzaffar's mother and eldest son to bring about the annexation of Qandahár to India.

Akbar sent Beg Khán Arghún, Governor of Bangish, to take prompt possession of Qandahár, and though, as in all his undertakings, Muzaffar wavered the last moment and had recourse to trickery, he was obliged by the firm and prudent behaviour of Beg Khán, in 1003, to go to Akbar. He received the title of Farzand (son), was made a Commander of five thousand, and received Sambhal as Jágír, "which is more worth than all Qandahár."

But the ryots of his jágír preferred complaints against his grasping collectors, and Muzaffar, annoyed at this, applied to go to Makkah. No sooner had Akbar granted this request than Muzaffar repented. He was reinstated, but as new complaints were preferred, Akbar took away the jágír, and paid him a salary in cash (1005). Muzaffar then went to Makkah, but returned after reaching the first stage, which displeased Akbar so much, that he refused to have anything to do with him.

Muzaffar found everything in India bad, and sometimes resolved to go to Persia, and sometimes to Makkah. From grief and disappointment, and a bodily hurt, he died in 1008.

His daughter, called Qandahár Mahall, was in 1018 married to Sháhjahán, and gave birth, in 1020, to Nawáb Parhez Bánú Begum.

Three sons of his remained in India, Bahrám Mírzá, Haidar Mírzá, (who rose to dignity under Sháhjahán, and died in 1041), and Ismá'íl Mírzá. The Maásír mentions two other sons, Alqás Mírzá and Ṭahmás Mírzá.

Muzaffar's younger brothers, Mírzá Abú Sa'íd, and Mírzá Sanjar, died in 1005. They held commands of Three hundred and fifty. (Vide Nos. 271 and 272.)

9. Mirza Rustam.—He is the younger, but more talented brother of the preceding. As the revenue of Dáwar was insufficient for him and his two younger brothers, he made war on Malik Mahmúd, ruler of Sístán. Muzaffar Husain assisted him at first, but having married Malik Mahmúd's daughter, he turned against Rustam. This caused a rupture between the brothers. Assisted by Lallah (guardian) Hamzah Beg, M. Rustam invaded Qandahár, but without result. During the invasion of the Uzbaks into Khurásán, he conquered the town of Faráh, and bravely held his own. Some time after, he again attacked Malik Mahmúd. The latter wished to settle matters amicably. During an interview, Rustam seized him, and killed him, when Jaláluddín, Mahmúd's son, took up arms. Rustam was defeated, and hearing that his brother Muzaffar had occupied Dáwar, he quickly took the town of Qalát. Being once absent on a hunting expedition, he nearly lost the town, and though he took revenge on the conspirators who had also killed his mother, he felt himself so insecure, that he resolved to join Akbar. Accompanied by his brother, Sanjar Mírzá, and his own four sons Murád, Sháhrukh, Hasan, and Ibráhím, he went in 1001 to India. Akbar made him a Panjhazárí, and gave him Multán as jágír, "which is more than Qandahár." His inferiors being too oppressive, Akbar, in 1003, wished to give him Chítor, but recalled him from Sarhind, gave him Pat'hán as tuyúl, and sent him, together with A'çaf Khán against Rajah Bású. But as both did not get on well together, Akbar called M. Rustam to court, appointing Jagat Singh, son of Rajah Mán Singh, in his stead. In 1006, M. Rustam got Ráisín as jágír. He then served under Prince Dányál in the Dak'hin. In 1021, Jahángír appointed him Governor of That'hah, but recalled him as he ill-treated the Arghúns. After the marriage of his daughter with Prince Parwíz, Jahángír made him Shashhazárí, and appointed him Governor of Alláhábád. He held the fort against 'Abdullah Khán whom Sháhjahán, after taking possession of Bengal and Bihár, had sent against Alláhábád, and forced 'Abdullah to retire to Jhosí. In the 21st year, he was appointed Governor of Bihár, but was pensioned off as too old by Sháhjahán at 120000 Rs. per annum, and retired to A'grah. In the sixth year, M. Rustam married his daughter to Prince Dárá Shikoh. He died, in 1051, at Agrah, 72 years old.

As a poet he is known under the takhalluç of Fidái. He was a man of the world and understood the spirit of the age. All his sons held subsequently posts of distinction.

His first son Murád got from Jahángír the title of Iltifát Khán. He was married to a daughter of 'Abdurrahím Khán Khánán. Murád's son, Mírzá Mukram Khán, also distinguished himself; he died in 1080.

His third son Mírzá Hasan i Çafawí, a Hazár o pançadí under Jahángír, was Governor of Kúch; died 1059. Hasan's son, Mírzá Çafshikan, was Faujdár of Jessore in Bengal, retired, and died in 1073. Çafshikan's son, Sai fuddín i Çafawí, accepted the title of Khán under Aurangzeb.

10. Bairam Khan, the fifth in descent from Mír 'Alí Shukr Beg Bahárlü.

Bahárlü is the name of a principal clan of the Qaráqúilü Turks. During the time of their ascendancy, under Qará Yúsuf, and his sons Qará Sikandar and Mírzá Jahán Sháh, rulers of 'Iráq i 'Arab and Ázarbáiján, 'Alí Shukr Beg held Dainúr, Hamadán, and Kurdistán, "which tracts are still called the territory of 'Alí Shukr." His son Pír 'Alí Beg stayed some time with Sultán Mahmúd Mírzá, and attacked afterwards the Governor of Shíráz, but was defeated. He was killed by some of the Amírs of Sultán Husain Mírzá. Pír Alí Beg's son, in the reign of Sháh Ismá'íl i Çafawí, left 'Iráq, settled in Badakhshán, and entered the service of Amír Khusrau Sháh (vide p. 311, l. 26) at Qunduz. He then joined, with his son Saif 'Alí Beg, Bábar's army as Amír Khusrau had been deposed. Saif 'Alí Beg is Bairám's father.

Bairám Khán was born at Badakhshán. After the death of his father he went to Balkh to study. When sixteen years old, he entered Humáyún's army, fought in the battle of Qanauj (10th Muharram, 947), and fled to the Rájah of Lak'hnor (Sambhal). Sher Sháh met Bairám in Málwah, and tried to win him over. But Bairám fled from Barhámpúr with Abul Qásim, governor of Gwáliár, to Gujrát. They were surprised, on the road, by an ambassador of Sher Sháh who just returned from Gujrát. Abul Qásim, a man of imposing stature, being mistaken for Bairám, the latter stepped forward and said in a manly voice, "I am Bairám." "No," said Abul Qásim, "he is my attendant, and brave and faithful as he is, he wishes to sacrifice himself for me. So let him off." Abul Qásim was then killed, and Bairám escaped to Sultán Mahmúd of Gujrát. Under the pretext of sailing for Makkah, Bairám embarked at Súrat for Sindh. He joined Humáyún on the 7th Muharram, 950, when the Emperor, after passing through the territory of Rajah Máldeo, was pressed by the Arghúns at Jon. On the march to Persia, he proved the most faithful attendant. The King of Persia also liked him, and made him a Khán. On Humayún's return, Bairám was sent on a mission to Prince Kámrán. When Humáyún marched to Kábul, he took Qandahár by force and treachery from the Qizilbáshes, and making Bairám governor of the district, he informed the Sháh that he had done so as Bairám was 'a faithful servant of both.' Subsequently rumours regarding Bairám's duplicity reached Humáyún; but when in 961, the Emperor returned to Qandahár, the rumours turned out false.

The conquest of India may justly be ascribed to Bairám. He gained the battle of Máchhíwárah, and received Sambhal as jágír. In 963, he was appointed atálíq (guardian) of Prince Akbar, with whom he went to the Panjáb against Sikandar Khán. On Akbar's accession (2nd Rabí 'II, 963) at Kalánúr, he was appointed Wakíl and Khán Khánán, and received the title of Khán Bábá. On the second of Shawwál, 964, shortly after the surrender of Mánkoṭ, when Akbar returned to Láhor, an imperial elephant ran against Bairám's tent, and Bairám blamed Atgah Khán (No. 15), who never had been his friend, for this accident. The Atgah, after arrival at Láhor, went with his whole family to Bairám, and attested his innocence by an oath upon the Qorán.[1] In 965, Bairám married Salímah Sulṭán Begum (p. 309, note,) and soon after, the estrangement commenced between Akbar and him. Badáoní (II, p. 36) attributes the fall of Bairám to the illtreatment of Pír Muhammad (No. 20) and the influence of Adham Khán, and his mother Máhum Anagah (Akbar's nurse), Çiddiq Muhammad Khán, Shihábuddín Ahmad, &c., who effectually complained of the wretchedness of their jágírs, and the emptiness of the Treasury, whilst Bairám Khán's friends lived in affluence. The Ṭabaqát i Akbarí says that no less than twenty-five of Bairám's friends reached the dignity of Panjhazárís—rather a proof of Bairám's gift of selecting proper men. Bairám's fall is known from the Histories. "Akbar's trick resembles exactly that which Sulṭán Abú Sa'íd i Mughul adopted towards his minister Amír Chaubán. (Bad.)

On hearing the news that Akbar had assumed the reigns of the government, Bairám left A'grah, and sent his friends who had advised him to go to Akbar, to Court. He himself went under the pretext of going to Makkah to Mewát and Nágor, from where he returned his insignia, which reached Akbar at Jhujhar; for Akbar was on his way to the Panjáb, which Bairám, as it was said, wished to invade. The insignia were conferred on Pír Muhammad Khán, Bairám's old protégé; and he was ordered to see him embark for Makkah. Bairám felt much irritated at this; and finding the road to Gujrát occupied by Rájah Máldeo, his enemy, he proceeded to Bíkánír to his friend Kalyán Mal (No. 93). But unable to restrain himself any longer, he entrusted his property, his family, and his young son 'Abdurrahím (No. 29) to Sher Muhammad Díwánah, his adopted son and jágír holder of Tabarhindah, and broke out in

---

[1] So Bad. II, 19. The story in Elphinstone (Fifth edition), p. 497, does not agree with the sources. The Akbarnámah says, Bairám was on board a ship on the Jamnah, when one of Akbar's elephants ran into the water and nearly upset the boat. Abulfazl, moreover, refers it to a later period than 964. The author of the Sawánih i Akbarí has a fine critical note on Abulfazl's account. I would remark here that as long we have no translation of all the sources for a history of Akbar's reign, European Historians should make the Sawánih i Akbarí the basis of their labours. This work is a modern compilation dedicated to William Kirkpatrick, and was compiled by Amír Haidar of Belgrám from the Akbarnámah, the Tabaqát, Badáoní, Firishtah, the Akbarnámah by Shaikh Iláhdád of Sarhind (poetically called Faizí; vide Journal As. Soc. Bengal for 1868, p. 10) and Abulfazl's letters, of which the compiler had four books. The sources in italics have never been used by preceding historians. This work is perhaps the only critical historical work written by a native, and confirms an opinion which I have elsewhere expressed, that those portions of Indian History for which we have several sources, are full of the most astounding discrepancies as to details.

Belgrám was a great seat of Muhammadan learning from the times of Akbar to the present century. For the literati of the town vide the Tazkirah by Ghulám 'Ali Ázád, entitled Sarw i Ázád.

The author of the Sawánih i Akbarí states that Abulfazl does not shew much friendliness to Bairám, whilst Erskine (Elphinstone, p. 495, note) represents Abulfazl as "Bairám's warm panegyrist."

open rebellion. At Dípálpúr, on his way to the Panjáb, he heard that Díwánah had squandered the property left in his charge, had insulted his family, and had sent Muzaffar 'Alí (whom Bairám had despatched to Díwánah to settle matters) to Court a prisoner. Mortified at this, Bairám resolved to take Jálindhar. Akbar now moved against him; but before he reached him, he heard that Bairám had been defeated[1] by Atgah Khán (No. 15). Bairám fled to Fort Tilwárah on the banks of the Bayáh, followed by Akbar. Fighting ensued. In the very beginning, Sulṭán Husain Jaláir was killed; and when his head was brought to Bairám,[2] he was so sorry, that he sent to Akbar and asked forgiveness. This was granted, and Bairám, accompanied by the principal grandees, went to Akbar's tent, and was pardoned. After staying for two days longer with Mun'im Khán, he received a sum of money, and was sent to Makkah. The whole camp made a collection (chandogh). Hájí Muhammad of Sístán (No. 55) accompanied Bairám over Nágor to Patan (Nahrwálah) in Gujrát, where he was hospitably received by Músá Khán Fúládí, the governor. On Friday, 14th Jumáda I, 968, while alighting from a boat after a trip on the Sahansa Lang Tank, Bairám was stabbed by a Lohání Afghán of the name of Mubárik, whose father had been killed in the battle of Máchhíwarah. "With an Alláhu Akbar on his lips, he died." The motive of Mubárik Khán is said to have merely been revenge. Another reason is mentioned. The Kashmírí wife of Salím Sháh with her daughter had attached herself to Bairám's suite, in order to go to Hijáz, and it had been settled that Bairám's son should be betrothed to her, which annoyed the Afgháns. Some beggars lifted up Bairám's body, and took it to the tomb of Shaikh Husámuddín. Seventeen years later the body was interred in holy ground at Mashhad.

Akbar took charge of 'Abdurrahím, Bairám's son (vide No. 29), and married soon after Salímah Sulṭán Begum, Bairám's widow.

For بيرام Bairám, we often find the spelling بيرم Bairam. Firishtah generally calls him Bairám Khán Turkmán. Bairám was a Shí'ah, and a poet of no mean pretensions (vide Badáoní III, p. 190).

11. Mun'im Khan, son of Bairam[3] Beg.

Nothing appears to be known of the circumstances of his father. Mun'im Khán was a grandee of Humáyún's Court, as also his brother Fazíl Beg. When Humáyún, on his flight to Persia, was hard pressed by Mírzá Sháh Husain of T'hat'hah, one grandee after another went quietly away. M. and Fazil Beg also were on the point of doing so, when Humáyún made them prisoners, as he had done from motives of prudence and policy with several other nobles. M. did not, however, accompany Humáyún to Persia. He rejoined him immediately on his return, and rose at once to high dignity. He rejected the governorship of Qandahár, which was given to Bairám Khán. In 961, he was appointed atálíq of Prince Akbar; and when Humáyún invaded India, M. was left as governor of Kábul in charge of Mírzá Muhammad Hakím, Akbar's brother, then about a year old. In Kábul M. remained till Bairám fell into disgrace. He joined Akbar, in Zí Hajjah, 967, at Lúdhiánah, where Akbar encamped on his expedition against Bairám. M. was then appointed Khán Khánán and Vakíl.

[1] Near كرناچور (or كونا چور) in the Parganah دكهدار [Bad.; دكدار Maásir; دكدهار Sawánih] near Jálindhar. For كوناچور, Bad. (II, 40) has كنورپهلور. Firishtah says (Lucknow edit., p. 249) the fight took place outside of Máchhíwárah.

[2] The Maásir mentions this fact without giving the source.

[3] Some MSS. read Míram; but Bairam is the preferable reading.

In the seventh year of Akbar's reign, when Adham Khán (No. 19) killed Atgah Khán (No. 15), Mun'im who had been the instigator, fled twice from Court, but was caught the second time in Saror (Sirkár of Qanauj) by the collector of the district, and was brought in by Sayyid Mahmúd Khán of Bárha (No. 75). Akbar restored M. to his former honors.

Mun'im Khán's son, Ghaní Khán, whom his father had left in charge of Kábul, caused disturbances from want of tact. Máh Júja k Begum, Prince M. Muhammad Hakím's mother, advised by Fazíl Beg and his son 'Abdulfath, who hated Ghaní Khán, closed the doors of Kábul, when Ghaní Khán was once temporarily absent at Fálíz. Ghaní Khán, not finding adherents to oppose her, went to India. Máh Júja k Begum then appointed Fazíl Beg as Vakíl and 'Abdul Fath as Náib; but being dissatisfied with them, she killed them both, at the advice of Sháh Walí, one of her nobles. On account of these disturbances, Akbar, in the eighth year, sent M. to Kábul. Thinking he could rely on the Kábulís, M. left before his contingent was quite ready. He was attacked near Jalálábád by Máh Júja k Begum (who in the meantime had killed Sháh Walí and had taken up, apparently criminally, with Haidar Qásim Koh-bar, whom she had made Vakíl) and defeated. M. fled to the Ghak'hars, and ashamed and hesitating he joined Akbar, who appointed him Commander of the Fort of A'grah.

In the 12th year, after the defeat and death of Khán Zamán (No. 13), M. was appointed to his jágírs in Jaunpúr (Bad. II, 101), and then concluded peace with Sulaimán Kararáni of Bengal, who promised to read the Khuṭbah and strike coins in Akbar's name.

In 982, Akbar, at M.'s request, went with a flotilla from A'grah to Bihár, and took Hájípúr and Patna from Dáúd, Sulaimán's son. M. was then appointed Governor of Bihár, and was ordered to follow Dáúd into Bengal. M. moved to Ṭándah (opposite Gaur, on the right side of the Ganges) to settle political matters, and left the pursuit to Muhammad Qulí Khán Barlás (No. 31). But as the latter soon after died, M., at the advice of Todar Mall, left Ṭándah, and followed up Dáúd, who after his defeat at جهورة, submitted at Katak. In Ṣafar 983, M. returned, and though his army had terribly suffered from epidemics on the march through Southern Bengal, he quartered them against the advice of his friends at Gaur, where M. soon after died of fever.

The great bridge of Jaunpúr was built by Mun'im Khán in 981. Its tárikh is صراط المستقيم. M.'s son, Ghaní Khán, went to 'Ádilsháh of Bíjápúr, where he died.

12. Tardi Beg Khan, of Turkistán.

A noble of Humáyún's Court. After the conquest of Gujrát, he was made Governor of Champánír (Páwangarh). On Mírzá 'Askarí's defeat by Sulṭán Bahádur, Tardí Beg also succumbed to him and retreated to Humáyún. During the emperor's flight from India, Tardí Beg distinguished himself as one of the most faithless[1] companions. When passing through the territory of Rájah Máldeo, he even refused Humáyún a horse, and at Amarkoṭ, he declined to assist the emperor with a portion of the wealth he had collected while at court. Hence Rái Parsád advised H. to imprison some of his nobles and take away part of their property by force. H. however returned afterwards most of it. In Qandahár, Tardí Beg left the emperor and joined Mírzá 'Askarí. But Mírzá 'Askarí put most of them on the rack, and forced also Tardí Beg to give him a large sum as ransom.

[1] Elphinstone, p. 452 note, says Tardí Beg was one of the most faithful followers of Humáyán, a statement which is contradicted by all native historians.

On Humáyún's return from 'Iráq, Tardí Beg asked pardon for his former faithlessness, was restored to favour, and was sent, in 955, after the death of Múzá Ulugh Beg, son of Mírzá Sulṭán, to Dáwar. During the conquest of India, T. distinguished himself and received Mewát at Jágír. In 963, when Humáyún died (7th Rabí' I), T. read the Khuṭbah in Akbar's name; and sent the crown-insignia with M. Abúl Qásim, son of Prince Kámrán, to Akbar in the Panjáb. Akbar made T. a Commander of Five Thousand and appointed him governor of Dihlí. T. drove away Hájí Khán, an officer of Sher Sháh, from Narnaul. On Hemú's approach, after some unsuccessful fighting, T. too rashly evacuated Dihlí, and joined Akbar at Sarhind. Bairám Khán, who did not like T. from envy and sectarian motives, accused him, and obtaining from Akbar "a sort of permission" (Bad. II, 14) had him murdered (end of 963). Akbar was displeased. Bairám's hasty act was one of the chief causes of the distrust with which the Chagatái nobles looked upon him. Tardí Beg was a Sunní.

13. Kha'n Zama'n i Shaiba'ni'.

His father Haidar Sulṭán Uzbak i Shaibání had been made an Amír in the Jám war with the Qizilbáshes. When Humáyún returned from Persia, Haidar joined him, together with his two sons 'Alí Qulí Khán [Khán Zamán] and Bahádur Khán (No. 22,) and distinguished himself in the conquest of Qandahár. On the march to Kábul, an epidemic broke out in Humáyún's camp, during which Haidar Sulṭán died.

'Alí Qulí Khán distinguished himself in Kábul and in the conquest of Hindústán, was made Amír and sent to the Duáb and Sambhal, where he defeated the Afgháns. At the time of Akbar's accession 'Alí Qulí Khán fought with Shádí Khán, an Afghán noble; but when he heard that Hemú had gone to Dihlí, he thought fighting with this new enemy more important; but before 'Alí Qulí arrived at Dihlí, Tardí Beg (No. 12) had been defeated, and A. returned from Meerut to Akbar at Sarhind. 'Alí Qulí was sent in advance with 10,000 troopers, met Hemú near Pánípat and defeated him. Though Akbar and Bairám were near, they took no part in this battle. 'Alí Qulí received the title of Khán Zamán. Next to Bairám, the restoration of the Mughul Dynasty may be justly ascribed to him. Khán Zamán then got Sambhal again as jágír, cleared the whole north of India up to Lak'hnau of the Afgháns, and acquired an immense fortune by plunder. In 964, he held Jaunpúr as Qáim-maqám for Sikandar, after the latter had surrendered Mánkoṭ. In the third year of Akbar's reign, Khán Zamán became the talk of the whole country in consequence of a love scandal with Sháham Beg, a page of Humáyún, and as he refused to send the boy back to Court, Akbar took away some of Khán Zamán's tuyúls, which led him to rebel. Bairám from generosity did not interfere; but when Pír Muhammad, Khán Zamán's enemy, had been appointed Vakíl, he took away, in the 4th year, the whole of his mahalls, and had him appointed commander against the Afgháns who threatened the Jaunpúr District. Pír Muhammad had also Burj 'Alí thrown from the walls of Fírúzábád, whom Khán Zamán had sent to him to settle matters. Khán Zamán now thought, it was high time to send away Sháham Beg, went to Jaunpúr, and drove away the Afgháns. Upon the fall of Bairám, they appeared again under Sher Sháh, son of 'Adlí, with a large army and 500 elephants. Khán Zamán, however, defeated them in the streets of Jaunpúr, and carried off immense plunder and numerous elephants, which he retained for himself.

In Zí Qa'dah of the 6th year, Akbar moved personally against him; but at Karah (on the Ganges,) Khán Zamán and his brother Bahádur submitted and delivered the booty and the elephants. They were pardoned and sent again to Jaunpúr. Soon after, he defeated the Afgháns, who had attacked him in a fortified position near the Son.

In the 10th year, Khán Zamán rebelled again in concert with the Uzbaks, and attacked the Tuyúldárs of the province. As soon as an imperial army marched against him, he went to Gházípúr, and Akbar on arrival at Jaunpúr sent Mun'im Khán against him. Being a friend of Khán Zamán, he induced him to submit, which he did. But a body of imperial troops under Mu'izzulmulk and Rájah Todar Mall having been defeated by Bahádur and Iskandar Uzbak, (No. 48) the rebellion continued, though repeated attempts were made to bring about a conciliation. Having at last sworn to be faithful, Khán Zamán was left in possession of his jágírs, and Akbar returned to A'grah. But when the emperor, on the 3rd Jumáda I, 974, marched against M. Muhammad Hakím, Khán Zamán rebelled again, read the Khuṭbah at Jaunpúr in M. Muhammad Hakím's name, and marched against Shergarh (Qanauj). Akbar was now resolved no longer to pardon; he left the Panjáb, 12th Ramazán 974, and A'grah on the 26th Shawwál. At Sakít, east of A'grah, Akbar heard that Khán Zamán had fled from Shergarh to Mánikpúr where Bahádur was, and from there marching along the Ganges, had over-bridged the river near the frontier of Singror (Nawábganj, between Mánikpúr and Alláhábád). Akbar sent a detachment of 6000 troopers under Muhammad Qulí Khán Barlás and Todar Mall to Audh to oppose Iskandar Khán Uzbak, and marched over Rái Barelí to Mánikpúr, crossed the Ganges with about 100 men, and slept at night near the banks of the river, at a short distance from Khán Zamán's camp, who must have gone from Nawábganj back again on the right side of the river to Karah. Next morning, 1st Zí Hajjah, 974, Akbar with some reinforcements attacked Khán Zamán. Bahádur was captured, and brought to Akbar, and he had scarcely been despatched, when Khán Zamán's head was brought in. He had been half killed by an elephant whose driver was called Somnát, when a soldier cut off his head; for Akbar had promised a muhur for every Mughul's head. But another soldier snatched away the head and took it to Akbar. The fight took place dar 'arçah i Sakráwal [in Badáoní, Mungarwál] "which place has since been called Fathpúr. The Trig. S. maps shew a small village Fathpúr about 10 or 12 miles south-east of Karah, not far from the river.

On the same day, though the heat was terrible, Akbar started for and reached Alláhábád.

Khán Zamán as a poet styled himself Sulṭán (vide Proceedings Asiatic Society, September 1868.) Zamániyá (now a station on the E. I. Railway) was founded by him. Though an Uzbak, Khán Zamán, from his long residence in Persia was a staunch Shí'ah. Khán Zamán must not be confounded with No. 124.

14. 'Abdullah Khan Uzbak.

A noble of Humáyún's Court. After the defeat of Hemu, he received the title of Shujá'at Khán, got Kálpí as tuyúl, and served under Adham Khán (No. 19) in Gujrát. When Báz Bahádur, after the death of Pír Muhammad, had taken possession of Málwah, 'Abdullah was made a Panjhazárí, and was sent to Málwah with almost unlimited authority. He re-conquered the province, and 'reigned in Mandú like a king.' Akbar found it necessary to move against him. 'Abdullah, after some unsuccessful fighting, fled to Gujrát, pursued by Qásim Khán of Nishápúr (No. 40). Leaving his wives in the hands of his enemies, he fled with his young son to Changíz Khán, an officer of Sulṭán Mahmúd of Gujrát. Hakím 'Ainulmulk was despatched to Changíz with the request to deliver up 'Abdullah, or to dismiss him. Changíz Khán did the latter. 'Abdullah again appeared in Málwah, and was hotly pursued by Shihábuddín Ahmad Khán (No. 26), who nearly captured him. With great difficulties he eluded his pursuers, and managed to reach Jaunpúr, where he died a natural death during the rebellion of Khán Zamán (No. 13).

15. Shamsuddi'n Muhammad Atgah Kha'n.

Son of Mír Yár Muhammad of Ghazní, a simple farmer. Shamsuddín, when about twenty years old, once dreamed that he held the moon under his arm, which dream was justified by the unparalleled luck which he owed to a little deed of kindness. Shamsuddín entered Prince Kámrán's service as a common soldier, and was present in the fatal battle of Qanauj (10th Muharram, 947). Humáyún, after the defeat, crossed the river 'on an elephant,' and dismounted on the other side, where a soldier who had escaped death in the current, stretched out his hand to assist the emperor to jump on the high bank. This soldier was Shamsuddín. Humáyún attached him to his service, and subsequently appointed his wife wet nurse (anagah) to Prince Akbar at Amarkoṭ, conferring upon her the title of Jí Jí Anagah. Shamsuddín remained with the young prince, whilst Humáyún was in Persia, and received after the emperor's restoration the title of Atgah (foster father) Khán. Humáyún sent him to Hiçár, which Sirkár had been set aside for Prince Akbar's maintenance.

After Akbar's accession, Atgah Khán was despatched to Kábul to bring to India the Empress mother and the other Begums. Soon after, on the march from Mankoṭ to Láhor, the elephant affair took place, which has been related under Bairám Khán, p. 316. He held Khusháb in the Panjáb as jágír, and received, after Bairám's fall, the insignia of that chief. He was also appointed Governor of the Panjáb. He defeated Bairám Khán near Jálindhar, before Akbar could come up, for which victory Akbar honored him with the title of A'zam Khán. In the sixth year, he came from Láhor to the Court, and acted as Vakíl either in supersession of Mun'im Khán, or by 'usurpation,' at which Akbar connived. Mun'im Khán and Shiháb Khán (No. 26) felt much annoyed at this, and instigated Adham (vide No. 19) to kill Atgah Khán,[1] 12th Ramazán, 969.

For Atgah Khán's brothers vide Nos. 16, 28, 63, and for his sons, Nos. 18 and 21. The family is often called in Histories Atgah Khail, 'the foster father battalion.'

---

[1] He stabbed at the Atgah, and ordered one of his own servants, an Uzbak, of the name of Khusham Beg, to kill him. Badáoní (p. 52) and Elphinstone (p. 502, l. 1), say that Adham himself killed Atgah.

16. Kha'n i Kala'n, Mir Muhammad, elder brother of Atgah Khán.

He served under Kámrán and Humáyún, and rose to high dignity during the reign of Akbar. Whilst Governor of the Panjáb, where most of the Atgahs (Atgah Khail) had jágírs, he distinguished himself in the war with the G'hakkars, the extirpation of Sulṭán Ádam, and in keeping down Kamál Khán. In the ninth year he assisted Mírzá Muhammad Hakím against Mírzá Sulaimán (No. 5), restored him to the throne of Kábul, settled the country, and sent back the imperial troops under his brother Qṭbuddín (No. 28), though Akbar had appointed the latter Atálíq of the Prince. But Khán i Kalán did not get on well with M. M. Hakím, especially when the Prince had given his sister Fakhrunnisá Begum (a daughter of Humáyún by Júják Begum, and widow of Mír Sháh 'Abdul Ma'álí) to Khwájah Hasan Naqshbandí in marriage. To avoid quarrels, Khán i Kalán left one night Kábul and returned to Láhor.

In the 13th year (976), the Atgah Khail was removed from the Panjáb, and ordered to repair to Ágrah. Khán i Kalán received Sambhal as Jágír, whilst Husain Qulí Khán (No. 24) was appointed to the Panjáb. In 981, he was sent by Akbar in advance, for the reconquest of Gujrát (Bad. II, 165). On the march, near Sarohí (Ajmír), he was wounded by a Rájpút, apparently without cause; but he recovered. After the conquest, he was made governor of Patan (Nahrwálah). He died at Patan in 983.

He was a poet and wrote under the takhalluç of 'Ghaznawí,' in allusion to his birth-place. Badáoní (III, 287) praises him for his learning.

His eldest son, Fázil Khán (No. 156) was a Hazárí, and was killed when Mírzá 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21), was shut up in Ahmadnagar. His second son, Farrukh Khán (No. 232) was a Panjçadí. Nothing else is known of him.

17. Mi'rza' Sharafuddin Husai'n, son of Khwájah Mu'ín.

He was a man of noble descent. His father, Khwájah Mu'ín was the son of Kháwind Mahmúd, second son of Khwájah Kalán (known as Khwájagán Khwájah), eldest son of the renowned saint Khwájah Náçiruddín 'Ubaidullah Ahrár. Hence Mírzá Sharafuddín Hnsain is generally called Ahrárí.

His grandfather, Kháwind Mahmúd went to India, was honorably received by Humáyún, and died at Kábul.

His father, Khwájah Mu'ín, was a rich, but avaricious man; he held the tract of land, called 'Rúdkhánah i Nasheb,' and served under 'Abdullah Khán, ruler of Káshghar. He was married to Kíjak Begum, daughter of Mír 'Aláulmulk of Tirmiz, who is a daughter of Fakhr Jahán Begum, daughter of Sulṭán Abú Sa'íd Mírzá. 'Hence the blood of Tímúr also flowed in the veins of Mírzá Sharafuddín Husain.' As the son did not get on well with his father, he went to Akbar. Through the powerful influence of Máhum, Akbar's nurse, and Adham Khán, her son (No. 19), Mírzá Sharaf was appointed Panjhazárí. In the 5th year, Akbar gave him his sister Bakhshí Bánú Begum in marriage, and made him governor of Ajmír and Nágor. In 969, when Akbar went to Ajmír, Mírzá Sharaf joined the emperor, and distinguished himself in the siege of Mírt'ha, which was defended by Jagmal and Devídás, the latter of whom was killed in an engagement subsequent to their retreat from the fort.

In 970, Mírzá Sharaf's father came to Ágrah and was received with great honors by Akbar. In the same year, Mírzá Sharaf, from motives of suspicion, fled from A'grah over the frontier, pursued by Husain Qulí Khán (No. 24) and other grandees. His father, ashamed of his son's behaviour, left for Hijáz, but died at Cambay. The ship on which his body was, foundered. Mírzá Sharaf stayed for some time with Changiz Khán, a Gujrát noble, and then joined the rebellion of the Mírzás. When Gujrát was conquered, he fled to the Dak'hin, and passing through Baglánah, was captured by the Zamíndár of the place, who after the conquest of Súrat handed him over to Akbar. To frighten him, Akbar ordered him to be put under the feet of a tame elephant, and after having kept him for some time imprisoned, he sent him to Muzaffar Khán, Governor of Bengal (No. 37), who was to give him a jágír, should he find that the Mírzá shewed signs of repentance; but if not, to send him to Makkah. Muzaffar was waiting for the proper season to have him sent off, when Mír Ma'çúm i Kábulí rebelled in Bihár. Joined by Bábá Khán Qáqshál, the rebels besieged Muzaffar Khán in Ṭándah and overpowered him. Mírzá Sharaf fled to them, after having taken possession of the hidden treasures of Muzaffar. But subsequently he became Ma'çúm's enemy. One was waiting for an opportunity to kill the other. Ma'çúm at last bribed a boy of the name of Mahmúd, whom Mírzá Sharaf liked, and had his enemy poisoned. Mírzá Sharaf's death took place in 983. He is wrongly called Siefuddeen in Stewart's History of Bengal (p. 108).

18. Yu'suf Muhammad Kha'n, eldest son of Atgah Khán (No. 15).

He was Akbar's foster brother (kokah or kúkaltásh). When twelve years old, he distinguished himself in the fight with Bairám (p. 317, l. 5,) and was made Khán. When his father had been killed by Adham Khán (No. 19), Akbar took care of him and his younger brother, 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21). He distinguished himself during the several rebellions of Khán Zamán (No. 13).

He died from excessive drinking in 973. Bad. II, p. 84.

19. Adham Kha'n,[1] son of Máhum Anagah.

The name of his father is unknown; he is evidently a royal bastard. His mother Máhum was one of Akbar's nurses (anagah[2]), and attended on Akbar 'from the cradle till after his accession.' She appears to have had unbounded influence in the Harem and over Akbar himself, and Mun'im Khán (No. 11), who after Bairám's fall had been appointed Vakíl, was subject to her counsel. She also played a considerable part in bringing about Bairám's fall; Bad. II, p. 36.

Adham Khán was a Panjhazárí, and distinguished himself in the siege of Mánkoṭ.[3] Bairám Khán, in the third year, gave him Hatkánt'h,[4] South-East of A'grah, as jágír, to

---

[1] Generally called in European histories Ádam Khán; but his name is ادهم, not آدم

[2] This is the pronunciation given in the Calcutta Chagatái Dictionary. Misled by the printed editions of Badáoní, Firishtah, Khálí Khán, &c., I put on p. 223 of my Text edition of the Aín, Máhum Atgah, as if it was the name of a man. Vide Khálí Khán I, p. 132, l. 6 from below.

[3] The Maásir gives a short history of this fort, partly taken from the Akbarnámah.

[4] Hatkánt'h was held by Rájpúts of the Bhadauriyah clan. Vide Beames's edition of Elliot's Glossary, II, p. 86, and I, 27, where the word لهاور is doubtful, though it is certainly not Lahore; for the old spelling 'Luháwar,' for 'Láhor,' had ceased when the author of the Makhzan i Afghání wrote. Besides, a place in Gwáliár is meant, not far from the Sindh river. For لهاور the two edi-check the rebels of the Bhadauriyah clan, who even during the preceding reigns had given much trouble. Though he accused Bairám of partiality in bestowing bad jágírs upon such as he did not like, Adham did his best to keep down the Bhadauriyahs. After Bairám's fall, he was sent, in 968, together with Pír Muhammad Khán, to Málwah, defeated Báz Bahádur near Sárangpúr, and took possession of Bahádur's treasures and dancing girls. His sudden fortune made him refractory; he did not send the booty to Agrah, and Akbar thought it necessary to pay him an unexpected visit, when Máhum Anagah found means to bring her son to his senses. Akbar left after four days. On his departure, Adham prevailed on his mother to send back two beautiful dancing girls; but when Akbar heard of it, Adham turned them away. They were captured, and killed by Máhum's orders. Akbar knew the whole, but said nothing about it. On his return to Agrah, however, he recalled Adham, and appointed Pír Muhammad governor of Málwah.

At Court, Adham met again Atgah Khán, whom both he and Mun'im Khán envied and hated. On the 12th Ramazán 969, when Mun'ím Khán, Atgah Khán, and several other grandees, had a nightly meeting in the state hall at Agrah, Adham Khán with some followers, suddenly entered. All rose to greet him, when Adham struck Atgah with his dagger, and told one of his companions (vide p. 321 note), to kill him. He then went with the dagger in his hand towards the sleeping apartments of Akbar, who had been awakened by the noise in the state hall. Looking out from a window, he saw what had happened, rushed forward sword in hand, and met Adham on a high archway (aiwán) near the harem. "Why have you killed my foster father, you son of a bitch?" (bachah i ládah), cried Akbar. "Stop a moment, majesty," replied Adham, seizing Akbar's arms, "first inquire." Akbar drew away his hands and struck Adham a blow in the face, which sent him "spinning" to the ground. "What are you standing here gaping," said Akbar to one of his attendants of the name of Farhat Khán, "bind this man." This was done, and at Akbar's orders Adham Khán was twice thrown down from the dais (çuffah) of the Aiwán to the ground, with his head foremost. The corpses of Adham and Atgah were then sent to Dihlí.

Máhum Anagah heard of the matter, and thinking that her son had been merely imprisoned, she repaired, though sick, from Dihlí to Agrah. On seeing her, Akbar said, "He has killed my foster father, and I have taken his life." "Your Majesty has done well," replied Máhum, turning pale, and left the hall. Forty days after, she died from grief, and was buried with her son in Dihlí in a tomb which Akbar had built for them. For Adham's brother, vide No. 60.

20. Pi'r Muhammad Kha'n of Shírwán.[1]

Nothing is known of his father. Pír Muhammad was a Mullá, and attached himself to Bairám in Qandahár. Through Bairám's influence he was raised to the tions of Badáoní have لهایر; Dorn has بهایر Behair; Briggs has Yehar; the Lucknow edition of Firishtah has بهار. There is a town and Parganah of the name of لهاوڑ in Sirkár Rantanbhúr.

---

The passage in the Akbarnámah regarding Adham Khán quoted by Elliot may be found among the events of the third year.

Another nest of robbers was the eight villages, called At'bgah, near Sakít, in the Sirkár of Qanauj.

[1] In my Text edition, p. 223, No. 20, dele بسر. Shírwán is also the birth-place of Kháqání. The spelling Sharwán given in the Mu'jam, does not appear to be usual.

dignity of Amír on Akbar's accession. He distinguished himself in the war with Hemú, and received subsequently the title of Náçirulmulk. His pride offended the Chagatái nobles and, at last, Bairám himself, to whom he once refused admittance when he called on him at a time he was sick.

Bairám subsequently ordered him to retire, sent him, at the instigation of Shaikh Gadái (vide p. 272) to the Fort of Biyánah, and then forced him to go on a pilgrimage. Whilst on his way to Gujrát, Pír Muhammad received letters from Adham Khán (No. 19) asking him to delay. He stayed for a short time at Rantanbhúr; but being pursued by Bairám's men, he continued his journey to Gujrát. This harsh treatment annoyed Akbar, and accelerated Bairám's fall. Whilst in Gujrát, P. M. heard of Bairám's disgrace, and returned at once to Akbar who made him a Khán. In 968, he was appointed with Adham Khán to conquer Málwah, of which he was made sole governor after Adham's recall. In 969, he defeated Báz Bahádur who had invaded the country, drove him away, and took Bíjágarh from I'timád Khán, Báz Bahádur's general. He then made a raid into Khandes, which was governed by Mírán Muhammad Sháh, sacked the capital Burhánpúr, slaughtered most unmercifully the inhabitants, and carried off immense booty, when he was attacked by Báz Bahádur and defeated. Arriving at night on his flight at the bank of the Narbaddah, he insisted on crossing it, and perished in the river.

21. Kha'n i A'zam Mi'rza' 'Azi'z Kokah, son of Atgah Khán (No. 15).

His mother was Jí Jí Anagah (vide p. 321). He grew up with Akbar, who remained attached to him to the end of his life. Though often offended by his boldness, Akbar would but rarely punish him; he used to say, "Between me and 'Azíz is a river of milk which I cannot cross."

On the removal of the Atgah Khail (p. 321, l. l.) from the Panjáb, he retained Dípálpúr, where he was visited by Akbar in the 16th year (978) on his pilgrimage to the tomb of Shaikh Farid i Shakkarganj at Ajhodhan (Pák Patan, or Patan i Panjáb).

In the 17th year, after the conquest of Ahmadábád, Mírzá 'Azíz was appointed governor of Gujrát as far as the Mahindra river, whilst Akbar went to conquer Súrat. Muhammad Husain Mírzá and Sháh Mírzá, joined by Sher Khán Fúládí, thereupon besieged Patan; but they were at last defeated by Mírzá 'Azíz and Quṭbuddín. 'Azíz then returned to Ahmadábád. When Akbar, on the 2nd Çafar 981, returned to Fathpúr Síkrí, Ikhtiyárulmulk, a Gujrátí noble, occupied Idar, and then moved against 'Azíz in Ahmadábád. Muhammad Husain Mírzá also came from the Dak'hin, and after attacking Kambháyit (Cambay), they besieged Ahmadábád. 'Azíz held himself bravely. The siege was raised by Akbar, who surprised the rebels[1] near Patan. During the fight Muhammad Husain Mírzá and Ikhtiyár ulmulk were killed. The victory was chiefly gained by Akbar himself, who with 100 chosen men fell upon the enemy from an ambush. 'Azíz had subsequently to fight with the sons of Ikhtiyárulmulk.

---

[1] Akbar left Agrah on the 4th Rabí' I., and attacked the Mírzás on the ninth day after his departure. The distance between Agrah and Patan being 400 kos, Akbar's forced march has often been admired. Briggs, II, p. 241.

In the 20th year Akbar introduced the Dágh (Áín 7), which proved a source of great dissatisfaction among the Amírs. Mírzá 'Azíz especially shewed himself so disobedient, that Akbar was compelled to deprive him temporarily of his rank.

Though restored to his honours in the 23rd year, M. 'Azíz remained unemployed till the 25th year (988), when disturbances had broken out in Bengal and Bihár (vide Muzaffar Khán, No. 37). 'Azíz was promoted to a command of Five Thousand, got the title of A'zam Khán, and was despatched with a large army to quell the rebellion. His time was fully occupied in establishing order in Bihár. Towards the end of the 26th year, he rejoined the emperor, who had returned from Kábul to Fathpúr Síkrí. During 'Azíz's absence from Bihár, the Bengal rebels had occupied Hájípúr, opposite Patna; and 'Azíz, in the 27th year, was again sent to Bihár, with orders to move into Bengal. After collecting the Tuyúldárs of Iláhábád, Audh, and Bihár, he occupied Garhí, the 'key' of Bengal. After several minor fights with the rebels under Ma'çúm i Kábulí, and Majnún Khán Qáqshál, 'Azíz succeeded in gaining over the latter, which forced Ma'çúm to withdraw. The imperial troops then commenced to operate against Qatlú, a Lohání Afghán, who during these disturbances had occupied Orissa and a portion of Bengal. 'Azíz, however, took ill, and handing over the command to Shahbáz Khán i Kambú, returned to his lands in Bihár. Soon after, he joined Akbar at Iláhábád, and was transferred to Garha and Ráisín (993).

In the 31st year (994), M. 'Azíz was appointed to the Dak'hin; but as the operations were frustrated through the envy of Shihábuddín Ahmad (No. 26) and other grandees, 'Azíz withdrew, plundered Ilichpúr in Barár, and then retreated to Gujrát, where the Khán Khánán was (Briggs, II, 257).

In the 32nd year, Prince Murád married a daughter of M. 'Azíz. Towards the end of the 34th year, 'Azíz was appointed Governor of Gujrát in succession to the Khán Khánán. In the 36th year, he moved against Sulṭán Muzaffar, and defeated him in the following year. He then reduced Jám and other zamíndárs of Kachh to obedience, and conquered Somnát and sixteen other harbour towns (37th year). Júnágarh also, the capital of the ruler of Súrat, submitted to him (5th Zí Qa'dah 999), and Miyán Khán and Táj Khán, sons of Daulat Khán ibn i Amín Khán i Ghorí, joined the Mughuls. 'Azíz gave both of them jágírs. He had now leisure to hunt down Sulṭán Muzaffar, who had taken refuge with a Zamíndár of Dwárká. In a fight the latter lost his life, and Muzaffar fled to Kachh, followed by 'Azíz. There also the Zamíndárs submitted, and soon after delivered Sulṭán Muzaffar into his hands. No sooner had he been brought to the Mírzá than he asked for permission to step aside to perform a call of nature, and cut his throat with a razor.

In the 39th year Akbar recalled M. 'Azíz, as he had not been at Court for several years; but the Mírzá dreading the religious innovations at Court,[1] marched against Diu under the pretext of conquering it. He made, however, peace with the 'Firingí' and embarked for Hijáz at Baláwal, a harbour town near Somnát, accompanied by his six younger sons (Khurram, Anwar, 'Abdullah, 'Abdullaṭíf Murtazá, 'Abdulghafúr), six daughters, and about one hundred attendants. Akbar felt sorry for his sudden departure, and with his usual magnanimity, promoted the two eldest sons of the Mírzá (M. Shamsí and M. Shádmán).

---

[1] M. 'Azíz ridiculed Akbar's tendencies to Hinduism and the orders of the 'Divine Faith.' He used to call Faizí and Abulfazl 'Usmán and 'Alí. His disparaging remarks led to his disgrace on the accession of Jahángír, as related below.

M. 'Azíz spent a great deal of money in Makkah; in fact he was so 'fleeced,' that his attachment to Islám was much cooled down; and being assured of Akbar's good wishes for his welfare, he embarked for India, landed again at Baláwal, and joined Akbar in the beginning of 1003. He now became a member of the 'Divine Faith' (vide p. 208, l. 4,) was appointed Governor of Bihár, was made Vakíl in 1004, and received Multán as Jágír.

In the 45th year (1008) he accompanied Akbar to Asír. His mother died about the same time, and Akbar himself assisted in carrying the coffin. Through the mediation of the Mírzá, Bahádur Khán, ruler of Khandes, ceded Asír to Akbar towards the end of the same year. Soon after, Prince Khusrau married one of 'Azíz's daughters.

At Akbar's death, Mán Singh and M. 'Azíz were anxious to proclaim Khusrau successor; but the attempt failed, as Shaikh Faríd i Bukhárí and others had proclaimed Jahángír before Akbar had closed his eyes. Mán Singh left the Fort of Agrah with Khusrau, in order to go to Bengal. 'Azíz wished to accompany him, sent his whole family to the Rájah, and superintended the burial of the deceased monarch. He countenanced Khusrau's rebellion, and escaped capital punishment through the intercession of several courtiers, and of Salímah Sulṭán Begum and other princesses of Akbar's Harem. Not long after, Khwájah Abul Hasan laid before Jahángír a letter written some years ago by 'Azíz to Rájah 'Alí Khán of Khandes, in which 'Azíz had ridiculed Akbar in very strong language. Jahángír gave 'Azíz the letter and asked him to read it, before the whole Court, which he did without the slightest hesitation, thus incurring the blame of all the courtiers present. Jahángír deprived him of his honours and lands, and imprisoned him.

In the 3rd year of Jahángír's reign (1017), M. 'Azíz was restored to his rank, and appointed (nominally) to the command of Gujrát, his eldest son, Jahángír Qulí Khán, being his náib. In the 5th year, when matters did not go on well in the Dak'hin, he was sent there with 10,000 men. In the 8th year (1022), Jahángír went to Ajmír, and appointed, at the request of 'Azíz, Sháhjahán to the command of the Dak'hin forces, whilst he was to remain as adviser. But Sháhjahán did not like M. 'Azíz on account of his partiality for Khusrau, and Mahábat Khán was despatched from Court to accompany 'Azíz from Udaipúr to Agrah. In the 9th year, 'Azíz was again imprisoned, and put under the charge of Açaf Khán in the Fort of Gwáliár (Tuzuk, p. 127). He was set free a year later, and soon after restored to his rank. In the 18th year, he was appointed Atálíq to Prince Dáwar Bakhsh, who had been made Governor of Gujrát. M. 'Azíz died in the 19th year (1033) at Ahmadábád.

'Azíz was remarkable for ease of address, intelligence, and his knowledge of history. He also wrote poems. Historians quote the following aphorism from his 'pithy' sayings. 'A man should marry four wives—a Persian woman to have somebody to talk to; a Khurásání woman, for his housework; a Hindu woman, for nursing his children; and a woman from Máwaránnahr, to have some one to whip as a warning for the other three'. Vide Iqbálnámah, p. 230.

Kokah means 'foster brother,' and is the same as the Turkish Kúkalddsh or Kúkaltash.

Mírzá 'Azíz's sons. 1. Mírzá Shamsí (No. 163). He has been mentioned above. During the reign of Jahángír he rose to importance, and received the title of Jahángír Qulí Khán.

2. Mírzá Shádmán (No. 233). He received the title of Shád Khán. Tuzuk, p. 99.

3. Mírzá Khurrum (No. 177). He was made by Akbar governor of Júnágaṛh in Gujrát, received the title of Kámil Khán under Jahángír, and accompanied Prince Khurram (Sháhjahán) to the Dak'hin.

4. Mírzá 'Abdullah (No. 257) received under Jahángír the title of Sardár Khán. He accompanied his father to Fort Gwáliár.

5. Mírzá Anwar (No. 206) was married to a daughter of Zain Khán Kokah (No. 34).

All of them were promoted to commanderships of Five and Two Thousands. Azíz's other sons have been mentioned above.

A sister of M. 'Azíz, Máh Bánú, was married to 'Abdurrahím Khan Khánán. (No. 29.)

22. Baha'dur Kha'n i Shaiba'ni', (younger) brother of Khán Zamán. (No. 13.)

His real name is Muhammad Sa'íd. Humáyún on his return from Persia put him in charge of the District of Dáwar. He then planned a rebellion and made preparations to take Qandahár, which was commanded by Sháh Muhammad Khán of Qalát (No. 95.) The latter, however, fortified the town and applied to the king of Persia for help, as he could not expect Humáyún to send him assistance. A party of Qizilbáshes attacked Bahádur, who escaped.

In the 2nd year, when Akbar besieged Mánkoṭ, Bahádur, at the request of Bairám Khán, was pardoned, and received Multán as jágír. In the 3rd year, he assisted in the conquest of Málwah. After Bairám's fall, through the influence of Máhum Anagah (vide p. 323), he was made Vakíl, and was soon after appointed to Iṭáwah (Sirkár of Ágrah).

Subsequently he took an active part in the several rebellions of his elder brother (vide p. 320). After his capture, Shahbáz Khán i Kambú (No. 80) killed him at Akbar's order.

Like his brother he was a man of letters (Bad. III, 239).

23. Ra'jah Biha'ri' Mall, son of Prit'hiráj Kachhwáhah.

In some historical MSS. he is called Bihárá Mall. There were two kinds of Kachhwáhas, Rájáwat and Shaikháwat, to the former of which Bihárí Mall belonged. Their ancient family seat was Amber in the Çúbah of Ajmír. Though not so extensive as Marwár, the revenues of Amber were larger.

Bihárí Mall was the first Rájpút that joined Akbar's Court. The flight[1] of Humáyún from India had been the cause of several disturbances. Hájí Khán, a servant of Sher

[1] The 'flight' of Humáyún from India was a delicate subject for Mughul Historians. Abulfazl generally uses euphemisms, as án wáqi'ah i náguzír, 'that unavoidable event,' or rihlat (departure); or ámadan i Sher Khán, the coming of Sher Khán (not Sher Sháh), &c.

Khán, had attacked Núrnaul, the jágír of Majnún Khán Qáqshál (No. 50), who happened to be a friend of the Rájah's. Through his intercession both came to an amicable settlement; and Majnún Khán, after the defeat of Hemú, (963) brought Bihárí Mall's services to the notice of the emperor. The Rájah was invited to come to court, where he was presented before the end of the first year of Akbar's reign. At the interview Akbar was seated on a wild (mast) elephant, and as the animal got restive and ran about, the people made way; only Bihárí Mall's Rájpút attendants, to the surprise of Akbar, stood firm.

In the 6th year of his reign (969), Akbar made a pilgrimage to the tomb of Mu'ín i Chishtí at Ajmír, and at Kalálí, Chaghtá Khán reported to the Emperor, that the Rájah had fortified himself in the passes, as Sharafuddín Husain (No. 17), Governor of Málwah, had made war upon him, chiefly at the instigation of Sojá, son of Púran Mall, elder brother of the Rájah. Sharafuddín had also got hold of Jagnát'h (No. 69), son of the Rájah, Ráj Singh (No. 147), son of Askaran, and Kangár, son of Jagmall (No. 134), his chief object being to get possession of Amber itself. At Deosah, 40 miles east of Jaipúr, Jaimall, son of Rúpsí (No. 118), Bihárí Mall's brother who was the chief of the country, joined Akbar, and brought afterwards, at the request of the emperor, his father Rúpsí. At Sankánír, at last, Bihárí Mall with his whole family attended, and was most honorably received. His request to enter into Akbar's service and to strengthen the ties of friendship by a matrimonial alliance was granted. On his return from Ajmír, Akbar received the Rájah's daughter at Sambhar, and was joined, at Ratan, by the Rájah himself, and his son Bhagawant Dás, and his grandson Kunwar Mán Singh. They accompanied Akbar to Ágrah, where Bihárí Mall was made a Commander of Five Thousand. Soon after, Bihárí Mall returned to Amber. He died at Ágrah (Ṭabaqát).

Amber is said to have been founded A. D. 967 by Dholá Rái, son of Sorá, of whom Bihárí Mall was the 18th descendant.[1]

The Akbernámah mentions the names of four brothers of Bihárí Mall. 1. Púran Mall; 2. Rupsí (No. 118); 3. Askaran (vide No. 174); 4. Jagmall (No. 134). Bihárí Mall is said to have been younger than Púran Mall, but older than the other three.

Three sons of Bihárí Mall were in Akbar's service—1. Bhagwán Dás (No. 27); 2. Jagannát'h (No. 69); and 3. Salhadí (No. 267).

24. Kha'n Jaha'n Husain Quli' Kha'n,[2] son of Walí Beg Zulqadr.

He is the son of Bairám Khán's sister. His father Walí Beg Zulqadr was much attached to Bairám, and was captured in the fight in the Parganah of جالندهر (Jálindhar, vide p. 317, l. 5,) but died immediately afterwards from the wounds received in battle. Akbar looked upon him as the chief instigator of Bairám's rebellion, and ordered his head to cut off, which was sent all over Hindústán. When it was brought to Iṭáwah, Bahádur Khán (No. 22) killed the foot soldiers (tawáchís) that carried it. Khán Jahán had brought Bairám's insignia from Mewát to Akbar, and as he was a near

[1] The present Mahárájah of Jaipúr is the 34th descendant; vide Selections Government of India, No. LXV, 1868. Amber was deserted in 1728, when Jai Singh II. founded the modern Jaipúr.

[2] Husain Quli Beg. Maásir.

relation of the rebel, he was detained and left under charge of A'çaf Khán 'Abdulmajíd, Commander of Dihlí. When Bairám had been pardoned, Khán Jahán was released. He attached himself henceforth to Akbar.

In the 8th year (end of 971), he was made a Khán, and received orders to follow up Sharafuddín Husain (No. 17). Ajmír and Nágor were given him as tuyúl. He took the Fort of Jodhpúr from Chandar Sen, son of Rái Máldeo, and distinguished himself in the pursuit of Udai Singh during the siege of Chítor.

In the 13th year (976), he was transferred to the Panjáb, whither he went after assisting in the conquest of Rantanbhúr.

In the 17th year, he was ordered to take Nagarkoṭ, which had belonged to Rájah Jai Chand. Badáoní says (II, p. 161), that the war was merely undertaken to provide Bír Baṛ with a jágír. Akbar had Jai Chand imprisoned, and Budí Chand, his son, thinking that his father was dead, rebelled. Khán Jahán, on his way, conquered Fort Kotlah, reached Nagarkoṭ in the beginning of Rajab 980, and took the famous Bhawan temple outside of the Fort. The siege was progressing and the town reduced to extremities, when it was reported that Ibráhím Husain Mírzá and Mas'úd Mírzá had invaded the Panjáb. Khán Jahán therefore accepted a payment of five mans of gold and some valuables, and raised the siege. He is also said to have erected a Masjid in front of Jai Chand's palace in the Fort, and to have read the Khuṭbah in Akbar's name (Friday, middle of Shawwál 980).

Accompanied by Ismá'íl Qulí Khán and Mírzá Yúsuf Khán i Rizawí (No. 35), Khán Jahán marched against the Mírzás, surprised them in the Parganah of Talbanah, 40 kos from Multán, and defeated them. Ibráhím Husain Mírzá escaped to Multán, but Mas'úd Husain and several other Mírzás of note were taken prisoners.

In the 18th year (981), when Akbar returned to Ágrah after the conquest of Gujrát, he invited his Amírs to meet him, and Khán Jahán also came with his prisoners, whom he had put into cow skins with horns on, with their eyelashes sewn together. Akbar had their eyes immediately opened, and even pardoned some of the prisoners. The victorious general received the title of Khán Jahán, 'a title in reputation next to that of Khán Khánán.' About the same time Sulaimán, ruler of Badakhshán (p. 312) had come to India, driven away by his grandson Sháhrukh (No. 7), and Khán Jahán was ordered to assist him in recovering his kingdom. But as in 983 Mun'im Khán Khánán died, and Bengal was unsettled, Khán Jahán was recalled from the Panjáb, before he had moved into Badakhshán, and was appointed to Bengal, Rájah Todar Mall being second in command. At Bhágalpúr, Khán Jahán was met by the Amírs of Bengal, and as most of them were Chaghtái nobles, he had, as Qizilbásh, to contend with the same difficulties as Bairám Khán had had. He repulsed the Afgháns who had come up as far as Garhí and Ṭándah; but he met with more decided opposition at Ák Mahall, where Dáúd Khán had fortified himself. The Imperialists suffered much from the constant sallies of the Afgháns. Khán Jahán complained of the wilful neglect of his Amírs, and when Akbar heard of the death of Khwájah 'Abdullah Naqshbandí, who had been purposely left unsupported in a skirmish, he ordered Muzaffar Khán, Governor of Bihár (No. 37) to collect his Jágírdárs and join Khán Jahán (984). The fights near Ák Mahall were now resumed with new vigour. During a skirmish a cannon ball wounded Junaid i Kararáni, Dáúd's cousin,[1] which led to a general battle (15th Rabí' II, 984). The right wing of the Afgháns, commanded by Kálá Pahár, gave way, when the soldiers saw their leader wounded, and the centre under Dáúd was defeated by Khán Jahán. Dáúd himself was captured and brought to Khán Jahán, who sent his head to Akbar.

After this great victory, Khán Jahán despatched Todar Mall to court, and moved to Sátgánw (Húglí), where Dáúd's family lived. Here he defeated the remnant of Dáúd's adherents under Jamshed and Mittí, and reannexed Sátgánw, which since the days of old had been called Bulghákkhánah,[2] to the Mughul empire. Dáúd's mother came to Khán Jahán as a suppliant.

Soon after Mallú Sáín, Rájah of Kúch Bihár sent tribute and 54 elephants, which Khán Jahán despatched to Court.

With the defeat and death of Dáúd, Bengal was by no means conquered. New troubles broke out in Bháṭí,[3] where the Afgháns had collected under Karím Dád, Ibráhím, and the rich Zamíndár 'Ísá (عیسیٰ). With great difficulties Khán Jahán occupied that district, assisted by a party of Afgháns who had joined him together with Dáúd's mother at Goás; and returned to Çihbatpúr, a town which he had founded near Ṭándah. Soon after, he took ill, and died after a sickness of six weeks in the same year (19th Shawwál 986(.

Abulfazl remarks that his death was opportune, inasmuch as the immense plunder collected by Khán Jahán in Bengal, had led him to the verge of rebellion.

Khán Jahán's son, Ḥizá Qulí (No. 274) is mentioned below among the Commanders of Three Hundred and Fifty. In the 47th year he was made a Commander of Five Hundred with a contingent of 300 troopers. Another son, Rahím Qulí, was a Commander of Two Hundred and Fifty, (No. 333). For Khán Jahán's brother vide No. 46.

25. Sai'd Kha'n, son of Ya'qúb Beg, son of Ibráhím Jábúq.

He is also called Sa'íd Khán i Chaghtái. His family had long been serving under the Tímúrides. His grandfather Ibráhím Beg Jábúq was an Amír of Humáyún's and distinguished himself in the Bengal wars. His, son Yúsuf Beg, was attacked near Jaunpúr by Jalál Khán (i. e., Salím Sháh), and killed. His other son also, Ya'qúb, Sa'íd's father, distinguished himself under Humáyún. According to the Ṭabaqát, he was the son of the brother of Jahángír Qulí Beg, governor of Bengal under Humáyún.

Sa'íd rose to the highest honors under Akbar. He was for some time Governor of Multán, and was appointed, in the 22nd year, atálíq of Prince Dányál. Some time after, he was made Çúbahdár of the Panjáb, in supercession to Sháh Qulí Muhrim (No. 45), of whom the inhabitants of the Panjáb had successfully complained. Sa'íd again was succeeded in the governorship by Rájah Bhagwán Dás (No. 27), and received Sambhal as tuyúl. In the 28th year, he was called to Court, was made a commander of Three Thousand, and was sent to Hájípúr (Patna) as successor to Mírzá 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21). In the 32nd year, when Vazír Khán (No. 41) had died in Bengal, Sa'íd was made Governor of Bengal, which office he held till the 40th year. He was also promoted to the rank of Panjhazárí. In the 40th year, Mán Singh (No. 30) being appointed to Bengal, he returned to Court, and was, in the following year, again made Governor of Bihár. In the 48th year (1011), when Mírzá Ghází rebelled in T'hat'hah after the death of his father Mírzá Jání Beg (No. 47), Sa'íd was appointed to Multán and Bhakkar, and brought about the submission of the rebel.

[1] The Ed. Bibl. Indica of Badáoní (II, 238) has by mistake cousin. Badáoní says that the battle took place near Colgong (K'halgánw).

[2] This nickname of Sátgánw is evidently old. Even the word bulghák (rebellion), which may be found on almost every page of the Táríkh i Fíroz Sháhí, is scarcely ever met with in Historical works from the 10th century. It is now quite obsolete.

[3] For Bháṭí, vide below under No. 32

After the accession of Jahángír, he was offered the Governorship of the Panjáb on the condition that he should prevent his eunuchs from committing oppressions, which he promised to do. (Tuzuk, p. 6, l. 2). He died, however, before joining his post, and was buried 'in the garden of Sarhind.'

His affairs during his lifetime were transacted by a Hindú of the name of Chetr Bhoj. Sa'íd had a passion for eunuchs, of whom he had 1200[1]. One of these Khwájah-sarás, Hilál, joined afterwards Jahángír's service; he built Hilálábád, six kos N. W. from Agrah, near Rankaṭṭah,[2] regarding which the Maásir tells an amusing incident. Another eunuch, Ikhtiyár Khán was his Vakíl, and another, I'tibár Khán, the Faujdár of his jágír. For Sa'íd's brother, vide No. 70.

26. Shiha'b Kha'n, a Sayyid of Nishápúr.

His full name is Shihábuddín Ahmad Khán. He was a relation and friend of Máhum Anagah (p. 323) and was instrumental in bringing about Bairám's fall. From the beginning of Akbar's reign, he was Commander of Dilhí. When Akbar, at the request of Máhum, turned from Sikandarábád to Dihlí to see his sick mother, Shiháb Kán told him that his journey, undertaken as it was without the knowledge of Bairám Khán, might prove disastrous to such grandees as were not Bairám's friends; and the Chaghtái nobles took this opportunity of reiterating their complaints, which led to Bairám's disgrace.

As remarked on p. 321, Shiháb served in Málwah against 'Abdullah Khán.

In the 12th year (975), he was appointed Governor of Málwah, and was ordered to drive the Mírzás from that province. In the 13th year, he was put in charge of the Imperial domain lands, as Muzaffar Khán (No. 37) had too much to do with financial matters.

In the 21st year, he was promoted to a command of Five Thousand, and was again appointed to Málwah; but he was transferred, in the following year, to Gujrát, as Vazír Khán (No. 41) had given no satisfaction. He was, in the 28th year, succeeded by I'timád Khán (No. 119), and intended to go to Court; but no sooner had he left Ahmadábád than he was deserted by his servants, who in a body joined Sultán Muzaffar. The events of the Gujrát rebellion are known from the histories. When Mírzá Khán Khánán (No. 29) arrived, Shiháb was attached to Qulij Khán

---

[1] If not acquired in Bengal, this predilection could not have been better satisfied elsewhere. The eunuchs of Bengal and Silhat were renowned; for interesting passages vide below, Third Book, Çúbah of Bengal, and Tuzuk i Jahángírí, pp. 72, 328.

[2] Sikandrah (or Bihishtábád), where Akbar's tomb is, lies half way between Agrah and Rankaṭṭah.

(Málwah Corps). He distinguished himself in the conquest of Bahroṇch (992), and received that district as tuyúl. In the 34th year (997), he was again made Governor of Málwah, in succession to M. 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21).

Shiháb died in Málwah (Ujain, Ṭabaqat) in 999. His wife, Bábú Aghá was related to Akbar's mother; she died in 1005.

During the time Shiháb was Governor of Dihlí, he repaired the canal which Fírúz Sháh had cut from the Parganah of Khizrábád to Safídún; and called it Nahr i Shiháb. This canal was again repaired, at the order of Sháhjahán, by the renowned Makramat Khán, and called فیض نہر, Faiz Nahr, (20th year of Sháhjahán). During the reign of Aurangzeb it was again obstructed, but has now again been repaired and enlarged by the English. (Ásáruççanádíd.)

27. Ra'jah Bhagwa'n Da's, son of Rájah Bihárí Mall.

In the Histories we find the spellings Bhagwant, Bhagwánt, and Bhagwán. He joined Akbar's service with his father (No. 23). In 980, in the fight with Ibráhím Husain Mírzá near Sarnál (Briggs, Sartál), he saved Akbar's life. He also distinguished himself against the Ráná of Idar, whose son, Amr Singh, he brought to Court. When, in the 23rd year, the Kachwáhahs had their tuyúls transferred to the Panjáb, Rájah Bh. D. was appointed Governor of the province. In the 29th year, Bh.'s daughter was married to Prince Salím, of which marriage Prince Khusrau was the offspring. In the 30th year, Bh. D. was made a commander of Five Thousand, and Governor of Zábulistán, as Mán Singh was sent against the Yúsufzaís. But Akbar for some reason detained him. In Khairábád, Bh. D. had a fit of madness, and wounded himself with a dagger; but he recovered, soon after, in the hands of the Court Doctors. In the 32nd year, the jágírs of the Rájah and his family were transferred to Bihár, Mán Singh taking the command of the province.

Rájah Bh. D. died in the beginning of 998 at Láhor, a short time after Rájah Todar Mall (No. 39). People say that on returning from Todar Mall's funeral, he had an attack of stranguary, of which he died. He had the title of Amír ul Umará.

The Jámi 'Masjid of Láhor was built by him.

Regarding his sons, vide Nos. 30, 104, 336.

28. Qutbuddi'n Kha'n, youngest brother of Atgah Khán (15).

As he belonged to the Atgah Khail (vide p. 321), his tuyúl was in the Panjáb. He founded several mosques, &c., at Láhor.

In the 9th year (972), Akbar sent him to Kábul. During his stay there, he built a villa at Ghaznín, his birth place. On the transfer of the 'Atgah Khail' from the Panjáb, Q. was appointed to Málwah. After the conquest of Gujrát, he received as jágír the Sirkár of Bahroṇch (Broach), "which lies south of Ahmadábád, and has a fort on the bank of the Narbuddá near its mouth." Subsequently he returned to Court, and was made a commander of Five Thousand.

In the 24th year (12th Rajab, 987), he was appointed atálíq to Prince Salím, received a dágí,[1] and the title of Beglar Begí. Akbar also honoured him by placing at a feast Prince Salím on his shoulders. Afterwards Q. was again appointed to [1] A kind of warm mantle—a great distinction under the Timúrides.

Bahroṇch 'as far as Nazrbár.' In the 28th year (991), Muzaffar of Gujrát tried to make himself independent. Q. did not act in concert with the other officers, and in consequence of his delay and timidity, he was attacked and defeated by Muzaffar near Barodah. Q.'s servants even joined Muzaffar, whilst he himself retreated to the Fort of Barodah. After a short time he capitulated and surrendered to Muzaffar, who had promised not to harm him or his family. But at the advice of a Zamíndár, Muzaffar went to Bahroṇch, occupied the Fort in which Q.'s family lived, and confiscated his immense property (10 krors of rupees), as also 14 lacs of imperial money. Immediately after, Muzaffar had Q. murdered.

His son Naurang Khán served under Mírzá Khán Khánán (No. 29) in Gujrát (992), received a jágír in Málwah and subsequently in Gujrát. He died in 999.

The MSS. of the Ṭabaqát, which I consulted, contain the remark that Naurang Khán was a Commander of Four Thousand, and was, in 1001, governor of Júnágaṛh.

His second son, Gújar Khán, was a Haftçadí (No. 193), and served chiefly under M. A'zam Khán Kokah (No. 21). He also had a tuyúl in Gujrát.

29. Kha'n Kha'na'n Mi'rza' 'Abdurrahi'm, son of Bairám Khán.

His mother was a daughter of Jamál Khán of Mewát.[2] In 961, when Humáyún returned to India, he enjoined his nobles to enter into matrimonial alliances with the Zamíndárs of the country, and after marrying the elder daughter of Jamál Khán, he asked Bairám Khán to marry the younger one.

M. 'Abdurrahím was born at Láhor, 14th Çafar 964. When Bairám Khán was murdered at Patan in Gujrát (p. 317), his camp was plundered by some Afgháns; but Muhammad Amín Díwánah and Bábá Zambúr managed to remove the child and his mother from the scene of plunder, and bring them to Ahmadábád, fighting on the road with the Afghán robbers. From Ahmadábád, M. 'Abdurrahím was taken to Akbar (969), who notwithstanding the insinuations of malicious courtiers took charge of him. He gave him the title of Mírzá Khán, and married him subsequently to Mah Bánú, sister of M. 'Azíz Kokah. (No. 21).

In 981, M. 'Abdurrahím accompanied Akbar on his forced march to Patan (p. 325). In 984, M. 'A. was appointed to Gujrát, Vazír Khán having the management of the province. In the 25th year, he was made Mír 'Arz, and three years later, atálíq to Prince Salím. Soon after, he was sent against Sulṭán Muzaffar of Gujrát. Muzaffar, during the first Gujrátí war, had fallen into the hands of Akbar's officers. He was committed to the charge of Mun'im Khán (No. 11), and after his death, to the care of Sháh Mançúr the Díwán (No. 122). But Muzaffar managed, in the 23rd year, to escape, and took refuge with the Káṭhís of Júnágaṛh, little noticed or cared for by Akbar's officers. But when I'timád Khán was sent to Gujrát to relieve Shihábuddín (No. 26), the servants of the latter joined Muzaffar, and the Gujrát rebellion commenced. Muzaffar took Ahmadábád, and recruited, with the treasures that fell into his hands (vide Quṭbuddín, No. 28), an army of 40,000 troopers. Mírzá 'Abdurrahím had only 10,000 troopers to oppose him, and though his officers advised him to wait for the arrival of Qulij Khán and the Málwah contingent, Dost Khán Lodí, M. 'A.'s Mír Shamsher, reminded him not to spoil his laurels and claims to the Khán Khánánship. M.'A. then attacked Muzaffar and defeated him in the remarkable battle of Sarkij, three kos from Ahmadábád. On the arrival of the Málwah contingent, M. 'A. defeated Muzaffar a second time near Nádot. Muzaffar concealed himself in Rájpíplah.

[2] He was the nephew of Hasan Khán of Mewát. (Bad. I, p. 361). In the fourth Book of the Á'ín, Abulfazl says that the Khánzádahs of Mewát were chiefly converted Janúḥah Rájpúts.

For these two victories Akbar made M.'A. a commander of Five Thousand, and gave him the coveted title of Khán Khánán. For this reason Historians generally call him Mírzá Khán Khánán.

When Gujrát was finally conquered, M. Khán Khánán gave his whole property to his soldiers, even his inkstand, which was given to a soldier who came last and said, he had not received anything. The internal affairs of Gujrát being settled, Qulij Khán was left in the province, and M.'A. rejoined the Court.

In the 34th year he presented to Akbar a copy of his Persian translation of Bábar's Chaghtái Memoirs (Wáqi'át i Bábarí).[1]

Towards the end of the same year he was appointed Vakíl, and received Jaunpúr as tuyúl; but in 999 his jágír was transferred to Multán, and he received orders to take T'hat'hah (Sind). Passing by the Fort of Sahwán,[2] he took the Fort of Lak'hí, "which was considered the key of the country, just as Gaḍhí is in Bengal and Bárahmúlah in Kashmír." After a great deal of fighting, Mírzá Jání Beg (No. 47), ruler of T'hat'hah, made peace, which M.'A., being hard pressed for provisions, willingly accepted. Sahwán was to be handed over to Akbar, M. Jání Beg was to visit the emperor after the rains, and Mírzá Irich, M.'A.'s eldest son, was to marry Jání Beg's daughter. But as M. Jání Beg after the rains, delayed to carry out the stipulations. M.'A. moved to T'hat'hah, and prepared himself to take it by assault, when M. Jání Beg submitted and accompanied M.'A. to Court.[3] Thus Sindh was annexed.

When Sulṭán Murád assembled, at Bahronch (Broach), his troops for the conquest of the Dak'hin, Akbar despatched M.'A. to his assistance, giving him Bhílsá as jágír. After delaying there for some time, M.'A. went to Ujain, which annoyed the Prince, though M.'A. wrote him that Rájah 'Alí Khán[4] of Khándes was on the point of joining the Imperialists, and that he would come with him. When M.'A., at last, joined head quarters at Fort Chándor, 30 kos from Ahmadnagar, he was slighted by the Prince ; and, in consequence of it, he hesitated to take an active part in the operations, leaving the command of his detachment chiefly in the hands of M. Sháhrukh (No. 7). Only on one occasion after Murád's departure from Ahmadnagar, he took a prominent part in the war. Mu'tamiduddaulah Suhail Khán (Briggs, II, 274; III, 308) threatened Prince Murád, who had been persuaded by his officers not to engage with him. M. 'A., Rájah 'Alí Khán, and M. Sháhrukh, therefore took it upon themselves to fight the enemy. Moving in Jumáda II, 1005 from Sháhpúr, M.'A. met Suhail near the town of Ashtí, 12 kos from Pathrí. The fight was unusually severe. Rájah 'Alí Khán with five of his principal officers and five hundred troopers were killed (Briggs

[1] Vide p. 105, last line.

[2] Also called Siwistán, on the right bank of the Indus. Lak'hí (Lukkee) lies a little south of Sahwán.

[3] The conquest of Sindh forms the subject of a Masnawí by Mullá Shikebí, whom Abulfázl mentions below among the poets of Akbar's age.

[4] Khálí Khán calls him Rájá 'Alí Khán.

IV, 324). The night put an end to the engagement; but each party believing itself victorious, remained under arms. When next morning, M.'A.'s troopers went to the river [near Súpá, Firishtah] to get water, they were attacked by 25,000 of the enemy's horse. Daulat Khán who commanded M.'A.'s avantguard, said to him," It is dying a useless death to fall fighting with but 600 troopers against such odds." "Do you forget Dihlí?" asked M.'A. "If we keep up," replied Daulat Khán, "against such odds, we have discovered a hundred Dihlís; and if we die, matters rest with God." Qásim of Bárha[1] and several other Sayyids were near; and on hearing M.'A.'s resolution to fight, he said, "Well, let us fight as Hindústánís, nothing is left but death; but ask the Khán Khánán what he means to do." Daulat Khán returned, and said to M.'A. "Their numbers are immense, and victory rests with heaven; point out a place where we can find you, should we be defeated." "Under the corpses," said M. 'A. Thereupon they charged the flank of the enemy and routed them. After this signal victory, M.'A. distributed 75 lacs of Rupees among his soldiers. At the request of the Prince, M.'A. was soon after recalled (1006).

In the same year Mah Bánú, M. 'A.'s wife died.

In the 44th year, Prince Dányál was appointed to the Dak'hin, and M.'A. was ordered to join the Prince, and besiege Ahmadnagar. The town, as is known from the histories, was taken after a siege of 4 months and 4 days.[2] M.'A. then joined the Court, bringing with him Bahádur ibn i Ibráhím, who had been set up as Nizám Sháh. Dányál was appointed governor of the newly conquered territory, which was called by Akbar Dándes,[3] and married to Jáná Begum, M.'A.'s daughter. The Khán Khánán was also ordered to repair to Ahmadnagar, to keep down a party that had made the son of Sháh 'Alí, uncle of Murtazá, Nizám Sháh.

After the death of Akbar, matters in the Dak'hin did not improve. In the 3rd year of Jahángír (1017), M.'A. promised to bring the war to a close in two years, if he received a sufficient number of troops. Sháhzádah Parwíz, under the Atálíq-ship of Açaf Khán, Mán Singh, Khán Jahán Lodí, and others, were appointed to assist M.'A. He took the Prince in the rains from Burhánpúr to Bálág'hát; but in consequence of the usual duplicity and rancour displayed by the Amírs, the imperial army suffered from want of provisions and loss of cattle, and M.'A. was compelled to conclude a treaty dishonorable for Jahángír, who appointed Khán Jahán Lodí as his successor, and sent Mahábat Khán, subsequently M.'A.'s enemy, to bring the unsuccessful commander to Court.

In the 5th year, M. 'A. received Kálpí and Qanauj as tuyúl, with orders to crush the rebels in those districts (vide p. 324, note). Some time afterwards, M.'A. was again sent to the Dak'hin, as matters there had not improved; but he did not gain any advantage either.

---

[1] The Sayyids of Bárha considered it their privilege to fight in the Harâwal, or van. Vide No. 75.

[2] Abulfazl and the Lucknow edition of Firishtah call the eunuch who murdered Chánd Bíbí جیندخان or جیند. Briggs has Hamíd Khán. For Nihang Khán, which Briggs gives, all copies of the Akbarnámah and the Maásir have Abhang Khán. The Lucknow Ed. of Firishtah has Ahang Khán. The differences, moreover, between Abulfazl and Firishtah in details are very remarkable.

[3] A combination of the words Dányál and Khándes.

In the 11th year (1025) Jahángír, at last, despatched Prince Khurram, to whom he had given the title of Sháh.[1] Jahángír himself fixed his residence at Mándú in Málwah, in order to be nearer the scene of war, while Sháh Khurram selected Burhánpúr as Head Quarters. Here the Prince also married the daughter of Shahnawáz Khán, M. 'A.'s son. 'Ádil Sháh and Quṭbulmulk sent tribute and submitted, and Jahángír bestowed upon 'Ádil Sháh the title of Farzand (son); and 'Ambar Malik handed over the keys of Ahmadnagar and other Forts, together with the Parganahs of Bálág'hát which he had conquered. Sháh Khurram then appointed M.'A. Çúbahdár of Khándes, Barár, and Ahmadnagar, whilst Shahnawáz Khán was appointed to Bálág'hát. Leaving 30,000 horse and 7,000 artillery in the Dak'hin, Sháh Khurram joined his father at Mándú, where new honors awaited him.[2]

In the 15th year, Malik 'Ambar 'broke' the treaty, and fell upon the T'hánahdárs of the Mughuls. Dáráb Khán, M. 'A.'s second son, retreated from Bálá'ghát to Bálápúr; and driven from there, he went to Burhánpúr, where he and his father were besieged. On Sháhjahán's approach, the besiegers dispersed.

In the 17th year, (1031), Sháh 'Abbás of Persia attacked Qandahár, and Sháhjahán and 'Abdurrahím were called to Court, to take the command against the Persians; but before they joined, Prince Parwíz, through Núr Jahán's influence, had been appointed heir-apparent, and Mahábat Khán had been raised to the dignity of Khán Khánán. Sháhjahán rebelled, returned with M.'A. to Mándú, and then moved to Burhánpúr. On the march thither, Sháhjahán intercepted a letter which M. 'A. had secretly written to Mahábat Khán, whereupon he imprisoned him and his son Dáráb Khán, and sent him to Fort Ásír, but released them soon after on parole. Parwíz and Mahábat Khán had, in the meantime, arrived at the Narbaddah to capture Sháhjahán. Bairám Beg, an officer of Sháhjahán's, had for this reason removed all boats to the left side of the river, and successfully prevented the imperials from crossing. At M.'A.'s advice, Sháhjahán proposed, at this time, an armistice. He made M. 'A. swear upon the Qorán not to betray him, and sent him as ambassador to Parwíz. Mahábat Khán, knowing that the fords would not now be so carefully watched as before, effected a crossing, and M.'A., forgetful of his oath, joined Prince Parwíz, and did not return to Sháhjahán, who now fled from Burhánpúr, marching through Talingánah to Orissa and Bengal. Mahábat and M. 'A. followed him up a short distance beyond the Taptí. M. 'A. wrote to Rájah Bhím, a principal courtier of the Daulatsháhí party, to tell Sháhjahán, that he (M. 'A.) would do every thing in his power to detain the imperial army, if the prince would allow his sons to join him. Rájah Bhím replied that the prince had still from five to six thousand followers, and that he would kill M.'A.'s sons, should it come to a fight. Sháhjahán then moved into Bengal and Bihár, of which he made Dárá Khán, who had evidently attached himself to the prince, Governor. Mahábat Khán had in the mean time returned to Iláhábád to oppose Sháhjahán, and had placed M.'A., who looked upon him with distrust, under surveillance.

[1] "Since the time of Tímúr no Prince had received this title." Maásir. Sháh Khurram received subsequently the title of Sháhjahán, which he retained as king, in conjunction with the titles of Çáhib Qirán i Sání and A'lá Hazrat (اعلی حضرت). The last title had also been used by Sulaimán i Kararáni, King of Bengal. Aurangzeb, in imitation of it, adopted the title of A'lá Kháqán.

[2] He received the title of Sháhjahán and was made a Síházárí, or Commander of Thirty Thousand, personal (brevet) rank, and a contingent of 20,000 (az aṣl wa izáfah, i. e. his former contingent plus an increase in troops). He was also allowed a Çandalí (vide p. 306), likewise a custom that had not been observed since the age of Tímúr. Jahángír even came down from the J'harokah (the window in the State hall, familiar to all that have seen the halls of the palaces of Ágrah and Fathpúr Síkrí), and placed a dish full of jewels and gold on Sháhjahán's head, distributing the whole (as nusár) among the Amírs.

In the 21st year, Jahángír ordered Mahábat Khán to send M. 'A. to court, where he was reinstated in his titles and honours. He afterwards retired to his jágír at Láhor, when Mahábat Khán followed him and sent him back to Dihlí. Soon after the failure of his scheme of retaining possession of Jahángír's person, and the return of the monarch from Kábul, Mahábat Khán had to fly. Núr Jahán now appointed M.'A. to follow up Mahábat, and contributed herself twelve lacs of rupees to the expedition. But before the necessary preparations had been completed, M.'A. took ill at Láhor, and on his arrival in Dihlí, he died at the age of seventy-two, in the end of Jahángír's 21st year (1036). The words Khán Sipahsálár kú (where is the Khán Commander) are the táríkh of his death.

M. 'A.'s great deeds are the conquests of Gujrát and Sind and the defeat of Suhail Khán of Bijápúr. During Jahángír's reign, he did nothing remarkable; nor was he treated with the respect which he had enjoyed during the lifetime of Akbar, though he was allowed to retain his rank. For nearly thirty years, he had been serving in the Dak'hin. Every grandee, and even the princes, accused him of secret friendship with the rulers of the Dak'hin, and Abulfazl, on one occasion, gave his fatwá that M.'A. was a rebel. Under Jahángír, he was the open friend of Malik 'Ambar; and Muhammad Ma'çúm, one of his servants, once informed the emperor that he would find Malik 'Ambar's correspondence in the possession of 'Abdurrahím of Lak'hnau (No. 197), who was much attached to M.'A. Mahábat Khán was appointed to enquire into this; but 'Abdurrahím of Lak'hnau would not betray his friend. People said, M. 'A.'s motto was, 'people should hurt their enemies under the mask of friendship,' and all seem to have been inclined to blame him for maliciousness and faithlessness. He used to get daily reports from his newswriters whom he had posted at various stations. He read their reports at night, and tore them up. But he was also proverbial for his liberality and love of letters. The Maásir i Rahímí[1] is a splendid testimony of his generosity; it shews that he was the Mecænas of Akbar's age. People, by a happy comparison, called him Mír 'Alí Sher (vide p. 101, note 4.) M.'A. wrote Persian, Turkish, Arabic, and Hindí with great fluency. As poet he wrote under the name of Rahím.

Though his father had been a Shí'ah, M.'A. was a Sunní; but people said, he was a Shí'ah, but practised taqiyyah.[2]

M. 'A.'s most faithful servant was Miyán Fahím. People said, he was the son of a slave girl; but he appears to have been a Rájpút. He grew up with M.'A.'s sons, and was as pious as he was courageous. He fell with his son Fírúz Khán

[1] Called Maásir i Rahímí in allusion to his name M. 'Abdur-Rahím. Vide Elliot's Index (1st edition), p. 377.

[2] Wherever Shí'ahs are in the minority, they practise, if necessary, taqiyyah (تَقِيَّة, pr. fear, caution), i. e., they do as if they were Sunnís. A Shí'ah may even vilify his own sect, if his personal safety requires it.

and 40 attendants in the fight with Mahábat Khán, who had imprisoned his master. M.'A. built him a tomb in Dihlí, which is now called Nílah Burj, near Humáyún's tomb. (Ásáruççanádíd.)

M. 'A. outlived his four sons.

1. Mírzá Irich (or Irij, Shahnawáz Khán Bahádur (No. 255). When young he used to be called Khán Khánán i jawán. He distinguished himself by his courage. In the 40th year of Akbar he was made a Commander of 400. In the 47th year, after a fight with Malik 'Ambar who got wounded, he received the title of Bahádur. During the reign of Jahángír he was called Shahnawáz Khán (vide Tuzuk, p. 95), and was made a Commander of Five Thousand. He died in 1028 from excessive drinking. (Vide Tuzuk, p. 270).

Two of his sons are mentioned in the Pádisháhnámah. 1. Mírzá Khán. He was Faujdár of Kángrah, and retired 'foolishly' from public life in Rabí' II, 1046. But he was re-employed and was a Commander of Three Thousand in 1055 (Pádisháhnámah II, pp. 483, 723). 2. Lashkarshikan Khán. He got in 1047, a present of 4000 R., and received an appointment in Bengal.

Historians call Shahnawáz Khán generally Shahnawáz Khán i Jahángírí, to distinguish him from Shahnawáz Khán i Çafawí, a grandee of Sháhjahán.

2. Mírzá Dáráb Dáráb-Khán. He has been mentioned above (p. 337). When Sháhjahán made him Governor of Bengal, he retained his wife, a son and a daughter, and a son of Shahnawáz Khán as hostages (yarghamál). When the prince after the fight near the Tons (Benares) had again to go to the Dak'hin, he wrote to Dáráb Khán to move to Gadhí (N. W. entrance of Bengal) and join him. Dáráb wrote him that he could not come, being besieged by the zamíndárs of the place. He fell at last into the hands of Parwíz and Mahábat Khán, and as Jahángír had 'no objections', Mahábat executed him (1035), wrapped his head in a table cloth, and sent it to his father M.'A. as a present of a 'melon.' A short time before, 'Abdullah Khán had killed Dáráb's son and a son of Shahnawáz Khán.

3. Mírzá Rahmán Dád. His mother belonged to the Saddahas of Amarkoṭ. Though very dissolute, he was most liked by his father. He died, at Bálápúr, about the same time as his eldest brother. Vide Tuzuk, p. 315. No one dared to inform his father of the event, till people sent at last the famous saint Hazrat 'Isá of Sindh to M. 'A. on a visit of condolence.

4. Mírzá Amrullah. He grew up without education, and died when young.

30. Ra'jah Ma'n Singh, son of Bhagwán Dás

He was born at Amber, and is the son of Rájah Bhagwán Dás (No. 27). European Historians say that he was the adopted son of Rájah Bh. D., but Muhammadan Historians do not allude to this circumstance, perhaps because Hindús make absolutely no difference between a real and an adopted son. He is also known under the title of Mírzá Rájah, and Akbar bestowed upon him the title of Farzand (son).

He joined Akbar with Bihárí Mall (p. 329). In 984, he was appointed against Ráná Kíká, and gained, in 985, the great battle near Gogundah.[1] Rájah Rámsáh of [1] The best account of this battle is to be found in Badáoní, who was an eye-witness. Bad. II. 230 to 237. The whole is left out in Briggs.

Gwáliár was killed with his sons, whilst the Ráná himself in the melée was wounded by Mán Singh. Akbar, however, felt annoyed, because M. S. did not follow up his victory, and recalled him.

When Bhagwán Dás was appointed governor of the Panjáb, M. S. commanded the districts along the Indus. In the year 993, Prince M. Muhammad Hakím died, and M. S. was sent to Kábul to keep the country in order. He rejoined Akbar near the Indus with M. Muhammad Hakím's sons (M. Afrásyáb and M. Kaiqubád); but was soon after sent back to Kábul, where he chastised the Raushánís who, like other Afghán tribes, were given to predatory incursions. After the death of Rájah Bír Bar, in the war with the Yúsufzaís, M. S. was appointed to the command of the army in Kábul, in supercession of Zain Khán Kokah (No. 34) and Hakím Abul Fath. He was also put in charge of Zábulistán, as Bhagwán Dás had a fit of madness (p. 333). In the 32nd year, M. S. was recalled in consequence of loud complaints of the people against the Rájpúts and M. S.'s indifference to the Kábulís, and was appointed Governor of Bihár, to which province the tuyúls of the Kachhwáhas had been transferred.

After the death of Bhagwán Dás in 998, M. S., who hitherto had the title of Kuŋwar, received from Akbar the title of Rájah and a Command of Five Thousand. In Bihár he punished several refractory Zamindárs, as Púrán Mall and Rájah Sing Rám, and received their tribute.

The principal events of Mán Singh's life from 997 to 1015 are given in Stewart's History of Bengal, (pp. 114 to 121).[1] In the 35th year, M. S. invaded Orissa by way of Jhárkand (Chuttiá Nágpúr). The result of this expedition was the cession of Púrí. In the 37th year, when the Afgháns under Khwájah Sulaimán and Khwájah 'Usmán attacked Púrí, M. S. again invaded Orissa, and re-annexed, in 1000, that province to the Dihlí empire. In the 39th year, M. S. continued his conquests in Bháti (the eastern portions of the Sundarban), and built, in the following year, Akbarnagar, or Rájmahall, at a place which Sher Sháh, before him, had selected as a convenient spot, as also Salímnagar, the Fort of Sherpúr Murchah (Mymensing). The whole of Eastern Bengal on the right side of the Brahmaputra was likewise annexed. In the 41st year, M. S. married the sister of Lachmí Naráin, Rájah of Kúch Bihár, who had declared himself a vassal of the Mughul empire. In the same year, M. S. took dangerously ill at G'horág'hát, when the Afgháns attacked him. They were soon after driven back by Himmat Singh, one of M. S.'s sons,[2] into the Sundarban. In the 42nd year, M. S. had to send a detachment under Hijáz Khán into Kúch Bihár for the protection of Lachmí Naráin. In the 44th year, M. S., at Akbar's request, joined the Dak'hin war. Thinking that the Afgháns, in consequence of the death of their leader, the rich 'Isá of G'horág'hát, would remain quiet, M. S. appointed his son Jagat Singh (No. 160) his deputy, and joined Prince Salím at Ajmír. Jagat Singh died after a short time, and was succeeded by Mahá Singh, a younger son, or grandson, of M. S. The Afgháns under [1] The name of 'Sayid' Khán (سيد خان) which occurs several times in Stewart, l. c., should be corrected to Sa'íd Khán (سعيدخان), the same grandee whose biography was given above (p. 331). Such as take an interest in the History of Bengal and Orissa should make use of the Akbarnámah, which contains many new facts and details not given in Stewart.

[2] He died in 1005.

'Usmán used this opportunity, defeated, in the 45th year, the imperials near Bhadrak in Orissa, and occupied a great portion of Bengal. M. S. then hastened back over Rahtás, and defeated the Afgháns near Sherpúr 'Aṭáí, a town of the Sirkár of Sharífábád, which extended from Bardwán to Fath Singh, S. of Murshidábád. After this victory, which obliged 'Usmán to retreat to Orissa, M. S. paid a visit to the Emperor who promoted him to a (full) command of Seven Thousand. Hitherto Five Thousand had been the limit of promotion. It is noticeable that Akbar in raising M. S. to a command of Seven Thousand, placed a Hindú above every Muhammadan officer, though, soon after, M. Sháhrukh (vide p. 312) and M. 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21) were raised to the same dignity.

M. S. remained in Bengal till 1013, when the sickness of the emperor induced him to resign his appointment, in order to be in the capital. The part which he played at the time of Akbar's death is known from the Histories. Jahángír thought it prudent to overlook the conspiracy which the Rájah had made, and sent him to Bengal. But soon after (1015), he was recalled and ordered to quell disturbances in Rahtás (Bihár), after which he joined the emperor. In the 3rd year of Jahángír's reign, he was permitted to go to his home, where he raised levies, in order to serve with M. 'Abdurrahím (No. 29) in the Dak'hin war.

M. S. died a natural death in the 9th year of J.'s reign whilst in the Dak'hin. Sixty of his fifteen hundred wives burned themselves on the funeral pile. At the time of his death, only one of his numerous sons was alive, Bháo Singh, regarding whose succession to the title vide Tuzuk i Jahángírí, p. 130.

The ground on which the Táj at A'grah stands, belonged to Mán Singh.

31. Muhammad Qulí Kha'n Barla's, a descendant of the Barmaqs(?).[1]

He served under Humáyún, and held Multán as jágír. In the beginning of Akbár's reign, he conveyed, together with Shamsuddín Atgah (No. 15) the princesses from Kábul to India. His tuyúl was subsequently transferred to Nágor. For a short time he was also Governor of Málwah.

In the 12th year, he was sent against Iskandar Khán Uzbak (vide No. 48) in Audh. After the death of Khán Zamán, Iskandar fled to Bengal, and Audh was given to Muhammad Qulí Khán as jágír.

He subsequently served under Mun'im Khán in Bihár and Bengal. In the 19th year, when Dáúd had withdrawn to Sátgánw (Húglí), Mun'im Khán despatched M. Q. Kh. to follow up the Afgháns, whilst he remained with Rájah Todar Mall in Ṭándah to settle financial matters. When M. Q. Khán arrived at Sátgánw, Dáúd withdrew to Orissa, to which country neither M. Q. Khán nor his officers had much inclination to go. From Sátgánw, M. Q. Khán invaded the district of Jesar (Jessore), [1] So in the MSS.; but the name Barmaq is very doubtful. Being a 'Barlás,' he belonged to that Chaghtái tribe which traced its descent to برد مچي or ابرد مچي —the MSS. have various forms for this name—, who is the 8th ancestor of Tímúr. If برد مچي be the correct form, the substitution of برمق, a renowned name in Muhammadan History, would not appear altogether impossible. The MSS. of the Maásir have Barantaq برنتق. In the beginning of the Akbarnámah, Abulfazl says that this 8th ancestor of Tímúr was the first that held the title of barlás, which means the same as شجاع shujá', brave. Another Barlás had been mentioned above on p. 206. An Amír Chákú Barlás served with distinction under Tímúr.

where Sarmadí, a friend of Dáúd's, had rebelled; but the imperialists met with no success, and returned to Sátgánw. Mun'im Khán at last ordered Todar Mall to join M. Q. Khán, and subsequently, both moved into Orissa. Soon after passing the frontier, M. Q. Khán died at Mednípúr (Midnapore), Ramazán, 982. He seems to have died a natural death, though some accused one of his eunuchs of foul play.

His son, Mírzá Farídún Barlás (No. 227). He served under M. 'Abdurrahím (No. 29) in Sind, and accompanied, in 1001, Jání Beg (No. 47) to Court. He was a commander of Five Hundred. Under Jahángír, he was rapidly promoted, and held, in the 8th year, a command of Two Thousand, when he served under Prince Khurram against Ráná Amr Singh. He died during the expedition.

His son Mihr 'Alí Barlás was made by Jahángír a commander of One Thousand.

32. Tarson Kha'n, sister's son of Sháh Muhammad Saiful Mulk.

In Histories he is called Tarson Muhammad Khán. Saiful Mulk had been an independent ruler in Gharjistán (a part of Khurásán); but he had to submit to Ṭahmasp (A. H. 940.)

Tarson Khán was in the service of Bairám Khán (No. 10), and joined Akbar, when Bairám fell into disgrace. Akbar sent him together with Hájí Muhammad Sístání (No. 55) to see Bairám, on his way to Makkah, as far as Nágor, then the frontier of the empire. T. Kh. was subsequently promoted, to the post of a Commander of Five Thousand, and was for some time Governor of Bhakkar and then of Patan in Gujrát. In the 21st year, he served in Rájpútáná, vide No. 44. In the 23rd year, he was made Faujdár of Jaunpúr, at the same time that Mullá Muhammad Yazdí (vide p. 189) was appointed Qázílquzát and Ṣadr of that Sirkár. When the Jaunpúr Rebellion broke out, T. Kh. with other faithful Amírs moved to Bihár against Bahádur Khán and 'Arab Khán, who were joined by Ma'çúm Khán Farankhúdí (No. 157). In the 27th year, he served under M. 'Azíz Kokah in Bihár. When the Qáqsháls (No. 50) left Ma'çúm Khán and joined the Imperialists, M. 'Azíz sent T. Kh. to G'horág'hát, where most of the Qáqsháls had jágírs. T. Kh. stayed at Tájpúr (Dinagepore), settling matters, when Ma'çúm Khán came with a large army from Bháṭí (بهاٹي),[2] and plundered Western Bengal, approaching even the environs of Ṭánḍah; he also sent a detachment against T. Kh., who was besieged in the Fort of Tájpúr. The siege was raised by a corps sent by Shahbáz Khán i Kambú (No. 80) from Patna, and T. Kh. was thus enabled to join Shahbáz, and drive away the rebels

---

[1] Abulfazl gives this spelling in the Akbarnámah, and says it means lowland, (from the Hindústání بهاٹي down the river), and extends nearly 400 kos from East to West, and 300 kos from N. S., from Thibet to the Ocean. It would thus include the Sundarban and the tracts along the Megna. Grant, in the Vth Report, p. 260, note, defines Bháṭí as comprising the Sunderban and all the neighbouring low lands, even Hijlí, overflowed by the tide.

'Ísá's father, according to Abulfazl, was a Rájpút of the Bais clan, if I read correctly my MSS. He came in contact with Salím Khán and Táj Khán of Bengal, was killed, and his two sons, 'Ísá and Ismá'íl were sold as slaves. They were subsequently traced by Quṭbuddín Khán, 'Ísá's uncle, to Túrán, and brought back. 'Ísá soon became the chief of Bháṭí, and had twelve great zamindárs dependent on him. Hence he is generally called by Abulfazl Marzbán i' Bháṭí, ruler of Bháṭí. He gave the Imperialists no end of trouble. He must not be confounded with 'Ísá, the Vakíl of Qutlú Khán of Oríssá, who ceded Púrí to Mán Singh.

from Upper Bengal. Ma'çúm fled again to Bháṭí, and Shahbáz and T. Kh. planned an expedition against 'Isá, who had afforded Ma'çúm shelter. They crossed the Ganges at Khizrpúr, which stands on the frontier of Bháṭí, took Sunnárgánw, plundered Baktarápúr (?), where 'Isá used to live, and nearly caught Ma'çúm. At this juncture, 'Isá returned from an expedition to Kúch-Bihár, and attacked the Imperialists near Bhowál (N. of Dacca). The Imperialists had entrenched themselves near the Brahmaputra, and the fighting was continued for a long time both by land and on the river. At one time, T. Kh. with a small detachment came too near a position held by the enemy, and was attacked by Ma'çúm Khán and wounded. Immediately afterwards he was caught, and killed by Ma'çúm (992). For a relation of his, vide No. 400.

33. Qiyá' Kha'n Gung.

Qiyá is a Turkish word and means zeb, ornament. Gung, if it is the Persian word, means 'dumb.' He served under Humáyún, and held Kol Jalálí. On the approach of Hemú, he joined Tardí Beg (No. 12) in Dihlí, and retreated with him. After Hemú's defeat, Qiyá was sent to Ágrah, and was raised to the dignity of a commander of Five Thousand. Several parganahs in Gwáliár having been given to him as tuyúl, Qiyá Khán, in the 2nd year of Akbar's reign, besieged Gwáliár, which was held by Bhíl Khán, a general of Salím Sháh, during whose reign Gwáliár had been the capital of the empire. Bhíl Khán, thinking it impossible to hold the Fort for a long time, wished[1] to hand it over for a consideration to Rájah Rámsáh, whose ancestors had held Gwáliár, when Qiyá Khán arrived, and after defeating the Rájah, prepared himself to besiege Bhíl Khán. When Akbar, in 966, came to Ágrah, he sent a detachment to assist Qiyá, and Bhíl Khán submitted.

He was a friend of Bairám, but was the first that left him and joined Akbar.

A few years later, Qiyá Khán joined Khán Zamán's rebellion, but repented and was pardoned, at the request of Mun'im Khán.

After the first conquest of Bengal, Q. Kh. was sent to Orissa, to settle matters. He remained in Orissa and Bengal during the Bengal rebellion, and when, in the 25th year, the Imperialists withdrew from that country, Qutlú Khán seized upon Orissa, and besieged Qiyá Khán in some fort. Deserted by his soldiers, Q. Kh. was killed (989).[2]

---

[1] So the Maásir. The Sawánih says that Rájah Rámsáh with a large force of Rájpúts had come to besiege Gwáliár. Firishtah instead of Bhíl Khán (Akbarnámah, Sawánih, Badáoní) has Suhail Khán (?), and Iqbál Khán (?) for Qiyá Khán, vide Briggs, II, p. 194. The change from بهيل to سهيل is not remarkable; but the alteration of قيا to اقبال is more violent, as we have an additional alif and lám.

How untrustworthy our printed editions are, may be seen from Kháfí Khán's List of Commanders of Five Thousand under Akbar (Ed. Bibl. Indica I, p. 237), where the native editors have given three wrong names among twelve, viz.,

P. 237, last line, for Amín Khán Koká, read Zain Khán Kokah (No. 34).

P. 238, l. 1, for Shujá' Khán, read Shujá'at Khán (No. 14).

P. 238, l. 2, for Rasúl Khán, read Tarson Khán (No. 32).

Moreover Kháfí Khán's list is most incomplete, and does not coincide, although he says so, with the number of Panjhazáris given in the Ṭabaqát.

[2] Several copies of the Ṭabaqát which I have consulted, say that Qiyá Khán died in 984 (?).

Tardí Khán (No. 101), his son, was a Commander of Fifteen Hundred. He accompanied Prince Dányál to the Dak'hin, but fell later in disgrace. In the 49th year, he was restored and promoted to a command of Two Thousand Five Hundred, and got a present of 5 lacs of Rupees.

V. Commanders of Four Thousand Five Hundred.

34. Zain Kha'n,[1] son of Khwájah Maqçúd of Harát.

His father, Khwájah Maqçúd 'Alí, was a servant of Akbar's mother. The name of his mother was Píchah Ján Anagah; she was one of Akbar's nurses. On Humáyún's flight to Persia, Maqçúd was always near the howdah of Akbar's mother, and remained attached to her in all her misfortunes. His brother was Khwájah Hasan (Zain Khán's uncle), whose daughter married Prince Salím. She is the mother of Prince Parwíz.

In 993, Mírzá Muhammad Hakím, Akbar's brother, had died, and Akbar crossed the Indus for Zábulistán. Zain Khán was at that time a commander of Two Thousand and Five Hundred, and was sent against the Yúsufzaís. This tribe, says Abulfazl, had formerly been in Qarábágh and Qandahár, and had invaded Kábul, where a great number of them were killed by M. Ulugh Beg. The remainder settled at Lamghánát, and subsequently at Ishtaghar. For the last one hundred years, they had held the territory of Waijúr, and were notorious robbers. In Waijúr, there was also a tribe of the name of Sulṭání, who traced their descent to a daughter of Sulṭán Sikandar. The Yúsufzaís deprived them treacherously of their district; a few of the Sulṭánides, however, remained in Waijúr from attachment to their old country.

On a former occasion, when Akbar had moved against M. Muhammad Hakím, the chiefs of the Yúsufzaís submitted, and one of them, Kálú, went with Akbar to Ágrah and was hospitably treated. He fled, however, but was caught by Shamsuddín Kháfí (No. 159) near Aṭak, and was sent back; and although Akbar continued to treat him kindly, he fled again and stirred up his countrymen.

Zain Khán moved into the District of Waijúr (north of Pasháwar), and punished the Yúsufzaís. Several chiefs asked for pardon. After this he erected a fort in Jakdarah, in the middle of the country, and defeated the enemies in twenty-three fights. He had at last to ask for reinforcements, and Akbar sent to him Rájah Bír Baṛ and Hakím Abul Faith with some troops. Zain Khán asked them to attack the Afgháns, whilst he would occupy the conquered districts, or he would attack the enemies, and they should hold the district. But Bír Baṛ and Hakím Abul Fath, who were no friends of Zain Khán, proposed that they should attack the Yúsufzaís together, and then go back. Z. Kh. said, it would not do to return without better results from a country which had cost so many sacrifices; else, the best thing they could do, was to return the same way they had come. But to this they would not listen, and returned by another road (over كراكر). Z. Kh. paid no attention to their insubordination and joined them, chiefly because he was afraid they would denounce him at Court. As soon as the Afgháns saw the Imperialists returning, they attacked them in every narrow valley. On passing the Girewah[2] Balandrí (گريوهٔ بلندري), Z. Kh. who commanded the rear chandáwal), was so severely attacked, that he had to face them. Arrows and stones were showered from all sides on the Imperialists, the soldiers got bewildered, and the horses ran into the train of elephants. Many lives were lost. Z. Kh., unable to prevent a rout, rushed among the Afgháns seeking death, when Jánish Bahádur (No. 235) got hold of the reins of his horse, and led him by force out of the melée. In the greatest disorder the Imperialists reached the next station, when the mere rumour of an approach of the Afgháns dispersed the soldiers. In the darkness of night most of them lost their way, and several detachments entered the valleys occupied by the Afgháns. The enemies being engaged in plundering, they were at first safe; but next day they were all cut off. This was the occasion when Bír Bar with 500 officers fell (vide p. 204).

[1] As he was Akbar's foster brother, he is generally called in histories, Zain Khán Kokah.

[2] Girewah means a hill.

In the 31st year (994), Z. Kh. operated successfully against the Mahmands and Ghorís near Pasháwar, who under their chief Jaláluddín Raushání had committed numerous predations. In the next year, Z. Kh. was made governor of Zábulistán vice Mán Singh, and moved, in the 33rd year, against the Yúsufzaís. After eight months' fighting, they submitted, but Z. Kh. insisted on occupying their territory. He followed the same policy as before, and erected a large Fort on the banks of the river Bajgorah (بجگورہ), where their district commences. During the festival of the 'Íd i Qurbání (Baqr 'Íd, in Zí Hajjah), he surprised the Afgháns, and took possession of the whole district, erecting a fort wherever he thought necessary, and leaving in each a sufficient number of soldiers.[1] (Vide No. 46.)

In the 35th year, he was sent to punish several rebellious zamíndárs in the Himálayas. Most of them, as Rájah Budí (Badhí) Chand of Nagarkoṭ (vide p. 330), Rái Pertáb of Mánkoṭ, Rájah Parisrám of Mount Jamú, Rájah Bású of Mau, Rái Balbhadr of Lak'hinpúr, &c., submitted and accompanied Z. Kh. to Court, though they had an army of 10000 horse and a lac of foot soldiers.

After having been made, in the 36th year, a Commander of Four Thousand, Z. Kh. was allowed an 'alam and a naqqárah (vide p. 50), and was appointed, in the following year, governor of the districts beyond the Indus up to the Hindúkush, when new opportunities offered for punishing the mountaineers.

In the 41st year, he was made a Commander of Five Thousand, and governor of Kábul, vice Qulij Khán. In the same year, Prince Salím fell in love with Z. Kh.'s daughter, and married her soon after, though Akbar was displeased (vide p. 277, l. 4, from below). With the death of Jalál Khán Raushání the disturbances in Zábulistán came to an end, and Z. Kh. was ordered to Láhor, from where Akbar, on his return from Burhánpúr, called him to Ágrah.

Z. Kh. died in 1010, partly from excessive drinking. He played on several instruments, and composed poems. As Sa'íd Khán (No. 25) for his eunuchs, and Qulij Khán (No. 42) for his horses, so was Z. Kh. famous for his elephants.

[1] Such forts were called T'hánahs, now the common word for a police station.

"T'hánah means a corps of cavalry, matchlockmen, and archers, stationed within an enclosure. Their duty is to guard the roads, to hold the places surrounding the T'hánah, and to despatch provisions (rasad) to the next T'hánah." Pádisháhnámah, I. p. 167.

How old the use of the word T'hánah is, may be seen from the fact that it occurs frequently on Tribení and Sátgánw inscriptions of the eighth and ninth centuries of the Hijrah.

A son of his, Shukrullah (No. 373), vide below, was a Commander of Two Hundred. The Maásir mentions another son, Mughul Khán, who served under Jahángír and Sháhjahán (vide Pádisháhn. II, p. 641), and died 19th Ramazán 1067. He commanded for some time Fort Odgír in the Dak'hin, where the author of the Maásir later found an inscription referring to his appointment. For a second daughter, vide p. 328.

For Zain Khán's brother, vide No. 38.

35. Mi'rza' Yu'suf Kha'n, son of Mír Ahmad i Razawí.

He was a real Sayyid of Mashhad, and was much liked by Akbar. In the 30th year he was a Commander of Two Thousand and Five Hundred. When Shahbáz Khán left Bihár for Bengal, M. Yúsuf Khán was sent from Audh to keep Bihár. In the 32nd year (995), when Qásim Khán (No. 59) resigned, M. Y. was sent to Kashmír as ruler. He was much liked by the people of that country, conciliated Shams Chak, the claimant of the throne, and sent him to Court. In the 34th year (997), Akbar visited Kashmír, and issued several orders regarding the taxation of the country. In the districts of Mararáj and Kamráj, i. e., the upper and lower districts on both sides of the Bahat river, he fixed the taxes at one-fourth.

In Kashmír every piece of ground is called pattah, though a pattah originally is equal to 1 Bíg'hah, 1 Biswah (Iláhí) of Akbar. Two and a half pattahs and a little more are equal to 1 Kashmírí Bíg'hah. Three kinds of grain pay taxes in Kashmír, and each village is assessed at some kharwárs of shálí. A kharwár is equal to 3 mans, 8 sers of Akbar. The principal weight used in Kashmír is the tark, which is equal to 8 sers of Akbar (vide p. 84, note 3). At the time of the Rabí' crop, they take 2 tarks from each pattah of wheat and vetches (másh). The country having been recently annexed, was assessed very lightly, at 22 lacs kharwárs, which was 2 lacs more than before, the kharwár being reckoned at 16 dáms. For this sum, Akbar handed over Kashmír to M. Y. Kh.

In the 36th year, one of M. Y. Kh.'s Mutaçaddís (revenue clerks) fled to court, and stated that the revenue should be 50 per cent. (dah-pánzdah) higher, and the kharwár should be valued at 28 dáms. M. Y. Kh. informed Akbar that so high an assessment was an impossibility; but Akbar sent Qází Núrullah and Qází 'Alí to Kashmír, to report on the revenue. As M. Y. Khán's people assumed a threatening attitude, Núrullah returned, and Akbar sent Hasan Beg Shaikh 'Umarí (No. 167) to Kashmír. On his arrival, some of M. Y. Kh's people made a conspiracy, and stirred up the malcontents of the country, who collected under Yádgár, the son of M. Y. Kh's uncle. The disturbances became so serious, that Qází 'Alí and Hasan Beg returned to Hindústán; but the rebels blockaded the roads, and killed Qází 'Alí. Hasan Beg escaped, not without wounds. Yádgár then read the khuṭbah in his name, and had dies prepared for striking coins. Several bad omens foreshadowed his speedy ruin. Without having any knowledge of this rebellion, Akbar revisited Kashmír; but when he was informed of the state of the country, he put M. Y. Kh. under the charge of Abulfazl. Yádgár in vain tried to oppose Akbar at the frontier passes, and fled from Srínagar to Hírápúr, where some of M. Y. Kh.'s men spread at night the rumour that Akbar had suddenly arrived. In the confusion which ensued, Yádgár fled outside of the camp, accompanied by a servant of the name of Yúsuf. His camp was plundered, and M. Y. Kh.'s men got hold of Yúsuf, who had returned to get a horse for his master. They tortured him, till he confessed where Yádgár was. Soon after, they caught him and cut off his head.

As M. Y. Kh. refused to remain in charge of Kashmír under the increased revenue, the country was made kháliçah, and Shamsuddín Khátí (No. 159) was appointed Governor with 3,000 troops. Some time after, at Prince Salím's request, M. Y. Kh. was re-instated.

In the 38th year, M. Y. Kh. was appointed Dárogah of the Topkhánah, and received Jaunpúr as tuyúl, vice Qulij Khán (1002); but in the 41st year his jágír was transferred to Gujrát, to enable him to serve in the Dak'hin. In the following year, when Çádiq of Harát (No. 43) died, M. Y. Kh. was appointed atálíq to Prince Murád, whom he joined in Bálápúr (Barár). After the death of Prince Murád (p. 309), M. Y. Kh. distinguished himself together with Abulfazl in the Dak'hin wars, and later, under Prince Dányál, in the conquest of Ahmadábád, on which occasion M. Y. Kh. is said to have been more energetic than other grandees.

After joining Akbar's Court at Burhánpúr, in the 46th year, M. Y. Kh. went again to Prince Dányál, who, in 1010, sent him to assist Abulfazl and the Khán-Khánán at Bálág'hát. But soon after, he died of abscess at Jalnápúr[1], in Jumáda II, of the same year. His body was taken to Mashhad.

M. Y. Kh. generally stayed at Sulṭánpúr, which he looked upon as his Indian home. His contingent consisted exclusively of Rohílahs, whose wages he paid monthly.

His sons. 1. Mírzá Lashkarí Çafshikan Khán (No. 375). He was under Akbar T'hánahdár of Bír (East of Ahmadnagar), and got from Jahángír the title of Çafdar Khán, and a tuyúl in Bihár. In the 5th year (of Jahángír), he was promoted to the post of a Commander of 1500, with 700 horse, and was made in the following year Çúbahdár of Kashmír. In the 8th year, he was removed from his office. In the 21st year, when Mahábat Khán had fled, he was sent towards Dihlí, to intercept Mahábat's treasures which were known to have arrived from Bengal. This he did. In the beginning of Sháh Jahán's reign, he was made a Commander of 2500, and 2000 horse, received the title of Çafshikan Khán, and was again sent to Bír, where he remained for a long time. He withdrew at last from public life, got a pension of Rs. 12,000 per annum, and lived at Láhor. He died in 1055.

He was frank to a fault. Once he invited the Mançabdárs of Kábul, and feasted them on pork; and when called to Court, to answer for his conduct, he gave Jahángír a lesson by saying that not only pork, but also wine was forbidden in the law. For this answer he fell into disgrace.

2. Mírzá 'Ivaz (عوض). He was a good Prose writer, and wrote a History of the World, entitled Chaman.

3. Mírzá Aflátún. 'He lived with his brother.' He was subsequently made Mutawallí of Sikandrah (Akbar's tomb), where he died.

---

[1] My copy of the Ṭabaqát, as also another MS. which I have seen, contains the following entry—'At the time he was appointed to operate against Rájú, he died at Jannatábád in the Dak'hin, which is generally called Jalnápúr.' It is difficult to say how these words have found their way into some MS. of the Ṭabaqát, which was finished in 1001 A. H., or nine years before M. Y. Khán's death.

A relation of M. Y. Kh., Mír 'Abdullah, was under Sháhjahán a Commander of 1500 and 600 horse. He was for some time Governor of Fort Dharúr, E. of Bír, mentioned above. He died in the 8th year of Sháhjahán.

VI. Commanders of Four Thousand.

36. Mahdi' Qa sim Kha'n.

The Ṭabaqát mentions him among the Commanders of Five Thousand. He served first under M. 'Askarí, Bábar's third son, whose foster brother he was. His brother was Ghazanfar Kokah[1] (غضنفر). Humáyún, after the conquest of Gujrát, had appointed 'Askarí to Ahmadábád. One night, when half drunk, M. 'Askarí said, "I am king and the shadow of God;" when Ghazanfar gently replied, "Thou art drunk, and hast lost thy senses," at which all who were present laughed. 'Askarí got enraged, and imprisoned Ghazanfar; but he escaped, went to Sulṭán Bahádur, king of Gujrát, who had retreated to Fort Diu, and betrayed the plans of 'Askarí. Bahádur thereupon collected an army, marched to Ahmadábád, and drove the Prince away (vide No. 12).

Mahdí Qásim Khán joined Humáyún on his return from Persia, and was made in the beginning of Akbar's reign, a Commander of Four Thousand. In the 10th year, Abdul Majíd Áçaf Khán (No. 49) had been ordered to pursue Khán Zamán (No. 13; but entertaining doubts regarding his own safety, he fled to Garha (Jabalpúr). M. Q. Kh. was, therefore, sent to Garha, after Akbar had, in 973, returned from Jaunpúr to Á'grah, and was ordered to capture 'Abdul Majíd. When M. Q. Kh. arrived at Garha, 'Abdul Majíd fled to Khán Zamán; but the wretched state of the country displeased M. Q. Kh. so much, that without asking Akbar's permission, he left Garha and went to Makkah. From there he returned over Persia and Qandahár, and arrived, towards the end of the 13th year, at Rantanbhúr, which Akbar besieged, and asked to be forgiven, sending at the same time a fine batch of Persian horses as a present. Akbar pardoned him, restored him to his old rank, and gave him Lak'hnau as tuyúl.

'Nothing else is known of him' (Maásir). He had been dead for some time in 1001, when the Ṭabaqát was completed. Husain Khán Tukriya (No. 53) was the son of his sister and his son-in-law.

He had a villa at Láhor, which was called Bágh i Mahdí Qásim Khán, vide Badáoní II, 90, 292, and Calcutta Review for October, 1869 (Jahángír's Death).

37. Muzaffar Kha'n i Turbati'.

Turbat is the name of a tribe (ulús) in Khurásán. His full name is, Khwájah Muzaffar 'Alí Khán i Turbatí. He was Bairám's Díwán. Bairám delegated him from Dípálpúr to Sher Muhammad Díwánah (p. 317), who sent him in chains to Akbar. Though several courtiers advised the Emperor to kill Muzaffar, he pardoned him, and made him 'Ámil (Collector) of the Parganah of Parsaror. Subsequently Akbar made him Díván i Buyútát (Collector of the Imperial Stores, &c.), and at last Díván of the Empire, with the title of Muzaffar Khán (971). Rájah Todarmall was then under him. According to Badáoní, the two quarrelled incessantly, though people said that the Rájah was a better financier than Muzaffar, whose accession to office was honored by the short tárikh ظالم, zálim (= 971), or 'Tyrant.'

---

[1] Ghazanfar means a lion. Badáoní (II. p. 125, l. 8) calls him Ghazanjar Beg. The Ed. Bibl. Indica Edition has, by mistake, Ghanazfar.

In the 11th year, he abolished the Jam' i Raqmí. This is the name of the assessment of the Dihlí empire, which had existed since the time of Bairám; but the rent roll shewed an assessment very different from the actual state of things; 'for, on account of the number of men (kasrat i mardum, i. e. Jágír holders) and the unsettled state (qalb i wiláyat) of the country, the revenue was increased in name (banám afzúdah) for the sake of mere shew (barái maziid i i'tibár)'. This Jam' i Raqmí was now abolished (vide Third Book, A'ín i Dahsálah), and Muzaffar prepared a rent roll, according to his experience and the returns of Qánúngos. The new rent roll was called Jam' i Háçil i Hál, or the Roll of the present actual income (vide p. 352). As the Dágh law (pp. 255, 256, and p. 242) did not then exist, Muzaffar Khán fixed the number of soldiers which the contingents of the Amírs and the Mulázims (friends of the king) should contain, and the soldiers were divided into three classes.[1]

In the 12th year, it was reported that Muzaffar loved a boy of the name of Quṭb. Akbar had the boy forcibly removed, whereupon Muzaffar assumed the garb of a Faqír, and went into the forest. Akbar was thus obliged to recall him, and restored the beloved.

In the 17th year, a mania for Chaupar (p. 303) had seized Akbar's Court. Muzaffar lost not only his goldmuhurs, but also his temper, and annoyed the Emperor so much, that he was told to go to Makkah. But he was re-called, and joined the Court at Súrat, which Akbar then besieged. In the 18th year (981), after having been for some time in Sárangpúr in Málwah, he was appointed Vakíl of the Empire, with the title of Jumlatul Mulk. But he did several things which Akbar did not approve of, and when the Emperor returned from Patna, from where he had despatched a corps to take Rahtás in South Bihár, he ordered Muzaffar to join the expedition, without allowing him first to pay his respects (vide Briggs II, 249). Like his companion, Khwájah Shamsuddín Khátí (No. 159), M. distinguished himself in the campaign, punished the rebels on several occasions, and took Hájípúr, of which the Afgháns had again taken possession. For these services, M. was appointed, in the 20th year, Governor of Bihár, from Chausá to Garhí. Soon after the taking of Hájípúr, M. was nearly caught by a party of Afgháns, who saw him reconnoitering the banks of the G'handak.

In the 22nd year, M. returned to Court, where Sháh Mançúr (No. 122) and Rájah Todar Mall continued, under his superintendence, their financial reforms.

On the death of Khán Jahán (No. 24) in 986, he was made Governor of Bengal.

---

[1] The Maásir says, he allowed the first class 48,000 dáms, the second 32000 d., and the third 24000 d. per annum. These numbers appear to be very large, when compared with p. 231. But what was the value of a dám in those days? In the 40th year of Akbar's reign, the following pay regulation was introduced—

Mughul, Afghán, or Hindí Sihaspahs,	1000 d. per mensem.
Duaspahs,	800 d.
Yakaspahs,	600 d.
1st Class Rájpúts,	800 d.
2nd ditto ditto,	600 d.

(Akbarnámah). But at that time 40 dáms were equal to 1 Akbarsháhí Rupee, which differed very little from our rupee.

In the 25th year (988), Sháh Mançúr subjected the Amírs of Bihár and Bengal to strict enquiries, and called on them to refund sums which they had spent without permission. When he insisted on his demands, Ma'çúm i Kábulí and several other grandees that held jágírs in Bihár, rebelled. Muzaffar imitated Sháh Mançúr's policy in Bengal, and when he commenced vigorously to collect outstandings, Bábá Khán Qáqshál and other Jágírdárs of Bengal rebelled likewise. M. defeated them on several occasions, but would not listen to proposals of peace. At last the Bihár rebels joined those of Bengal, and mustered a sufficient force to take the field against Muzaffar. Notwithstanding this, the rebels would have gladly come to terms and gone to Orísá, had not Muzaffar betrayed his weakness by moving to the Fort of Ṭándah, which, according to Badáoní, consisted of nothing but four old walls. The rebels thus emboldened demanded full pardon, permission to go to Makkah, and restoration of one-third of their property. At this juncture, Sharafuddín Husain (No. 17) escaped from Muzaffar's custody, joined the rebels, and informed them of M.'s miserable condition. They moved therefore against Ṭándah, took it, captured M., and killed him (Rabí' I, 988[1]).

The Jámi' Masjid in Ágrah was built by Muzaffar. I am told the Masjid is now in ruins which still go by the name of Nawáb Muzaffar Khán kí Masjid or Kálí Masjid. The Maásir says, it stood in the Kaṭrah Miyán Raqíq, but this name does not appear to be now-a-days in use. The Masjid now called the Jámi' Masjid of Ágrah was built, in 1058, by Jahán Árá Begum, Sháhjahán's daughter, at a cost of five lacs of Rupees.

According to the Mir-át ul 'A'lam, his youngest daughter was married to Sháh Fathullah of Shíráz.

38. Saif Kha'n Kokah, elder brother of Zain Khán Kokah (No. 34).

His mother had only daughters, and when she was pregnant with Saif Khán, her husband threatened to divorce her, should it again turn out to be a daughter. She complained of this to Akbar's mother, and Akbar, though then a child, told her husband that he would incur his displeasure if he should do so; 'besides,' said he, 'it shall be this time a fine boy.' The mother looked upon Prince Akbar's words as a prophecy from heaven, and in course of time Saif Khán was born.

Akbar was very fond of Saif Khán, and made him, though quite young, a Commander of Four Thousand. He distinguished himself by his bravery, especially in the 17th year, at the taking of Súrat, where he was wounded by a bullet. In the beginning of the next year (981), he accompanied Akbar on his forced march from Ágrah to Ahmadábád (p. 325), and was killed bravely fighting with Muhammad Husain Mírzá.

How Akbar appreciated his services may be seen from the fact, that having heard that Saif Khán was heavily involved, he paid, on his return to Ágrah, every debt due by him.

His two sons, Sher Afkan (355), and Amánullah (356) are mentioned below as Commanders of Two Hundred and Fifty.

---

[1] According to Badáoní (II, p. 282), Muzaffar capitulated, left the Fort, and was then captured and slain.

39. Ra'jah Todar Mall, a Khetrí.

He was born at Láhor. The Maásirul Umará does not record his services before the 18th year of Akbar's reign; but T. M. appears to have entered Akbar's service at a very early period. In 971, he was employed under Muzaffar (Bad. II, 65), and in 972, he served under Akbar against Khán Zamán (vide No. 61). He held the first important post in the 18th year, when after the conquest of Gujrát he was left there to assess that province. In the 19th year, after the conquest of Patna, he got an 'alam and a naqqárah (p. 55), and was ordered to accompany Mun'im Khán to Bengal. He was the soul of the expedition. In the battle with Dáúd Khán i Kararání, when Khán 'Alam (vide No. 58) had been killed, and Mun'im Khán's horse had run away, the Rájah held his ground bravely, and 'not only was there no defeat, but an actual victory.' "What harm," said Todar Mall, "if Khán 'Alam is dead; what fear, if the Khán Khánán has run away, the empire is ours!" After settling severally financial matters in Bengal and Oṛisá, Todar Mall went to Court, and was employed in revenue matters. When Khán Jahán (No. 24) went to Bengal, Todar Mall was ordered to accompany him. He distinguished himself, as before, in the defeat and capture of Dáúd. In the 21st year, he took the spoils of Bengal to Court, among them 3 to 400 elephants. In the following year, he was again sent to Gujrát, vice Vazír Khán (No. 41), who had given no satisfaction. Whilst arranging at Ahmadábád matters with Vazír Khán, Muzaffar Husain, at the instigation of Mihr 'Alí Gulábí, rebelled. Vazír Khán proposed to retreat to the Fort, but Todar Mall was ready to fight, and defeated Muzaffar in the 22nd year, near Dholqah, which lies 12 kos from Ahmadábád. Vazír Khán would have been lost in this battle, if Todar Mall had not come to his assistance. Muzaffar, after his defeat, fled to Júnágaṛh.

In the same year Todar Mall was appointed Vazír. When Akbar left Ajmír for the Panjáb, the house idols of the Rájah were lost, as mentioned on p. 32, note.

When the news of Muzaffar's death (No. 37) and the occupation of the whole of Bengal and Bihár by the rebels reached Akbar, he sent Todar Mall, Çádiq Khán, Tarson Khán, &c., from Fathpúr Síkrí to Bihár. Muhibb 'Alí (No. 107), Governor of Rahtás, and Muhammad Ma'çúm Khán i Farankhúdí (No. 157) were appointed Kumakís, or auxiliaries. The latter joined the Rájah with 3000 well equipped horse, evidently bent on rebellion. Todar Mall managed to keep him quiet; but he reported the matter to Court. The Bengal rebels, under Ma'çúm i Kábulí, the Qáqsháls, and Mírzá Sharafuddín Husain, with 30,000 horse, 500 elephants, and many ships and artillery, had collected near Mungír, and Todar Mall, from fear of treachery among his auxiliaries, shut himself up in the Fort of Mungír, instead of risking a general engagement. During the siege, two of his officers, Humáyún Farmilí and Tarkhán Díwánah, joined the rebels. Though suffering from want of provisions, Todar Mall held himself bravely, especially as he received timely remittances from Court. After the siege had lasted for some time, Bábá Khán Qáqshál died, and Jabárí, son of Majnún Khán Qáqshál desired to leave. The rebel army dispersed; Ma'çúm i Kábulí went to South Bihár, and 'Arab Bahádur wished to surprise Patna, and take possession of the Imperial treasury, which Paháṛ Khán (perhaps No. 407) had safely lodged in the Fort of that town. After sending Ma'çúm i Farankhúdí to Patna, to assist Paháṛ Khán, Todar Mall and Çádiq Khán followed Ma'çúm i Kábulí to Bihár. Ma'çúm made a fruitless attempt to defeat Çádiq Khán in a sudden night attack, but was obliged to retreat, finding a ready asylum with 'Ísá Khán, Zamíndár of Oṛísá. Todar Mall was thus enabled to report to Akbar that South Bihár, as far as Garhí, was re-annexed to the Dihlí empire.

In the 27th year (990), Todar Mall was made Díván, or rather Vakíl. During this year he introduced his financial reforms which have made him so famous. The third book of the Áín contains his new rent-roll, or Açl i Jam' i Ṭúmár, which superseded Muzaffar's assessment (p. 349). His regulations regarding the coinage have been alluded to above, and others may be found in the Akbarnámah.

The most important reform introduced by Todar Mall is the change in the language and the character used for the revenue accounts. Formerly they had been kept in Hindí by Hindú Muharrirs. Todar Mall ordered that all government accounts should henceforth be written in Persian. He thus forced his co-religionists to learn the court language of their rulers,—a circumstance which may well be compared to the introduction of the English language in the courts of India. The study of Persian therefore became necessary for its pecuniary advantages.

Todar Mall's order, and Akbar's generous policy of allowing Hindús to compete for the highest honors—we saw on p. 341 that Mán Singh was the first Commander of Seven Thousand,—explain two facts, first, that before the end of the 18th century the Hindús had almost become the Persian teachers of the Muhammadans; secondly, that a new dialect could arise in upper India, the Urdú, which without the Hindús as receiving medium, never could have been called into existence. Whether we attach more influence to Todar Mall's order or to Akbar's policy, which once initiated, his successors, willing or not, had to follow, one fact should be borne in mind that before the times of Akbar, the Hindús, as a rule, did not study Persian, and stood therefore politically below their Muhammadan rulers.

In the 29th year, Akbar honored him by paying him a visit. In the 32nd year, a Khetrí, from private hatred, wounded T. M. on a march at night time. The man was at once cut down.

When Bír Bar (No. 85) had been killed in the war with the Yúsufzaís, T. M. was ordered to accompany Mán Singh, who had been appointed commander-in-chief. In the 34th year, when Akbar went to Kashmír, T. M. was left in charge of Láhor. Soon after, he applied for leave to go to the banks of the Ganges, as he was old and wished to die. Akbar let him go; but he recalled him from Hardwár, and told him that looking after his duties was more virtuous than sitting on the banks of the Ganges. T. M. unwillingly returned, but died soon after, on the 11th day of the year 998 (vide No. 27, p. 333).

Though often accused of headstrongness and bigotry by contemporaneous historians, Todar Mall's fame, as general and financier, has outlived the deeds of most of Akbar's grandees: together with Abulfazl and Mán Singh, he is best known to the people of India at the present day.

His son Dhárú (No. 190) was a Commander of Seven Hundred, and was killed during the Sindh expedition, while serving under Khán Khánán (p. 335). People say that he used to shoe his horses with golden shoes.

The name Todar Mall is often spelt in MSS. with the Hindí ṭ, ḍ, and ṛ, which explains the spelling 'Torel Mall,' which we find in old Histories. Under Sháhjahán also there lived a distinguished courtier of the name 'Todar Mall.'

The Tafríhul 'Imárat[1] says, Todar Mall's father died when T. M. was quite young, and that the widow was in great distress. T. M., at an early age, shewed much clearness and common sense, and received an appointment as writer, from which humble position he rose to the greatest honors.

40. Muhammad Qa'sim Kha'n, of Nísháپúr.

The Maásir calls him Qásim Muhammad Khán, and has put his name under the letter Q; but Abulfazl, Badáoní, and the Ṭabaqát give his name in the above order.

He was a rich landowner of Nísháپúr, and fled after the invasion of the Uzbaks to India, where he served under Bairám Khán. He distinguished himself in the war with Sikandar Súr, and served as Haráwal, or leader of the van, under Khán Zamán (No. 13) in the battle with Hemú. Immediately after, but still in the first year of Akbar's reign, he was sent against Hájí Khán, who had defeated Ráná Udai Sing of Maiwár, and taken possession of Nágor and Ajmír. Hájí Khán was an old servant of Sher Khán, and was distinguished for his wisdom and bravery. On the appearance of the Imperialists, however, Hájí Khán's army dispersed, and he himself withdrew to Gujrát. M. Q. Kh. thus took possession of Nágor and Ajmír, which for a long time remained the South Western frontier of Akbar's empire.

In the 5th year, he left Bairám's party, and joined the Chaghtái nobles. He commanded the left wing of Shamsuddín Atgah's corps in the fight in which Bairám was defeated (p. 317). After the victory, he received Multán as jágír.

He was next sent to Sárangpúr in Málwah, where, in the 9th year, he was visited by Akbar on his sudden hunting expedition to that province, the object of which was to get hold of 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak (No. 14). M. Q. Kh. assisted in the pursuit.

According to the Ṭabaqát, M. Q. Kh. died soon after at Sárangpúr.

41. Vazi'r Kha'n, brother of 'Abdul Majídi Açaf Khán (I), of Harát (No. 49).

When Vazír Khán escaped with his brother (vide below No. 49) from Bahádur Khán (No. 21), he fled to Kaṛah, and obtained subsequently, through the mediation of Muzaffar Khán (No. 37), free pardon for himself and Açaf Khán.

In the 21st year, when 'Azíz Kokah (p. 326) had incurred Akbar's displeasure, V. Kh. was sent to Gujrát, to govern in 'Azíz's name, and when that chief had been called to Court, he was appointed governor (sipahsálár) of the province. But he did not distinguish himself, and Akbar, in the 22nd year, sent Todar Mall (No. 39) to Gujrát, to take the administration out of V. Kh.'s hands. It happened that about the same time, Mihr 'Alí Gulábí, a friend of M. Ibráhím Husain, rebelled and set up as king Muzaffar Husain, Ibráhím's young son, whom he had brought from the Dak'hin. As mentioned above, the rebellion was crushed through Todar Mall's bravery. When the Rájah left, Mihr 'Alí appeared again, and V. Kh., most of whose soldiers had joined the rebel, shut himself up in the fort of Ahmadábád. In one of the assaults, Mihr 'Alí was killed by a bullet, and Muzaffar Husain Mírzá, from timidity, raised the siege. Notwithstanding this success, matters in Gujrát did not improve, and oppressions became so numerous, that Akbar deposed V. Kh. and called him to Court.

[1] This is the title of a Persian MS. preserved in the Library of the Asiatic Society of Bengal. It was composed by Síl Chand, of the Government College of Agrah, and treats of the antiquities of that town. The book gives many valuable and interesting particulars. In the preface an English gentleman is praised, whose Christian names are James Stephen, but the surname is not legible. The name clearly ends in gton, and may be Babington, or some similar name. The style is bombastic, and there is no proper arrangement.

In the 25th year, Akbar appointed him vazír in the place of Sháh Mançúr of Shíráz (No. 122), and soon after governor of Audh.

In the 27th year, when M. 'Azíz (No. 21) had been sent to Bihár, V. Kh. was ordered to join him with his contingent, and as after the flight of Ma'çúm Khán sickness obliged 'Azíz to return to Bihár, he left V. Kh. in charge of the province, till a new Çúbahdár should be appointed. V. Kh. made use of the opportunity, and moved against Qutlú Khán, ruler of Oṛísá, whom he defeated (vide p. 356). Qutlú, in the following (29th) year, sent tribute, and was left in possession of Oṛísá. V. Kh. returned to Ṭánḍah, and applied himself, with the assistance of Çádiq Khán (No. 43) and Shahbáz Khán i Kambú (No. 80) to financial matters.

In the 31st year, Akbar ordered that each çúbah should, in future, be ruled by two Amírs, and Vazír Khán was appointed Çúbahdár of Bengal, with Muhibb 'Alí Khán (No. 107) as assistant. In the following year, 995, V. Kh. died.

Shahbáz Khán, who was Bakhshí of Bengal, allowed Mírzá Muhammad Çálih, V. Kh.'s son, to take command of his father's contingent. But M. M. Çálih shewed much inclination to rebel, and Akbar sent Mír Murád (282, or 380) to bring him and his contingent to Court. On the route, at Fathpúr Hanswah, he behaved so rebelliously, that Mír Murád imprisoned him with the assistance of the jágírdárs of the district, and took him fettered to Akbar. He was kept imprisoned for some time.

42. Qulij Kha'n.

He is called Andajání, from Andaján, a province of Farghánah, south of the Saihún. His ancestors had been for many years serving under the Tímúrides. His grandfather was a noble at Sulṭán Husain Mírzá Báiqrá's court.

The principal facts of his life have been mentioned on p. 34, note 2. In mentioning his appointment to Súrat, the 'iron fort,' which Akbar, in the 17th year, conquered in one month and seventeen days, Abulfazl says that the Fort had been built in 947 (1540-41, A. D.) by Çafar Aghá, alias Khudáwand Khán, a Turkish slave of Sulṭán Mahmúd of Gujrát. The tárikh of its construction is characteristic (metre long Ramal),

سد بود بر سینه و جان فرنگي این بناي

'May this structure prove a barrier for the chest and the life of the Firingí.'[1]

Qulij Khán died at the age of eighty, on the 10th Ramazán 1022 (end of 1613, A. D.)[2] at Pasháwar. He was at his death a Commander of Six Thousand, Five Thousand horse.

---

[1] The numbers added give 947. The last yá, though somewhat irregular, cannot be left out.

[2] So according to the Tuzuk i Jahángírí (ed. Sayyid Ahmad, p. 123, l. l.). Misled by bad MSS., I mentioned on p. 34, note, the year 1035 as the year of his death. The Mir-átul 'Alam and the Maásir give as tárikh of his death the Arabic words, Almautu jasrun

The Maásir and Badáoní (III, p. 188) say that he belonged to the tribe of جاني قرباني Jání Qurbání (?); but for the latter word the MSS. have different readings, as Qurbání, Farbání, Faryání, &c.

The Maásir copies from the Zakhírat ulkhawánín the following story which is said to have taken place in 1000 A. H., when Jaunpúr was Q.'s jágír. 'Q. was building a house, when the working men in digging came to a cupolalike-structure. Q. and several other respectable men were called, and they remained on the spot till the newly discovered building was fully dug out. It had a door with an immense lock attached to it weighing one man. When forced open, an old man made his appearance, who asked the bystanders in Sanscrit, whether Rám Chandr's avatár (incarnation) had taken place; whether he had got back his Sítá; whether Krishná's avatár had taken place at Mathurá; and, lastly, whether Muhammad had appeared in Arabia. On receiving affirmative answers to these questions, the old man further wished to know, whether the Ganges still flowed. This also being affirmed, he expressed a wish to be taken out. Q. then put up seven tents, joined to each other, in each of which the sage remained for a day. On the 8th day he came out, and said prayers according to the way of Muhammadans. In sleep and eating he differed from other men; he spoke to no one, and died after six months.'

Qulij Khán's sons. 1. Mírzá Saifullah (No. 292). 2. Mírzá Chín Qulij (No. 293), regarding whom vide below.

43. Ça'diq Kha'n, son of Báqir of Harát.

Other Historians call him Çádiq Muhammad Khán.[1] His father, Muhammad Báqir, had been vazír to Qará Khán Turkmán, ruler of Khurásán. Qará had rebelled against Sháh Ṭahmásp, and fled to India. Çádiq entered Bairám's service as Rikábdár (spur-holder), and got soon after a mançab, and was made, after Bairám's death, an Amír. Badáoní (II, 220) alludes to his services under Humáyún in Qandahár, and the Ṭabaqát says that he had been since his youth in Akbar's service.

After the conquest of Patna, Akbar returned by boat to Jaunpúr. On the road, in crossing the river at Chausá, a valuable elephant perished through Ç.'s carelessness. Akbar confiscated his jágír, excluded him from Court, and told him to go to Bhat'h (Bhat'h G'horá, or Bandah-Rewah), to get another elephant. After passing over 'the heights and the low places' of fortune, Çádiq, in the 20th year, returned to Court with yúçilu alhábiba ilá alhabíbi; 'Death is the bridge which joins the beloved to the Beloved;' but the letters added give 1023, not 1022, as in the Tuzuk.

---

For Husain in the last line of the note on p. 34, which is given in inferior MSS., better copies have Chín Qulij, which is to be substituted for it.

His takhalluç 'Ulfatí' has been mentioned above. The Ṭabaqát says that another poet of the same takhalluç was in the service of Zain Khán Kokah (No. 34), and Badáoní (III, 188, 189) mentions two other poets of the same takhalluç.

Qulij, properly qúlúj, means in Turkish a sword, and 'Qulij Khán' is the same as Shamsher Khán. The word is variously spelled in MSS., sometimes with long vowels, and a final ch.

[1] Akbar disliked the names Muhammad and Ahmad; hence we find that Abulfazl leaves them out in this list. Similar omissions occurred above, as Mun'im Khán (No. 11), Mírzá 'Azíz (No. 21), for Muhammad Mun'im and M. Muhammad 'Azíz; or, Shihábuddín Ahmad Khán (No. 26), for Shihábuddín Ahmad Khán. More examples will be found below.

100 elephants, and was restored to favor. He was made governor of Garha, vice Rái Sarjan (No. 96). In the 22nd year (985), Ç., with several other grandees, was ordered to punish Rájah Madhukar, should he not submit peacefully. Passing the confines of Narwar, Ç. saw that kindness would not do; he therefore took the fort of Karhará (کرهرا), and cutting down the jungle, advanced to the river Dasthárá, close to which Undchhah lay, Madhukar's residence. A fight ensued. Madhukar was wounded and fled with his son Rám Sáh. Another son of his, Horal Deo (Maásir, Horal Ráo), and about 200 Rájpúts were killed. Ç. remained encamped in the Rájah's territory. Driven to extremities, Madhukar sent Rán Chand, a relation of his, to Akbar at Bahírah, and asked and obtained pardon. On the 3rd Ramazán, 986, Çádiq with the penitent Rájah arrived at Court.

Soon after, Ç.'s aqtá' were transferred to the Eastern Districts of the empire, so that he might take part in the suppression of the revolt in Bengal. In the 27th year, during the temporary absence of 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21), Çádiq and Muhibb 'Alí Khán (No. 107) defeated Khabíṭah,[1] one of Ma'çúm's officers, on the Ghandak near Hájípúr, and sent his head to Akbar. In the beginning of the 28th year, he paid his respects at Court, but was immediately ordered to rejoin Mírzá Kokah, who had again left for Bihár.

In the beginning of the 29th year, he was ordered to move to Vazír Khán (No. 41), who at a place six kos from Bardwán was treating with Qutlú.[2] Through Ç.'s skill, a sort of peace was concluded, which confirmed Qutlú in the possession of Oṛísá. Ç. then returned to his tuyúl at Patna.

When Shahbáz Khán (No. 80) returned from his expedition to Bháṭí, the tuyúl-dárs of Bengal and Bihár were ordered to move to him. Ç., however, was no friend of Shahbáz. The mutual dislike rose to the highest pitch, when once Ç.'s elephant ran against Shahbáz, who believed the accident premeditated; and Akbar sent Khwájah Sulaimán (No. 327) to Bengal to settle their differences. One was to remain in Bengal, the other to go to Bihár; but Ç., in the 30th year, left Bengal without permission, and went to Court, where he was not admitted. But when Shahbáz went from Bihár to Bengal, Ç. went again to Court, and was appointed governor of Multán.

When the Raushánís in the District of Mount Teráh (تیراہ), "which lies west of Pasháwar, and is 32 kos long, and 12 kos broad," commenced disturbances, Ç., in the 33rd year, was ordered to bring them to obedience, which he did with much tact and firmness. After the return of Zain Khán (No. 34) from Waijúr, Ç. was sent there, to subjugate the Yúsafzaís.

In the 36th year, Prince Murád was sent from Málwah to Gujrát, and as Ismá'íl Qulí Khán (No. 46) had not given satisfaction as Vakíl, Ç. was appointed atálíq to [1] Khabíṭah (خبیطہ) was a Mughul, and had risen by bravery under Ma'çúm i Kábulí from a humble position to the post of a Commander. In Badáoní (Ed. Bibl. Indica, p. 310,) he is called Khabísah Bahádur (خبیثہ) and Khastah (خستہ) in my MS. of the Ṭabaqát, where, moreover, the event, according to the erroneous chronology of that history, is put in the 28th year.

---

[2] The spelling Qutlú if perhaps preferable to Qatlú, if this name is a shortened form of Qutlugh.

the Prince,[1] whom in the 40th year he accompanied to the Dak'hin. Shahbáz Khán being one of the auxiliaries, the old enmity broke out again. After the siege of Ahmadnagar had been raised, Ç. distinguished himself in protecting the frontiers of Barár.

In the beginning of the 41st year, he was made a Commander of Five Thousand. In the same year he defeated Saráwar Khán, and made much booty. He was then made governor of Sháhpúr, which town Prince Murád had founded six kos from Bálápúr.

Çádiq died at Sháhpúr in the beginning of 1005. At Dholpúr, which 'lies 20 kos from Ágrah, near the left bank on the Chambal river,' Ç. had erected splendid buildings and a Mausoleum. He had also done much for the cultivation of the surrounding country.

He was one of the best officers Akbar had.

His sons. 1. Záhid Khán (No. 286), a Commander of Three Hundred and Fifty. In the 47th year, he was made a Khán, and, on the accession of Jahángír, a Commander of Two Thousand.

2. Dost Muhammad (No. 287). 3. Yár Muhammad (No. 288). 'Neither of them was alive at the time of Sháhjahán.' Maásir.

44. Ra'i Ra'isingh, son of Rái Kalyán Mall (No. 93).

Rái Singh belonged to the Ráthors of Bíkánír, and is the fourth descendant from Rái Máldeo. His father, Kalyán Mall, was a friend of Bairám (p. 316), and paid, in the 15th year, his respects to Akbar at Ajmír, when he together with his son entered the emperor's service. He also sent his brother's daughter to Akbar's Harem. Kalyán Mall was in the 40th year a Commander of Two Thousand.

Rái Singh, in the 17th year, when Akbar made preparations to crush the rebellion in Gujrát, occupied Jodhpúr, the old seat of Mál Deo, in order to prevent the rebels from invading the Dihlí territory; but Ibráhím, after his defeat at Sarnál, invaded Akbar's territory, and besieged Nágor, which at that time was the tuyúl of Khán i Kalán (No. 16), and was defended by his son, Farrukh Khán (p. 322). R. came to his relief, and the Mírzá had not only to raise the siege, but was pursued, and defeated by R. In the following year also, R. distinguished himself in the engagement with Muhammad Husain Mírzá (p. 325).

In the 19th year, R. and Sháh Qulí Mahram (No. 45) were ordered to punish Chandr Sen, son of Rájah Mál Deo; but as they were unable to take Siwánah, Chandr Sen's stronghold, notwithstanding the auxiliaries which Akbar had sent them at R.'s request, R., in the 21st year, was called to Court, and Shahbáz Khán (No. 81) took the command. Before the end of the same year, however, R. and Tarson Muhammad Khán (No. 32) were sent against the refractory zamíndárs of Jálor and Sarohí; but as they applied to Akbar for pardon, R. and Sayyid Háshim of Bárhah (No. 143) garrisoned Nádot to watch the Ráná of Udaipúr, and bring the rebels of those districts to obedience. As at this time Saltán Deodah, the zamíndár of Sarohí, from distrust again assumed a hostile attitude, R. marched against Sarohí and besieged it. During the siege, R. called his family to his camp; but Saltán Deodah fell upon the caravan, killed several relations of R., and then withdrew to Abúgarh.[1] R. in the meantime took Sarohí, and hastened to Abúgarh, which Saltán surrendered. R. left a garrison there, and took Saltán to Court.

[1] From several passages in the Akbarnámah it is clear that atálíq (pr. a tutor) means the same as Vakíl or Vazír. The imperial princes kept up Courts of their own, and appointed their Vazírs, their Díváns, Bakhshís, &c. The appointment of the Vakíl, however, appears to have rested with the emperor.

In the 26th year, when Mírzá Muhammad Hakím, Akbar's brother, threatened to invade the Panjáb, R. together with several other grandees was sent in advance. They were soon followed by Prince Murád. When the imperial army, in the end of the same year, returned to Ágrah, R. and several others were sent as tuyúldárs to the Panjáb. In the 28th year, he served in Bengal.

In the 30th year, R. and Ismá'íl Qulí Khán (vide No. 46) led successfully an expedition against the Balúchís. In the following year (19th Rajab, 994), R.'s daughter was married to Prince Salím. In the 35th year, he went for some time to Bíkánír, and served, in the end of the 36th year, in Sindh under M. 'Abdurrahím (No. 29).

In the 38th year, Akbar paid R. a visit of condolence. The son of Rájah Rámchand Baghelah of Bándhú died suddenly on his way to Bándhú, to which he had only lately, after the death of his father, been appointed. The young Rájah had married a daughter of R. Akbar interceded for their young children, and prevented R.'s daughter from burning herself. Soon after, R. stayed away from Court for some reason, during which time one of his servants complained of him to Akbar. The emperor called the man to court; but R. concealed him, and gave out, he had run away. Akbar was annoyed and excluded R. for some time from the darbárs; but after some time he restored him and sent him as governor to Súrat, with the order to assist in the Dak'hin wars. R., however, delayed in Bíkánír, and when he had at last left, delayed on the road to Súrat. Akbar advised him to be obedient; but seeing that he would not go, called him to Court, but without allowing him to attend the darbárs. After some time he was pardoned.

In the 45th year, R. was ordered to accompany Abulfazl to Násik; but as his son Dalpat[2] (No. 252) had caused disturbances in Bíkánír (vide p. 359), R. got leave to go home. In the following year, he went again to court. In the 48th year, he served under Prince Salím against the Ráná of Udaipúr.

At the death of the emperor, R. was a Commander of Four Thousand. Jahángír, on his accession, made him a Commander of Five Thousand. When the emperor

---

[1] 'Abúgarh is a fort near Sarohí, and not far from the frontier between Gujrát and Ajmír'. Abulfazl says in the Akbarnámah (events of the 21st year) that the old name of Abúgarh was Arbudá Achál, Arbudá being the name of a spirit who, disguised as a female, shews wanderers the way, and achal meaning mountain. The fort on the top of this high mountain was difficult of access; it could moreover hold out for a long time, as there were several springs and fields within it. My copies of the Sawánih and the Akbarnámah have Sulṭán Deorah (سلطان ديورة, for Saltán Deodah (سلتان ديودة) of the Maásir.

[2] For Dalpat, the Tuzuk i Jahángírí (pp. 36, 106, and 126) has wrong Dalíp. The Tuzuk and the second volume of the Pádisháhnámah Edit. Bibl. Indica, p. 635) have Súraj Singh, for Súr Singh, and the latter calls him a بهتوريه (?) instead of رهتوريه, perhaps a blunder of the native Editors. But the Maásir and the first volume of the Pádisháhnamah have Súr Singh (pp. 297, 302, at the end of the first decade.)

set out for the Panjáb to pursue Khusrau, R. was put in charge of the travelling harem; but on the road he left without order and went to Bíkánír. In the second year, when Jahángír returned from Kábul, R., at the advice of Sharíf Khán, presented himself before the emperor with a fautah round his neck, to shew his willingness to suffer punishment for his crimes, and was again pardoned. He died in 1021.

His sons. 1. Dalpat (No. 252). He was a Commander of Five Hundred. In the 36th year, he served in the Sind war, but was looked upon as a coward. In the 45th year, when Akbar was in the Dak'hin, Muzaffar Husain Mírzá, in consequence of his differences with Khwájagí Fathullah, had fled; and Dalpat, under the pretext of following him up, had gone to Bíkánír and created disturbances. In the 46th year, his father brought him to his senses. D. asked to be pardoned, and was ordered again to come to Court.

In the third year of Jahángír's reign (1017), he appears to have offended the emperor; but at the request of Khán Jahán Lodí he was pardoned. After the death of his father, D. came from the Dak'hin to Court, was appointed successor, and got the title of Rái, although his younger brother (by another mother), Súr Singh, claimed the right of succession, which Rái Singh had promised him from affection to his mother. Súr Singh, however, disgusted Jahángír by the bold way in which he preferred his claim.

D. was then ordered to join M. Rustam i Çafawí (No. 8), the governor of Sind. In the 8th year, it was reported to Jahángír that Súr Singh had attacked and defeated his brother, who in consequence had created disturbances in Hiçár. Háshim, the Faujdár of that Sirkár, caught him and sent him fettered to court, where he was executed as a warning to others.

For Dalpat's son, Mahes Dás, and grandson, Ratan, vide Pádisháhnámah, pp. 635, 723; 684, 729.

2. Súr Singh. After the death of his brother he rose to favor. In Histories he is generally called Ráo Súr Singh, a title which he received from Sháhjahán. He died in 1040. He had two sons, Karan and Satr Sál, the former of whom inherited the title of Ráo (vide Pádisháhnámah II, p. 727).

VII. Commanders of Three Thousand Five Hundred.

45. Sha'h Quli' Mahram i Baharlü.

He was in Bairám's service and distinguished himself in the war with Hemú. It was Sháh Qulí that attacked Hemú's elephant, though he did not know who his opponent was. The driver, however, made him a sign, and he led the elephant with Hemú, whose eye had been pierced by an arrow, from the battle-field, and brought the wounded commander to Akbar.[1] Soon after, before the end of the first year, Sh. Q. served with Muhammad Qásim Khán (No. 40) against Hájí Khán in Nágor and Ajmír.

[1] 'Before the end of the first year, Pír Muhammad was despatched against Hájí Khán in Alwar, and as he withdrew, the imperialists took possession of the Sirkár of Alwar as far as Deolí Sájárí [or Sáchárí], the birth-place of Hemú, and performed many brave deeds. They also caught Hemú's father alive, and brought him to Pír Muhammad, who asked him to embrace Islám. As he would not, he was killed by him. After gathering his spoils, Pír M. returned to Akbar.' Sawánih from the Akbarnámah.

In the third year, it was brought to Akbar's notice, that Sh. Q. was passionately attached to a dancing boy of the name of Qabúl Khán; and as the emperor had the boy forcibly removed,[1] Sh. Q. dressed as a Jogí, and went into the forests. Bairám traced him with much trouble, and brought him back to court, where the boy was restored to him.

Like Bábá Zambúr, he remained faithful to Bairám to the last, and was pardoned together with his master in Tilwárah (p. 317).

After Bairám's death, he was rapidly promoted and made an Amír. In the 20th year, when Khán Jahán (No. 24) was sent from the Panjáb to Bengal, Sh. Q. was appointed Governor of the Panjáb, rising higher and higher in Akbar's favour.

It is said that the Emperor, from goodwill towards him, admitted him to his female apartments. After the first time he had been allowed to enter the Harem, he went home, and had his testicles removed (majbúb). From this circumstance, he was every where called Makram,[2] i. e. one who is admitted to the Harem and knows its secrets.

In the 34th year, Akbar, after his return from Zábulistán, crossed the Bahat (Jhelum) near Rasúlpúr, and encamped at Hailán. During his stay there, he mounted a female elephant, and was immediately attacked by a mast male elephant. Akbar was thrown down and sustained severe contusions. A rumour of his death spread over the whole country; in some provinces even disturbances broke out. The Rájpúts of Shaikháwat, especially, plundered the districts from Mewát to Rewárí; and in the 35th year, Akbar had to send Sh. Q. against them. He soon restored order.

In the 41st year, he was made a commander of Four Thousand, and soon after of Five Thousand. The Ṭabaqát says that in 1001 he had been a commander of Three Thousand for thirty years.

He died at Ágrah in 1010. At Nárnaul, where he chiefly lived, he erected splendid buildings, and dug large tanks. When he felt death approaching, he gave the soldiers of his contingent two years' pay in advance, and left, besides, many legacies. As he had no heirs, his remaining property lapsed to the state (Tuzuk, p. 22).

46. Isma''íl Quli' Khán, brother of Khán Jahán (No. 24).

He must not be confounded with No. 72. He was caught in the battle near Jálindhar (p. 317). He joined Akbar's service with his brother, under whom he mostly served. When his brother had died in Bengal, he came with the immense property he had left behind him to Court, and was favorably received. In the 30th year, he was sent against the Balúchís (vide No. 44). On his arrival in Balúchistán, the people soon submitted, and their chiefs, Ghází Khán Wájhiyah and Ibráhím Khán, repaired to Court, and were allowed to retain the country. In the 31st year, when Bhagwán Dás (No. 27), on account of his madness, had not been allowed to go to Zábulistán, I. Q. was sent there instead. But he committed certain improprieties and fell into disgrace, and was ordered to go from Bhakkar to Makkah. He begged hard to be forgiven; but he was not allowed to see the Emperor, and was sent against the Yúsufzaís.

---

[1] For similar examples, vide p. 319, which also happened in the third year, and No. 37, p. 349.

[2] Or Muḥrim.

At that time epidemics were raging in Waijúr, and the chiefs of the Yúsufzaís came forward and submitted to I. Q., whilst Zain Khán (No. 34), governor of Zábulistán, pressed hard upon Jalálah Raushání, who had left Teráh and entered Waijúr. Zain Khán therefore entered the district, determined to use the opportunity to wipe off the disgrace of his former defeat. The arrival of Çádiq Khán (No. 43), however, who had been sent from Court, to occupy the district, and capture Jalálah, annoyed I. Q. still more, as he thought that that duty might have been left to him as T'hánahdár of the district. I. Q. forgot himself so far as to allow Jalálah to escape. He then went to Court, where he was severely reprimanded for his conduct.

In the 33rd year, he was made Governor of Gujrát. In the 36th year, when Prince Murád had been made Governor of Málwah, I. Q. was appointed his atálíq or Vakíl; but he gave no satisfaction, and was called to Court, Çádiq Khán having been appointed in his stead.

In the 39th year, he was sent to Kálpí, to look after his jágír. In the 42nd year (1005), he was made a Commander of Four Thousand.

He was given to luxury, and spent large sums on carpets, vessels, dress, &c. He kept 1200 women, and was so jealous of them, that whenever he went to Court, he put his seal over the strings attached to their night-drawers. The women resented this and other annoyances, made a conspiracy, and poisoned him.

Three sons of his are mentioned below—1. Ibráhím Qulí (No. 322), a commander of Three Hundred; 2. Salím Qulí (No. 357), and 3. Khalíl Qulí (No. 358), both commanders of Two Hundred. They do not appear to have distinguished themselves.

VII. Commanders of Three Thousand.

47. Mi'rza' Ja'ni' Beg, ruler of T'hat'hah.

He belonged to the Arghún clan, and therefore traced his descent to Chingiz Khán. Abulfazl in the Akbarnámah gives his tree as follows:—

Chingiz Khán.
|
Túlí Khán.
|
Hulágú Khán (the brother of Mangú Qáán.)
|
Abágh (or, Abághá) Khán, d. 663.
|
Arghún Khán, d. 690.
|
Four generations intervening.
|
Atkú Timur.
|
Shankal Beg Tarkhán.
|
Several generations not known.
|
'Abdulkháliq Tarkhán.
|

Of his ancestors, Atkú Timur had been killed in the war with Tuqtamish Khán, and the Emperor Timur took care of Shankal Beg, and made him a Tarkhán (vide the note at the end of this biography).

Mírzá 'Abdul 'Alí, fourth ancestor of M. Jání Beg, had risen to high dignities under Sulṭán Mahmúd, son of M. Abú Sa'íd, and received the government of Bukhárá. He was treacherously killed, together with his five eldest sons, by Shaibání Khán Uzbak; only his sixth son, M. Muhammad 'Isá, escaped. The Arghún clan in Bukhárá, being thus left without a head, emigrated to Khurásán, where they attached themselves to Mír Zul-núu Beg Arghún, who was the Amírul-Mírzá 'Abdul 'Alí Tarkhán.

|
M. Muhammad 'Isá Tarkhán, d. 975.
|
M. Muhammad Báqí Tarkhán, d. 993.
|
Mírzá Páyandah Muhammad Tarkhán.
|
Mírzá Jání Beg Tarkhán.
|
Mírzá Ghází Beg Tarkhán.

Umará and Sipahsálár of Sultán Husain Mírzá. He also was atálíq and father-in-law to Prince Badí'uzzamán Mírzá, and held Qandahár as jágír. When the prince's career ended, his two sons, Badí'uzzamán and Muzaffar Mírzá, proclaimed themselves kings of Khurásán. Anarchy prevailed; and matters grew worse, when Shaibán Khán invaded the country. Zul-nún Beg fell in battle against him.

Shujá' Beg, better known as Sháh Beg, Zul-nún's son, held Qandahár during the absence of his father, and succeeded him in the government. He was bent on conquest. In 890, he took Fort Sewe from Jám Nizámuddín (generally called in Histories Jám Nandá), king of Sindh. He continued to interfere, as related by Abulfazl below in the Third Book, (Çúbah of Sindh), and managed at last, in 929, to conquer the country, thus compensating himself for the loss of Qandahár, which had been occupied by Bábar. A short time before his death, which took place in 930,[1] he invaded Multán, then in the hands of the Langáhs.

Sháh Beg Arghún was succeeded by his son Mírzá Sháh Husain Arghún, who took Multán from Sultán Husain Langáh (vide Third Book, Çúbah of Multán). M. Sháh Husain Arghún was afflicted with a peculiar fever, which only left him when he was on the river Indus. He therefore used to travel down the Indus for six months of the year, and upwards for the remaining portion. On one occasion, he went towards Bhakkar; when some of the nobles deserted him, and elected Mírzá Muhammad 'Isá, third ancestor of M. Jání Beg, as their chief. M. Sháh Husain, assisted by his foster brother, Sultán Mahmúd, Governor of Bhakkar, opposed him; but he had at last to come to terms, and cede a large part of Sindh to M. 'Isá. On Sháh Husain's death, in 963, the whole country fell to 'Isá.

In this manner the older branch of the Arghúns came to the throne of T'hat'hah.

'Isá died in 975, and was succeeded by his son M. Muhammad Báqí, who successfully crushed the revolt of his younger brother, M. Ján Bábá. M. Báqí, in 993, committed suicide during an attack of insanity; and as his son, M. Páyandah Muhammad, was also subject to fits of madness, the government passed into the hands of M. Jání Beg, the son of M. Páyandah.

Akbar had often felt annoyed that, notwithstanding his frequent stays in the Panjáb, M. Jání Beg had shewn no anxiety to pay him a visit. In the 35th year therefore (999), when the Khán Khánán was ordered to invade Qandahár, he was told to send some one to M. J. B., and draw his attention to this neglect; if no heed was paid, he was to invade Sindh on his return. Multán and Bhakkar being the tuyúl of the Khán Khánán, he did not move into Qandahár by way of Ghaznín and Bangash, but chose a round-about way through his jágír. In the meantime the conquest of T'hat'hah had been determined upon at Court, and the Khán Khánán set out at once for Sindh (vide p. 335, and Brigg's Firishtah). After bravely defending the country, M. J. B. had at last to yield. In the 38th year (1001), accompanied by the Khán Khánán, he paid his respects to Akbar at Láhor, was made a Commander of Three Thousand, and received the Çúbah of Multán as tuyúl, Sindh itself being assigned to M. Sháhrukh (No. 7). But before this arrangement was carried out, a report reached Akbar that the Arghún clan, about 10000 men, women, and children, moved up the river, to follow M. J. B. to his new tuyúl, and that great distress had thereby been caused both among the emigrants and those who were left behind. Akbar felt that under such circumstances policy should yield to mercy, and M. J. B. was appointed to Sindh. Láhari Bandar, however, became kháliçah, and the Sirkár of Siwistán which had formerly paid peshkash, was parcelled out among several grandees.

[1] Sháh Beg was a learned man, like his renowned opponent Bábar. He wrote a Commentary to the well known Arabic grammar Káfiyah (شرح كافيه), and commentaries to the Maṭáli' (شرح مطالع) and the 'Aqáid i Nasafí (شرح عقايد نسفي).

In the 42nd year, M. J. B. was promoted to a command of Three Thousand and Five Hundred. He was much liked by Akbar for his character, religious views (vide p. 209), pleasing manners, and practical wisdom. It is perhaps for this reason that Abulfazl has placed him first among the Commanders of Three Thousand, though names much more renowned follow. From his youth, M. J. B. had been fond of wine, but had not indulged in excesses; his habitual drinking, however, undermined his health, and brought on delirium (sarsám), of which he died, in 1008, at Burhánpúr in the Dak'hin, after the conquest of A'sír.

A short time before his death, he offended Akbar by declaring that had he had an A'sír, he would have held it for a hundred years.

M. J. B. was fond of poetry; he was himself a poet and wrote under the takhalluç of Halímí.[1]

Mírzá Ghází Beg, son of M. Jání Beg. At the death of his father, he was only 17 years old; and though not at Court, Akbar conferred Sindh on him. He was opposed by Mírzá 'Isá Tarkhán, son of Mírzá Ján Babá (brother of M. Muhammad Báqí, grandfather of M. Jání Beg); but Khusrau Khán Chirgis, an old servant of the Arghúns and Vakíl of his father, espoused his cause, and M. 'Isá Tarkhán fled from Sindh. The army which M. Ghází Beg and Khusrau Khán had at their disposal, seems to have made them inclined to rebel against Akbar; but the Emperor sent promptly Sa'íd Khán (No. 25) and his son Sa'dullah[2] to Bhakkar, and M. Ghází Beg came to Court, and was confirmed in the government of Sindh.

After the accession of Jahángír, M. Ghází Beg received Multán in addition to Sindh, was made a Commander of Seven Thousand, and was sent to relieve Qandahár (Tuzuk p. 33, 72, 109), which had been besieged by Husain Khán Shámlú, the Persian Governor of Harát. He also received the title of Farzand (son). Sháh 'Abbás of Persia often tried to win him over, and sent him several khil'ats.

---

[1] Here follows in the Maásir ul Umará a description of Sindh taken from the Third Book of the Á'ín, concluding with the following remark:—

'At present (when the author of the Maásir wrote), the whole of Sindh is under Khudá Yár Khán Latí (لاڑی). From a long time he had farmed (ijárah kard) the Çúbah of T'hat'hah, and the Sirkárs of Siwistán and Bhakkar. Subsequently when the districts on the other side of the Indus were ceded to Nádir Sháh, Khudá Yár Khán administered them for Nádir Sháh.'

[2] Sa'dullah has been omitted to be mentioned on p. 332. He received the title of Nawázish Khán in 1020; vide Tuzuk, pp. 34, 96.

He died suddenly at the age of twenty-five in 1018,[1] the word Ghází being the Táríkh of his death. Suspicion attaches to Lutfullah, his Vakíl and son of Khusrau Khán Chirgis, who appears to have been treated unkindly. M. Ghází does not appear to have had children.

Like his father, he was a poet. He wrote under the takhalluç of Vaqárí, which he had bought of a Qandahár poet. He played nearly every instrument. Poets like Ṭálibí of Ámul, Mullá Murshid i Yazdjirdí, Mír Ni'matullah Váçilí, Mullá Asad Qiççah-khwán, and especially Fughfúrí of Gílán enjoyed his liberality. The last left him, because his verses were too often used for dakhl (vide p. 102, note 6). In his private life, M. Ghází was dissolute. Not only was he given to wine, but he required every night a virgin; girls from all places were brought to him, and the women of the town of T'hat'hah are said to have been so debauched, that every bad woman, even long after his death, claimed relationship with the Mírzá.

Note on the meaning of the title of 'Tarkhán.'

Abulfazl, in the Akbarnámah (38th year), has a valuable note regarding the meaning and the history of this ancient title. The title was hereditary, and but rarely given. Chingiz Khán conferred it on Qishliq and Bátá for having given him correct information regarding the enemy. The title in this case, as in all others, implied that the holder was excused certain feudal services, chiefly attendance at Court (taklíf i bár). Chingiz Khán, moreover, did not take away from the two nobles the royal share of the plunder. Under Timur, a Tarkhán had free access to every place of the palace, and could not be stopped by the macebearers; nor was he or his children liable to be punished for any crime, provided the number of his or their crimes did not exceed the number nine.[2]

Some say, a Tarkhán had seven distinctions and privileges—1. a ṭabl; 2. a túmán-togh; 3. a naqqárah; 4. he can confer on two of his men a qushún togh, or chatr togh;[3] 5. his Qur (p. 109) was carried (qúr i ú níz bardárand). Among the Mughuls no one but the king was allowed to use a quiver. 6. He could enclose (qurq) a forest as his private hunting ground, and if any one entered the enclosure, he forfeited his personal liberty. 7. He was looked upon as the head of the clan to which he

[1] So the Maásir. The Tuzuk (p. 109), perhaps more correctly, places the death of M. Ghází in the 7th year of Jahángír's reign, 1021.

After M. Ghází Beg's death, Sindh was taken away from the Tarkháns, and M. Rustam was appointed Governor (vide p. 314).

Khusrau Chirgis tried to set up some 'Abdul 'Alí Tarkhán, whose pedigree is not known; but Jahángír bestowed his favors on Mírzá 'Isá Tarkhán, son of M. Ján Bábá (uncle of M. Jání Beg). He rose to the highest honors under Sháhjahán, and died more than hundred year old, in 1062, at Sámbhar. He had four sons—1. Mírzá 'Ináyatullah, who died in the 21st year of Sháhjahán; 2. Mírzá Muhammad Çálih, who played some part during Aurangzeb's war with Dárá Shikoh; 3. Fathullah; 4. M. 'Aqil. Mírzá Bihrúz, M. Muhammad Çálih's son, is mentioned as a Commander of Five Hundred under Sháhjahán.

[2] Nine was looked upon as an important number by the Mughuls. Thus kings received nine presents, or the present consisted of nine pieces of the same article. Hence also the Chaghtái tuquz (or túqúz, or tuqúz), nine, came to mean a present, in which sense it occurs in the Pádisháhnámah and the 'Alamgírnámah, especially in reference to presents of stuffs, as haft tuquz párchah, 'a present of seven pieces of cloth.'

[3] Vide p. 50.

belonged. In the statehall the Amírs sat behind him to his right and left arranged in form of a bow (kamánwár).

When Tughluq Timur conferred this title upon an Amír,[1] he put all financial matters (dád o sitad) 'as far as a Hazárí' (?) in his charge; nor were his descendants, to the ninth generation, liable to be called to account; but should their crimes exceed the number nine, they were to be called to account. When a Tarkhán had to answer for blood shed by him (pádásh i khún), he was placed on a silver white horse two years old, and a white cloth was put below the feet of the animal. His statement was made by a chief of the Barlás clan (vide p. 341, note), and the sentence was communicated to him by a chief of the Arkíwat (ارکیوت) clan. His neck vein was then opened, the two chiefs remaining at his side, and watching over him till he was dead. The king was then led forth from the palace, and sat down to mourn over him.

Khizr Khwájah in making Mír Khudádád a Tarkhán, added three new privileges. 1. At the time of wedding feasts (túi), when all grandees have to walk on foot, and only the yasáwal (chief mace bearer) of the king is on horseback to keep back the crowds, the Tarkhán also proceeds on horseback. 2. When during the feast the cup is handed to the king from the right side, another cup is at the same time handed to the Tarkhán from the left. 3. The Tarkhán's seal is put on all orders; but the seal of the king is put to the beginning of the last line and below his.

Abulfazl, in concluding these remarks, says that these distinctions are extraordinary enough; he believes it possible that a king may grant a virtuous man immunity for nine crimes; but he thinks it absurd to extend the immunity to nine generations.

---

48. Iskandar Khaʻn, a descendant of the Uzbak Kings.

He distinguished himself under Humáyún who on his return to India made him a Khán. After the restoration, he was made Governor of Ágrah. On Hemú's approach, he left Ágrah, and joined Tardí Beg at Dihlí. Both opposed Hemú, Iskandar commanding the left wing (júranghár). His wing defeated the right wing (burunghár) and the van (haráwal) of Hemú, and hotly pursued them, killing many fugitives. The battle was almost decided in favor of the Imperialists, when Hemú with his whole force broke upon Tardí Beg, and put him to flight. The victorious Iskandar was thus obliged to return. He afterwards joined Akbar at Sarhind, fought under Khán Zamán (No. 13) against Hemú, and received after the battle for his bravery the title of Khán 'Alam.

As Khizr Khwájah Khán,[2] the Governor of the Panjáb, had retreated before Sikandar Khán Súr, and fortified himself in Láhor, leaving the country to the Afgháns, Akbar appointed Iskandar to move to Siyálkoṭ and assist Khizr Khwájah.

---

[1] The MSS. call him لولاحی or لولاجی, with every variety of diacritical points.

[2] Khizr had descended from the kings of Mughulistán; but according to the Tabaqát from the kings of Káshghar. He was a grandee of Humáyún, left him on his flight to Persia, and was with M. 'Askarí in Qandahár, when Humáyún on his return besieged that town. Before the town surrendered, Khizr Khwájah threw himself down from the wall, managed to reach Humáyún's tent, and implored forgiveness. He was restored to favor, was made Amír ul Umará, and married Gulbadan Begum, H.'s sister. When Akbar marched against Afterwards he received Audh as tuyúl. 'From want of occupation,' he rebelled in the tenth year. Akbar ordered Ashraf Khán (No. 74) to bring him to Court but Isk. joined Khán Zamán (No. 13). Together with Bahádur Khán (No. 22), he occupied Khairábád (Audh), and attacked Mír Mu'izzulmulk (No. 61). Bahádur ultimately defeated the Imperialists; but Isk. had in the first fight been defeated and fled to the north of Audh.

When in the 12th year Khán Zamán and Bahádur again rebelled, Isk. in concert with them occupied Audh. He was attacked by Muhammad Qulí Khán Barlás (No. 31), and besieged in Avadh. When Isk. heard that Khán Zamán and Bahádar had been defeated and killed, he made proposals of peace, and managed during the negotiation to escape by boat with his family to Gorák'hpúr, which then belonged to Sulaimán, king of Bengal. He appears to have attached himself to the Bengal Court, and accompanied, in 975, Báyazíd, Sulaimán's son, over Jhárkand to Oṛisá. After Sulaimán's return from the conquest of Oṛisá,[1] Isk.'s presence in Bengal was looked upon as dangerous, as Sulaimán wished at all hazards to be at peace with Akbar, and the Afgháns waited for a favorable opportunity to kill Iskandar. He escaped in time, and applied to Mun'im Khán, who promised to speak for him. At his request, Isk was pardoned. He received the Sirkár of Lak'hnau as tuyúl, and died there in the following year (980).

49. A'caf Kha'n 'Abdul Maji'd (of Harát), a descendant of Shaikh Abú Bakr i Táibádí.

His brother Vazír Khán has been mentioned above (No. 41). Shaikh Zainuddín Abú Bakr i Táibádí[2] was a saint (Çáhib kamál) at the time of Timur. When Timur, in 782, set out for the conquest of Harát, which was in the hands of Malik Ghiásuddín, he sent, on his arrival at Táibád, a messenger to the Shaikh, to ask him why he had not paid his respects to the conqueror of the world. "What have I," replied the Shaikh, "to do with Timur?" Timur, struck with this answer, went himself to the Hemú. Khizr Khán was made Governor of the Panjáb and ordered to operate against Sikandar Súr, who during Humáyún's lifetime had retreated to the Sawáliks. Leaving Hájí Khán Sístání in Láhor, Khizr Khán moved against Sikandar, whom he met near a place called in the MSS. جهاري. Kh. selected two thousand horsemen to reconnoitre; but Sikandar was on the alert, fell upon the detachment, and defeated the Imperialists. Kh. without further fighting retreated to Láhor. Sikandar used the respite, and collected a large army, till Akbar himself had to move against him. Finding Akbar's army too strong, Sikandar shut himself up in Mánkoṭ. After a siege of six months, Sikandar bribed Shamsuddín Atgah (No. 15) and Pír Muhammad (No. 20), who prevailed upon Akbar to pardon him. Sikandar sent his son 'Abdurrahmán with some elephants as peshkash, and was allowed by Akbar to occupy Bihár as tuyúl (vide p. 319, l. 10 from below). Mánkoṭ surrendered on the 27th Ramazán 964. Sikandar died two years later.

---

It is difficult to say why Abulfazl has not entered Khizr Khán in the List of Grandees. His name is given in the Ṭabaqát. Similarly Khwájah Mu'azzim and Mír Sháh Abulma'álí are left out. For Kh.'s son vide No. 153.

[1] On Sulaimán's return from Oṛisá, he appointed Khán Jahán Lodhí, his Amír ul Umará, Governor of Oṛisá. Qutlú Khán, who subsequently made himself king of Oṛisá, was then Governor of Púrí (Jaggarnath.) Bad. II., 174.

[2] He died A. H. 791. His biography is given in Jámí's Nafhát ul Uns. Táibád belongs to Jám i Khurásán.

Shaikh, and upbraided him for not having advised Malik Ghiás. "I have indeed done so," said the Shaikh, "but he would not listen, and God has now appointed you over him. However, I now advise you, too, to be just, and if you likewise do not listen, God will appoint another over you." Timur afterwards said that he had seen many dervishes; every one of them had said something from selfish motives, but not so Shaikh Abú Bakr, who had said nothing with reference to himself.

Khwájah 'Abdul Majíd was a Grandee of Humáyún, whom he served as Díwán. On Akbar's accession, he also performed military duties. When the Emperor moved to the Panjáb, to crush Bairám's rebellion, 'Abdul Majíd received the title of Áçaf Khán, regarding which vide the note after this biographical notice. Subsequently Áçaf was appointed Governor of Dihlí, received a flag and a drum, and was made a Commander of Three Thousand. When Fattú, a servant of 'Adlí, made overtures to surrender Fort Chanáḍh (Chunar), A., in concert with Shaikh Muhammad Ghaus, took possession of it, and was appointed Governor of Kaṛah-Mánikpúr on the Ganges. About the same time, Ghází Khán Tannúrí, an Afghán noble who had for a time been in Akbar's services, fled to Bhat'h G'horá, and stirred up the Zamíndárs against Akbar. A., in the 7th year, sent a message to Rájah Rám Chandr, the ruler of Bhat'h, to pay tribute to Akbar, and surrender the enemies. But the Rájah prepared for resistance. A. marched against the Rájah, defeated him, and executed Ghází Khán. The Rájah, after his defeat, shut himself up in Bándhú,[1] but obtained Akbar's pardon by timely submission, chiefly through the influence of several Rájahs at Court. A. then left the Rájah in peace; but the spoils which he had collected and the strong contingent which he had at his disposal (vide p. 241, l. 18) made him desirous of further warfare, and he planned the famous expedition against Gaḍha-Katangah,[2] or Gondwánah, south of Bhat'h, which was then governed by Durgáwatí,[3] the heroine of Central India. Her heroic defence and suicide, and the death of her son, Bír Sáh, at the conquest of Chaurágaḍh (about 70 miles west of Jabalpúr), are wellknown. The immense spoils which A. carried off, led him temporarily into rebellion, and of the 1000 elephants which he had captured, he only sent 200 to Court. But when Khán Zamán (No. 13), in the 10th year, rebelled and besieged Majnún Khán Qáqshál (No. 50) in Mánikpúr, A. came with 5,000 troopers to his relief, presented himself before Akbar, who had marched against Khán Zamán, and handed over the remainder of the Gaḍha spoils.

---

[1] Abulfazl, in the events of the 42nd year of the Akbarnámah, says that 'Aláuddín-i-Khiljí besieged Bándhú in vain.

[2] Gaḍha (Gurh, Gurhah, Gurrah) lies close to Jabalpúr in Central India. Katangah is the name of two small places, one due south of Jabalpúr below Lat. 22, as on the Map in Journal A. S. B., Decr. 1837, Pl. LVII; another apparently larger place of the same name lies N.W. of, and nearer to, Jabalpúr and Gaḍha, about Lat. 23° 30', as on the Map of Central India in Sir J. Malcolm's Malwa; but both are called on the maps Katangí. In Muhammadan Histories, the country is generally called Gaḍha-Katangah. Abulfazl says, it had an extent of 150 kos by 80 kos, and there were in ancient times 80000 flourishing cities. The inhabitants, he says, are all Gonds, who are looked upon by Hindús as very low.

The Rájahs of Gaḍha-Katangah are generally called the Gaḍha-Mandlá Rájahs. Mandlá lies S. E. of Jabalpúr, on the right side of the Narbaddah.

[3] Capt. Sleeman in his 'History of the Gurha Mandala Rájas,' Journal A. S. Bengal, Vol. VI., p. 627, spells her name Durghoutee. He calls her son Bír Naráin. Vide also Badáoní II, 66.

He thereby regained Akbar's confidence and was appointed to follow up the rebels. At this juncture, the imperial Mutaçaddís, whom A. before had handsomely bribed, reported from envy his former unwillingness to hand over the spoils, and exaggerated his wealth. Hypocritical friends mentioned this to A.; and afraid of his personal safety, he fled to Gaḍhá (Çafar, 973).

Akbar looked upon his flight as very suspicious, and appointed Mahdí Qásim Khán (No. 36) to Gaḍhá. A. then left Central India 'with a sorrowful heart,' and joined, together with his brother (No. 41), Khán Zamán at Jaunpúr. But he soon saw that Khán Zamán only wanted his wealth and watched for a favorable moment to kill him. A. therefore made use of the first opportunity to escape. Khán Zamán had sent his brother Bahádur (No. 22) against the Afgháns, and A. was to accompany him. Vazír Khán, whom Khán Zamán had detained, managed likewise to escape, and was on the road to Mánikpúr, which A. had appointed as place of rendez-vous. No sooner had A. escaped than Bahádur followed him up, defeated his men, and took A. prisoner. Bahádur's men immediately dispersed in search of plunder, when suddenly Vazír Khán fell over Bahádur. Bahádur made some one a sign to kill A., who sat fettered on an elephant, and A. had just received a wound in his hand and nose, when Vazír in time saved his life, and carried him away. Both reached, in 973, Kaṛah, and asked Muzaffar Khán (No. 37) to intercede for them with the emperor. When Muzaffar, in 974, was called by the emperor to the Panjáb, he took Vazír with him, and obtained full pardon for the two brothers. A. was ordered to join Majnún Qáqshál at Kaṛah-Mánikpúr. His bravery in the last struggle with Khán Zamán induced Akbar, in 975, to give him Piyág as tuyúl, vice Hájí Muhammad Sístání (No. 55), to enable him to recruit a contingent for the expedition against Ráná Udai Singh. A. was sent in advance (manqalá). In the middle of Rabí' I, 975, Akbar left Ágrah for Chítor. The Ráná had commissioned Jai Mall, who had formerly been in Mírt'ha, to defend the fort, whilst he himself had withdrawn to the mountains. During the siege, which lasted four months and seven days, A. distinguished himself, and when, on the 25th Sha'bán, 975, the fort fell A. was made Governor of Chítor.

Neither the Maásir, nor the Ṭabaqát, mentions the year of his death. He must have been dead in 981, because the title of Áçaf Khán was bestowed upon another noble.[1]

Note on the Title of 'Áçaf Khán.'

Áçaf was the name of the Vazír of Sulaimán (Solomon), who like his master is proverbial in the East for his wisdom. During the reign of Akbar three grandees received this title. Badáoní, to avoid confusion, numbers them Áçaf Khán I., II., and III. They are—

'Abdul Majíd, Áçaf Khán I., d. before 981. (No. 49).
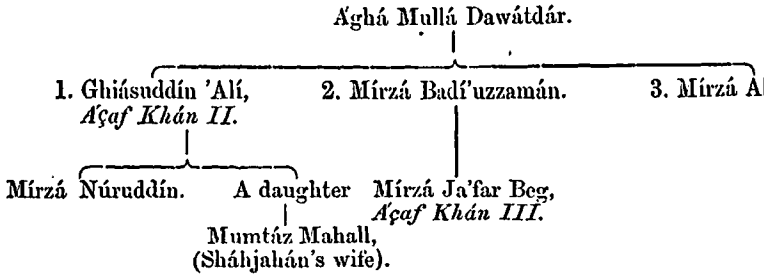
Khwájah Mirzá Ghiásuddín 'Alí, Áçaf Khán II., d. 989. (No. 126).
Mírzá Ja'far Beg, Áçaf Khán III., (No. 98).

---

[1] Stewart (History of Bengal, p. 120) says, 'Abdul Majíd Áçaf Khán officiated in 1013 for Mán Singh in Bengal. This is as impossible as his statement on p. 112, that Faríduddín i Bukhárí [No. 99] is the author of the History of the Emperor Jahángír.'

The three A'çafs were Díwáns or Mír Bakshís. The third was nephew to the second, as the following tree will shew :



Jahángír conferred the title of 'A'çaf Khán' (IV.) on Abul Hasan, elder brother of Núr Jahán, and father of Mumtáz Mahall (or Táj Bibí, Sháhjahán's wife), whose mother was a daughter of Açaf Khán II. During the reign of Sháhjahán when titles containing the word Daulah[1] were revived, A'çaf Khán was changed to A'çafuddaulah, and this title was conferred on A'çafuddaulah Jumlatul Mulk Asadjang (Sháhjahán-Aurangzeb), a relation of Açaf Khán IV. Under Ahmad Sháh, lastly, we find A'çafuddaulah Amír ul Mamálik, whose name like that of his father, Nizám ul Mulk Açaf-Jáh, occurs so often in later Indian History.

---

50. Majnu'n Kha'n i Qa'qsha'l.[2]

He was a grandee of Humáyún, and held Nárnaul as jágír. When Humáyún fled to Persia, Hájí Khán besieged Nárnaul, but allowed Majnún Khán to march away unmolested, chiefly at the request of Rájah Bihárí Mall, who, at that time, was with Hájí Khán (vide p. 329).

On Akbar's accession, he was made Jágírdár of Mánikpúr, then the east frontier of the Empire. He remained there till after the death of Khán Zamán (No. 13), bravely defending Akbar's cause. In the 14th year, he besieged Kálinjar. This fort was in the hands of Rájah Rám Chand, ruler of Bhat'h, who during the Afghán troubles had bought it, for a heavy sum, from Bijlí Khán, the adopted son of Paháṛ Khán. When, during the siege, the Rájah heard of the fall of Chítor and Rantanbhúr, he surrendered Kálinjar to M. (29th Çafar, 977). Akbar appointed M. Commander of the Fort, in addition to his other duties.

In the 17th year (980), he accompanied Mun'im Khán (No. 11) on his expedition to Gorák'hpúr. At the same time the Gujrátí war had commenced, and as Bábá Khán Qáqshál[3] had words with Shahbáz Khán, (No. 80), the Mír Tozak, regarding certain [1] They had been in use among the Khalífahs and the Ghaznawís. Thus Yamín ud-daulah which title Sháhjahán bestowed on Abul Hasan Açaf Khán IV.), had also been the title of Mahmúd of Ghazní when prince. The kings of the Dak'hin occasionally conferred titles with Daulah. This is very likely the reason why Akbar conferred the title of Azad ud-daulah on Mír Fathullah of Shíráz, who had come from the Dak'hin.

The title Malik, so common among the Pat'háns, was never conferred by the Mughul (Chaghtái) Kings of Delhi.

Titles with Jang, as Fírúzjang, Nuçratjang, &c., came into fashion with Jahángír.

[2] Name of a Turkish clan. Like the Uzbaks, they were disliked by Akbar, and rebelled. Majnún Khán was certainly the best of them.

[3] Bábá Khán Qáqshál also was a grandee of Akbar, but Abulfazl has left him out in this list. Like Majnún he distinarrangements, he was reproved by Akbar. But the rumour spread in Mun'im's army that Bábá Khán, Jabárí (Majnún's son), Mírzá Muhammad, and other Qáqsháls, had killed Shahbáz Khán, and joined the rebellion of the Mírzás in Gujrát; and that Akbar had therefore ordered Mun'im to imprison Majnún. In consequence of these false rumours, M. and others of his clan withdrew from Mun'im, who in vain tried to convince them of the absurdity of the rumours; but when M. soon after heard that Bábá Khán and Jabárí had been rewarded by Akbar for their brave behaviour in the Gujrátí war, he was ashamed of his hastiness, and rejoined Mun'im who, in the meantime, had taken Gorák'hpúr.

M. accompanied Mun'im on his Bengal expedition. When, in 982, Dáúd retired to Oṛísá, and Kálá Paháṛ,[1] Sulaimán Manklí and Bábú Manklí had gone to G'horág'hát, Mun'im sent M. against them. M. conquered the greater part of Northern Bengal, and carried off immense spoils. On the death of Sulaimán Manklí, the acknowledged ruler of G'horág'hát, a great number of the principal Afghán nobles were caught, and M. with the view of securing peace, married the daughter of Sulaimán Manklí to his son Jabárí. He also parcelled out the whole country among his clan. But Bábú Manklí and Kálá Paháṛ had taken refuge in Kúch Bihár, and when Mun'im was in Kaṭak, they were joined by the sons of Jaláluddín Súr, and fell upon the Qáqsháls. The latter, without fighting, cowardly returned to Ṭánḍah, and waited for Mun'im, who, on his return from Oṛísá, sent them with reinforcements to G'horág'hát. The Qáqsháls re-occupied the district. Majnún died soon after at G'horág'hát.

The Ṭabaqát says that he was a Commander of Five Thousand and had a contingent of 5,000 troopers.

His son Jabárí[2] distinguished himself by his zeal and devotion. The enforcing of the Dágh law led him and his clan into rebellion. Jabárí then assumed the title of Khán Jahán. When the Qáqsháls left Ma'çúm (p. 326), Jabárí went to Court. Akbar imprisoned him, but pardoned him in the 39th year.

---

guished himself in the war with Khán Zamán and the Mírzás. During Mun'im's expedition to Bengal, the Qáqsháls received extensive jágírs in G'horág'hát. Bábá Khán was looked upon as the head of the clan after Majnún's death. He rebelled with Ma'çúm Khán i Kábulí, partly in consequence of Muzaffar Khán's (No. 37) exactions, and assumed the title of Khán Khánán. He died in the same year in which Muzaffar died, of cancer in the face (khúrah), which he said he had brought on himself by his faithlessness.

[1] The renowned conqueror of the temple of Jagannat'h at Púrí in S. Oríssá. Vide below Third Book, Çúbahs of Bengal and Oríssá. A minute description of his conquest is given in the Makhzan i Afghání, and by Stirling in his Account of Orissa, Asiatic Researches, Vol. xv. But Stirling's account, taken as they are from the Púrí Vynsavali (a chronicle kept for the last six hundred years in the temple of Púrí) differs considerably from the Akbarnámah. Kálá Paháṛ was killed by a gun shot in one of the fights between Ma'çúm and Qutlú of Oríssá, and 'Azíz Kokah (vide p. 326), which, in 990, took place between K'halgánw (Colgong) and Gadhí (near Rajmahall).

Bábú Manklí subsequently entered Akbar's service (vide No. 202). European Historians generally spell his name Bábú Mangalí, as if it came from the Hindí mangal, Tuesday. This may be correct; for common people in India do still use such names. But manklí is perhaps preferable. Two of Tímúr's ancestors had the same name. The Turkish manklí means خالدار, kháldár, spotted.

[2] The best MSS. of the Akbarnámah, Badáoní, and the Maásir have جباري. Stewart (p. 109) calls him Jebbaburdy (?).

51. Shuja''at Kha'n, Muqi'm i 'Arab.

He is the son of Tardí Beg's sister (No. 12). Humáyún made Muqím a Khán. On the emperor's flight to Persia, he joined Mírzá 'Askarí. When Humáyún took Qandahár on his return, Muqím, like most old nobles, presented himself before the emperor with a sword hanging from his neck, and was for a short time confined. After his release, he remained with Mun'im Khán (No. 11) in Kábul, and followed him to India, when Akbar called Mun'im to take Bairám's place.

In the 9th year, Muqím distinguished himself in the pursuit of 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak (No. 14), 'the king of Mandú', and received the title of Shujá'at Khán, which Akbar had taken away from the rebellious 'Abdullah.

In the beginning of the 15th year, Akbar honored him by being his guest for a day.

In the 18th year, he accompanied the Emperor on his forced march to Ahmadábád (p. 325). Once he slandered Mun'im, and Akbar sent him to the Khán Khánán to do with him what he liked; but Mun'im generously forgave him, and had him restored.

In the 22nd year, he was made a Commander of Three Thousand, and Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Málwah.

In 988, when troubles in Bihár and Bengal had broken out, Shujá'at Khán, at Akbar's order, left Sárangpúr for Fathpúr (Badáoní II, 284). At the first stage, 'Iwaz Beg Barlás, who complained of arrears of pay and harsh treatment of the men, created a tumult, made a man of the name Hájí Shiháb Khán leader, fell upon Shujá'at's tent, and killed his son Qawím Khán.[1] Shujá'at himself was mortally wounded. Some of his adherents, at last, managed to put the dying Sh. on an elephant, and led him off to Sárangpúr. Though Sh. had expired before they reached the town, they did not spread the news of his death, and thus kept the greater part of the soldiers together, and joined Akbar in Sárangpúr.

Akbar punished the rebels severely. According to p. 284, Akbar once saved Shujá'at's life in the jungles.

From Badáoní (II, 284), we learn that Qawím Khán was a young man, renowned for his musical talents.

Muqím Khán (No. 386) is Shujá'at Khán's second son. He was promoted under Akbar to a Commandership of seven hundred.

Qáim Khán was the son of Muqím Khán. Qáim's son, 'Abdurrahím, was under Jahángír a Commander of seven hundred and 400 horse, got the title of Tarbiyat Khán, and was made, in the 5th year, Faujdár of Alwar. Qáim's daughter, Çálihah Bánú, was received (3rd year) by Jahángír in his harem, and went by the title of Pádisháh Mahall. She adopted Miyán Joh, son of the above 'Abdurrahím. Miyán Joh was killed by Mahábat Khán, when near the Bahat (Jhelam) he had taken possession of Jahángír's person.

No. 52. Sha'h Buda'gh Kha'n, a descendant of Uymáq[2] Kál of Samarqand.

---

[1] So the Maásir and the Akbarnámah. Badáoní (II, 284) has Qáim Khán; but this is perhaps a mistake of the native editors of the Bibl. Indica.

[2] There were two tribes of the Qará Turks called أيباق or أويباق, üymáq. They were renowned in India as horsemen. Hence إيباق, as the word is generally spelt by Mughul Historians, means a kind of superior cavalry; vide Tuzuk p. 147, l. 17. How this Turkish word lost its original meaning in India, may

The Turkish Budágh means 'a branch of a tree.' He distinguished himself under Humáyún, and was made by Akbar a Commander of Three Thousand.

In the 10th year, he accompanied Mír Mu'izzul Mulk (No. 61) against Bahádur No. 22). Though the imperialists were defeated, B. Kh. fought bravely, and was captured. His son, 'Abdul Maṭlab (No. 83), ran away. In the 12th year, B. Kh. went with Shibábuddín Ahmad (No. 26) against the Mírzás in Málwah, received Sárangpúr as tuyúl, fought under 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21) in the battle at Patan (18th Ramazán 980), and was for a long time Governor of Mandú, where he died. The Ṭabaqát says, he had the title of Amírul Umará. He was alive in 984, when he met Akbar at Mohiní.

Inside Fort Mandú, to the south, close to the walls, he had erected a building, to which he gave the name of Nílkánt'h, regarding the inscriptions on which the Maásir gives a few interesting particulars.

No. 53. Husain Kha'n (Tukriyah), sister's son of Mahdí Qásim Khán (No. 36).

'He is the Bayard and the Don Quixote of Akbar's reign.' In his *jihád*s he was sans peur, and in his private life sans reproche; he surpassed all grandees by his faithfulness and attachment to his masters, but his contingent was never in order; he was always poor, though his servants in consequence of his liberality lived in affluence. He slept on the ground, because his Prophet had enjoyed no greater luxuries; and his motto in fight was 'death or victory;' and when people asked him, why he did not invert the order and say 'victory or death,' he would reply, 'O! I do long to be with the saints that have gone before.'

He was the patron of the Historian Badáoní,[1] who served Husain as almoner to his estate (Shamsábád and Patiálí).

Husain Khán was not only sister's son, but also son-in-law to Mahdí Qásim Khán (No. 36). He was in Bairám's service. In the second year, after the conquest of Mánkoṭ, Akbar made him Governor of Láhor, where he remained four months and four days. When Akbar, in Çafar 965, marched to Dihlí, he appointed H. Kh. Governor of the Panjáb. During his incumbency, he shewed himself a zealous Sunní. As the Christians did with the Jews, he ordered the Hindús as unbelievers to wear a patch (Hind. tukrá) near the shoulders, and thus got the nickname of Tukriyah, 'Patcher.'

Like Sháh Qulí Khán Mahram (No. 45), he stuck to Bairám to the last, and did not meet Akbar at Jhújhar; but after Bairám had been pardoned, he entered Akbar's service. When Mahdí Qásim Khán, from dislike to Gaḍha, went by way of the Dak'hin to Makkah, H. Kh. accompanied him a short distance on the road. On his return, he reached Satwás in Málwah, when the rebellion of the Mírzás broke out, be seen from p. 57, l. 1, of the second volume of my Ain text, where Abulfazl applies the word to Rájpút cavalry of the Ráthor clan. The word is pronounced aimáq in India.

---

The meaning of Miyán Kál is still unclear to me. To judge from Abulfazl's phrase, it must be the name of the head or founder of a clan. The adjective Miyán Kálí occurs frequently. Two Miyán Kálís may be found below among the list of learned men (Qází 'Abdussamí') and the poets (Qásim i Káhí).

[1] Vide my Essay on Badáoní and his Works in J. A. S. Bengal, for 1869, p. 120.

and in concert with Muqarrib Khán, the tuyúldár of that place, he tried to fortify himself in Satwás. But Muqarrib lost heart and fled; and H. Kh. was forced to leave the Fort, and asked Ibráhím Husain Mírzá for an interview. Though urged to join the Mírzá, H. Kh. remained faithful to Akbar.

In the 12th year, when Akbar moved against Khán Zamán, H. Kh. was to take a command, but his contingent was not ready. In the 13th year his jágír was transferred from Lak'hnau, where he and Badáoní had been for about a year, to Kánt o Golah.[1] His exacting behaviour towards Hindús and his religious expeditions against their temples annoyed Akbar very much. In the 19th year, when the Emperor went to Bihár, H. Kh. was again absent; and when Akbar returned after the conquest of Hájípúr, he confiscated H.'s jágír; but on satisfying himself of his harmlessness, he pardoned him, restored his jágír, and told him to get his contingent ready. His mania, however, again overpowered him. He made an expedition against Basantpúr in Kamáon, which was proverbially rich, and got wounded by a bullet in the shoulder. Akbar was almost convinced that he had gone into rebellion, and sent Çádiq Khán (No. 43) to him to bring him by force to Court. H. Kh. therefore left Garh Muktesar, with the view of going to Mun'im Khán, through whose influence he hoped to obtain pardon. But he was caught at Bárha, and was taken to Fathpúr Síkrí, where in the same year (983) he died of his wounds.

The Ṭabaqát says, he was a Commander of Two Thousand; but according to the Akbarnámah, he had since the 12th year been a Commander of Three Thousand.

His son, Yúsuf Khán, was a grandee of Jahángír. He served in the Dak'hin in the corps of 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21), who, in the 5th year, had been sent with 10,000 men to reinforce Prince Parwíz, the Khán Khánán, and Mán Singh, because on account of the duplicity of the Khán Khánán (Tuzuk p. 88) the imperialists were in the greatest distress (vide pp. 327 and 336). Yúsuf's son, 'Izzat Khán, served under Sháhjahán, (Pádisháhn. II, 121).

54. Mura'd Kha'n, son of Amír Khán Mughul Beg.

His full name is Muhammad Murád Khán. In the 9th year, he served under Açaf Khán (No. 49) in Gaḍha Katangah. In the 12th year, he got a jágír in Málwah, and fought under Shihábuddín Ahmad against the Mírzás. After the Mírzás had returned to Gujrát, M. got Ujjain as tuyúl.

In the 13th year, the Mírzás invaded Málwah from Khandesh, and Murád Khán, together with Mír 'Azízullah, the Díwán of Málwah, having received the news two days before the arrival of the enemies, shut themselves up in Ujjain, determined to hold it for Akbar. The Emperor sent Qulij Khán (No. 42) to their relief, when the Mírzás retreated to Mandú. Followed up by Qulij and Murád, they retreated at last across the Narbaddah.

In the 17th year, the Mírzás broke out in Gujrát, and the jágírdárs of Málwah assembled under the command of M. 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21). Murád held a command in the left wing, and took part, though not very actively, in the confused battle near Patan (Ramazán, 980).

[1] Elliot (Index, p. 235, First Edition) has by mistake Lak'hnor (on the Rámganga) instead of Lak'hnau (in Audh), and he calls Husain Khán a Kashmíri. This must be an oversight.

In 982, he was attached to Mun'im's expedition to Bengal. He conquered for Akbar the district of Fathábád, Sirkár Boglá (S. E. Bengal), and was made Governor of Jalesar (Jellasore) in Oṛísá, after Dáúd had made peace with Mun'im.

When in 983, after Mun'im's death, Dáúd fell upon Nazar Bahádur, Akbar's Governor of Bhadrak (Oṛísá), and treacherously killed him, Murád wisely retreated to Ṭándah.[1]

Subsequently M. was again appointed to Fathábád, where he was when the Bengal rebellion broke out. Murád at Fathábád, Qiyá Khán in Oṛísá, Mirzá Naját at Sátgánw, were almost the only officers of Akbar's Bengal corps, that did not take part in the great military revolt of 988. Qiyá was killed by Qutlú (p. 343), and Murád died at Fathábád, immediately after the first outbreak of the revolt in 988, 'before the veil of his loyalty was rent.'

After his death, Mukand, the principal Zamíndár of Fathábád, invited Murád's sons to a feast, and treacherously murdered them.

Vide No. 369.

55. Ha'ji' Muhammad Kha'n of Sístán.

He was in the service of Bairám, who was much attached to him. In 961, when Bairám held Qandahár, rumours of treason reached Humáyún. The Emperor went from Kábul to Qandahár, and personally investigated the matter, but finding Bairám innocent, he went back, taking Hájí Muhammad with him, who during the investigation had been constantly referred to as inclined to rebellion.[2]

After the conquest of Hindústán, H. M., at Bairám's request, was made a Khán, and was rapidly promoted.

In the 1st year of Akbar's reign, H. M. was ordered to accompany Khizr Khwájah (p. 365, note 2) on his expedition against Sikandar Súr. Tardí Beg's (No. 12) defeat by Hemú had a bad effect on the Emperor's cause; and Mullá 'Abdullah Makhdúm ulmulk who, though in Akbar's service, was said to be devoted to the interests of the Afgháns, represented to Sikandar that he should use this favorable opportunity and leave the Sawáliks. As related above, Khizr Khwájah moved against Sikandar, leaving H. M. in charge of Láhor. Being convinced of Makhdúm's treason, H. M. tortured him, and forced him to give up sums of money which he had concealed.

In 966, Bairám fell out with Pír Muhammad (No. 20), and deprived him of his office and emoluments which were given to H. M. When Bairám fell into disgrace, he sent H. M. with several other Amírs to Dihlí with expressions of his humility and desire to be pardoned. But H. M. soon saw that all was lost. He did not receive permission to go back to Bairám. After Bairám had been pardoned (p. 318), H. M.

---

[1] As Mun'im left Thánahdárs in Bhadrak and Jalesar, Dáúd must have been restricted to Kaṭak Proper. Mun'im's invasion of Oṛísá was certainly one of the most daring exploits performed during Akbar's reign.

Having mentioned Kaṭak, I may here state that the name 'Aṭak', (Attock, in the Panjáb) was chosen by Akbar who built the town, because it rhymes with Kaṭak. The two frontier towns of his empire were to have similar names. Akbarnámah.

[2] Hájí Muhammad is the same to whom Erskine's remark refers quoted by Elphinstone (Fifth Edition), p. 470, note.

and Muhammad Tarson Khán (No. 32) accompanied him on his way to Hijáz as far as Nágor, then the frontier of the Empire. Once, on the road, Bairám charged H. M. with faithlessness, when the latter gently reminded him that he had at least never drawn his sword against his master.

H. M. was present in almost every campaign, and was promoted to the post of Sih-hazárí. In the 12th year, when Akbar set out for the conquest of Chítor, he sent H. M. and Shibábuddín Ahmad (No. 26) from Gágrún against the sons of Sulṭán Muhammad Mírzá, who had fled from Sambhal and raised a revolt in Málwah. H. M. then received the Sirkár of Mandú as jágír.

In the 20th year, H. M. accompanied Mun'im Khan on his expedition to Bengal and Oṛísá, and got wounded in the battle of Takaroí (20th Zí Qa'dah, 982). He then accompanied the Khán Khánán to Gaur, where soon after Mun'im's death he, too, died of malaria (983).

Note on the Battle of Takaroí, or Mughulmárí, in Oṛísá.

This battle is one of the most important battles fought by Akbar's generals. It crushed the Afgháns, and decided the possession of Bengal and Upper Oṛísá. The MSS. of the Akbarnámah and the Maásir have تكروهي Takarohí, and تكروئى Takaroí. My copy of the Sawánih has the former spelling. A few copies of the Akbarnámah have نكرو هي Nakrohí. In Badáoní and the Ṭabaqát the battle of چچهورة (vide p. 318), which may be Bajhorah, Bachhorah, Bajhorh, or Bachhorh. Stewart's account of Mun'im's Oṛísá expedition (Vth Section), differs in many particulars from the Akbarnámah and the Ṭabaqát. He places the battle in the environs of Kaṭak, which is impossible, and his 'Bukhtore' is a blunder for بچتوا ba chittuá, 'in Chittuá,' the final alif having assumed the shape of a ر re, and the چ that of خ. The Lucknow lithograph of the Akbarnámah, which challenges in corruptness the worst possible Indian MS., has ba chitor, in Chitor!

The Akbarnámah, unfortunately, gives but few geographical details. Todar Mall moved from Bardwán over Madáran[1] into the Parganah of Chittuá (چتوة), where he was subsequently joined by Mun'im. Dáúd had taken up a strong position at هريپور, Harpúr or Haripúr, "which lies intermediate (barzakhe) between Bengal and Oṛísá." The same phrase (barzakhe), in other passages of the Akbarnámah, is applied to Chittuá itself. Dáúd's object was to prevent the Imperialists from entering Oṛísá, into which led but few other roads; "but Ilyás Khán Langáh shewed the victorious army an easier road," and Mun'im entered the country, and thus turned Dáúd's position. The battle then takes place (20th Zí Qa'dah, 982, or A. D., 3rd March, 1575). After the battle Todar Mall leads the pursuit, and reaches with his corps the town of Bhadrak. Not long after, he writes to Mun'im to come and join him, as Dáúd had collected his troops near Kaṭak, and the whole army moves to Kaṭak, where a peace was concluded, which confirmed Dáúd in the possession of Kaṭak.

[1] Madáran lies in Jahánábád, a Parganah of the Húglí district, between Bardwán and Mednípúr (Midnapore). Regarding the importance and history of this town vide my 'Places of Historical Interest in the Húglí District,' in the April Proceedings of the As. Soc. of Bengal for 1870.

Now from the facts that the battle took place soon after the Imperialists had left Chittuá, which lies a little E. E. N. of Mednípúr (Midnapore), and that after the victory Rájah Todar Mall, in a pursuit of several days, pushed as far as Bhadrak, I was led to conclude that the battle must have taken place near Jalesar (Jellasore), and probably north of it, as Abulfazl would have mentioned the occupation of so large a town. On consulting the large Trigonometrical Map of Oṛísá lately published, I found on the road from Mednipúr to Jalesar the village of Mogulmaree[1] (Mughulmárí, i. e., Mughul's Fight), and about seven miles southwards, half ways between Mughulmárí and Jalesar, and two miles from the left bank of the Soobaurecka river, the village of Tookaroe.

According to the map the latitude of Mughulmárí is 22°, and that of Tookaroe, 21° 53 nearly.

There can be no doubt that this Tookaroe is the تکروئی, Takaroí, of the Akbarnámah.

The battle extended over a large ground. Badáoní (II, p. 195, l. 3) speaks of three, four kos, i. e., about six miles, and thus the distance of Takaroí from Mughulmárí is accounted for.

I can give no satisfactory explanation of the name بجهوره, by which the battle is called in the Ṭabaqát and Badáoní (II, 194, l. 2). It looks as if the name contained the word chaur which occurs so often in the names of Parganahs in the Jalesar and Balesar districts.

In Badáoní (Edit. Bibl. Indica, p. 196), and the Ṭabaqát, it is said that Todar Mall in his pursuit reached کل کل گهاتي Kalkalghátí (?), not Bhadrak.

List of Officers who died in 983, after their return from Oṛísá, at Gaur of malaria.

1. Mun'im Khán, Khán Khánán, (18th Rajab). Vide p. 318.
2. Hájí Khán Sístání, (No. 55).
3. Haidar Khán, (No. 66).
4. Mírzá Qulí Khán, his brother.
5. Ashraf Khán, (No. 74).
6. Mu'inuddín Ahmad, (No. 128).
7. La'l Khán, (No. 209).
8. Hájí Yúsuf Khán, (No. 224).
9. Sháh Ṭáhir, (No. 236).
10. Háshim Khán.
11. Muhsin Khán.
12. Qunduz Khán.
13. Abul Husain.
14. Sháh Khalíl.

56. Afzal Khan, Khwájah Sulṭán 'Alí[2] i Turbatí.

Regarding Turbatí, vide No. 37. He was Mushrif (accountant) of Humáyún's Treasury, and was, in 956, promoted to the post of Mushrif i Buyútát (store accountant). In 957, when Mírzá Kámrán took Kábul, he imprisoned A. Kh., and forced him to pay large sums of money. On Humáyún's return to India, A. Kh. was made Mír Bakhshí, and got an 'alam. He was together with Tardí Beg (No. 12) in Dihlí, when Humáyún died. In the battle with Hemú, he held a command in the centre (qol), and his detachment gave way during Hemú's charge. A. Kh., together with Pír Muhammad (No. 20) and Ashraf Khán (No. 74), fled from the battle-field, partly from hatred towards Tardí Beg—the old hatred of Khurásánís towards Uzbaks—, and retreated to Akbar and Bairám. As related above, Tardí Beg was executed by Bairám for this retreat, and A. Kh. and Ashraf Khán were convicted of malice and imprisoned. But both escaped and went to Makkah. They returned in the 5th year, when Bairám had lost his power, and were favorably received at Court. A. Kh. was made a Commander of three thousand.

[1] Another 'Mughulmárí' lies in the Bardwán district, between Bardwán and Jahánábád (Húglí District) on the old high road from Bardwán over Madáran to Mednípúr.

[2] The word 'Alí has been omitted in my text edition on p. 224.

'Nothing else is known of him.' Maásir.

57. Sha'hbeg Kha'n, son of Ibráhím Beg Haríḳ (?)[1]

He is sometimes called Beg Khán (p. 313). He was an Arghún; hence his full name is Sháh Beg Khán Arghún. Under Jahángír he got the title of Khán Daurán.

He was in the service of Mírzá Muhammad Hakím of Kábul, Akbar's brother, and was Governor of Pasháwar. When after the Prince's death, Mán Singh, in 993, crossed the Níláb (p. 340) for Kábul, Sháh Beg took M. M. Hakím's two sons, Kai Qubád and Afrásiyáb, to Akbar, and received a mançab. Sh. B. distinguished himself in the war with the Yúsufzaís, and got Khusháb as jágír. He then served under the Khán Khánán in Sindh, and was for his bravery promoted to a command of 2500. In the 39th year Akkar sent him to Qandahár (p. 313), which Muzaffar Husain had ceded. During the time of his Governorship, Sh. B. succeeded in keeping down the notorious Kákar (کاکر) tribe. In the 42nd year, he was made a Commander of 3500. In the 47th year, Ghaznín was placed in his charge (vide No. 63).

Immediately after the accession of Jahángír, Husain Khán Shámlú, the Persian Governor at Harát, thinking Akbar's death would lead to disturbances, made war upon Sh. B. and besieged Qandahár, which he hoped to starve out. To vex him, Sh. B. gave every night feasts on the top of the castle before the very eyes of the enemies (Tuzuk, p. 33). One day, Husain Khán sent an ambassador into the Fort, and Sh. B., though provisions had got low, had every available store of grain spread out in the streets, in order to deceive the enemies. Not long after, Husain Sháh received a reprimand from Sháh 'Abbás for having besieged Qandahár 'without orders,' and Husain Khán, without having effected anything, had to raise the siege.

When Jahángír in 1016 (18th Çafar) visited Kábul,[2] Sh. B. paid his respects, was made a Commander of 5000, and received the title of Khán Daurán. He was also made Governor of Kábul (in addition to Qandahár), and was ordered to prepare a financial settlement for the whole of Afghánistán. After having held this office till the end of 1027, he complained of the fatigues incident to a residence in Kábul, horse-travelling and the [1] So the Maásir. My MSS. of the Áín have هربك, which may be Haríḳ, Harmak, Harbak, &c. Some MSS. read clearly Harmak.

[2] According to the Tuzuk (p. 53), Sh. B. then held the Parganah of Shor as jágír, regarding which vide Elliot's Index, first edition, p. 198.

drizzly state of the atmosphere of the country,[1] paid in the beginning of 1028 his respects at Court (Tuz., p. 257), and was appointed Governor of T'hat'hah.[2] He resigned, however, in the same year (Tuz., p. 275) and got the revenue of the Parganah of Khusháb assigned as pension (75,000 Rs.).

Before he went to T'hat'hah, he called on Áçaf Khán to take leave, and Áçaf recommended to him the brothers of Mullá Muhammad of T'hat'hah, who had been a friend of Áçaf. Sháhbeg had heard before that the Mullá's brothers, in consequence of Áçaf's support, had never cared for the Governors of the province; hence he said to Áçaf, "Certainly, I will take an interest in their welfare, if they are sensible (sarhisáb); but if not, I shall flay them." Áçaf got much annoyed at this, opposed him in everything, and indirectly forced him to resign.

Sh. B. was a frank Turk. When Akbar appointed him Governor of Qandahár, he conferred upon him an 'alam and a naqqárah (p. 50); but on receiving the insignia, he said to Faríd (No. 99), "What is all this trash for? Would that His Majesty gave me an order regarding my mançab, and a jágír, to enable me to get better troopers for his service." On his return, in 1028, from Kábul, he paraded before Jahángír his contingent of 1000 picked Mughul troopers, whose appearance and horses created much sensation.

He was much given to wine drinking. He drank, in fact, wine, cannabis, opium, and kúknár, mixed together, and called his beverage of four ingredients Chár Bughrá (p. 60, l. 13), which gave rise to his nickname Chár Bughrá Khur.

His sons. 1. Mírzá Sháh Muhammad, Ghaznín Khán, a well educated man. Jahángír, in 1028, made him a Commander of One Thousand, 600 horse.

2. Ya'qúb Beg, son-in-law to Mírzá Ja'far Áçaf Khán (III) (No. 98), a Commander of Seven Hundred, 350 horse. The Maásir says, he was a fatalist (azalparast), and died obscure.

3. Asad Beg (Tuz. p. 275), a Commander of Three Hundred, 50 horse. The Maásir does not mention him.

The Tuzuk, p. 34, mentions a Qásim Beg Khán, a relation of Sh. B. This is perhaps the same as No. 350.

Sháhbeg Khán Arghún must not be confounded with No. 148.

58. Kha'n 'A'lam Chalmah Beg,[3] son of Hamdam who was Mírzá Kámrán's foster brother.

Chalmah Beg was Humáyún's Safarchí, or table attendant. Mírzá Kámrán had, in 960, been blinded, and at the Indus asked for permission to go to Makkah.

---

[1] The text has qatrah, which is mentioned as a peculiarity of Kábul. I do not know whether I have correctly translated the term.

[2] Sayyid Ahmad in his edition of the Tuzuk, (p. 266) makes him governor of Patnah—a confusion of پتنه and. پنه.

[3] For Chalmah, the MSS. of the Aín have, at this place, Halím. In No. 100, the same name occurs. The Maásir and good MSS. of the Akbarnámah have Chalmah. Turkish dictionaries give chalmah (چلمه) in the meaning of wild goat's dung, and chálmah (چالمه) in that of dastár, a turban.

In the Edit. Bibl. Indica of Badáoní Khán 'Álam is wrongly called خان اعلم, instead of خان عالم.

Before he left, Humáyún, accompanied by some of his courtiers, paid him a visit, when the unfortunate prince, after greeting his brother, quoted the verse—

کلاہ گوشۂ درویش برفلک سایہ کہ سایہ ہمچو تو شاہے فکند بر سر او

'The fold of the poor man's turban touches the heaven, when a king like thee casts his shadow upon his head.'

And immediately afterwards he said the following verse extempore—

بر جانم از تو ہرچہ رسد جاي منت است گر ناوک جفاست وگر خنجر ستم

'Whatever I receive at thy hands is kindness, be it the arrow of oppression or the dagger of cruelty.'

Humáyún felt uncomfortable and tried to console him. He gave next day orders that any of Kámrán's old friends might accompany him free to Makkah; but as no one came forward, he turned to Chalmah Beg, and said, "Will you go with him, or stay with me?" Chalmah Beg, though he knew that Humáyún was much attached to him, replied that he thought he should accompany the Prince in the 'gloomy days of need and the darkness of his solitude.' The Emperor approved of his resolution, and made liberal provisions for Kámrán and his companion.

After Kámrán's death, Chalmah Beg returned to India, and was favorably received by Akbar, who made him a Commander of 3000, bestowing upon him the title of Khán 'Alam. He served under the emperor against the Mírzás in Gujrát, and was presesnt in the fight at Sarnál (p. 330, No. 27).

In the 19th year, when Akbar moved against Dáúd in Patna, Khán 'Alam commanded a corps, and passing up the river in boats towards the mouth of the Ġ'ḥandak, effected a landing, though continually exposed to the volleys of the enemies. Akbar praised him much for his daring. In the same year he was attached to Mun'im's corps. In the battle of Takaroí (p. 375), he commanded the haráwal (van). He charged the Afgháns, and allowing his corps to advance too far, he was soon hard pressed upon and gave way, when Mun'im sent him an angry order to fall back. But before his corps could be brought again into order, Gújar Khán, Dáúd's best general, attacked the Imperialists with his line of elephants, which he had rendered fierce looking by means of black quṭáses (Yak tails) and skins of wild beasts attached to them. The horses of the Imperialists got frightened, nothing could make them stand, and their ranks were utterly broken. Kh. 'A.'s horse got a sword cut, and reared, throwing him on the ground. He sprang up, and mounted it again, but was immediately thrown over by an elephant, and killed by the Afgháns who rushed from all sides upon him (20th Zí Qa'dah, 982).

It is said that before the battle he had presentiment of his death, and begged of his friends not to forget to tell the Emperor that he had willingly sacrificed his life.

Kh. 'A. was a poet and wrote under the Takhalluç of Hamdamí (in allusion to the name of his father).

A brother of his, Muzaffar, is mentioned below (No. 301) among the Commanders of Three Hundred, where for اعظم, in my Text edition, p. 229, read عالم.

59. Qa'sim Kha'n, Mír Bahr Chamanárái (?) Khurásán.[1]

[1] I am doubtful regarding the true meaning of the odd title chaman-árái Khurásán, 'Ruler of Khurásán.' The Maásir, not knowing what to do with

He is the son of Mírzá Dost's sister, who was an old servant of the Tímúrides. When Mírzá Kámrán was, in 954, besieged in Kábul, Humáyún had occupied Mount Aqábín, which lies opposite the Fort of Kábul. Whilst the siege was going on, Qásim Khán and his younger brother, Khwájagí Muhammad Husain (No. 241), threw themselves down from a turret between the Ahanín Darwázah and the Qásim Barlás bastion, and went over to Humáyún, who received them with distinction.

Soon after Akbar's accession, Q. Kh. was made a Commander of Three Thousand. He superintended the building of the Fort of Ágrah, which he completed "after eight years at a cost of 7 krors of tankahs, or 35 lacs of rupees. The Fort stands on the banks of the Jamnah river, E. of the town of Agrah, on the place of the old Fort, which had much decayed. The breadth of the walls is 30 yards, and the height from the foundation to the pinnacles 60 gaz. It is built of red sandstone, the stones being well joined together and fastened to each other by iron rings which pass through them. The foundation every where reaches water."[1]

In the 23rd year, Q. was made Commander of Ágrah. In the beginning of Sha'bán 995 (32nd year), he was ordered to conquer Kashmír, 'a country which from its inaccessibility had never tempted the former kings of Dihlí.' Though six or seven roads lead into Kashmír, the passes are all so narrow, that a few old men might repel a large army. The then ruler of Kashmír was Ya'qúb Khán, son of Yúsuf Khán Chak. He had fortified a pass;[2] but as his rule was disliked, a portion of his men went over to Q., whilst others raised a revolt in Srínagar. Thinking it more important to crush the revolt, Ya'qúb left his fortified position, and allowed Q. to enter the country. No longer able to oppose the Imperialists, he withdrew to the mountains, and trusted to an active guerilla warfare; but disappointed even in this hope, he submitted and became 'a servant of Akbar.' The Kashmírís, however, are famous for love of mischief and viciousness, and not a day passed without disturbances breaking out in some part of the country. Q. tired of the incessant petty annoyances, resigned his appointment (vide No. 35). In the 34th year he was made Governor of Kábul. At that time a young man from Andaján (Farghánah) gave out that he was a son of Sháhrukh.[3] He met with some success in Badakhshán, but was defeated by the Túrán it, has left it out. Mír Bahr means 'admiral.' If chamanárái Kh. be a genitive, the words mean, 'Admiral of the ruler of Khurásán,' which from his biography does not appear to be correct. His brother (No. 241) is styled Mír Bar, an officer whose duties seem to have been confined to looking after arrangements during trips, hunting expeditions, &c.

---

[1] The old Fort of Ágrah was called Badalgarh (Bad. I. 429). It suffered much during the earthquake of 911 (3rd Çafar), and was nearly destroyed during an explosion which happened in 962.

The Fort Bádalgar بادلگڑھ, not بدلگڑھ, which Elliot (Index, First Edit., p. 229) identifies with the Fort of Ágrah, cannot be the old Fort of Ágrah, because Badáoní (I, 327) clearly says that it was a lofty structure at the foot of the Fort of Gwáliár, not "one of the Forts dependent on Gwáliár."

For Udantgír, on the same page in Elliot, read Untgar (اونتگر). It was a Fort in the Sirkár of Mandláir, on the left side of the Chambal. Our maps have Ootgir or Deogurh.

[2] Called in the MSS. کتل کنهریل. The word kutal, means 'a mountain,' or 'a mountainpass.'

[3] In 1016 another false son of Mírzá Sháhrukh (p. 313) created disturbances and asked Jahángír for assistance against the Túránís.

The fate of Mírzá Sháhrukh's second son, Mírzá Husain, is involved in obscu-Sháh. The pretender then made friendship with the Zábulí Hazárahs, and when Q., on one occasion, had repaired to Court, he entered Akbar's territory, giving out that he was going to pay his respects to the Emperor. But Háshim Beg, Q.'s son, who officiated during the absence of his father, sent a detachment after the pretender, who now threw himself on the Hazárahs. But Háshim Beg followed him, and took him a prisoner to Kábul. Q., on his return from India, let him off, and even allowed him to enter his service. The pretender in the meantime re-engaged his old men, and when he had five hundred together, he waited for an opportunity to fall on Q. At this juncture, Akbar ordered the pretender to repair to Court. Accompanied by his ruffians, he entered at noon Q.'s sleeping apartments, when only a few females were present, and murdered his benefactor (1002). Háshim Beg soon arrived, and fired upon the pretender and his men. In the melée, the murderer was killed.

For Qásim's brother vide No. 241, and for his son, No. 226.

60. Ba'qi' Kha'n, (elder) brother of Adham Khán (No. 19).

His mother is the same Máhum Anagah, mentioned on p. 323. "From Badáoní [II, 340] we learn that Báqí Khán died in the 30th year as Governor of Gaḍha-Katangah." This is all the Maásir says of him.

His full name is Muhammad Báqí Khán Kokah. From Badáoní II. 81, we see that Báqí Khán took part in the war against Iskandar Khán and Bahádur Khán (972-73), and fought under Mu'izzulmulk (No. 61) in the battle of Khairábád, in which Budágh Khán (No. 52) was captured. The battle was lost, chiefly because Báqí Khán, Mahdí Qásim Khán (No. 36), and Husain Khán Tukriyah (No. 53) had personal grievances—their Uzbak hatred—against Mu'izzul-Mulk and Rájah Todar Mall.

61. Mi'r Mu'izzul-Mulk i Músawí, of Mashhad.

He belongs to the Músawí Sayyids of Mashhad the Holy, who trace their descent to 'Alí Músá Razá, the 8th Imám of the Shí'ahs. A branch of these Sayyids by a different mother is called Razawís.

In the 10th year, Akbar moved to Jaunpúr to punish Khán Zamán (No. 13), who had despatched his brother Bahádur and Iskandar Khán Uzbak (No. 48) to the district of Sarwár.[1] Against them Akbar sent a strong detachment (vide No. 60) under Mu'izzulmulk. Bahádur, on the approach of the Imperialists, had recourse to negotiations, and asked for pardon, stating that he was willing to give up all elephants.

---

rity, "He ran away from Burhánpúr, went to sea and to Persia, from where he went to Badakhshán. People say that he is still alive [1016]; but no one knows whether this new pretender is Sháhrukh's son or not. Sháhrukh left Badakhshán about twenty-five years ago, and since then the Badakhshís have set up several false Mírzás, in order to shake off the yoke of the Uzbaks. This pretender collected a large number of Uymáqs (p. 371, note 2) and Badakhshí Mountaineers, who go by the name of Gharjahs [غرجه, whence Gharjistán], and took from the Uzbaks a part of the country. But the enemies pressed upon him, caught him, and cut off his head which was carried on a spear all over Badakhshán. Several false Mírzás have since been killed: but I really think their race will continue, as long as a trace of Badakhshís remain on earth." Tuzuk i Jahángirí, p. 57.

[1] Most MSS. have سرواز. The Edit. Bibl. Indica of Badáoní, p. 78, has سردار Sardár; but again سرواز, on p. 83. There is no doubt that the district got its name from the Sarw River (آب سرو, آب سروار, آب سروٴ).

M. M., however, desired war, and though he granted Bahádur an interview, he told him that his crimes could only be cleansed with blood. But he reported the matter to Akbar, who sent Lashkar Khán (No. 90) and Rájah Todar Mall to him, to tell him that he might make peace with Bahádur, if he was satisfied of his good intentions. But here also the rancour of Khurásánís towards Uzbaks decided matters, and Todar Mall only confirmed M. M. in his resolution.[1] Although a few days later the news arrived that Akbar had pardoned Khán Zamán, because he sent his mother and his uncle Ibráhím Khán (No. 64) to Court as guarantees of his loyalty, M. M. attacked Bahádur near Khairábád. Muhammad Yár, son of Iskandar Khán's brother, who commanded the van of the rebels, fell in the first attack, and Iskandar who stood behind him, was carried along and fled from the field. The Imperialists thinking that the battle was decided, commenced to plunder, when suddenly Bahádur, who had been lying in wait, fell upon M. M.'s left wing and put it to flight. Not only was Budágh Khán (No. 52) taken prisoner, but many soldiers went over to Bahádur. Flushed with victory, he attacked the centre, where the grandees either fled or would not fight from malice (vide No. 60). Todar Mall's firmness was of no avail, and the day was lost.

After the conquest of Bihár, M. M. got the Parganah of Árah (Arrah) as jágír. In the 24th year, the nobles of Bihár under Ma'çúm i Kábulí, tuyúldár of Patna, rebelled. They won over M. M., and his younger brother Mír 'Alí Akbar (No. 62); but both soon left the rebels, and M. M. went to Jaunpúr recruiting, evidently meditating revolt independently of the others. In the 25th year, Akbar ordered Asad Khán Turkmán, jágírdár of Mánikpúr, to hasten to Jaunpúr, and convey M. M. with all his suspicious adherents to Court. Asad Khán succeeded in catching M. M., and sent him by boat to the Emperor. Near Itáwah, however, the boat 'foundered,' and M. M. lost his life.

62. Mi'r 'Ali' Akbar, (younger) brother of the preceding.

He generally served with his brother, and held the same rank. In the 22nd year, he presented Akbar, according to the Ṭabaqát, with a Maulúdnámah, or History of the birth of the Emperor. It was in the hand-writing of Qází Ghiásuddín i Jámí, a man of learning, who had served under Humáyún, and contained an account of the vision which Humáyún had in the night Akbar was born. The Emperor saw in his dream the new born babe, and was told to call his name Jaláluddín Muhammad Akbar. This Maulúdnámah Akbar prized very much, and rewarded Mír 'Alí Akbar with a Parganah[2] as in'ám.

When his brother was sent to Bihár, M. 'A. A. was ordered to accompany him. He established himself at Zamániyah, which "lies 6 kos from Gházípúr" (vide p. 320),

---

[1] Badáoní says Todar Mall's arrival was "naphta on Mu'izzul Mulk's fire." Throughout his work, Badáoní shews himself an admirer of Khán Zamán and his brother Bahádur. With Mu'izz, a Shí'ah of the Shí'ahs, he has no patience. 'Mu'izz's ideas, he says, were 'I and nobody else;' he behaved as proud as Fir'aun and Shaddád; for pride is the inheritance of all Sayyids of Mashhad. Hence people say—'Ahl i Mashhad, bajuz Imám i shumá, La'natulláhi bar tamám i shumá,' 'O people of Mashhad, with the exception of your Imám [Músá Razá], may God's curse rest upon all of you! And also, 'The surface of the earth rejoices in its inhabitants; how fortunate would it be, if a certain Mashhad vanished from the surface of the earth.'

[2] Called in the Maásir نديه, (though it cannot be Nuddea in Bengal); in my copy of the Sawánih مديه; but Nadínah in Sambhal appears to be meant.

and rebelled like his brother in Jaunpúr. After the death of his brother, Akbar ordered M. 'Azíz (No. 21), who had been appointed to Bihár, to send M. 'A. A. fettered to Court. Notwithstanding his protests that he was innocent, he was taken to the Emperor who imprisoned him for life.

63. Shari'f Kha'n, brother of Atgah Khán (No. 15).

He was born at Ghaznín. After Bairám's fall, he held a tuyúl in the Panjáb, and generally served with his elder brother Mír Muhammad Khán (No. 16).

On the transfer of the Atgah Khail from the Panjáb, Sh. was appointed to the Sirkár of Qannauj. In the 21st year, when Akbar was at Mohiní, he sent Sh., together with Qází Khán i Badakhshí (No. 223), Mujáhid Khán, Subhán Qulí Turk, against the Ráná. He afterwards distinguished himself in the conquest of Koṇbhalmír. In the 25th year, he was made atálíq to Prince Murád, and was in the same year sent to Málwah as Governor, Shujá'at Khán (No. 51) having been killed. His son Báz Bahádur (No. 188) was ordered to join his father from Gujrát. In the 28th year, he served against Muzaffar, and distinguished himself in the siege of Bahroṇch, which was held for Muzaffar by Chirkis i Rúmí and Naçírá, brother of Muẓaffar's wife. The former having been killed, Naçírá escaped in the 7th month of the siege, through the trench held by Sharíf, and the Fort was taken. In the 30th year, he was sent with Shihábuddín (No. 26) to the Dak'hin, to assist Mírzá 'Azíz (No. 21).

In the 35th year, he went from Málwah to Court, and was made in the 39th year Governor of Ghaznín, an appointment which he had long desired. There he remained till the 47th year, when Sháh Beg (No. 57) was sent there.

'Nothing else is known of him.' Maásir.

His son, Báz Bahádur (No. 188), held a jágír in Gujrát, and was transferred to Málwah as related above. He served in the siege of Ásír, and in the Ahmadnagar war. In the 46th year, he was caught by the Talingahs, but was released, when Abulfazl made peace, and the prisoners were exchanged.

IX.—Commanders of Two Thousand and Five Hundred.

64. Ibra'hi'm Kha'n i Shaiba'ni' (uncle of Khán Zamán, No. 13).

He served under Humáyún. After the conquest of Hindústán, Humáyún sent him with Sháh Abul Ma'álí to Láhor, to oppose Sikandar Súr, should he leave the Sawáliks. After the fall of Mánkoṭ, he received the Parganah of Sarharpúr,[1] near Jaunpúr, as jágír, and remained with Khán Zamán. During Khán Zamán's first rebellion, Ibráhím Khán and Khán Zamán's mother repaired at Mun'im Khan's request to Court as hostages of his loyalty, Ibráhím appearing, as was customary, with a shroud and a sword round his neck, which were only taken off when the Emperor's pardon had been obtained.

In the 12th year, however, Khán Zamán again rebelled, and Ibráhím went with Iskandar (No. 48) to Audh. When the latter had gone to Bengal, Ibráhím, at Mun'im's request, was pardoned, and remained with the Khán Khánán.

In the Ṭabaqát, Ibr. is called a Commander of Four Thousand.

---

[1] It is difficult to reconcile this statement with Badáoní II. 23, where Sarharpúr, which "lies 18 kos from Jaunpúr," is mentioned as the jágír of 'Abdurrahmán, Sikandar Súr's son, who got it after the surrender of Mánkoṭ.

His son, Ismá'íl Khán, held from Khán Zamán the town of Sandelah in Audh. In the 3rd year, Akbar gave this town to Sulṭán Husain Khán Jaláir. Ismá'íl opposed him with troops which he had got from Khán Zamán; but he was defeated and killed.

65. Khwa'jah Jala'luddi'n Mahmu'd Buju'q, of Khurásán.

The MSS. of the Áín have Muhammad, instead of Mahmúd, which other histories have, and have besides a word after Muhammad which reads like الحق and بحق. This should be no doubt بجق bujuq, the scriptio defectiva of the Turkish بجوق bujúq, 'having the nose cut,' as given in the copy of the Maásir.

Jaláluddín was in the service of M. 'Askarí. He had sent him from Qandahár to Garmsír, to collect taxes, when Humáyún passed through the district on his way to Persia. The Emperor called him, and Jalál presented him with whatever he had with him of cash and property, for which service Humáyún conferred on him the title of Mír Sámán, which under the circumstances was an empty distinction. On Humáyún's return from Persia, Jalál joined the Emperor, and was ordered, in 959, to accompany the young Akbar to Ghaznín, the tuyúl of the Prince. His devotion to his master rendered him so confident of the Emperor's protection, that he treated the grandees rudely, and incessantly annoyed them by satirical remarks. In fact, he had not a single friend.

Akbar on his accession made him a Commander of Two Thousand Five Hundred, and appointed him to Ghaznín. His enemies used the opportunity and stirred up Mun'im Khán, who owed Jalál an old grudge. Jalál soon found his post in Ghaznín so disagreeable, that he determined to look for employment elsewhere. He had scarcely left Ghaznín, when Mun'im called him to account. Though he had promised to spare his life, Mun'im imprisoned him, and had a short time after his eyes pierced. Jalál's sight, however, had not been entirely destroyed, and he meditated a flight to India. Before he reached the frontier, Mun'im's men caught him and his son Jaláluddín Mas'úd.[1] Both were imprisoned and shortly afterwards murdered by Mun'im.

This double murder is the foulest blot on Mun'im's character, and takes us the more by surprise, as on all other occasions he shewed himself generous and forbearing towards his enemies.

66. Haidar Muhammad Kha'n, Akhtah Begí.

He was an old servant of Humáyún, and accompanied him to Persia. He gave the Emperor his horse, when in the defeat near Balkh Humáyún's horse had been shot. On the march against Kámrán who had left Kábul for Afghánistán, the imperialists came to the River Surkháb, Haidar, with several other faithful Amírs, leading the van. They reached the river Siyáh-áb, which flows near the Surkháb, before the army could come up. Kámrán suddenly attacked them by night; but Haidar bravely held his ground. He accompanied the Emperor to Qandahár and to India, and was appointed to Bayánah (Bad. I., 463), which was held by Ghází Khán Súr, father of Ibráhím Khán. After the siege had lasted some time, Haidar allowed Ghází to capitulate; but soon after, he killed Ghází. Humáyún was annoyed at this breach of faith, and said he would not let Haidar do so again.

[1] He must not be confounded with the Jaláluddín Mas'úd mentioned Tuzuk, p. 67, who 'ate opium like cheese out of the hands of his mother.'

After Akbar's accession, H. was with Tardí Beg (No. 12) in Dihlí, and fought under Khán Zamán (No. 13) against Hemú. After the victory, he went for some reason to Kábul. At Mun'im's request, he assisted Ghaní Khán (vide p. 318) in Kábul. But they could not agree, and H. was called to India. He accompanied Mun'im, in the 8th year, on his expedition to Kábul and continued to serve under him in India.

In the 17th year, H. served with Khán i Kalán (No. 16) in Gujrát. In the 19th year, he was, together with his brother Mírzá Qulí, attached to the Bengal army, under Mun'im. Both died of fever, in 983, at Gaur (vide p. 376).

A son of H. is mentioned below (No. 326.)

Mírzá Qulí, or Mírzá Qulí Khán, Haidar's brother, distinguished himself under Humáyún during the expedition to Badakhshán. When Kámrán, under the mask of friendship, suddenly attacked Humáyún, M. Q. was wounded and thrown off his horse. His son, Dost Muhammad, saved him in time.

According to the Ṭabaqát, M. Q. belonged to the principal grandees (umará i kibár), a phrase which is never applied to grandees below the rank of Commanders of One Thousand. His name occurs also often in the Akbarnámah. It is, therefore, difficult to say why his name and that of his son have been left out by Abulfazl in this list.

67. I'tima'd Kha'n, of Gujrát.

He must not be confounded with No. 119.

I'timád Khán was originally a Hindú servant of Sulṭán Mahmúd, king of Gujrát. He was 'trusted' (i'timád) by his master, who had allowed him to enter the harem, and had put him in charge of the women. It is said that, from gratitude, he used to eat camphor, and thus rendered himself impotent. He rose in the king's favor, and was at last made an Amír. In 961, after a reign of 18 years, the king was foully murdered by a slave of the name of Burhán, who besides killed twelve nobles. I'timád next morning collected a few faithful men, and killed Burhán. Sulṭán Mahmúd having died without issue, I't. raised Razíul Mulk, under the title of Ahmad Sháh, to the throne. Razí was a son of Sulṭán Ahmad, the founder of Ahmadábád; but as he was very young, the affairs of the state were entirely in I't.'s hands. Five years later, the young king left Ahmadábád, and fled to Sayyid Mubárik of Bukhárá,[1] a principal courtier; but I't. followed him up, defeated him, and drove him away. Sulṭán Ahmad then thought it better to return to I't., who now again reigned as before. On several occasions did the king try to get rid of his powerful minister; and I't. at last felt so insecure, that he resolved to kill the king, which he soon afterwards did. I't. now raised a child of the name of Nat'hú (نتهو)[2] to the throne, "who did not belong to the line of kings;" but on introducing him to the grandees, I't. swore upon the Qorán, that Nat'hú was a son of Sulṭán Mahmúd: his mother when pregnant had been handed over to him by Sulṭán Mahmúd, to make her miscarry; but the child had been five months old, and he had not carried out the order. The Amírs had to believe the story, and Nat'hú was raised to the throne under the title of Sulṭán Muzaffar.

[1] Regarding this distinguished Gujrátí noble, vide the biography of his grandson, S. Hámid, (No. 78).

[2] Some MSS. read Nahtú.

This is the origin of Sulṭán Muzaffar, who subsequently caused Akbar's generals so much trouble (vide pp. 326, 334, 335).

I't. was thus again at the head of the government; but the Amírs parcelled out the country among themselves, so that each was almost independent. The consequence was, that incessant feuds broke out among them. I't. himself was involved in a war with Chingiz Khán, son of I'timádul Mulk, a Turkish slave. Chingiz maintained that Sulṭán Muzaffar, if genuine, should be the head of the state; and as he was strengthened by the rebellious Mírzás, to whom he had afforded protection against Akbar, I't. saw no chance of opposing him, left the Sulṭán, and went to Dúngarpúr. Two nobles, Alif Khán and Jhujhár Khán, took Sulṭán Muzaffar to him, went to Chingiz in Ahmadábád, and killed him (Chingiz) soon after. The Mírzás seeing how distracted the country was, took possession of Bahroṇch and Súrat. The general confusion only increased, when Sulṭán Muzaffar fled one day to Sher Khán Fúládí and his party, and I't. retaliated by informing Sher Khán that Nat'hú was no prince at all. But Sher Khán's party attributed this to I't.'s malice, and besieged him in Ahmadábád. I't. then fled to the Mírzás, and soon after to Akbar, whose attention he drew to the wretched state of Gujrát.

When Akbar, in the 17th year, marched to Patan, Sher Khán's party had broken up. The Mírzás still held Bahroṇch; and Sulṭán Muzaffar, who had left Sher Khán, fell into the hands of Akbar's officers (vide No. 362). I'timád and other Gujrátí nobles had in the meantime proclaimed Akbar's accession from the pulpits of the mosques and struck coins in his name. They now waited on the Emperor. Barodah, Champánír, and Súrat were given to I't. as tuyúl; the other Amírs were confirmed, and all charged themselves with the duty of driving away the Mírzás. But they delayed and did nothing; some of them, as Ikhtiyárul-Mulk, even fled, and others who were attached to Akbar, took I't. and several grandees to the Emperor, apparently charging them with treason. I't. fell into disgrace, and was handed over to Shahbáz Khán (No. 80) as prisoner.

In the 20th year, I't. was released, and charged with the superintendence of the Imperial jewels and gold vessels. In the 22nd year, he was permitted to join the party who under Mír Abú Turáb (vide p. 198) went to Makkah. On his return, he received Patan as jágír.

In the 28th year, on the removal of Shihábuddín Ahmad (No. 26), he was put in charge of Gujrát, and went there accompanied by several distinguished nobles, though Akbar had been warned; for people remembered I't.'s former inability to allay the factions in Gujrát. No sooner had Shiháb handed over duties than his servants rebelled. I't. did nothing, alleging that Shiháb was responsible for his men; but as Sulṭán Muzaffar had been successful in Káṭ'híwár, I't. left Ahmadábád, and went to Shiháb, who on his way to Court had reached Karí, 20 kos from Ahmadábád. Muzaffar used the opportunity and took Ahmadábád, Shiháb's men joining his standard.

Shiháb and I't. then shut themselves up in Patan, and had agreed to withdraw from Gujrát, when they received some auxiliaries, chiefly in a party of Gujrátís who had left Muzaffar, to try their luck with the Imperialists. I't. paid them well, and sent them under the command of his son, Sher Khán, against Sher Khán Fúládí, who was repulsed. In the meantime M. 'Abdurrahím (No. 29) arrived. Leaving I't·at Patan, he marched with Shihán against Muzaffar.

I'timád died at Patan in 995. The Ṭabaqát puts him among the Commanders of Four Thousand.

In Abulfazl's opinion, Gujrátís are made up of cowardice, deceit, several good qualities, and meanness; and I'timád was the very type of a Gujrátí.

No. 68. Pa'yandah Kha'n, Mughul, son of Hájí Muhammad Khán Kokí's brother.

Hájí Muhammad and Sháh Muhammad, his brother, had been killed by Humáyún for treason on his return from Persia. Hájí Muhammad was a man of great daring, and his value, when he was faithful, was often acknowledged by the Emperor.

Páyandah, in the 5th year of Akbar's reign came with Mun'im from Kábul, and was ordered to accompany Adham Khán (No. 19) to Málwah. In the 19th year, he accompanied Mun'im to Bengal. In the 22nd year, he served under Bhagwán Dás against Ráná Partáb. In the Gujrát war, he commanded M. 'Abdurrahím's (No. 29) haráwal.

In the 32nd year, he received G'horág'hát as jágír, whither he went.

This is all the Maásir says regarding Páyandah.

His full name was Muhammad Páyandah. He had a son Walí Beg who is mentioned below (No. 359).

From the Tuzuk, p. 144, we see that Páyandah died in 1024 A. H. Jahángír, in 1017, had pensioned him off, as he was too old. Tuz., p. 68.

No. 69. Jagannat'h, son of Rájah Bihárí Mall (No. 23).

He was a hostage in the hands of Sharafuddín Husain (No. 17; vide p. 329). After some time he regained his freedom and was well received by Akbar. He generally served with Mán Singh. In the 21st year, when Ráná Partáb of Maiwár opposed the Imperialists, Jagannát'h during an engagement when other officers had given way, held his ground, and killed with his own hands the renowned champion Rám Dás, son of Jai Mall. In the 23rd year, he received a jágír in the Panjáb, and was, in the 25th year, attached to the van of the army which was to prevent Mírzá Muhammad Hakím from invading the Panjáb. In the 29th year, he again served against the Ráná. Later he accompanied Mírzá Yúsuf Khán (No. 35) to Kashmír. In the 34th year, he served under Prince Murád in Kábul, and accompanied him, in the 36th year, to Málwah, of which the Prince had been appointed Governor. In the 43rd year, after several years' service in the Dak'hin, he left Murád without orders, and was for some time excluded from Court. On Akbar's return from the Dak'hin, J. met the emperor at Rantanbhúr, his jágír, and was then again sent to the Dak'hin.

In the 1st year of Jahángír, he served under Prince Parwíz against the Ráná, and was in charge of the whole army when the emperor, about the time Khusrau had been captured, called Parwíz to Court (Tuzuk, p. 33). In the same year, J. suppressed disturbances which Dalpat (p. 359) had raised at Nágor.

In the 4th year, he was made a Commander of Five Thousand, with 3000 horse.

Rám Chand,[1] his son. He was under Jahángír a Commander of Two Thousand, 1500 horse.

[1] The Tuzuk, p. 74, calls him Karm Chand. Vide also Pádisháhnámah, I., b., 318.

Rájah Manrúp, a son of Rám Chand. He accompanied Prince Sháhjahán on his rebellion, and got on his accession a Command of Three Thousand, with 2000 horse. He died in the 4th year of Sháhjahán. He had a son Gopál Sing'h.

70. Makhsu's Kha'n, (younger) brother of Sa'íd Khán (No. 25).

He served under his brother in Multán. In the 23rd year, he served under Shahbáz Khán (No. 80) against Gajpatí, and three years later, he accompanied Prince Murád to Kábul, where he also served under Akbar, who had gone thither and pardoned his brother, M. Muhammad Hakím.

Subsequently, Makhçúç served under Prince Salím. In the 49th year, he was a Commander of Three Thousand.

He was alive in the beginning of Jahángír's reign. The author of the Maásir has not recorded the date of his death.

He had a son Maqçúd who did not get on well with his father, for which reason Jahángír would not give him a mançab.

71. The author of the A'í'n, Abulfazl, son of Shaik Mubárik of Nágor.

Abulfazl's biography will be found elsewhere.

X. Commanders of Two Thousand.

72. Isma'í'l Kha'n Duldai.

Duldai, or Ḍúldai, is the name of a subdivision of the Barlás clan (vide p. 341, note).

The Maásir calls him Ismá'íl Qulí Beg Dúldai. A similar difference was observed in the name of Husain Qulí Khán (No. 24), and we may conclude that Beg, at least in India, was considered a lower title than Khán, just as Beglar Begí was considered inferior to Khán Khánán.

Ismá'íl Qulí was a grandee of Bábar and Humáyún, distinguished in the field and in council. When Humáyún besieged Qandahár, and the Grandees one after the other left M. 'Askarí, Ism. also joined the Emperor, and was appointed, after the conquest of Qandahár, Governor of Dáwar. When Kábul was besieged, Ism. and Khizr Khwájah (vide p. 365, note 2) attacked Sher 'Alí, an officer of Mírzá Kámrán, who at the prince's order had followed up and plundered the Persian caravan (qáfilah i wiláyat) on its way to Chárikán;[1] but as the roads were occupied by the Imperialists, Sher 'Alí could not reach Kábul, and marched towards Ghaznín, when he was overtaken and defeated. Ism. and Khizr spoiled the plunderer, and went again to Humáyún. A short time after, Ism. and several other grandees left the emperor, because they resented the elevation of Qaráchah Khán, and followed Mírzá Kámrán to Badakhshán. Humáyún followed them up and caught them together with Kámrán, Ism. among them. Ism. was, however, pardoned at Mun'im's request.

Ism. accompanied the emperor on his march to India, and was sent, after the capture of Dihlí, together with Sháh Abul Ma'álí to Láhor.

"Nothing else is known of him." Maásir.

---

[1] So the Maásir. Our maps have Charikar (Lat. 35°. Long. 69), which lies north of Kábul, and has always been the centre of a large caravan trade. Istálif (إستالِف, or إستالِيف) lies half way between Kábul and Charikar.

73. Mi'r Babus (?), the I'ghur.

The Ighurs are a well known Chaghtái tribe. The correct name of this grandee is a matter of doubt, as every MS. has a different lectio ; vide my Text edition, p. 224, note 6. The Maásir has left out the name of this grandee ; nor do I find it in the List of the Ṭabaqát.

74. Ashraf Kha'n Mi'r Munshi', Muhammad Açghar of Sabzwár (?).

He was a Husainí Sayyid of Mashhad (Maásir, Mir-át ul'Álam). The author of the Ṭabaqát says, he belonged to the 'Arabsháhí Sayyids ; 'but people rarely make such fine distinctions.' Abulfazl says, he was of Sabzwár ; but in the opinion of the Maásir, this is an error of the copyists.

Ashraf Khán was a clever writer, exact in his style, and a renowned calligrapher, perhaps the first of his age in writing the Ta'líq and Nasta'líq characters (p. 101, l. 14). He also understood jafar, or witchcraft.

Ashraf was in Humáyún's service, and had received from him the post and title of Mír Munshí. After the conquest of Hindústán, he was made Mír 'Arz and Mír Mál. At Akbar's accession, he was in Dihlí and took part in the battle with Hemú (p. 365, No. 48). He was imprisoned by Bairám, but escaped and went to Makkah. He returned in 968, when Akbar was at Máchhíwárah on his way to the Siwáliks where Bairám was. He was well received and got a manṣab. In the 6th year, when the emperor returned from Málwah, he bestowed upon him the title of Ashraf Khán.

In the 19th year, he went with Mun'im to Bengal, was present in the battle of Takaroí, and died in the twentieth year (983)[1] at Gaur (vide p. 376).

Ashraf was a poet of no mean pretensions.

His son, Mír Abul Muzaffar (No. 240) held a Command of 500. In the 38th year, he was Governor of Awadh.

Ashraf's grandsons, Husainí and Burhání, held inferior commands under Sháhjahán.

75. Sayyid Mahmu'd of Ba'rha, [Kúndlíwál].

'Sayyid Mahmúd was the first of the Bárha Sayyids that held office under the Tímúrides.' He was with Sikandar Súr (Badáoní II, 17) in Mánkoṭ, but seeing that the cause of the Afgháns was hopeless, he left Sikandar and went over to Akbar. He was a friend of Bairám, and served in the first year under 'Alí Qulí Khán Zamán (No. 13) against Hemú. In the second year, he took part in the expedition against Hájí Khán in Ajmír (vide Nos. 40, 45). In the 3rd year, he conquered with Sháh Qulí Mahram (No. 45) Fort Jaitáran,[2] and served in the same year under Adham Kokah against the Bhadauriyahs of Hatkánt'h (vide p. 323, last line).

After Bairám's fall, Sayyid Mahmúd got a jágír near Dihlí. In the 7th year, he brought Mun'im Khán to Court (vide p. 318). In the 17th year, he served under the Khán i Kalán (No. 16) and the emperor in Gujrát, was present in the battle of Sarnál, and followed up Mírzá Ibráhím Husain. On every occasion he fought with much bravery. Towards the end of the 18th year, he was sent with other Sayyids of Bárha, and Sayyid Muhammad of Amrohah (No. 140) against Rájah Madhukar, who had invaded the territory between Sironj and Gwáliár. S. Mahmud drove him away, and died soon after, in the very end of 981.

[1] The Mir-át says in the tenth year (973), as stated on p. 101, note 6. This is clearly a mistake of the author of the Mir-át.

[2] The best MSS. have جیتارن. The name is doubtful. Akbar passed it on one of his marches from Ajmír over Pálí to Jálor.

Sayyid Mahmúd was a man of rustic habits, and great personal courage and generosity. Akbar's court admired his valour and chuckled at his boorishness and unadorned language; but he stood in high favor with the emperor. Once on his return from the war with Madhukar, he gave in the State hall a verbal account of his expedition, in which his "I" occurred oftener than was deemed proper by the assembled Amírs. "You have gained the victory," interrupted Áçaf Khán, in order to give him a gentle hint, "because His Majesty's good fortune (iqbál i pádisháhí) accompanied you." Mistaking the word 'Iqbál' for the name of a courtier, "Why do you tell an untruth?" replied Mahmúd, "Iqbál i Pádisháhí did not accompany me: I was there, and my brothers: we licked them with our sabres." The emperor smiled, and bestowed upon him praise and more substantial favors.

But more malicious were the remarks of the Amírs regarding his claim to be a Sayyid of pure blood. Jahángír (Tuzuk, p. 366) also says that people doubt the claim of the Bárha family to be Sayyids. Once Mahmúd was asked how many generations backwards the Sayyids of Bárha traced their descent. Accidentally a fire was burning on the ground near the spot where Mahmúd stood. Jumping into it, he exclaimed, "If I am a Sayyid, the fire will not hurt me; if I am no Sayyid, I shall get burnt." He stood for nearly an hour in the fire, and only left it at the earnest request of the bystanders. "His velvet-slippers shewed, indeed, no trace of being singed."

For Sayyid Mahmúd's brother and sons, vide Nos. 91, 105, and 143.

Note on the Sayyids of Bárha (Sádát i Bárha).

In MSS. we find the spelling بارهه bárha, and بارز bárah. The lexicographist Bahár i 'Ajam (Tek Chand) in his grammatical treatise, entitled Jawáhir ul Huríf, says that the names of Indian towns ending in ز form adjectives in وي, as ٹٹہ, Tattah or ٹھٹھہ T'hat'ha, forms an adjective ٹٹوي tatawí; but of بارهه no adjective is formed, and you say sádát i bárha, instead of sádát i barhawí.

The name Bárha has been differently explained. Whether the derivation from the Hindí numeral bárah, 12, be correct or not, there is no doubt that the etymology was believed to be correct in the times of Akbar and Jahángír; for both the Ṭabaqát and the Tuzuk derive the name from 12 villages in the Duáb (Muzaffarnagar District), which the Sayyids held.

Like the Sayyids of Bilgrám, the Bárha family trace their origin to one Sayyid Abul Farah of Wásiṭ;[1] but their nasabnámah, or genealogical tree, was sneered at, and even Jahangír, in the above quoted passage from the Tuzuk, says that the personal courage of the Sayyids of Bárha—but nothing else—was the best proof that they were Sayyids. But they clung so firmly to this distinction, that some of them even placed the title of Sayyid before the titles which they received from the Mughul emperors, as Sayyid Khán Jahán (Sayyid Abul Muzaffar), and several others.

[1] "From him are descended the most renowned Musalmán families in Northern India, the Barha and Belgram Syuds, and in Khyrábád, Futtehpore Huswá, and many other places, branches of the same stem are found." C. A. Elliott, The Chronicles of Onao, Allahabad, 1862, p. 93.

But if their claim to be Sayyids was not firmly established, their bravery and valour had become a by-word. Their place in battle was the van (haráwal); they claimed to be the leaders of the onset, and every emperor from the times of Akbar gladly availed himself of the prestige of their name. They delighted in looking upon themselves as Hindústánís (vide p. 336). Their military fame completely threw to the background the renown of the Sayyids of Amrohah, of Mánikpúr, the Khánzádahs of Mewát, and even families of royal blood as the Çafawís.

The Sayyids of Bárha are divided into four branches, whose names are—1. Tihanpúrí; 2. Chatbanúrí, or Chátraurí;[1] 3. Kúndliwál; 4. Jagneri. The chief town of the first branch was Jánsath; of the second, Sambalharah; of the third, Majharah; of the fourth Bidaulí on the Jamnah. Of these four lines Muhammadan Historians, perhaps accidentally, only mention two, viz., the Kúndliwál (كوندلي وال) to which Sayyid Mahmúd (No. 75) belonged; and the Tihanpúrí (تهنپوري), of which Sayyid Khán Jahán was a member.

The Histories of India do not appear to make mention of the Sayyids of Bárha before the times of Akbar; but they must have held posts of some importance under the Súrs, because the arrival of Sayyid Mahmúd in Akbar's camp (p. 389) is recorded by all Historians as an event of importance. He and other Sayyids were, moreover, at once appointed to high mançabs. The family boasts also traditionally of services rendered to Humáyún; but this is at variance with Abulfazl's statement that Sayyid Mahmúd was the first that served under a Timuride.

The political importance of the Sayyids declined from the reign of Muhammad, Sháh (1131 to 1161), who deposed the brothers Sayyid 'Abdullah Khán and Sayyid Husain 'Alí Khán, in whom the family reached the greatest height of their power. What a difference between the rustic and loyal Sayyid Mahmúd under Akbar, and the above two brothers, who made four Timurides emperors, dethroned and killed two, and blinded and imprisoned three![2]

The Sayyids of Bárha are even now-a-days numerous and 'form the characteristic element in the population of the Muzaffarnagar district' (Leeds' Report).

Abulfazl mentions nine Sayyids in this List of grandees, viz.—

1. Sayyid Mahmúd (No. 75).
2. Sayyid Ahmad, his brother, (No. 91).
3. Sayyid Qásim (No. 105). } sons of 1.
4. Sayyid Háshim (No. 143). }
5. Sayyid Rájú (No. 165).
6. Sayyid Jamáluddín (No. 217), son of 2.
7. Sayyid Jhajhú (No. 221).
8. Sayyid Báyazíd (No. 295).
9. Sayyid Láḍ (No. 409).

---

[1] Vide Sir H. Elliot's Glossary (Beames' Edition) I, p. 11 and p. 297. On p. 12 of the Glossary read Sayyid Mahmúd twice for Sayyid Muhammad; Sayyid 'Alí Açghar for Sayyid 'Alí Asaf; Dilír Khán for Debí Khán. Instead of Chatbanúrí (or Chátraurí), which Mr. R. J. Leeds, C. S. gives in his valuable Report on the Castes and Races of the Muzaffarnagar District (Glossary, p. 297, ff.), Sir H. Elliot has Chantraudí.

[2] They made Farrukh Siyar, Rafí'uddaraját, Rafí'uddaulah, and Muhammad Sháh, emperors; they dethroned and killed Jahándár Sháh and Farrukh Siyar, whom they had moreover blinded; and they blinded and imprisoned Princes A'azzuddín, 'Alí Tabár, and Humáyún Bakht.

The Akbarnámah mentions several other Sayyids without indicating to what family they belong. Thus S. Jamáluddín, a grandson of S. Mahmúd (vide under 91); S. Sálim; S. Fáth Khán, (Bad. II., 180); &c.

The following trees are compiled from the Tuzuk, Pádisháhnámah, and Maásir.

(a.) Sayyid Mahmúd of Bárha, Kúndlíwál.——Sayyid Ahmad, his brother. (No. 91).

1. S. Qásim. (No. 105.) — 1. S. Ádam, Tuz. 80. 2. S. Sulaimán, Pád. I, b. 320.
2. S. Háshim. (No. 143.) — S. Báyazíd. (No. 295, ?) — S. Sultán, Çalábat Khán, alias Ikhtiçáç Khán.
3. S. 'Alí Açghar, Saif Khán. d. 1025. — S. Núrul 'Iyán. Pád. II, 735.
4. Sayyid Jahángír, (Pád. I, 439.) — S. Ja'far Shujá'at Khán, d. 1052. — 1. S. Muzaffar, Himmat Khán, Pád. II, 735. 2. S. Quṭb. Pád. II, 746. 3. S. Najábat. Pád. II, 749.

S. Jamáluddín, (No. 217.)

(b.) Sayyid Dilír Khán ('Abdul Wahháb), d. 1042.

1. S. Hasan, Pád. I, b., 323.
2. S. Khalílullah, Pád. I, b., 323.

(c.) Sayyid Hizabr Khán, d. 1047.——Sayyid 'Álam, his brother. Perished with Prince Shujá', in Rakhang (Arracan).

S. Zabardast.

(d.) Sayyid Khán Jahán i Sháhjahání, Tihanpúrí. (alias S. Abul Muzaffar Khán), d. 1055.——A brother.

1. S. Mançúr.
2. S. Sher Zamán, title, S. Muzaffar Khán.
3. S. Munawwar, Lashkar Khán. — S. Wajíhuddín Khán.

1. S. 'Alí. Pád. II, 748.
2. S. Fírúz, Ikhtiçáç Khán, d. 1077.

The Pádisháhnámah (I., b., 312, 319; II., p. 733, 734, 735, 741, 752) mentions also S. Mák'han, d. 9th year of Sháhjahán; S. Síkhan; S. 'Abdullah; S. Muhammad, son of S. Afzal; S. Khádim; S. Sálár; S. Shiháb.

(e.) Sayyid Qásim, Shahámat Khán [Chátraurí] (was alive in the 24th year of Aurangzíb).——a brother

1. S. Nuçrat Yár Khán (under Muhammad Sháh).

(f.) Sayyid Husain Khán, d. 1120.

1. S. Abú Sa'íd Khán.
2. Ghairat Khán.
3. Hasan Khán.

(g.) Sayyid 'Abdullah Khán, [Tihanpúrí]. alias Sayyid Miyán (under Sháh 'Alam I.)

1. S. Hasan 'Alí Khán; title, Quṭbulmulk S. 'Abdullah Khán.
2. Amírul Mamálik S. Husain 'Alí Khán. (killed by Muhammad Sháh).
3. S. Saifuddín Husain 'Alí Khán.
4. S. Najmuddín 'Alí Khán.

For the following notes, I am indebted to R. J. Leeds, Esq., C. S., Mirzapore, who kindly sent me two Urdú MSS. containing a short family history of the Sádát i Bárha, composed in 1864 and 1869 by one of the Sayyids themselves. As Mr. Leeds has submitted together with his Report 'a detailed account in English of the history of the Sayyids,' the following extracts from the Urdú MSS. will suffice.

The date of the arrival in India of the above-mentioned Abul Farah from Wásiṭ is doubtful. The two MSS. mention the time of Iltitmish (Altamsh), and trace the emigration to troubles arising from Hulágú's invasion of Baghdád and the overthrow of the empire of the Khalífahs; while the sons of Abul Farah are said to have been in the service of Shihábuddín Ghorí—two palpable anachronisms.

Abul Farah is said to have arrived in India with his twelve sons, of whom four remained in India on his return to his country. These four brothers are the ancestors of the four branches of the Sayyids. Their names are—

1. Sayyid Dáúd, who settled in the mauza' of Tihanpúr.
2. Sayyid Abulfazl, who settled in the qaçbah of Chhatbanúrá (چهت بنورا).
3. Sayyid Abulfazáil, who settled in the mauza' of Kúndlí. ..
4. Sayyid Najmuddín Husain, who settled in the mauza' of Jhujar.

These four places are said to lie near Patiálá in the Panjáb, and have given rise to the names of the four branches. Instead of Chhatbanúrí, the name of the second branch, the MSS. have also Chhátraudí, چهاترودي, or چهاتروڑي, and Jagnerí (جگنيري) instead of جهجري Jhujarí, although no explanation is given of these alterations.

From Patiálá, the four brothers went to the Duáb between the Ganges and Jamnah, from where a branch was established at Bilgrám in Audh.

The etymology of bárha is stated to be uncertain. Some derive it frrm báhir, outside, because the Sayyids excamped outside the imperial camp; some from bárah imám, the twelve Imáms of the Shí'ahs, as the Sayyids were Shí'ahs; some derive it from twelve (bárah) villages which the family held, just as the district of Balandshahr, Tahçíl Anúpshahr, is said to contain a bárha of Pat'háns, i. e. 12 villages belonging to a Pathán family; and others, lastly, make it to be a corruption of the Arabic abrár, pious.

The descendants of S. Dáúd settled at Dhásirí; and form the Tihanpúrí branch, those of S. Abulfazl at Sambalhaṛah, and form the Chhatbanúrí or Chhátraurí branch; those of S. Abulfazáil went to Majhaṛah, and are the Kúndlíwáls; and those of S. Najmuddín occupied Biḍaulí, and form the Jhujarí, or Jagnerí, branch.

A. The Tihanpúrís.

The eighth descendant of S. Dáúd was S. Khán Qír (?) (خان قير)[1]. He had four sons—

[1] The word قير occurs also in the lists of Pat'hán nobles in the Táríkh i Fírúzshahí. The title of قيربك qírbak, which is mentioned in the same work, appears to be the same as the later قوربيگ or قوربيگي, qurbegí, the officer in charge of the qúr (p. 110). But the name Khán Qír is perhaps wrong; the MS. calls him خوان قير, or خوان قير, Khwán Fír or Khwán Qír (?).

1. Sayyid 'Umar Shahíd, who settled in Jánsaṭh, a village then inhabited by Játs and Brahmins. To his descendants belong the renowned brothers mentioned on p. 392, (g).

The occurrence of the name 'Umar shews that he, at any rate, was no Shí'ah.

2. Sayyid Chaman, who settled at Chatorah (چتورہ), in the Parganah of Jolí-Jánsaṭh. To his descendants belongs S. Jalál, who during the reign of Sháhjahán[1] is said to have founded K'harwah Jalálpúr in 'Iláqah Sirdhanah, district Mírat'h. His son S. Shams left the imperial service; hence the family declined. He had two sons, Asad 'Alí and 'Alí Açghar, whose descendants still exist in Chatorah and Jalálpúr respectively. They are very poor, and sold in 1843-44 the bricks of the ruined family dwellings in Chatorah for Rs. 10,000 to the Government for the construction of works of irrigation. The buildings in Chatorah are ascribed to S. Muhammad Çaláh Khán, who served in Audh, and died childless.

3. Sayyid Huná (ہنا). He settled at Bihárí, Muzaffarnagar. He had six sons—

I. Sayyid Quṭb, whose descendants occupy the village of Biláspúr in the Muzaffarnagar District. From this branch come the Rat'herí Sayyids.

II. S. Sulṭán, whose descendants hold Sirdháolí.

III. S. Yúsuf, whose posterity is to be found in Bihárí and Dhalnah (one MS. reads balnah).

IV. and V. S. Ján and S. Mán, had no offspring.

VI. S. Naçíruddín. To his descendants belongs S. Khán Jahán i Sháhjahání, p. 392 (d.). On him the Sayyids appear to look as the second founder of their family. His first son, S. Mançúr built Mançúrpúr, and his descendant hold now-a-days Mançúrpúr and K'hataulí; his second son Muzaffar Khán [Sher Zamán] built Muzaffarnagar, where his descendants still exist, though poor or involved.

4. Sayyid Ahmad. He settled at کوال in Jolí-Jánsaṭh, where his descendants still are. The MSS. mention Tátár Khán, and Díwán Yár Muhammad Khán as having distinguished themselves in the reign of Aurangzíb.

B. The Chhatbanúrí, or Chhátrauṛí, Clan.

One of the descendants of S. Abulfazl is called S. Hasan Fakhruddín who is said to have lived in the reign of Akbar at Sambalharah, the rájahs of which place were on friendly terms with the family. His son, S. Nadhah, is said to have had four sons—

I. Sayyid 'Alí.

II. Sayyid Ahmad, a descendant of whom, S. Raushan 'Alí Khán, served under Muhammad Sháh.

III. S. Tájuddín, whose son, S. 'Umar, settled at Kakraulí.

IV. S. Sálár (perhaps the same on p. 392, l. 11 from below), who had two sons S. Haidar Khán, and S. Muhammad Khán. The descendants of the former settled at Míránpúr, which was founded by Nawáb S. Shahámat Khán, evidently the same as on p. 392, (l. 10). S. Muhammad Khán settled at K'hatorah (" a village so called, because it was at first inhabited by Káiths"). Among his descendants are S. Nuçrat Yár Khán, (p. 392), and Ruknuddaulah.

---

[1] The Pádisháhnámah, although very minute, does not mention S. Jalál or S. Shams. A S. Jalál is mentioned I. 30. He died of his wounds received in the fight at Bhaironwál (vide No. 99).

C. The Kúndlíwáls.

S. Abul Fazáil settled at Majharah, which is said to have been so called, because the site was formerly a jungle of múnj grass. The MSS. say that many Sayyids of the branch are mafqúd-ulkhabar, i. e., it is not known what became of them. The Kúndlíwáls which now exist, are said to be most uneducated and live as common labourers, the condition of Majharah being altogether deplorable.

The Kúndlíwals are now scattered over Majharah, Háshir púr, Tang,[1] Tanderah, &c.

D. The Jagnèrís.

The son of S. Najmuddín, S. Qamaruddín, settled at Biḍaulí. A descendant of his, S. Fakhruddín left Biḍaulí and settled at بلري in Jolí-Jánsaṭh, and had also zamíndárís in Chandaurí Chandaurah, Tulsípúr, and K'harí. Now-a-days many of this ... nch are in Biḍaulí, 'Iláqah Pánípat, and Dihlí.

* * *

The chief places where the Sayyids of Bárha still exist are—Míránpúr, K'hau...lí, Muzaffarnagar, Jolí, Tas-ha, Bak'herah, Majharah, Chataurah, Sambalharah, Tang, Biláspúr, Mornah, Sirdháolí, Kíláodah, Jánsaṭh.

After the overthrow of the Tihanpúrí brothers [p. 392, (g.)], many emigrated. Sayyids of Bárha exist also in Lak'hnau, Barelí, 'Anwlah, in Audh; also in Nagínah, Maiman, and Chándpúr in the Bijnor district. A branch of the Jolí Sayyids is said to exist in Púrniah (Bengal), and the descendants of the saint 'Abdullah Kirmání of Bírbhúm claim likewise to be related to the Bárha Sayyids.

During the reign of Aurangzíb, the Sayyids are said to have professed Sunní tendencies.

The political overthrow of the Sádát i Bárha under Muhammad Sháh (vide Elphinstone, Vth edition, p. 693) was followed by the disastrous fight at Bhasí (بهسي), which lies on the K'hataulí road, where the Sayyids were defeated by the Imperialists, and robbed of the jewels and gold vessels which their ancestors during their palmy days had collected.

---

[1] As this place is said to have been founded by Hizabr Khán [p. 392, (c.)] it would seem as if this Sayyid also was a Kúndlíwál. His brother, S. 'Álam perished with Prince Shujá' in Arracan; and it is noticeable that of the 22 companions of the unfortunate prince, ten were Bárha Sayyids, the remaining twelve being Mughuls.

The value of the above-mentioned two Urdú MSS. lies in their geographical details and traditional information. A more exhaustive History of the Sádát i Bárha, based upon the Muhammadan Historians of India,—now so accessible—and completed from inscriptions and sanads and other documents still in the possession of the clan, would be a most welcome contribution to Indian History, and none are better suited for such a task than the Sayyids themselves.

There is no doubt that the Sayyids owe their rise and success under the Timurides to the Kúndlíwáls, who are the very opposite of mafqúd-ulkhabar.

76. 'Abdullah Kha'n Mughul.

I cannot find the name of this grandee in the Maásir or the Ṭabaqát. He has been mentioned above, p. 309, l. 21. Akbar's marriage with his daughter displeased Bairám, because 'Abdullah's sister was married to Kámrán, of whose party Bairám believed him to be. When Bairám, during his rebellion (p. 317), marched from Dípálpúr to Jálindhar, he passed over Tihárah, where 'Abdullah defeated a party of his friends under Walí Beg (p. 329, No. 24).

'Abdullah Khan Mughul must not be confounded with 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak (No. 14).

77. Shaikh Muhammad i Bukhárí.

He was a distinguished Hindústání Sayyid, and maternal uncle (tughái) to Shaikh Faríd i Bukhárí (No. 99). Akbar liked him for his wisdom and faithfulness. Fattú Kháçah Khail Afghán handed over the Fort of Chanár to Akbar, through the mediation of Shaikh Muhammad.

In the 14th year, Akbar gave him a tuyúl in Ajmír, and ordered him to take charge of Shaikh Mu'ín i Chishtí's tomb, as the khádims were generally at feud about the emoluments and distribution of vows presented by pilgrims. Nor had the efficacy of their prayers been proved, though they claimed to possess sufficient influence with God to promise offspring to the barren and childless.

In the 17th year, Shaikh M. was attached to the corps under Mírzá 'Azíz (No. 21), whom Akbar had put in charge of Ahmadábád. After the Emperor's victory at Sarnál, Ibráhím Mírzá joined Husain Mírzá, Sháh Mírzá, and 'A'qil Mírzá, at Patan (Gujrát); but having quarrelled with them, he left them, and invaded the District of Ágrah. The other three Mírzás remained in Patan, and entered into a league with the Fúládí party (vide No. 67). Mírzá 'Azíz had been re-inforced by the Málwah contingent under Quṭbuddín (No. 28), Sháh Budágh (No. 52), and Maṭlab Khán (No. 83). His army was further increased by the contingent of Shaikh M., whom Akbar had ordered to move from Dholqah to Súrat. Mírzá 'Azíz Kokah left Sayyid Hámid (No. 78) in Ahmadábád, and moved against the Mírzás in Patan. The Mírzás and Sher Khán Fúládí, however, wished to delay the fight, as their re-inforcements had not arrived, and Sher Khán sent proposals of peace through Shaikh M. to M. 'Azíz. Sháh Budágh advised M. 'Azíz not to listen to them, as the enemies only wished to gain time, and 'Azíz drew up his army. He himself, Sháh Budágh, Mu'ínuddín i Farankhúdí (No. 128), Ma'çúm Khán and his son, and Maṭlab Khán (No. 83) stood in the centre (qol); Quṭbuddín (No. 28), and Jamáluddín Injú (No. 164), on the right wing; Shaikh Muhammad, Murád Khán (No. 54), Sháh Muhammad (No. 95), Sháh Fakhruddín (No. 88), Muzaffar Mughul, Páyandah (No. 68), Hájí Khán Afghán, and the son of Khawáç Khán, on the left wing; Dastam Khán (No. 79), Naurang Khán (vide p. 334), Muhammad Qulí Toqbái (No. 129), and Mihr 'Alí Sildoz (No. 130), led the van (haráwal); Báz Bahádur (No. 188) occupied the Altimash (between the van and the commander); and Mírzá Muqím and Chirgis Khán formed the reserve behind the centre. The centre of the enemies was held by Sher Khán Fúládí and Junaid i Kararání; the right wing by the three Mírzás; the left wing by Muhammad Khán (Sher Khán's eldest son) and Sádát Khán; and their van was led by Badr Khán, younger son of Sher Khán. The battle then commenced in the neighbourhood of Patan, 18th Ramazán, 980 (22nd January, 1573). The left wing of the Imperialists was defeated by the Mírzás. Murád Khán (No. 54) preferred to look on. Sháh Muhammad (No. 95) was wounded, and carried off by his men to Ahmadábád. Shaikh Muhammad himself was killed with several of his relations, as the son of Sayyid Bahá-uddín, and Sayyid Ja'far, brother of Shaikh Faríd (No. 99). The Mírzás also fell upon Sháh Fakhruddín and repulsed him. Quṭbuddín even was hard pressed, when M. 'Azíz by a timely attack with his centre put the enemies to flight. As usual, the soldiers of the enemies had too early commenced to plunder.

Sher Khán fled to Júnágaḍh, and the Mírzás to the Dak'hin.

78. Sayyid Ha'mid i Bukhárí.

Sayyid Hámid was the son of S. Mírán, son of S. Mubárik. Sayyid Mubárik was a Gujrátí Courtier (vide p. 385, note) who, it is said, arrived from Bukhárá with but a horse. One day he was attacked by a mast elephant, when he discharged an arrow that entered the forehead of the animal so deep, that only the notch of the arrow was visible. From this event, the people of Gujrát swore by S. Mubárik's arrow. He gradually rose to higher dignities. When I'timád Khán (No. 67) raised Nat'hú to the throne, under the title of Muzaffar Sháh, S. Mubárik got several Mahalls of the Patan, Dholqah, and Dandoqah (W. of the Peninsula) Districts. After his death, Dholqah and Dandoqah were given to his son, Sayyid Mírán, and after him to his grandson Sayyid Hámid.

When Akbar, on his invasion of Gujrát, arrived on 1st Rajab, 980, at Patan, Sayyid Hámid went over to him, and was favorably received. During the war of Mírzá 'Azíz Kokah with the Mírzás (vide No. 77), S. H. was put in charge of Ahmadábád. In the 18th year, Dholqah and Dandoqah were again given him as tuyúl. Subsequently, he served under Quṭbuddín in Kambháit.

In the 22nd year, he was appointed to Multán, and served in the end of the same year with M. Yúsuf Khán i Razawí (No. 35), against the Balúchís. In the 25th year, when M. Muhammad Hakím invaded Láhor, S. H. with the other tuyúldárs of the Panjáb assembled and joined the army of Prince Murád, S. H. commanding the left wing. He also served under Akbar in Kábul. On the Emperor's return, he was permitted to go from Sirhind to his jágír.

In the 30th year, he served under Mán Singh in Kábul. On his arrival at Pasháwar, his jágír, S. H. sent most of his men to Hindústán, and lived securely in Bigrám (on our Maps, Beghram), leaving his affairs in the hands of a man of the name of Músá. This man oppressed the Mahmand and Ghaibah (?) Khail tribes, 'who have ten thousand homes near Pasháwar'. The oppressed Afgháns, instead of complaining to Akbar, chose Jalálah i Taríkí as leader, and attacked S. H. He first resolved to shut himself up in Bigrám; but having received an erroneous report regarding the strength of the enemies, he left the town, and was defeated and killed (31st year). The Maásir says, he was killed in 993. In this fight, forty of his relations and clients also perished. The Afgháns then besieged the Fort, which was held by Kamál, son of S. H. He held it till he was relieved.

S. Kamál, during Akbar's reign, was promoted to a command of Seven Hundred, and, on the accession of Jahángír, to a Hazáríship. He was made Governor of Dilhí, vice Shaikh 'Abdul Wahháb, also a Bukhárí Sayyid (Tuz. p. 35, l. 8 from below).

Kamál served under Farid i Bukhárí (No. 99) in the expedition against Prince Khusrau, and commanded the left wing in the fight near Bhaironwál, rendering timely assistance to the Sayyids of Bárha who, as was customary, led the van.

Sayyid Ya'qúb, son of S. Kamál, was a Commander of Fifteen Hundred, 1000 horse, and died in the third year of Sháhjahán's reign. The Maásir says, in the 2nd year.

The two lists of Sháhjahán's grandees given in the Pádisháhnámah (I, b., 322; II, 740) mention another son of Sayyid Hámid, of the name of Sayyid Báqir, who held a Command of Five Hundred, 400 horse.

79. Dastam Kha'n, son of Rustam i Turkistání.

The correct name of this grandee is Dastam دستم, a very unusual name, though most MSS. of the Aín and many of the Akbarnámah give رستم, Rustam. The Maásir correctly places his name under the letter D.

His father's name was Rustam. His mother—her name is not clearly written in the MSS. of the Maásir and Akbarnámah, which I have seen, either Najíbah or Bakhyah—was a friend of Máhum Anagah (vide No. 19), and had free access to the Harem. Dastam appears to have been a play-fellow of Prince Akbar.

Dastam Khán, in the 9th year, served under Mu'izzul Mulk (No. 61) against 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak (No. 14). In the 17th year, he served under Mírzá 'Azíz Kokah in the battle of Patan (vide No. 77), distinguished himself in the war with Muhammad Husain Mírzá, and got a flag. In the 22nd year, he was appointed to the Çúbah of Ajmír, and got Rantanbhúr as tuyúl. His administration was praiseworthy: he kept down the rebellious, and protected the oppressed.

In the 25th year, Uchlá, son of Balbhadr, and Mohan, Súr Dás, Tilúksí, sons of Rájah Bihárí Mall's brother, came without permission from the Panjáb to Lúní (?), their native town, and caused disturbances. Dastam, from a wish not to be too hard on Kachhwáhahs, advised them to return to obedience; but his leniency only rendered the rebels more audacious. Akbar then ordered D. to hold out threats, and if this was not sufficient, to proceed against them. D. had at last to do so; but he did it hastily, without collecting a sufficient number of troops. In the fight,[1] the three

[1] The geographical details given in the Akbarnámah are unsatisfactory.

Abulfazl mentions the Qaçbah (small town) of Lúní (لوني) as the birth-place of the Kachhwáhah rebels; the fight, he says, took place in a village (mauza') of the name of ٹھوری Thorí, and Dastam died at Sherpúr, which is also called a Qaçbah. But the Akbarnámah leaves the reader to find out where these three places are. The Ṭabaqát, in its list of grandees, fortunately says that Dastam Khán was killed in the neighbourhood of Rantanbhúr. The only places near Rantanbhúr which resemble the above three, are Bounlee, Tohra, and Shergarh, as given on the Trig. Map of the Jodhpúr Territory for 1850. The road from Shergarh (about 4 miles S. E. of Rantanbhúr to Bounlee is bisected by the Banas River. Rantanbhúr lies in the angle formed by the confluence of the Chambal and the Banes, and Bounlee lies about 30 miles N. W. of it. There are two villages of the names of Tohra, one about 3 miles S. W. of Bounlee, and the other S. of it, on the right bank of the Banas. Bounlee, or Baunlí, would be بونلي, or بولي, which will be found below as the head of a Parganah in Sirkár Rantanbhúr, and the change of بولي to لونی is very simple. The greatest difference lies in Sherpúr and Shergarh.

The Akbarnámah says, the fight took place on the 10th Ában of the 25th year.

nephews of the Rájah were killed. Dastam received a wound from Uchlá, who had attacked him from an ambush. Wounded as he was, he attacked Uchlá, and killed him. Immediately afterwards he fainted and fell from his horse. His men put him again on horseback—a usual expedient, in order not to dishearten the soldiers. The rebels were totally defeated and their estates plundered (988).

Dastam died of his wounds, two days later, at Sherpúr. Akbar said that even D.'s mother could not feel the loss of her son as much as he did, because D., with the exception of three years, had never been away from him.

The Maásir says, he was a Commander of Three Thousand. Rantanbhúr was then given to Mírzá 'Abdurrahím (No. 29) as jágír.

A son of Dastam is mentioned below (No. 362).

80. Shahba'z Kha'n i Kambú.

Regarding the tribe called Kambú, vide Beames' Edition of Sir H. Elliot's Glossary, I, 304. The Persian hemistich quoted (Metre Hazaj)— یکے افغان دوم کنبو سیوم بدذات کشمیري ..

'The Afgháns are the first, the Kambús the second, and the Kashmíris the third, set of scoundrels' must be very modern; for during the reigns of Akbar and Jahángír, it was certainly a distinction to belong to this tribe, as will be seen just now.

The sixth ancestor of Shahbáz was Hájí Ismá'íl, a disciple of the renowned saint Baháuddín Zakariyá of Multán. Once a beggar asked the saint to give him an ashrafí, or goldmuhr, for the name of every prophet he would mention; but as Baháuddín could not pay the money, Hájí Ismá'íl took the beggar to his house, and gave him an Ashrafí for each of the ten or twenty names he mentioned. Another time, Hájí Ismá'íl acknowledged to the saint that his power of understanding was defective, whereupon the saint prayed for him, and from that time the Kambús are proverbial in Hindústán for sagacity and quickness of apprehension.

Shahbáz at first devoted himself to a life of abstinence and austerity, as his ancestors had done; but the excellent way in which he performed the duties of kotwál, drew Akbar's attention to him, and he was made an Amír and appointed Mír Tozak (quarter master).

In the 16th year, when Lashkar Khán (No. 90) fell into disgrace, Sh. was appointed Mír-Bakhshí. In the 21st year, he was sent against the rebels in Jodhpúr, especially against Kallah, son of Rái Rám, and grandson of Rái Máldeo, and was ordered to take Fort Siwánah. Shahbáz first took Fort Daigúr (?)[1], where a large number of Ráthor rebels were killed; after this he took Dúnárah, from where he passed on to Siwánah, which on his arrival capitulated (984).

In the same year, Shahbáz was sent against Rájah Gajpatí.[2] This Rájah was the greatest Zamíndár in Bihár, and had rendered good services during Mun'im's expedition to Bengal. But when Dáúd, king of Oŕisá, invaded Bengal after Mun'im's death at Gaur in 983, Gajpatí rebelled and plundered several towns in Bihár. Farhat Khán (No. 145) tuyúldár of Árah, his son Farhang Khán, and Qarátáq Khán, opposed the Rájah, but perished in the fight. When Shahbáz approached, Gajpatí fled; but Sh. followed him up, and gave him no rest, and conquered at last Jagdespúr, where the whole family of the Rájah was captured. Sh. then conquered Shergadh, which was held by Srí Rám, Gajpatí's son. About the same time, Sh. took possession of Rahtás. Its Afghán commander, Sayyid Muhammad, who commanded the Fort on the part of Junaid i Kararání, had been hard pressed by Muzaffar (No. 37); he therefore fled to Shahbáz, asked for protection, and handed over the Fort. Sh. then repaired to court, where he received every distinction due to his eminent services.

---

[1] The MSS. have دیگور, which I cannot find on the maps. There are many places of a similar name, S. W. of Jodhpúr, near which it must lie. Dúnárah (most MSS. have دونارة) lies on the right bank of the Lúní, S. W. of Jodhpúr. Here Shahbáz crossed ('ubúr) and went to Siwánah, which lies N. W. S. of Dúnárah, about 10 miles from the left bank of the Lúní.

[2] So according to the best MSS. Stewart calls him Gujety, the Lak'hnau Akbarnámah (III., 140) Kají, and the Edit. Bibl. Indica of Badáoní, Kachíti, (p. 179, 284, 285,) and Kajíti (p. 237), which forms are also found in the Lak'hnau edition of the Akbarnámah.

In the 23rd year (986), Sh. marched against the proud Ráná Partáb, and besieged the renowned Fort of Kopbhalmír (called on our maps Komalnair, on the frontier between Udaipúr and Jodhpúr, Lat. 25° 10'). The Ráná, unable to defend it, escaped in the disguise of a Sannásí, when the Fort was taken. Gogandah and Udaipúr submitted likewise. Sh. erected no less than 50 t'hánahs in the hills and 35 in the plains, from Udaipúr to Púr Mandal. He also prevailed upon the rebellious Daudá, son of Rái Surjan Háḍá (No. 96), to submit, and took him to Court. After this, Sh. was sent to Ajmír, where disturbances frequently occurred.

When the military revolt of Bengal broke out, Sh. was ordered to go to Bihár; but he did not agree with M. 'Azíz Kokah—for Sh. could not bear to be second or third—and carried on the war independently of him, defeated 'Arab Bahádur, and marched to Jagdespúr. At that time the report reached him that Ma'çúm Khán Farankhúdí (No. 157) had rebelled, and 'Arab Bahádur and Niyábat Khán had joined him. Sh. therefore marched to Audh, and met the enemies near Sultánpúr Bilkarí, 25 kos from Awadh (Faizábád). Ma'çúm, by a timely centre-attack, put Sh. to flight, and followed him up, Sh. fighting all the way to Jaunpúr, a distance of 30 kos. Accidentally a rumour spread in the army of the enemies, that Ma'çúm had been killed, which caused some disorder. At this moment, Sh.'s right wing attacked the enemies, Ma'çúm got wounded, and withdrew to Awadh (Faizábád). Sh. now pursued him, and seven miles from that town, after a hard fight, totally routed him. Ma'çúm could not hold himself in Awadh, and his army dispersed.

After this, Sh. went again to Court, where he was received by the emperor on his return from Kábul. At court, Sh. generally gave offence by his pride; and when once, at a parade, the Bakhshís had placed the young Mírzá Khán (No. 29) above him, he gave openly vent to his anger, was arrested, and put under the charge of Rái Sál Darbárí (No. 106).

But an officer of Sh.'s usefulness could ill be spared, and when M. 'Azíz in the 28th year applied for transfer from Bihár, Sh. with other Amírs was sent there. He followed up Ma'çúm Khán Kábulí to G'horág'hát, and defeated him. He then followed him to Bháṭí (p. 342), plundered Baktarápúr, the residence of 'Isá, took Sunnárgánw, and encamped on the Brahmaputra. 'Isá afforded Ma'çúm means and shelter; but being hard pressed by the imperialists, he made proposals of peace: an Imperial officer was to reside as Sunnárgánw; Ma'çúm was to go to Makkah; and

Sh. was to withdraw. This was accepted, and Sh. crossed the river expecting the terms would be carried out. But the enemies did nothing; and when Sh. prepared to return, his officers shewed the greatest insubordination, so that he had to retreat to Ṭándah, all advantages being thus lost. He reported matters to Court, and the tuyúldárs of Bihár were ordered to join him. Sh. then took the field and followed up Ma'çúm. In the 30th year, he and Çádiq Khán (vide No. 43) quarrelled. Subsequently, Sh. marched again to Bháṭí, and even sent a detachment 'to Kokrah (کوکره), which lies between Oŕísá and the Dak'hin.' Modhú Singh, the Zamíndár of the district, was plundered, and had to pay tribute. In the 32nd year, when Sa'íd (No. 25) was made Governor of Bengal, and the disturbances had mostly been suppressed, Sh. returned to Court. In the 34th year, he was made Kotwál of the army. He was then sent against the Afgháns of Sawád; but he left his duties without order, and was again imprisoned.

After two years he was released, was made atálíq to M. Sháhrukh, who had been appointed to Málwah and was on his way to Prince Murád in the Dak'hin. During the siege of Ahmadnagar, the inhabitants of Shahr i Nau, 'which is called Burhánábád,' asked the Imperialists for protection; but as they were mostly Shí'ahs, Sh., in his bigotry, fell upon them, plundered their houses, especially the quarter called Langar i Duwázdah Imám, the very name of which must have stunk in Sh.'s nostrils. The inhabitants 'seeing that they could not rely on the word of the Mughuls,' emigrated. The Prince was irritated; and when Çádiq Khán (No. 43) was appointed his atálíq, Sh. left without permission for Málwah. Akbar gave his jágír to Sháhrukh, and transferred Shahbáz.

In the 43rd year, Sh. was sent to Ajmír as Commander of the manqalá of Prince Salím (Jahángír), whom Akbar has asked to go from Iláhábád against the Ráná. But Sh. was now above seventy years old, and as he had been in the habit of eating quicksilver, he commenced to suffer from pain in his hands and wrists. He got well again, but had in Ajmír another attack; he rallied again, but died suddenly in the 44th year (1008). Salím took quickly possession of Sh.'s treasures, went back to Iláhábád without having done anything, and continued in his rebellious attitude towards his father.

Shahbáz had expressed a dying wish to be buried in Ajmír within the hallowed enclosure of Mu'ín i Chishtí. But the custodians of the sacred shrine refused to comply, and Sh. was buried outside. At night, however, the saint appeared in the dreams of the custodians, and told them that Shahbáz was his favourite, whereupon the hero was buried inside, north of the dome.

Shahbáz was proverbial for his rigid piety and his enormous wealth. His opposition to Akbar's 'Divine Faith' has been mentioned above (p. 188). He would neither remove his beard to please the emperor, nor put the word murád (disciple) on his signet. His Sunní zeal, no doubt, retarded his promotion as much as his arrogance; for other less deserving officers held higher commands. He observed with great strictness the five daily prayers, and was never seen without the rosary in his hand. One day the emperor took a walk along the tank at Fathpúr and seized Shahbáz's hand to accompany him. It was near the time of the 'açr, or afternoon prayer, and Sh. was restless and often looked up to the sun, not to miss the proper time. Hakím Abul Fath (No. 112) saw it from a distance, and said to Hakím 'Alí who stood near him, "I shall indeed call Shahbáz a pious man, if he insists on saying the prayer, alone as he is with the emperor;" (for the prayer had been abolished by Akbar at Court). When the time of prayer had come, Sh. mentioned it to the emperor. "Oh," replied Akbar, "you can pray another time, and make amends for this omission." But Sh. drew away his hand from the grasp of the emperor, spread his dupaṭṭah shawl on the ground, and said not only his prayer, but also his vird (voluntary daily religious exercise), Akbar slapping all the while his head, saying, 'Get up!' Abul Fath stepped up, and interceded for Shahbáz, whose persistency he admired.

Abulfazl says that Shahbáz was an excellent and faithful servant; but he blames him for his bigotry. In liberality, he says, he had no equal, and people whispered that he found the Páras stone (vide Book III, Çúbah of Málwah). His military contingent was always complete and in good order; during his fights near the Brahmaputr he had 9000 horse. Every Thursday evening, he distributed 100 Ashrafís to the memory of the renowned Ghaussiqlain ('Abdul Qádir i Jílání). To Kambús he gave so much, that no Kambú in India was in bad circumstances.

During the time he was Mír Bakhshí, he introduced the Dágh law, the most important military reform of Akbar's reign (vide pp. 242, 255, 256).

Shahbáz's brother, Karamullah, was likewise pious. He died in 1002 at Saronj (Maásir). The Maásir mentions a son of Shahbáz, Ilhámullah. He was Wáqi'ahnawís (p. 258) of the Sirkár of Baglánah, where he died.

The Tuzuk (p. 248) mentions another son of his, Ranbáz Khán, who during the reign of Sháhjahán was a Commander of Eight Hundred, 400 horse. He was, in the 13th year, Bakhshí and Wáqi'ahnawís of the corps which was sent to Bangash. He held the same rank in the 20th year of Sháhjahán's reign.[1]

81. Darwí'sh Muhammad Uzbak.

The Maásir says nothing about this grandee; the MSS. of the Ṭabaqát merely say that he was dead in 1001.

From the Akbarnámah (Lucknow Edition, II, p. 137) we see that he was a friend of Bairám. He was sent by Bairám together with Muzaffar 'Alí (No. 37, and p. 317, l. 3) to Sher Muhammad Díwánah, who despatched both fettered to Court.

His name occurs again in the Akbarnámah (Lucknow Edition, II, p. 250,—where for Darwísh Uzbak Khwájah, read Darwísh Uzbak o Muzaffar Khwájah). From the fact that Abulfazl has given his name in this list, it is evident that Akbar pardoned him on Bairám's submission.

82. Shaikh Ibra'hi'm, son of Shaikh Músá, elder brother of Shaikh Salím of Fathpúr Síkrí.

---

[1] Ranbáz Khán is wrongly called Niáz Khán in the Ed. Bibl. Indica of the Pádisháhn. I, b., p. 314; but in II, p. 740, of the same work, Ranbáz Khán, as in the Tuzuk.

Sayyid Ahmad's edition of the Tuzuk, p. 159, says that Ranbáz's name was Khúbullah; but this is a most extraordinary name, and therefore likely to be wrong. It should perhaps be Habíbullah.

In the list of Akbar's grandees in the Ṭabaqát, Nizám says, 'At present (in 1001) Shahbáz is Mír Bakhshí of Málwah.'

His father, Shaikh Músá, lived a retired life in Síkrí. As Akbar had at first no children, he asked the Síkrí Shaikhs to pray for him, which they did; and as at that time one of Akbar's wives became pregnant (with Salím), Akbar looked upon the Shaikhs with particular favor. To this lucky circumstance, the Síkrí family owes its elevation.

Shaikh Ibráhím lived at first at Court, chiefly in the service of the princes. In the 22nd year, he was made T'hánahdár of Ládlái, and suppressed the disturbances. In the 23rd year, he was made Governor of Fathpúr Síkrí. In the 28th year, he served with distinction under M. 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21) in Bihár and Bengal, and was with Vazír Khán (No. 41) in his expedition against Qutlú of Oṛísá. When Akbar, in the 30th year went to Kábul, he was made Governor of Ágrah, which post he seems to have held till his death in 999 (36th year).

According to the Ṭabaqát, he was not only the brother, but also the son-in-law of Shaikh Salím i Síkríwál.

83. 'Abdul Matlab Kha'n, son of Sháh Budágh Khán (No. 52).

The Maásir makes him a Commander of Two Thousand Five Hundred.

'Abdul Maṭlab accompanied Sharafuddín Husain (No. 17) on his expedition to Mírt'ha. In the 10th year, he served together with his father under Mu'izzulmulk (No. 61) against Iskandar and Bahádur Khán, and fled from the battle-field of Khairábád (pp. 372, 382). In the 12th year, he served under Muhammad Qulí Khán Barlás (No. 31) against Iskandar Khán in Audh. He then retired to his tuyúl in Málwah.

In the 17th year, he belonged to the auxiliaries of M. 'Azíz Kokah and was present in the battle of Patan (p. 396). In the 23rd year, when Quṭbuddín's men (No. 28) brought Muzaffar Husain Mírzá from the Dak'hin to Court, 'Abdul Maṭlab attached himself as convoy, and saw the Mírzá safely to Court. In the 25th year, he accompanied Ismá'íl Qulí Khán (No. 46) on his expedition against Niyábat Khán 'Arab. In the following year, he received a reprimand for having murdered Fath Daulat, son of 'Alí Dost. He was, however, subsequently pardoned, and was put in command of the left wing of the army which was sent to Kábul. In the 27th year, Akbar honored him by being his guest in Kálpí, his jágír.

In the 30th year, he accompanied M. 'Azíz Kokah to the Dak'hin, and was sent, two years later, against Jalálah Táríkí, the Afghán rebel. One day, Jalálah fell upon the van of the Imperialists, which was commanded by Beg Núrín Khán (No. 212), Salím Khán (No. 132), and Sheroyah Khán (No. 168). They were in time assisted by Muhammad Qulí Beg, and routed Jalálah, who escaped to the mountains. 'Abdulmaṭlab "had not the good fortune of even mounting his horse to take part in the fight." He seems to have taken this to heart; for when the victorious army returned to Bangash, he had an attack of madness and was sent to Court. He died soon after.

His son, Sherzád, was under Jahángír, a Commander of Three Hundred, 200 horse.

84. I'tiba'r Kha'n, the Eunuch.

His name, like that of many other Eunuchs, was 'Ambar. He was one of Bábar's Eunuchs. When Humáyún left Qandahár for 'Iráq, he despatched I'tibár and others to conduct Maryam Makání (Akbar's mother) to his camp. In 952, he left Kábul and joined the emperor, who attached him to Prince Akbar's suite.

In the 2nd year of Akbar's reign, he accompanied Akbar's mother and the other Begums from Kábul to India. Akbar appointed him Governor of Dihlí, where he died.

He must not be confounded with No. 86.

85. Ra'jah Bi'r Bal [Bír Baṛ], the Brahman.

He was a Brahman of the name of Mahesh Dás (Maásir; the Ed. Bibl. Indica of Badáoní, II. p. 161, calls him Brahman Dás), and was a Bhát, or minstrel, a class of men whom the Persians call bádfarosh, 'dealers in encomiums.' He was very poor, but clear-headed, and remarkable for his power of apprehension. According to Badáoní, he came soon after Akbar's accession from Kálpí to Court, where his bonmots in a short time made him a general favourite. His Hindí verses also were much liked, and Akbar conferred on him the title of Kab Rái, or (Hindu) Poet Laureate,[1] and had him constantly near himself.

In the 18th year, Rájah Jai Chand of Nagarkoṭ, who was at Court, happened to displease the emperor, and was imprisoned. Nagarkoṭ was given to Kab Rái as jágír. He also received the title of Rájah Bír Baṛ. But Jai Chand's son, Budh Chand (or Budhí Ch., or Badí Ch.,—the MSS. differ) shut himself up in Nagarkoṭ, and Husain Qulí Khán (No. 24) was ordered to conquer it. The invasion of Ibráhím Husain Mírzá, as related above, forced Husain Qulí to raise the siege, and Bír Baṛ, in all probability, did not get his jágír. He accompanied Akbar on his forced march to Patan and Ahmadábád, 24th Rabí' II, 981. (Vide note to No. 101.)

He was often employed in missions. Thus in the 21st year, he was sent with Rái Lon Karan to Dúngarpúr, the Rái of which town was anxious to send his daughter to Akbar's Harem. In the 28th year, again, B. B. and Zain Kokah (No. 34) conducted Rájah Rám Chand (No. 89) to Court.

Bír Baṛ spent his time chiefly at Court. In the 34th year, Zain Khán Kokah marched against the Yúsufzaís in Bijor[2] and Sawád; and as he had to ask for reinforcements, Bír Baṛ was sent there together with Hakím Abul Fath (No. 112). It is said that Akbar determined by lot whether Abulfazl or Bír Baṛ should go, and the lot fell on the latter, much against Akbar's wish.

The result of this campaign has been related above (pp. 204, 344). Bír Baṛ and nearly 8000 Imperialists were killed during the retreat—the severest defeat which Akbar's army ever suffered.[3]

How Akbar felt Bír Baṛ's loss, has been mentioned on p. 205. There is also a letter on this subject in Abulfazl's Maktúbát.

The following passages from Badáoní (Ed. Bibl. Ind., pp. 357, 358) are of interest—

"Among the silly lies—they border on absurdities—which during this year

---

[1] Just as Jotik Rái, the (Hindú) Court Astrologer. The (Persian) Poet Laureate [Faizí] had the title of Malik-ushshu'ará, or 'King of Poets.'

[2] On p. 344, read Bijor for Waijúr.

[3] A similar catastrophe befell Aurangzíb, when several thousand soldiers of the army commanded by Amín Khán were killed, in the Khaibar Pass, on the 3rd Muharram, 1083, or 21st April, 1672. Maásir i 'Alamgírí, p. 117. Vide Journal A. S. Bengal, for 1862, p. 261.

(995) were spread over the country, was the rumour that Bír Baṛ, the accursed, was still alive, though in reality he had then for some time been burning in the seventh hell. The Hindús by whom His Majesty is surrounded, saw how sad and sorry he was for Bír Baṛ's loss, and invented the story that Bír Baṛ had been seen in the hills of Nagarkoṭ, walking about with Jogís and Sannásís. His Majesty believed the rumour, thinking that Bír Baṛ was ashamed to come to Court on account of the defeat which he had suffered at the hands of the Yúsufzaís; and it was, besides, quite probable that he should have been seen with Jogís, inasmuch as he had never cared for the world. An Ahadí was therefore sent to Nagarkoṭ, to enquire into the truth of the rumour, when it was proved that the whole story was an absurdity."

"Soon after, His Majesty received a report that Bír Baṛ had been seen at Kálinjar (which was the jágír of this dog), and the collector of the district stated that a barber had recognized him by certain marks on his body, which the man had distinctly seen, when one day Bír Baṛ had engaged him to rub his body with oil; from that time, however, Bír Baṛ had concealed himself. His Majesty then ordered the barber to come to court; and the Hindú Krorí (collector) got hold of some poor innocent traveller, charged him with murder, and kept him in concealment, giving out that he was Bír Baṛ. The Krorí could, of course, send no barber to Court; he therefore killed the poor traveller, to avoid detection, and reported that it was Bír Baṛ in reality, but he had since died. His Majesty went actually through a second mourning; but he ordered the Krorí and several others to come to Court. They were for some time tortured as a punishment for not having informed His Majesty before, and the Krorí had, moreover, to pay a heavy fine."

Bír Baṛ was as much renowned for his liberality, as for his musical skill and poetical talent. His short verses, bon-mots, and jokes, are still in the mouths of the people of Hindústán.

The hatred which Badáoní, Shahbáz Khán (No. 80), and other pious Muslims shewed towards Bír Baṛ (vide pp. 183, 188, 192, 199, 204) arose from the belief that Bír Baṛ had influenced Akbar to abjure Islám.

Bír Baṛ's eldest son, Lálah, is mentioned below among the commanders of Two Hundred (No. 387). He was a spendthrift; and as he got no promotion, and his property was squandered away, he resigned court life, and turned faqír, in order to live free and independent (end of 46th year).

86. Ikhla's Kha'n I'tibár, the Eunuch.

The Maásir does not give his name. The list of Akbar's grandees in the Ṭabaqát has the short remark that Ikhláç Khán was a Eunuch, and held the rank of a Commander of One Thousand.

87. Baha'r Kha'n, (Muhammad) Açghar, a servant of Humáyún.

The name of this grandee is somewhat doubtful, as some MSS. read Bahádur Khán. The Maásir does not give his name. The list of the Ṭabaqát mentions a 'Bahár Khán, a Kháçah Khail Afghán, who held a command of Two Thousand.' Bahár Khán Kháçah Khail is also mentioned in several places in the Akbarnámah. He is therefore most probably the same as given by Abulfazl in this list. Perhaps we have to read Paháṛ Khán, instead of Bahár Khán; vide No. 407. The notice in the Ṭabaqát implies that he was dead in 1001.

88. Sha'h Fakhruddi'n, son of Mír Qásim, a Músawí Sayyid of Mashhad.

Sháh Fakhruddín came, in 961, with Humáyún to India. In the 9th year of Akbar's reign, he served in the army which was sent against 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak (No. 14). In the 16th year, he was in the manqalá, or advance corps, commanded by Khán i Kalán (No. 16). When Akbar arrived at Patan, he sent Sh. F. and Hakím 'Ainulmulk to Mír Abú Turáb and I'timád Khán (No. 67). On the road he fell in with the former, and went to I'timád whom he likewise induced to pay his respects to Akbar. He was among the auxiliaries of M. 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21) and was present in the battle of Patan (p. 396). He was also among the grandees who accompanied Akbar on his forced march to Gujrát (p. 325, note, where according to the Akbarnámah we have to read 24th Rabí' II., for 4th Rabí' I). After this, he was made Governor of Ujjain, and received the title of Naqábat Khán.[1] In the end of the 24th year, he was made Governor of Patan (Gujrát), vice Tarson Muhammad Khán (No. 32), where he soon after, probably in the beginning of 987, died (986, Ṭabaqát).

89. Ra'jah Ra'm Chand Baghelah.

A few MSS. read Bhagelah, which form Tod says is the correct one. Baghelah, however, is the usual spelling.

Rám Chand was Rájah of Bhat'h (or Bhattah, as the Maásir spells it). Among the three great Rájahs of Hindústán, whom Bábar mentions in his Memoirs, the Rájahs of Bhat'h are the third.

Rám Chand was the patron of the renowned musician and singer Tánsín, regarding whom vide the List of Musicians at the end of this book. His fame had reached Akbar; and in the 7th year, the emperor sent Jaláluddín Qúrchí (No. 213) to Bhat'h, to induce Tánsín to come to Ágrah. Rám Chand feeling himself powerless to refuse Akbar's request, sent his favorite with his musical instruments and many presents to Ágrah, and the first time that Tánsín performed at court, the Emperor made him a present of two lak'hs of Rupees. Tánsín remained with Akbar. Most of his compositions are written in Akbar's name, and his melodies are even now-a-days everywhere repeated by the people of Hindústán.

When Áçaf Khán (T.) led his expedition to Gaḍha (p. 367),[2] he came in contact with Rám Chand; but by timely submission the Rájah became 'a servant' of Akbar. In the 14th year, Rám Chand lost Fort Kálinjar, as related on p. 369. He sent his son, Bír Bhadr, to Court, but from distrust would not pay his respects personally. In the 28th year, therefore, when Akbar was at Sháhábád, he ordered a corps to march to Bhat'h; but Bír Bhadr, through the influence of several courtiers, prevailed upon the Emperor to send a grandee to his father and convey him to court. Rájah Bír Bar and Zain Kokah were selected for this office, and Rám Chand came at last to court, where he was well received.

R. Ch. died in the 37th year, and Bír Bhadr succeeded to the title of Rájah. But on his way from court to Bhat'h, he fell from his palanquin, and died soon after, in the

[1] The Lucknow Edition of the Akbarnámah (III., p. 222) calls him Naqíb-Khán (P).

[2] On p. 367, Rám Chand is by mistake called Rám Chandr.

38th year (1001; vide p. 358). His sudden death led to disturbances in Bándhú of which Bikramájít, a young relation of Rám Chand, had taken possession. Akbar therefore sent Rájah Patrdás (No. 196) with troops to Bándhú, and the Mughuls, according to custom, erected throughout the district military stations (t'hánahs). At the request of the inhabitants, Akbar sent Ismá'íl Qulí Khán (No. 46) to Bándhú, to convey Bikramájít to court (41st year), their intention being to prevent Bándhú from being conquered. But Akbar would not yield; he dismissed Bikramájít, and after a siege of eight months and several days, Bándhú was conquered (42nd year).

In the 47th year, Durjodhan, a grandson of Rám Chand, was made Rájah of Bándhú. In the 21st year of Jahángír's reign Amr Singh, another grandson of Rám Chand, acknowledged himself a vassal of Dihlí. In the 8th year of Sháhjahán, when 'Abdullah Khán Bahádur marched against the refractory zamíndár of Ratanpúr, Amr Singh brought about a peaceful submission. Amr Singh was succeeded by his son Anúp Singh. In the 24th year, when Rájah Pahár Singh Bandelah, Jágírdár of Chaurágaḍh, attacked Anúp, because he had afforded shelter to Dairám, a zamindár of Chaurágaḍh, Anúp Singh, with his whole family, withdrew from Rewá (which after the destruction of Bándhú had been the family seat) to the hills. In the 30th year, however, Sayyid Çalábat Khán, Governor of Iláhábád (vide p. 392) conducted him to Court, where Anúp turned Muhammadan. He was made a Commander of Three Thousand, 2,000 horse, and was appointed to Bándhú and the surrounding districts.

90. Lashkar Kha'n, Muhammad Husain of Khurásán.

He was Mír Bakshí and Mír 'Arz. In the 11th year, Muzaffar Khán (No. 37) had him deposed. In the 16th year, he came one day drunk to the Darbár, and challenged the courtiers to fight him. Akbar punished him by tying him to the tail of a horse, and then put him into prison.

He was subsequently released, and attached to Mun'im's Bengal corps. In the battle of Takaroí (p. 375), he was severely wounded. Though his wounds commenced to heal, he did not take sufficient care of his health, and died, a few days after the battle, in Oṛisá.

He is mentioned as having had a contingent of 2,000 troopers (Maásir, 1,000).

The Maásir has a long note in justification of the extraordinary punishment, which Akbar inflicted on him.

The title of Lashkar Khán was conferred by Jahángír on Abul Hasan Mashhadí, and by Sháhjahán on Ján Nisár Khán Yádgár Beg.

91. Sayyid Ahmad of Bárha.

He is the younger brother of Sayyid Mahmúd (p. 392). In the 17th year, he served in the manqalá, which, under the command of Khán i Kalán (No. 16) was sent to Gujrát. After the conquest of Ahmadábád, he was ordered with other Amírs to pursue the sons of Sher Khán Fúládí (p. 396), who had removed their families and property from Patan to Idar. A portion of their property fell into the hands of the Imperialists. When Akbar afterwards encamped at Patan, he gave the town to Mírzá 'Abdurrahím (No. 29), but appointed S. A. as Governor. In the same year, Muhammad Husain Mírzá, Sháh Mírzá, and Sher Khán Fúládí, besieged Patan; but they dispersed on the approach of M. 'Azíz.

In the 20th year, S. A. and his nephews S. Qásim and S. Háshim quelled the disturbances in which Jaláluddín Qúrchí (No. 213) had lost his life. In 984, he served under Shahbáz Khán (No. 80) in the expedition to Siwánah. According to the Ṭabaqát, which calls him a Commander of Three Thousand, he died in 985.

Abulfazl mentioned Sayyid Ahmad above on p. 289, l. 4 from below.

Sayyid Ahmad's son, S. Jamáluddín, was killed by the untimely explosion of a mine during the siege of Chítor (p. 368).

This S. Jamáluddín must not be confounded with the notorious S. Jamáluddín who was executed in 993 (Badáoní II, 345). He was a grandson of S. Mahmúd (No. 75), S. Qásim being called his uncle.

92. Ka'kar 'Alí' Kha'n i Chishtí.

He came with Humáyún to Hindústán. In the 11th year (973), he was sent together with Sháh Qulí Náranjí (No. 231) to Gadha-Katangah, because Mahdí Qásim Khán (No. 36) had gone without leave to Makkah. Kákar served also under Mu'izzul-Mulk (No. 61), and was present in the battle of Khairábád. He took part in the bloody fight at Sarnál (middle of Sha'bán, 980; vide p. 333). He was then attached to Mun'im's corps, and served in the siege of Patna, during which he and his son were killed (end of 981; Maásir, 980).

93. Ra'i Kalya'n Mall, Zamíndár of Bíkánír.

He is the father of Rái Singh (No. 44), and has been mentioned above, p. 357.

94. Ta'hir Kha'n, Mír Farághat, son of Mír Khurd, who was atálíq to Prince Hindál.

His name is not given in the Maásir. Tha Ṭabaqát merely says that he was a grandee of Humáyún, and reached, during the reign of Akbar, the rank of a Commander of Two Thousand. According to the same work, he had a son Báqí Khán, who likewise served under Akbar.

From the Akbarnámah (Lucknow Edition, II, p. 274) we see that he was one of Akbar's companions. Together with Dastam Khán (No. 79), Qutluq Qadam Khán (No. 123), Peshrau Khán (No. 280), Hakím ul Mulk, Muqbil Khán, Shimál Khán (No. 154), he assisted in the capture of the wild and mad Khwájah Mu'azzam, brother of Akbar's mother.

95. Sha'h Muhammad Kha'n of Qalát.

As Qalát belongs to Qandahár, he is often called Sháh Muhammad Khán i Qandahárí. The Maásir says, that the name of the town of Qalát is generally spelt with a ق, Q; but that the Hazárahs pronounce Kalát, with a K.

Sháh Muhammad Khán was a friend of Bairám, and was with him in Qandahár, which Humáyún had given Bairám as jágír. Bairám, however, left it entirely in S. M.'s hands. Bahádur Khán (No. 22) was then Governor of Dáwar, and had bribed several grandees to hand over Qandahár to him; but S. M. discovered the plot and killed the conspirators. Bahádur then marched against Qandahár. S. M. knew that he could expect no assistance from Humáyún, and wrote to Sháh Ṭahmásp of Persia that it was Humáyún's intention to cede Qandahár; he should therefore send troops, defeat Bahádur, and take possession of the town. Ṭahmásp sent 3000 Turkmán troopers furnished by the jágírdárs of Sístán, Faráh, and Garmsír. Their leader, 'Alí Yár, surprised Bahádur and defeated him so completely, that Bahádur could not even keep Dáwar. He therefore fled to India. S. M. had thus got rid of one danger; he treated the Persian Commander with all submissiveness, but would not hand over the town. Sháh Ṭahmásp then ordered his nephew, Sulṭán Husain Mírzá, son of Bahrám Mírzá (vide No. 8, p. 313), Walí Khalífah Shámlú, and others, to besiege Qandahár. The siege had lasted for some time, when Sulṭán Husain Mírzá felt disgusted and withdrew. Ṭahmásp felt annoyed, and sent again Sulṭán Husain Mírzá with 'Alí Sulṭán, Governor of Shíráz, to Qandahár with positive orders to take the town. 'Alí Sulṭán was shot during the siege, and Sulṭán Husain Mírzá remained encamped before the town without doing anything. At this juncture, Akbar, who in the meantime had succeeded to the throne, ordered S. M. to hand over Qandahár to the Persians, according to Humáyún's promise, and come to India.

This account of the cession of Qandahár, observes the author of the Maásir, differs from Munshí Sikandar's version in his great work entitled 'Alamáráí Sikandarí. According to that history, Ṭahmásp, at the very first request of Sháh Muhammad, sent Sulṭán Husain Mírzá with Walí Khalífah and other nobles to Qandahár. They defeated Bahádur; but as S. M. would not hand over Qandahár, Ṭahmásp sent 'Alí Sulṭán with a stronger army, and appointed Sulṭán Husain Mírzá governor of Dáwar and Qandahár. Sháh Muhammad held out for six months; but as he got no assistance from India, he capitulated, and withdrew to Hindústán.

Be this as it may, S. M. arrived in the end of the third year of Akbar's reign in India, was made a Khán, and gradually rose to the rank of a Commander of Two Thousand. In the beginning of the 6th year (968), he led the van in the battle near Sárangpúr, in which Báz Bahádur lost Málwah, and served, in the 9th year, in the war against 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak (No. 14). In the 12th year, he was made governor of Kot'ha. In the 17th year, he was among the auxiliaries of Mírzá 'Azíz Kokah, and was wounded in the battle of Patan (p. 396).

Regarding 'Ádil Khán, S. M.'s son, vide below, No. 125.

96. Ra'i Surjan Háḍá.

He is often merely called Rái Háḍá. The Háḍás are a branch of the Chauháns. The Sirkár of Rantanbhúr is called after them Háḍautí.

Rái Surjan was at first in the service of the Ráná, and defied the Mughuls, because he thought himself safe in Rantanbhúr. Akbar, after the conquest of Chítor (p. 368), besieged in the end of the 13th year, Rantanbhúr, and R. S., despairing of holding out longer—the siege having lasted about a month—sent his sons Daudá and Bhoj (No. 175) to Akbar's camp to sue for peace. The Emperor received them well, and gave each a dress of honor. When they were taken behind the tent enclosure to put on the garments, one of their men, suspecting foul play, rushed sword in hand towards the audience tent, and killed several people, among them Shaikh Baháuddín Majzúb of Badáon, but was cut down by one of Muzaffar Khán's men. As R. S.'s sons were entirely innocent, the accident did not change Akbar's goodwill towards them; and he sent them back to their father. At R. S.'s request, Husain Qulí Khán (No. 24) was then sent to the Fort and escorted R. S. to the Emperor. Rantanbhúr was annexed (Shawwál, 976, or beginning of the 14th year).

R. S. was made Governor of Gaḍha-Katangah from where, in the 20th year, he was transferred to Fort Chanáḍh (Chunár).

Soon after, Daudá fled and created disturbances in Búndí. Zain Khán Kokah (No. 34), R. S. and his second son Bhoj were therefore sent to Búndí, which was conquered in the beginning of 985. After the conquest, R. S. was made a commander of Two Thousand. Daudá who had escaped, submitted, in the 23rd year, to Shahbáz Khán (p. 400). Not long after, Daudá fled again. He died in the 30th year.

R. S. served in the 25th year, after Muzaffar's (No. 37) death, in Bihár. The Maásir does not mention the year of his death. From the Ṭabaqát, it is clear, that he had been dead for some time in 1001.

For R. S.'s son, Rái Bhoj, vide below, No. 175.

97. Sha'ham Kha'n Jaláir.

Jaláir is the name of a Chaghtái tribe.

Sháham's father was Bábá Beg, who had been under Humáyún governor of Jaunpúr. Bábá Beg took also part in the battle of Chausá, in which Humáyún was defeated by Sher Sháh. The Emperor fled to Agrah, and ordered Bábá Beg and other grandees to bring up the camp and the Begums. In attempting to rescue the ladies of the Harem, Bábá Beg was killed by an Afghán near the imperial tent.

Sháham Khán was made an Amír by Akbar.

In the beginning of the 4th year (966), he served together with the two Jaláirs mentioned below, Hájí Muhammad Khán i Sístání (No. 55), Chalmah Beg (58), Kamál Khán Ghakkar, and Qiyá Khán Gung (No. 33), under Khan Zamán (No. 13) in the Jaunpúr District against the Afgháns. The war continued till the sixth year, in which Sher Sháh, son of 'Adlí, Mubáriz Khán, after Bairám's death, made a final attempt to overthrow the Mughuls. In the 10th year, Sh. Kh. served against Khán Zamán.

In the 19th year, he served under Mun'im in the Bengal and Oṛísá wars, was present in the battle of Takaroí and pursued with Todar Mall the Afgháns to Bhadrak (p. 375). After Mun'im's death at Gaur (p. 376), the grandees put Sh. Kh. in command of the army till the Emperor should send a new commander. In the 21st year, he took part in the battle near Ag Mahall (p. 331). In the 24th year, he was jágírdár of Hájípúr (opposite Patna). After Muzaffar's death (No. 37) in 988, before Todar Mall had arrived, he defeated and killed Sa'íd i Badakhshí, one of the Bengal rebels. Subsequently, he pursued 'Arab Bahádúr, whom Shahbáz Khán (p. 400) had defeated. In the 26th year, Sh. Kh. was stationed at Narhan. In this year, Ma'çúm Khán i Farankhúdí (No. 157) had been driven by the imperialists from Bahráich over Kalyánpúr to Muhammadábád, which he plundered, and prepared to attack Jaunpúr. Sh. Kh. from Narhan, Pahár Khán (No. 407) from Gházípúr, and Qásim from Jaldpúr, united their contingents, and pursued Ma'çúm so effectually, that he applied to M. 'Azíz Kokah, to intercede for him with the Emperor. In the 32nd year, he was made Governor of Gaḍha, and soon after, of Dihlí. In the end of the same year, he accompanied Sulṭán Murád, who conducted M. Sulaimán (No. 5) to court. In the beginning of the 33rd year, he assisted Çádiq Khán (No. 43) in his expedition against Jalálah Táríkí in Teráh.

In the 43rd year, after a stay of fourteen years in the Panjáb, Akbar made Dihlí his residence. It was proved that Sh. had been oppressive, and he was therefore reprimanded. Two years later, he served in the Asír war, and died during the siege of that fort, Zí Hajjah, 1009.

The Ṭabaqát says that Sháham Khán was in 1001, a Commander of Two Thousand.

The Akbarnámah mentions two other Jaláir Grandees—

1. Sulṭán Husain Khán Jaláir. He was mentioned above, p. 384, l. 2.

2. Muhammad Khán Jaláir. The Ṭabáqat says of him, 'he is an old Amír, and is at present (1001) mad.' He served under Khán Zamán in the war with Hemú. In the beginning of the 4th year, all three Jaláirs served under Khán Zamán against the Afgháns in the Jaunpúr District.

98. A'saf Kha'n (III.), [Mírzá Qiwámuddín] Ja'far Beg, son of Badí'uzzamán of Qazwín.

His father Mírzá Badí'uzzamán was the son of Aghá Mullá Dawátdár of Qazwín (vide p. 369). M. Badí', during the reign of Sháh Ṭahmásp, had been vazír of Káshán, and Ja'far had also been introduced at the Persian Court.

In the 22nd year of Akbar's reign (985), Ja'far Beg came to India, and was presented to Akbar by his uncle M. Ghiásuddín 'Alí Açaf Khán II. (No. 126), on his return from the Idar expedition. The new Dágh law having then been introduced (vide p. 242), Akbar made Ja'far a Commander of Twenty (Bísti) and attached him to the Dákhilís (p. 232) of his uncle. According to Badáoní (III., 216) people attributed this minimum of royal favour to the malice of Ja'far's uncle. The post was so low, that Ja'far threw it up in disgust, and went to Bengal, to which province Muzaffar Khán (No. 37) had just been appointed governor. He was with him, when the Bengal military revolt broke out, and fell together with Shamsuddín i Khálí (No. 159) into the hands of the rebels. Ja'far and Shams found means to escape, the former chiefly through his winning manners. On arriving at Fathpúr, Ja'far met with a better reception than before, was in a short time made a Commander of Two Thousand, and got the title of Açaf Khán. He was also appointed Mír Bakhshí, vice Qází 'Alí. In his first expedition, against the Ráná of Udaipúr, Açaf was successful.

In the 32nd year, he was appointed T'hánahdár of Sawád (Swat), vice Ismá'íl Qulí Khán, who had been reprimanded (p. 361, where for Waijúr read Bijor). In the 37th year, Jalálah Raushání fled to 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak, king of Túrán; but finding no support, he returned to Teráh, and stirred up the Afrídí and U'rakzaí Afgháns. Açaf was sent against him, and with the assistance of Zain Khán Kokah, defeated Jalálah. The family of the rebel fell into the hands of the imperialists; his women were given to Wahdat 'Alí, who was said to be Jalálah's brother, while the other members of his family were taken to Court.

In the 39th year, Açaf was sent to Kashmír, M. Yúsuf Khán (No. 35) having been recalled. He re-distributed the lands of the Jágír holders, of whom Ahmad Beg Kábulí (No. 191), Muhammad Qulí Afshár, and Hasan 'Arab, were the most important. The cultivation of Za'farán (saffron, vide p. 84) and hunting were declared monopolies, and the revenue was fixed according to the assessment of Qází 'Alí, i. e., at one lac of kharwárs, at 24 dáms each (vide p. 346). Açaf only stayed three days in Kashmír, and returned to Láhor. In the 42nd year, when Kashmír had become all but desolated through the oppressions of the Jágír holders, Açaf was made Governor of the province. In the 44th year, (beginning of 1008), he was appointed Díwán i kul, vice Patr Dás (No. 196).

In 1013, Prince Salím (Jahángír) rebelled against Akbar; but a reconciliation was effected by Akbar's mother, and Salím was placed for twelve days under surveillance. After this, he received Gujrát as tuyúl, and gave up the Çúbahs of Iláhábád and Bihár, of which during his rebellion he had taken possession. Bihár was given to Açaf who, moreover, was appointed to a Command of Three Thousand.

On Jahángír's accession, Açaf was called to court, and appointed atálíq to Prince Parwíz, who had taken the command against the Ráná. The expedition was, however, interrupted by the rebellion of Prince Khusrau. In the 2nd year, 1015, Jahángír, after suppressing Khusrau's revolt, left Láhor for Kábul, and as Sharíf Khán Amír ul Umará remained dangerously ill in India, Açaf was made Vakíl and Commander of Five Thousand. He also received a pen-box studded with jewels.[1] But he never trusted Jahángír, as the Emperor himself found out after Açaf's death (Tuzuk, p. 109).

From the time of Akbar's death, the kings[2] of the Dak'hin had been restless, and Malik 'Ambar had seized upon several places in the Bálág'hát District. The Khán Khánán, (No. 29), with his usual duplicity, had done nothing to recover the loss, and Jahángír sent Prince Parwíz to the Dak'hin, with Açaf Khán as atálíq, and the most renowned grandees of the Court, as Rájah Mán Singh (No. 30), Khán Jahán Lodí, Khán i A'zam, (No. 21), 'Abdullah Khán, "each in himself sufficient for the conquest of a country." But incessant drinking on the part of the Prince, and the jealousy and consequent insubordination of the Amírs, spoiled everything, and the Mughuls suffered a check and lost their prestige (p. 326). Not long after, in 1021, Açaf died at Burhánpúr. The Tárík'h of his death is—صد حیف ز آصف‌خان. A hundred times Alas! for Açaf Khán!

The Tuzuk (p. 108) says that he died at the age of sixty-three.

Açaf Khán is represented as a man of the greatest genius. He was an able financier, and a good accountant. A glance is said to have been sufficient for him to know the contents of a page. He was a great horticulturist, planting and lopping off branches with his own hands in his gardens; and he often transacted business with a garden spade in his hand. In religious matters, he was a free-thinker, and one of Akbar's disciples (p. 209). He was one of the best poets of Akbar's age, an age most fruitful in great poets. His Masnawí, entitled Núrnámah, ranks after Nizám's Shírín Khusrau. Vide below among the poets of Akbar's reign.

Açaf kept a great number of women, and had a large family.

His sons. 1. Mírzá Zain ul'ábidín. He was a commander of Fifteen Hundred, 500 horse, and died in the second year of Sháhjahán's reign. He had a son Mírzá Ja'far, who like his grandfather was a poet, writing under the same takhalluç (Ja'far). He, Záhid Khán Kokah, and M. Sháfí (Pádisháhnámah; Sáqí, Maásir), son of Saif

[1] It was customary under the Mughul Government to confer a pen-box or a golden inkstand, or both, as insignia on Díwáns. When such officers were deposed, they generally returned the presents.

[2] Mughul Historians do not like to call the rulers of the Dak'hin kings. The word which they generally use, is dunyádár, which is a meaningless title. I have not found this title used in histories written before the Akbarnámah.

Khán, were such intimate friends, that Sháhjahán dubbed them sih yár, 'the three friends.' He later resigned the service, and lived in Ágrah on the pension which Sháh-Jahán granted and Aurangzíb increased. He died in 1094.

2. Suhráb Khán. He was under Sháhjahán a Commander of Fifteen Hundred, 1,200 horse, and died in the 13th year of Sháhjahán.

3. Mírzá 'Alí Açghar. He was a hasty youth, and could not bridle his tongue. In the Parendah expedition, he created dissensions between Sháh Shujá' and Mahábat Khán. He served in the war against Jujhár Bandelah, and perished at the explosion of a tower in Fort Dhamúní, as related in the Pádisháhnámah. He had just been married to the daughter of Mu'tamid Khán Bakhshí (author of the Iqbálnámah i Jahángírí); but as no cohabitation had taken place, Sháhjahán married her to Khán Daurán. He was a Commander of Five Hundred, 100 horse.

4. Mírzá 'Askarí. He was in the 20th year of Sháhjahán a Commander of 500, 100 horse.

The lists of grandees in the Pádisháhnámah mention two relations of Áçaf—1. Muhammad Çálih, son of Mírzá Sháhí, brother or nephew of Áçaf. He was a Commander of One Thousand, 800 horse, and died in the second year of Sháhjahán's reign. 2. Muqím, a Commander of Five Hundred, 100 horse.

XI. Commanders of One Thousand and Five Hundred.

99. 'Shaikh Farí'd i Bukhá'rí'.

The Iqbálnámah, according to the Maásir, says, he belonged to the Músawí Sayyids; but this is extraordinary, because the Bukhárí Sayyid's trace their descent to Sayyid Jalál i Bukhárí, seventh descendant of Imám 'Alí Naqí Alhádí.

The fourth ancestor of Shaikh Faríd was Shaikh 'Abdulghaffár of Dihlí, who when dying desired his family to give up depending on Sayúrghál tenures, but rather to enter the military service of the kings. This they seem to have done.

Shaikh Faríd was born as Dihlí (Tuzuk, p. 68). He entered Akbar's service early. In the 28th year, when M. 'Azíz (No. 21) resigned from ill-health the command of the Bihár army, S. F. accompanied Vazír Khán (No. 41) to the neighbourhood of Bardwán, where Qutlú of Oṛisá had collected his Afgháns. Qutlú having made proposals of peace, S. F. was ordered to meet him. In doing so he nearly perished through Qutlú's treachery (vide Stewart's Bengal). In the 30th year, he was made a Commander of 700, and gradually rose, till the 40th year, to a command of 1500. He was also appointed Mír Bakhshí, and had also for some time the Daftar i Tan in his charge, i. e., he had to settle all matters relating to the grants of Jágír holders.

His elevation under Jahángír, was due to the decided support he gave Jahángír, immediately before his accession, and to the victory he obtained over Prince Khusrau at Bhaironwál. When Prince Salím occupied Iláhábád during his rebellion against his father, appointing his servants to mançabs and giving them jágírs, Akbar favoured Prince Khusrau so openly, that every one looked upon him as successor. Soon after, a sort of reconciliation was effected, and Salím's men were sent to Gujrát. When Akbar lay on the death-bed, he ordered Salím to stay outside the Fort of Ágrah; and M. 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21) and Rájah Mán Singh, who from family considerations favoured Khusrau's succession, placed their own men at the gates of the fort, and asked Shaikh Faríd to take the command. But Sh. F. did not care for their arrangements and went over to Prince Salím outside, and declared him emperor, before Akbar had closed his eyes. On the actual accession, S. F. was made a commander of 5000, received the title of Çáhibussaif wa-lqalam,[1] and was appointed Mír Bakhshí.

A short time after, on the 8th Zí Hajjah, 1014, Prince Khusrau suddenly left Agrah, and went plundering and recruiting to Láhor. Sh. F., with other Bukhárí and many Bárha Sayyids, was sent after him, whilst Jahángír himself followed soon after, accompanied by Sharíf Khán Amír ul Umará, and Mahábat Khán, who were hostile to Sh. F., and took every possible opportunity of slandering him. Sulṭán Khusrau had gone to Láhor, and besieged the town, when he heard of Sh. F.'s arrival with 12000 horse at the Áb i Sulṭánpúr. He raised the siege, and arrived at the Biáh, which Sh. F. had just crossed. Khusrau was immediately attacked. The fight was unusually severe. The Bárha and Bukhárí Sayyids had to bear the brunt of the fight, the former in the van under the command of Saif Khán, son of Sayyid Mahmúd Khán Kundlíwál, (p. 392) and Sayyid Jalál. There were about 50 or 60 of the Bárha Sayyids opposed to 1500 Badakhshí troopers, and had not S. Kamál (p. 397) come in time to their rescue, charging the enemy with loud cries of Pádisháh salamát, the Bárha Sayyids would have been cut down to a man. Sayyid Saif Khán got seventeen wounds, and S. Jalál died a few days after the battle. About four hundred of Khusrau's troopers were killed, and the rest dispersed. Khusrau's jewel-box fell into the hands of the Imperialists. The fight took place in the neighbourhood of Bhairowál.[2] In the evening Jahángír arrived, embraced S. F., and stayed the night in his tent. The District was made into a Parganah of the name of Fatháhád, and was given Sh. F. as a present. He received, besides, the title of Murtazá Khán, and was appointed governor of the Çúbah of Gujrát.

In the 2nd year, S. F. presented Jahángír an immense ruby made into a ring, which weighed 1 misqál, 15 surkhs, and was valued at 25000 Rs. As the relations of the Shaikh oppressed the people in Gujrát, he was recalled from Ahmadábád (Tuzuk, p. 73). In the 5th year, he was made governor of the Panjáb. In 1021, he made preparations to invade Kángrah. He died at Pat'hán in 1025, and was buried at [1] This title we also find in old inscriptions, e. g. in those of Tribení and Sátgánw, Húglí District. It means Lord of the sword and the pen.

[2] Bhairowál, on our maps Bhyrowal, lies on the road from Jálindhar to Amritsir, on the right bank of the Biáh. After the defeat, Khusrau fled northwards with the view of reaching Rahtás beyond the right bank of the Jhelum. He had therefore to cross the Ráwí, the Chanáb, and the Jhelam. On coming to the Chanáb, at a place called Sháhpúr (a very common name in the Panjáb), he could not get boats. He therefore went to Sodharah, which is also mentioned as a place for crossing in the Ṭabaqát i Náçiri,—on our maps Sodra, N. E. of Vazírábád—and induced some boatmen to take him over. But they left him in the lurch, landed him on an island in the middle of the Chanáb, and swam back. This came to the ears of the Chaudrí of Sodharah, and a report was sent to Abul Qásim Tamkín (No. 199), one of Jahángír's officers stationed at Gujrát (at some distance from the right bank of the Chanáb, opposite to Vazírábád). He came, took Khusrau from the island, and kept him confined in Gujrát. The news of the capture reached Jahángír at Láhor on the last Muharram 1015, i. e. 52 days after Khusrau's flight from Agrah. On the 3rd Çafar, Khusrau, Hasan Beg i Badakhshí (No. 167), and 'Abdurrahím Khar, were brought to Jahángír in the Bágh i Mírzá Kámrán.

Dihlí (Tuz. p. 159). At the time of his death, he was a Commander of Six Thousand, 5000 horse.

Sayyid Ahmad, in his work on the antiquities of Dihlí, entitled Asáruççanádíd, No. 77, says that the name of S. F.'s father was Sayyid Ahmad i Bukhárí. Of Faríd's tomb, he says, nothing is left but an arcade (dálán). But he wrongly places the death of the Shaikh in the 9th year or 1033 A. H., instead of in the eleventh year, or 1025. Sayyid Ahmad also mentions a Sarái built by Shaikh Faríd in Dihlí, which has since been repaired by the English Government, and is now used as a jail (جیل خانه, jel khánah).

According to the Tuzuk, p. 65, Salímgaḍh (Dihlí) belonged to S. Faríd. It had been built by Salím Khán the Afghán during his reign in the midst (dar miyán) of the Jamnah. Akbar had given it to Faríd.[1]

When Shaikh Faríd died, only 1000 Ashrafís were found in his house, which very likely gave rise to the Táríkh of his death—

داد خرد برد dad, khurd burd (1025, A. H.).

'He gave, and left (carried off) little.'

Shaikh Faríd was indeed a man of the greatest liberality. He always gave with his own hands. Once a beggar came to him seven times on one day, and received money; and when he returned the eighth time, Faríd gave him again money, but told him not to tell others; else they might take the money from him. He gave widows a great deal, and his jágír lands were given as free land tenures to the children of his servants or soldiers who had been killed. When in Gujrát, he had a list made of all Bukhárí Sayyids in the province,[2] and paid for every marriage feast and outfit; he even gave pregnant women of his clan money for the same purpose for the benefit of their yet unborn children. He never assisted singers, musicians, or flatterers.

He built many saráis. The one in Dihlí has been mentioned above. In Ahmadábád, a mahallah was adorned by him and received as a memorial of him the name of Bukhárá. In the same town he built the Masjid and Tomb of Sháh Wajíhuddín (died 988; Badáoní III, 43). He also built Farídábád near Dihlí, the greater part of the old parganah of Tilpaṭ being included in the parganah of Farídábád (Elliot's Glossary, Beames' Edition, II, p. 123). In Láhor also, a Mahallah was built by him, a large bath, and a chauk, or bazar. The Government officers under him received annually three khil'ats; to his footmen he gave annually a blanket, and his sweepers got shoes. He never made alterations in his gifts.

His contingent consisted of 3000 picked troopers. Neither in the reign of Akbar, nor that of Jahángír, did he build a palace for himself. He always lived as if on the march. He paid his contingent personally, little caring for the noise and tumult incident to such offices. One of his best soldiers, an Afghán of the name of Sher Khán, had taken leave in Gujrát, and rejoined after an absence of six years, when Sh.

---

[1] The family must have had large possessions in Dihlí; for when Akbar, in the 22nd year, visited Dihlí, he stayed in Sh. Faríd's mansion, and Abulfazl (Akbarnámah III, p. 196) speaks of his extensive possessions along the Jamnah.

[2] In Dihlí, Ahmadábád, and many other places in Gujrát, do we find Bukhárí Sayyids. Vide Nos. 77, 78.

Farid was in Kalánúr on his march to Kángrah. The Shaikh ordered Dwárká Dás his Bakhshí, to pay the man his wages, and the Bakhshí wrote out the Descriptive Roll, and gave the man one day's pay. But Farid got angry, and said, "He is an old servant, and though he comes rather late, my affairs have not fared ill on account of his absence; give him his whole pay." The man got 7000 Rs., his whole pay for six years.

"Night and day," exclaims the author of the Maásir, "change as before, and the stars walk and the heavens turn as of old, but India has no longer such men. Perhaps they have left for some other country!"

Shaikh Farid had no son. His daughter also died childless. He had adopted two young men, Muhammad Sa'íd and Mír Khán. They lived in great pomp, and did not care for the emperor. Though often warned, they would noisily pass the palace in pleasure boats to the annoyance of the Emperor, their boats being lighted up with torches and coloured lamps. One night they did so again, and Mahábat Khán, whom Jahángír had given a hint, sent one of his men and killed Mír Khán. Sh. F. demanded of the emperor Mahábat's blood; but Mahábat got together several 'respectable' witnesses who maintained before the emperor that Mír Khán had been killed by Muhammad Sa'íd, and Shaikh F. had to remain quiet.

Muhammad Sa'íd was alive in the 20th year of Sháhjahán, and was a Commander of Seven Hundred, 300 horse (Pádisháhn. II, 743).

Sayyid Ja'far, Sh. F.'s brother, was also in Akbar's service. He was killed in the battle of Patan (p. 397, l. 5).

The Pádisháhnámah (I, b., 316, 313; II, 739) also mentions Sayyid Badr, son of Shaikh Farid's sister, a Commander of 700, 500 horse; and Sayyid Bhakar, son of Sh. F.'s brother, a Commander of Five Hundred, 300 horse.

100. Sama'nji' Kha'n, son of Chalmah Beg.

For Samánjí we often find in MSS. Samájí. The Turkish samán means hay, so that Samánjí, or Samánchí would mean one who looks after the hay.

The name of this grandee is neither given in the Maásir, nor the Ṭabaqát. Nor have I come across his name in the Akbarnámah. It remains, therefore, doubtful whether he is the son of No. 58.

Another Samánjí Khán will be found below, No. 147.

101. Tardi' Kha'n, son of Qiyá Khán Gung (No. 33).

He has been mentioned above, on p. 344. The Ṭabaqát says that, in 1001, he was governor of Patan (Gujrát).[1]

[1] Tardí Khán is also mentioned in Sayyid Ahmad's edition of the Tuzuk, p. 19, l. 15. But this a mistake. It should be Tar Khán, not Tardí Khán. The word toqnáí, l. c., also is a mistake, and should be Toqbái. Pages 18, 19 of the Tuzuk treat of Akbar's forced march to Patan in Gujrát (vide p. 325, note, and p. 406, l. 10). The Maásir (MS. 77 of the Library As. Soc. Bengal, p. 163, b.) mentions the 4th Rabí' I. as the day when Akbar left Agrah; but from the Akbarnámah (Lucknow Edition, III, 18 ff.) it is clear that Akbar left Agrah on the 24th Rabí' II, 981, and engaged the enemies on the 9th day after his departure, i. e., on the 5th Jumáda I., 981. Hence the date 5th Jumáda I, 980, which Sayyid Ahmad gives, Tuzuk, p. 18, l. 16, should be corrected to 5th Jumáda I, 981.

The comparison of the several sources for a history of Akbar's reign, and the 102. Mihtar Khá'n, Anísuddín, a servant of Humáyún.

The word mihtar, pr. a prince, occurs very often in the names of Humáyún's servants. Thus in the Akbarnámah (Lucknow Edition, Vol. I. p. 269,—a very interesting page, which gives the names of the grandees, &c., who accompanied the emperor to Persia).

Mihtar Khán was the title of Anís (-uddín). He was Humáyún's treasurer on his flight to Persia, and returned with the emperor.

In the 14th year, when Rantanbhúr had been conquered (vide No. 96), the fort was put in his charge. In the beginning of the 21st year (beginning of 984), he accompanied Mán Singh on his expedition against Ráná Partáb of Maiwár, and distinguished himself as leader of the Chandáwul (rear). In the 25th year, he held a jágír in Audh, and distinguished himself in the final pursuit of Ma'çúm Khán Farankhúdí (No. 157).

Anís was gradually promoted. He was at the time of Akbar's death a Commander of Three Thousand. According to the Ṭabaqát, he was in 1001 a Commander of 2500.

He died in the 3rd year of Jahángír's reign, 1017, eighty-four years old. If I read the MSS. of the Maásir correctly, he was a Kátí, and looked upon his tribe with much favour. He was a man of great simplicity. It is said that he paid his contingent monthly.

Múnis Khán, his son, was during the reign of Jahángír a Commander of Five Hundred, 130 horse. Abú Ṭálib, son of Múnis Khán, was employed as treasurer (Khizánchí) of the Çúbah of Bengal.

103. Rai Durgá' Síṣodiah.

Rái Durgá is generally called in the Akbarnámah, Rái Durgá Chandráwaṭ (چندراوت). The home of the family was the Parganah of Rámpúr, also called Islámpúr, near Chítor.

In the 26th year of Akbar's reign, Rái Durgá accompanied Prince Murád on his expedition against Mírzá Muhammad Hakím of Kábul. In the 28th year, he was attached to Mírzá Khán's (No. 29) corps, and distinguished himself in the Gujrát war. In the 30th year, he was with M. 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21) in the Dak'hin. In the 36th year, he followed Prince Murád to Málwah, and later to the Dak'hin.

In the 45th year, Akbar sent him after Muzaffar Husain Mírzá. He then accompanied Abulfazl to Násik, and went afterwards home on leave. He returned, but after six weeks went again home, apparently without permission.

He died towards the end of the 2nd year of Jahángír's reign.

According to the Tuzuk (p. 63), he had served Akbar for upwards of forty years. Jahángír says, he had at first been in the service of Ráná Udai Singh, and reached, during the reign of Akbar, the dignity of a Commander of Four Thousand. He is said to have been a good tactician.

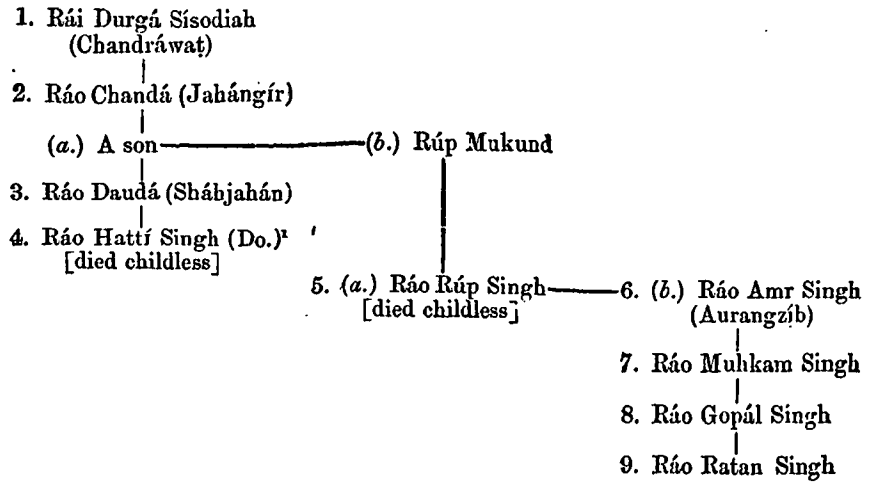
The Ṭabaqát says that he was in 1001 a Commander of Fifteen Hundred.

The Maásir continues the history of his descendants, from which the following tree has been taken.

---

correction of the MSS., is a truly herculean labour, which the want of critical acumen on the part of the editors of our printed historical editions has very much increased. Vide No. 104.

Genealogy of the Ráos of Rámpúr (Islámpúr), Chítor.



Ráo Ratan Singh turned Muhammadan, and got the title of Muslim Khán (Aurangzíb-Jahándár Sháh).

104. Madhu' Singh, son of Rájah Bhagwán Dás (No. 27).

He was present in the fight at Sarnál (p. 333). In the beginning of the 21st year (Muharram, 984) he served under Mán Singh against Ráná Kíká, and distinguished himself in the battle of Gogandah (21st Rabí' I., 984).[2] In the 30th year, he accompanied Mírzá Sháhrukh (No. 7) on his expedition to Kashmír. In the 31st year, after the death of Sayyid Hámid (No. 78), he took the contingent of Rájah Bhagwán from T'hánah Langar, where he was stationed, to 'Alí Masjid, where Mán Singh was.

In the 48th year, he was made a Commander of Three Thousand, 2000 horse. According to the Ṭabaqát, he had been, in 1001, a Commander of 2000.

His son, Chatr Sál, or Satr Sál, was at the end of Jahángír's reign a Commander of Fifteen Hundred, 1000 horse. He was killed together with his two sons, Bhím Singh and Anand Singh, in the Dak'hin, in the 3rd year of Sháhjahán's reign. His third son, Ugar Sen, was a Commander of Eight Hundred, 400 horse (vide Pádisháhn. I., p, 294; I., b., pp. 305, 314.)

---

[1] There is some confusion in the MSS. and printed editions regarding his name. Thus in the Pádisháhnámah, Ed. Bibl. Indica, I, b., 305, he is called Mat'hí Singh; but Hattí Singh in the same work, Vol. II, p. 730, and Hathí, on p. 374.

[2] It was said above, p. 339, l. l., that the battle of Gogandah was fought in 985. This is the statement of the Ṭabaqát, which the Maásir follows in its biographical note of Rájah Mán Singh. But from the Akbarnámah and the History of Badáoní, who was present in the battle, and brought Akbar Mán Singh's report, it is clear that Mán Singh set out on the 2nd Muharram, 984, and that the battle took place on the 21st Rabí' I., of the same year.

It has been remarked above (p. 356, note 1), that the chronology of the Ṭabaqát is erroneous. Badáoní ascribes the errors to the omission of the intercalary days, and a confusion of solar and lunar years. Historians should bear this in mind. The Akbarnámah is the only source for a history of Akbar's reign, and the Sawánih should be the guide of Historians.

105. Sayyid Qa'sim, and 143. Sayyid Ha'shim, sons of Sayyid Mahmúd Khán of Bárha, Kúndlíwál (No. 75).

In the 17th year, S. Qásim served under Khán 'Alam (No. 58), in the pursuit of Muhammad Husain Mírzá, who after his defeat by M. 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21) had withdrawn to the Dak'hin.

S. Háshim served, in the 21st year, with Rái Rái Singh (No. 44) against Sulṭán Deorah, ruler of Sarohí, and distinguished himself in the conquest of that place.

In the 22nd year, both brothers served under Shahbáz Khán (No. 80) against the Ráná. In the 25th year, when Chandr Sen, son of Máldeo, raised disturbances, both brothers, who had jágírs in Ajmír, were ordered to march against him. Both again distinguished themselves in the 28th year, and served in the haráwal of Mírzá Khán (No. 29) in the Gujrát war.

S. Háshim was killed in the battle of Sarkich, near Ahmadábád. S. Qásim was wounded. He was subsequently appointed Thánahdár of Patan. When Mírzá Khán went to Court, leaving Qulij Khán as Governor of Ahmadábád, Qásim was again appointed to a command and operated successfully against Muzaffar, Jám (zamíndár of Little Kachh), and K'hangár (zamíndár of Great Kachh).

On the transfer of Mírzá Khán, Khán i A'zam (No. 21) was appointed Governor of Gujrát. Qásim continued to serve in Gujrát and distinguished himself especially in the 37th year. Later, he commanded the left wing of Sulṭán Murád's Dak'hin corps.

Qásim died in the 44th year (1007). He was at his death a Commander of 1500.

Regarding their sons, vide p. 392.

XII. Commanders of Twelve Hundred and Fifty.

106. Ra'i Sa'l Darba'ri', Shaikháwat.

He is also called Rájah Rái Sál Darbárí, and is the son of Rái Rái Mall Shaikhawat, in whose service Hasan Khán Súr (father of Sher Sháh) was for some time.

As remarked above (p. 328, No. 23), the Kachhwáhahs are divided into Rájáwats and Shaikháwats. To the latter branch belong Rájahs Lon Karan, Rái Sál, &c.; the former contains Mán Singh's posterity (the present rulers of Jaipúr).

The term Shaikháwat, or Shekháwat, as it is generally pronounced, is explained as follows. One of the ancestors of this branch had no sons. A Muhammadan Shaikh, however, had pity on him, and prayed for him till he got a son. From motives of gratitude, the boy was called Shaikh.[1] Hence his descendants are called the Shaikhawat Branch.

Rái Sál was employed at Court, as his title of Darbárí indicates. He was in charge of the Harem. During the reign of Jahángír, he was promoted, and served in the Dak'hin. He died there at an advanced age. He had twenty-one sons, each of whom had a numerous posterity.

Whilst Rái Sál was in the Dak'hin, Mádhú Singh and other grandchildren of his, collected a lot of ruffians, and occupied Rái Sál's paternal possessions.[2] But Mat'hurá

[1] He is the same as the Shaikhjí of Jaipúr genealogies. Shaikhjí is said to have been a grandson of Udaikaran, twelfth descendant of Dholá Rái (p. 329).

[2] Called in the Maásir كهندار, Khandár or Ghandár, 'near Amber.'

Dás, a Bengalí, who was Rái Sál's Munshí and Vakíl, recovered a portion of his master's lands.

After Rái Sál's death, his sons and grandsons lived, according to the custom of the Zamíndárs of the age, in feud with their neighbours and with each other. Rájah Girdhar, Rái Sál's son, is almost the only one that distinguished himself at Court.

From the Akbarnámah we see that Rái Sál entered early Akbar's service; for he was present in the battle of Khairábád (p. 382), in the fight at Sarnál (p. 333), and accompanied the Emperor on his forced march to Patan and Ahmadábád (p. 416, note).

The Pádisháhnámah (I., b., p. 314) mentions another son of Rái Sál's, Bhoj Ráj, who was a Commander of Eight Hundred, 400 horse.

The Ṭabaqát says that Rái Sál was, in 1001, a Commander of Two Thousand. Abulfazl calls him in this list a Commander of 1250. This mançab is unusual, and Rái Sál stands alone in this class. It does not occur in the lists of Grandees in the Pádisháhnámah. From other histories also it is clear that the next higher Mançab after the Hazárí was the Hazár o pánçadí, or Commander of Fifteen Hundred.

XIII. Commanders of One Thousand.

107. Muhibb 'Alí Kha'n, son of Mír Khalífah.

This grandee must not be confounded with Muhibb 'Alí Khán Raḥtásí (p. 422).

Muhibb 'Alí Khán is the son of Mír Nizámuddín 'Alí Khalífah, the "pillar of Bábar's government." He had no faith in Humáyún, and was opposed to his accession. He therefore favoured Mahdí Khwájah, Bábar's son-in-law. Mahdí, a short time before Bábar's death, assumed a royal deportment. One day, Mír Khalífah happened to be in Mahdí's tent; and when he left, Mahdí, thinking himself alone, put his hand to his beard, and exclaimed, "Thou shalt by and by follow me." He had scarcely uttered these words, when he observed Muqím i Harawí[1] in the corner of the tent. Muqím reported these words to Mír Khalífah, and upbraided him for giving Mahdí his support. Mír Khalífah thereupon changed his mind, forbade people to visit Mahdí, and raised, on Bábar's death, Humáyún to the throne.

His son Muhibb 'Alí Khán distinguished himself under Bábar and Humáyún. His wife was Náhíd Begum, daughter of Qásim Kokah. Qásim had sacrificed himself for Bábar. Bábar had fallen into the hands of 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak, when Qásim stepped forward and said that he was Bábar. He was cut to pieces, and Bábar escaped. In 975, Náhíd Begum went to T'hat'hah, to see her mother, Hájí Begum (daughter of Mírzá Muqím, son of Mírzá Zul-nún). After Qásim Kokah's death, Hájí Begum married Mírzá Hasan, and after him, Mírzá 'Isá Tarkhán, king of Sindh (p. 362). Before Náhíd Begum reached T'hat'hah, Mírzá 'Isá died. His successor, Mírzá Báqí ill-treated Hájí Begum and her daughter. Hájí Begum therefore collected a few desperate men and watched for an opportunity to get hold of M. Báqí's person. The plot was, however, discovered, and Hájí Begum was put into prison. Náhíd Begum escaped and went to Bhakkar, where she was well received by Sulṭán Mahmúd, ruler of the District. He persuaded her to ask Akbar to send her husband Muhibb 'Alí to Bhakkar; and he would give him an army, if he liked to attack T'hat'hah. Náhíd Begum did so on coming to court, and Akbar, in the 16th year (978), called for Muhibb, who had then retired from court-life, and ordered him to proceed to Bhakkar.

[1] Father of the Historian Nizámuddín Ahmad, author of the Ṭabaqát i Akbarí. Muqím was then Díwán i Buyútát.

Muhibb set out, accompanied by Mujáhid Khán, a son of his daughter. Sa'íd Khán (No. 25), Governor of Multán, had also received orders to assist Muhibb; but at Sulṭán Mahmúd's request, Muhibb came alone, accompanied by only a few hundred troopers. When he arrived at Bhakkar, Sulṭán Mahmúd said that he had changed his mind: he might go and attack T'hat'hah without his assistance; but he should do so from Jaisalmír, and not from Bhakkar. Muhibb, though he had only 200 troopers, resolved to punish Sulṭán Mahmúd for his treachery, and prepared himself to attack Bhakkar. Mahmúd had 10000 horse assembled near Fort Máth'ílah (ماتهيله). Muhibb attacked them, dispersed them, and took soon after the fort itself. He then fitted out a larger corps, and moved to Bhakkar, where he again defeated Mahmúd. The consequence of this victory was, that Mubárak Khán, Sulṭán Mahmúd's vazír, left his master and went with 1500 horse over to Muhibb. But as Mubárak's son, Beg Oghlú, was accused of having had criminal intercourse with a concubine of Sulṭán Mahmúd, Muhibb wished to kill Beg Oghlú. Mubárak, who had not expected this, now tried to get out of Muhibb's power. Muhibb therefore killed Mubárak, and used the money which fell into his hands, to complete his preparations for the siege of Bhakkar.

The siege had lasted three years, when famine and disease drove the inhabitants to despair. The swelling which is peculiar to the district, decimated the people; and the bark of the Sirs tree (p. 228), the best remedy for it, could only be had for gold. Sulṭán Mahmúd, at last, sent a message to Akbar, and offered the fort as a present to Prince Salím, if Muhibb were recalled, and another grandee sent in his stead, who was to take him (Mahmúd) to court; for he said, he could not trust Muhibb. Akbar accepted the proposal, and sent Mír Gesú, Bakáwal-begí, to Bhakkar.[1] Before Mír Gesú arrived, Sulṭán Mahmúd had died. New complications arose on his arrival. Mujáhid Khán just besieged Fort Ganjábah,[2] and his mother Sámi'ah Begum (Muhibb's daughter) who felt offended at Akbar's proceedings, despatched a few ships against Mír Gesú, and nearly captured him. In the meantime Muqím i Harawí also arrived and dissuaded Muhibb from hostilities against Mír Gesú. The latter now entered Bhakkar (981), and the inhabitants handed the keys over to him.

But neither Muhibb nor Mujáhid felt inclined to leave for the Court, though their stay was fraught with danger. Muhibb therefore entered into an agreement with Mír Gesú, according to which Mujáhid should be allowed to go to T'hat'hah, and that he himself with his whole family should be accommodated in Lohárí. The arrangement had been partially carried out, when Mír Gesú despatched a flotilla after Mujáhid. Muhibb upon this withdrew to Mát'hílah. Sámi'ah Begum fortified the environs, and when attacked by Gesú's men, she successfully repulsed them for one day and one night. Next day, Mujáhid arrived in forced marches, defeated the enemy,[1] and occupied the land east of the river.

[1] The conquest of Bhakkar is minutely related in the Táríkh i Ma'çúmí (vide No. 329), from which Prof. Dowson in his edition of Elliot's History of India (I, p. 240 ff.) has given extracts. But Abulfazl's account contains a few interesting particulars and differences. For Dowson's Mír Kísú, we have to read Mír Gesú. His biography is given in the Maásir. [2] Generally called Ganjáwah.

In the meantime, Akbar had sent Muhammad Tarson Khán (No. 32) as governor to Bhakkar, and Muhibb thought it now wise to go to Court.

In the 21st year, Muhibb received an appointment at Court, as a sort of Mír 'Arz. As he gave the emperor satisfaction, Akbar, in the 23rd year, allowed him to choose one of four appointments, the office of Mír 'Arz, the guard of the Harem, the governorship of a distant province, or the governorship of Dihlí. Muhibb chose the last, and entered at once upon his office.

He died as Governor of Dihlí in 989.

Muhibb is placed in the Ṭabaqát among the Commanders of Four Thousand.

Regarding the town of Bhakkar, Abulfazl says that it is called in old books Mançúrah. Six rivers united pass by it in several branches; two branches lie to the south, one to the north. The town at the latter branch, is called Bhak'kar. On the second branch another town lies, called Loharí, and near it is the Indus.

Mírzá Sháh Husain Arghún, king of T'hat'hah, had Bhakkar fortified, and appointed as Commander his foster-brother Sulṭán Mahmúd. After Sháh Husain's death, Sulṭán Mahmúd declared himself independent at Bhakkar, and Mírzá 'Ísá Tarkhán (p. 362) at T'hat'hah. Both were often at war with each other. Sulṭan Mahmúd is said to have been a cruel man.

As Bhakkar was conquered and annexed before T'hat'hah, it was attached to the Çúbah of Multán.

[Muhibb 'Alí Kha'n Rahta'sí'].

Like Muhibb 'Alí Khán, son of Mír Khalífah, Muhibb 'Alí Khán Rahtásí is put in the Ṭabaqát among the Commanders of Four Thousand. It is impossible to say why Abulfazl has not mentioned him in this list. His name, however, occurs frequently in the Akbarnámah and other histories. As he was a long time Governor of Rahtás in S. Bihár, he is generally called Rahtásí. This renowned Fort had passed, in 945, into the hands of Sher Sháh. During his reign, as also that of Salím Sháh, Fath Khán Batní commanded the Fort. Subsequently it came into the hands of Sulaimán and Junaid i Karaṛání. The latter appointed Sayyid Muhammad commander. As related above (p. 400), he handed it over to Shahbáz Khán (No. 80), at the time of the war with Gajpatí and his son Srí Rám (984).

In the same year, Akbar appointed Muhibb 'Alí Khán governor of Rahtás, and Shahbáz Khán made over the Fort to him.

Muhibb rendered excellent services during the Bengal Military Revolt. His son also, Habíb 'Alí Khán (vide No. 133), distinguished himself by his bravery, but was killed in a fight with one Yúsuf Miṭṭí, who had collected a band of Afgháns and ravaged S. Bihár. His death affected his father so much, that he became temporarily insane.

---

[1] If Prof. Dowson's MSS. agree with his version (I, p. 241), the Táríkh i Ma'çúmí would contradict the Akbarnámah. Mujáhid Khán is again mentioned, l. c., p. 282.

In the 31st year, two officers having been appointed to each Çúbah, Muhibb was ordered to join Vazír Khán (No. 41), Governor of Bengal. In the 33rd year, Bihár was given to the Kachhwáhahs as jágír, and Akbar called Muhibb to Court, intending to make him governor of Multán. But as the emperor was just about to leave for Kashmír (997), Muhibb accompanied him.

Soon after entering Kashmír, Muhibb took ill, and died, on the emperor's return, near the Koh i Sulaimán. Akbar went to his sick-bed and saw him the moment he died.

In the Akbarnámah (III, p. 245) a place Muhibb 'Alípúr[1] is mentioned, which Muhibb founded near Rahtás.

108. Sulta'n Khwa'jah, 'Abdul 'Azím, son of Khwájah Kháwand Dost.

He is also called Sulṭán Khwájah Naqshbandí.[2] His father Kháwand Dost was a pupil of Khwájah 'Abdushshahíd, fifth son of Khwájah 'Abdullah (generally called Khwájagán Khwájah; vide No. 17, p. 322), son of the renowned saint Khwájah Náçiruddín Ahrár (born 806, died 29th Rabí' I, 895).

When 'Abdushshahíd came from Samarqand to India, he was well received by Akbar, and got as present the Parganah Chamárí. He remained there some time, but returned in 982 to Samarqand, where he died two years later.

Sulṭan Khwájah, though neither learned in the sciences nor in taçawwuf (mysticism), had yet much of the saintly philosopher in him. He possessed in a high degree the confidence and the friendship of the emperor. In 984, he was made Mír Hajj, and as such commanded a numerous party of courtiers during the pilgrimage to Makkah. Never before had so influential a party left for Arabia: Sulṭán Khwájah was to distribute six lacs of rupees and 12000 khil'ats to the people of Makkah.

On his return in 986 (23rd year), he was made a Commander of One Thousand, and appointed Çadr of the realm (p. 273). He held that office till his death, which took place in the 29th year (992). He was buried outside the Fort of Fathpúr, to the north.

His daughter, in the beginning of the 30th year, was married to Prince Dányál.

His son, Mír Khwájah, was in the 46th year a Commander of 500.

According to Badáoní and Abulfazl, Sulṭán Khwájah belonged to the elect of the 'Divine Faith' (vide p. 204).

109. Khwa'jah 'Abdullah, son of Khwájah 'Abdullaṭíf.

His name is not given in the Maásir and the Ṭabaqát. The Akbarnámah mentions a Khwájah 'Abdullah who served in the war against 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak (No. 14), in Málwah (971-72), during the last rebellion of Khán Zamán (No. 13), and in the fight at Sarnál (middle Sha'bán, 980; vide p. 333). He also accompanied the emperor on his forced march to Patan and Ahmadábád. Vide the Lucknow Edition of the Akbarnámah, II, 285, 287, 367; III, 24.

---

[1] Not given on the maps.

[2] Naqshband was the epithet of the renowned saint Khwájah Bahánuddín of Bukhárá, born 728, died 3rd Rabí' I., 791. He was called naqshband, because according to his own words, he and his parents used to weave kamkhábs adorned with figures (naqsh).

110. Khwa'jah Jaha'n, Amínà of Harát.

His full name is Khwájah Amínuddín Mahmúd of Harát. The form Amínà is modern Iráni, which likes to add a long á to names.

Amín was an excellent accountant and a distinguished calligrapher. He accompanied Humáyún on his flight to Persia. On the return of the emperor, he was made Bakhshí of Prince Akbar.

On Akbar's accession, Amín was made a Commander of One Thousand, and received the title of Khwájah Jahán. He was generally employed in financial work, and kept the great seal. In the 11th year, he was accused by Muzaffar Khán (No. 37) of want of loyalty shewn in the rebellion of Khán Zamán. Amín was reprimanded, the great seal was taken from him, and he was dismissed to Makkah.

On his return, he was pardoned. In the 19th year (981-82), Akbar besieged Hájípúr; but Amín had been compelled by sickness to remain behind at Jaunpúr. When the emperor returned from Hájípúr over Jaunpúr to Ágrah, Amín followed him. On the march, he was once charged by a mast elephant: his foot got entangled in a tent rope, and he fell to the ground. The accident had an injurious effect on Amín, convalescent as he was. He died near Lak'hnau, in the beginning of Sha'bán, 982.

According to the chronology of the Ṭabaqát, his death took place in 983.

A son of Amín's brother is mentioned. His name was Mírzá Beg. He was a poet and wrote under the takhalluç of Shahrí. He withdrew from Court, and died in 989.

Jahángír also conferred the title of Khwájah Jahán on the officer (Dost Muhammad of Kábul) who had served him as Bakhshí while Prince.

111. Ta'ta'r Kha'n, of Khurásán.

His name is Khwájah Ṭáhir Muhammad. In the 8th year, he accompanied Sháh Budágh Khán (No. 52) and Rúmí Khán (No. 146), and pursued Mír Sháh 'Abul Ma'álí, who withdrew from Hiçár Fírúzah to Kábul.

He was then made governor of Dihlí, where he died in 986.

The Ṭabaqát says, he was for some time Vazír, and died in 985.

Regarding his enmity with Mullá Núruddín Tarkhán,-vide Badáoní III, 199.

112. Haki'm Abulfath, son of Mullá 'Abdurrazzáq of Gílán.

His name is Masíhuddín Abulfath. Mauláná 'Abdurrazzáq, his father, was a learned and talented man, and held for a long time the post of Çádr of Gílán. When Gílán, in 974, came into the possession of Ṭahmásp, Ahmad Khán, ruler of the country was imprisoned, and 'Abdurrazzáq was tortured to death. Hakím Abulfath, with his distinguished brothers Hakím Humám (No. 205) and Hakím Núruddín,[1] left the country, and arrived, in the 20th year, in India (p. 175). They went to Court and were well received. Abulfath, in the 24th year, was made Çadr and Amín of Bengal. At the outbreak of the military revolt, he was captured with several other officers (vide Nos. 98 and 159); but he escaped from prison, and went again to Court. He rose higher and higher in Akbar's favour, and possessed an immense influence in state matters and on the emperor himself. Though only a commander of One Thousand, he is said to have had the power of a Vakíl.

[1] He is mentioned below among the Poets of Akbar's reign. His takhalluç is 'Qarárí.' Their fourth brother, Hakím Luṭfullah, came later from Irán to India, and received through Abul Fath's influence a Command of Two Hundred (No. 354). He did not live long.

As related above (p. 344), he accompanied Bír Bar on the expedition against the Yúsufzais in Sawád and Bijor. On his return, he was reprimanded; for the emperor, correctly enough, ascribed the disastrous issue of the campaign to Abulfath's insubordinate conduct towards Zain Kokah (No. 34).

In the 34th year, (997), he went with the emperor to Kashmír, and from there to Zábulistán. On the march he fell sick, and died. According to Akbar's order, Khwájah Shamsuddín (No. 159) took his body to Hasan Abdál, and buried him in a vault which the Khwájah had made for himself (Tuzuk, p. 48). On his return, the emperor said a prayer at Abulfath's tomb.

The great poet 'Urfí of Shíráz (vide below, among the poets) is Abul Fath's encomiast. Faizí also has composed a fine marsiah, or elegy, on his death.

Abulfazl and Badáoní speak of the vast attainments of Abulfath. A rare copy of his Munshiát[1] is preserved in the Library of the As. Soc. Bengal (No. 780). He had a profound contempt for old Persian poets: thus he called Anwarí diminutively Anwariak; and of Khaqání he said, he would give him a box on the ears if he were to come to him, to rouse him from his sleepiness, and would send him to Abulfazl, who would give him another box, and both would then show him how to correct his verses (Badáoní III, 167).

Badáoní mentions Abulfath's influence as one of the chief reasons why Akbar abjured Islám (p. 175).

Abulfath had a son, Fathullah. He was killed by Jahángír, as he was an accomplice of Khusrau (Tuzuk, p. 58).

A grandosn of Abulfath is mentioned in the Pádisháhnámah (II, p. 739). His name is Fath Ziá; he was a Commander of Nine Hundred, 150 horse.

113. Shaikh Jamá'l, son of Muhammad Bakhtyár.

His full name is Shaikh Jamál Bakhtyár, son of Shaikh Muhammad Bakhtyár. The Bakhtyár clan had possessions in Jalesar, Çubah of Ágrah.

Shaikh Jamál's sister held the post of superintendent in Akbar's harem, and procured for her brother a command of One Thousand. Jamál's elevation excited much envy. One day, after taking some water, he felt suddenly ill. Rúp also, one of Akbar's servants, who had drunk of the same water, took immediately ill. Akbar had antidotes applied, and both recovered.

In the 25th year, he accompanied Ismá'íl Qulí Khán (No. 46) on his expedition against the rebel Niyábat Khán. Níyábat Khán was the son of Mír Háshim of Níshápúr; his name was 'Arab. Before his rebellion, he held Jhosí and Arail (Jalálábás) as jágír. In the fight, which took place near 'Kantit, a dependency of Pannah,'[2] Shaikh Jamál was nearly killed, Niyábat Khán having pulled him from his horse.

[1] His Munshiát contain interesting letters addressed by Abulfath to his brother Hakím Humám, the Khán Khánán (No. 29), Khwájah Shams (No. 159), and others.

[2] The Bibl. Indica edition of Badáoní (II, 289) says, the fight took place at Gasht (گشت), a dependency of Patnah (پٹنہ); but this is a mistake of the

In the 26th year, he marched with Prince Murád against Mírzá Muhammad Hakím of Kábul.

Shaikh Jamál drank a great deal of wine. One day, he brought such a smell of wine to the audience hall, that Akbar felt offended, and excluded him from Court. Jamál therefore squandered and destroyed the things he had with him, and assumed the garb of a jogí. This annoyed the emperor more, and Jamál was put into prison. Soon after, he was pardoned; but he continued his old vice, and brought delirium tremens on himself. In the 30th year, when Akbar set out for Zábulistán, Shaikh Jamál had to remain sick in Lúdhiánah. He died there in the same year (993).

Jamál has been mentioned above on p. 191.

114. Ja'far Khá'n, son of Qazáq Khán.

He is generally called in the histories Ja'far Khán Taklú, Taklú being the name of a Qizilbásh tribe.

His grandfather, Muhammad Khán Sharafuddín Oghlú Taklú, was at the time of Humáyún's flight governor of Harát and lallah[1] to Sulṭán Muhammad Mírzá, eldest son of Sháh Ṭahmasp i Çafawí. At the Sháh's order, he entertained Humáyún in the most hospitable manner. When he died, he was succeeded in office by his son Qazáq Khán. But Qazáq shewed so little loyalty, that Ṭahmásp, in 972, sent Ma'çúm Beg i Çafawí against him. Qazáq fell ill, and when the Persians came to Harát, he died. Ma'çúm seized all his property.

Ja'far thinking himself no longer safe in Persia, emigrated to India, and was well received by Akbar. He distinguished himself in the war with Khán Zamán, and was made a Khán and a commander of One Thousand. From Badáoní (II, p. 161,) we see that he had a jágír in the Panjáb, and served under Husain Qulí Khán (No. 24) in the expedition to Nagarkoṭ.

According to the Ṭabaqát, Ja'far's father did not die a natural death, but was killed by the Persians.

Ja'far had been dead for some time in 1001.

115. Sha'h Fana'í', son of Mír Najafí.

His name is not given in the Maásir and the Ṭabaqát. From the Akbarnámah (Lucknow Edition, II, 170, 172) we see that he served in the conquest of Málwah and took part in the battle near Sárangpúr (beginning of the 6th year; vide No. 120).

The poet Fanáí who is mentioned in Badáoní (III, 296), the Ṭabaqát, and the Mir-át ul 'A'lam, appears to be the same. He travelled a good deal, was in Makkah, and distinguished himself by personal courage in war. Akbar con-editors. Sir H. Elliot (Beames' Glossary II, 166) has drawn attention to the frequent mistakes which MSS. make in the name of Pannah (پنّه), to which Kantit belonged. There is no doubt, that above, on p. 122, l. 4 and l. 9 from below, we have likewise to read Pannah, which was famous for its wild elephants.

---

[1] The word lallah is not in our dictionaries, though it occurs frequently in Persian Historians, as the Memoirs of Ṭahmásp, the 'Álamárá, &c. I have never seen it used by Indian Historians. From the passages where it occurs, it is plain that it has the same meaning as atálíq, which so often occurs in Indian Histories. Vide p. 357, note.

ferred on him the title of Khán. He was a Chaghtái Turk of noble descent. Once he said, in Akbar's presence, that no one surpassed him in the three C's,—chess, combat, composition, when the emperor replied that he had forgotten a fourth, viz. conceit. For some reason, he was imprisoned, and when set at liberty, it was found that he had become mad. He ran into the wilderness, and was no more heard of.

116. Asadullah Kha'n, of Tabríz.

His name is not given in the Maásir and the Ṭabaqát. An Asadullah Khán is mentioned in the Akbarnámah (end of the 12th year). He served under Khán Zamán (No. 13), and commanded the town of Zamániá (p. 320, l. 4 from below). After Khán Zamán's death, he wished to make over the town to Sulaimán, king of Bengal. But Mun'im (No. 11) sent a man to him to convince him of his foolishness, and took quickly possession of the town, so that the Afgháns under their leader, Khán Khánán Lodí, had to withdraw. This incident, however, brought the Afgháns into contact with Mun'im; and as they found him a tractable man, a meeting was arranged, which took place in the neighbourhood of Patna. This meeting was of importance, inasmuch as Khán Khánán Lodí, on the part of Sulaimán, promised to read the Khuṭbah, and to strike coins in Akbar's name. Bengal therefore enjoyed peace till the death of Sulaimán in 980[1].

The Akbarnámah mentions another officer of a similar name, Asadullah Turkmán. He was mentioned above on p. 382.

117. Sa'a'dat 'Ali' Kha'n, of Badakshán.

From the Akbarnámah (III, 295) we see that he was killed in 988 in a fight with the rebel 'Arab Bahádur. Shahbáz Khán had sent Sa'ádat to a Fort[2] near Rahtás, where he was surprised by 'Arab, defeated and slain. It is said that 'Arab drank some of his blood.

118. Ru'psi' Baira'gi', brother of Rájah Bihárí Mall (No. 23).

The Maásir says that Rúpsí was the son of Rájah Bihárí Mall's brother. He was introduced at Court in the 6th year.

According to the Ṭabaqát, he was a commander of Fifteen Hundred.

Jaimall, Rúpsí's son, was the first that paid his respects to Akbar (p. 329). He served some time under Sharafuddín (No. 17), jágírdár of Ajmír, and was Thánahdár of Mírt'ha. When Sharaf rebelled, Jaimall went to Court. In the 17th year, he served in Manqalá of Khán Kalán (Vide No. 129), and accompanied the emperor on the forced march to Patan and Ahmadábád (p. 416, note). In the 21st year, he served in the expedition against Daudá, son of Rái Surjan (No. 96), and the conquest of Búndí (Muharram, 985). Subsequently, he was sent by Akbar on a mission to the grandees of Bengal; but on reaching Chausá, he suddenly died.

---

[1] According to the Akbarnámah, Badáoní, and the Ṭabaqát, Sulaimán died in 980. In Prinsep's Tables, Stewart's Bengal, &c., 981 is mentioned as the year of his death. The Riyáz ussaláṭín, upon which Stewart's work is based, has also 981; but as this History is quite modern and compiled from the Akbarnámah and the Ṭabaqát, 981 may be looked upon as a mistake. This corrects also note 1, p. 171.

[2] The MSS. call the Fort كيست, كسيت, كيست, &c. It is said to be a dependency (az muzáfát) of Rahtás.

Jaimall's wife, a daughter of Mot'h Rájah (No. 121), refused to mount the funeral pile; but Udai Singh, Jaimall's son, wished to force her to become a Suttee. Akbar heard of it, and resolved to save her. He arrived just in time. Jagnát'h (No. 69) and Rái Sál (No. 106) got hold of Udai Singh, and took him to Akbar, who imprisoned him.

The story of the heavy armour which Jaimall wore in the fight with Muhammad Husain Mírzá, after Akbar's forced march to Patan and Ahmadábád, is known from Elphinstone's History (Fifth Edition, p. 509, note). Rúpsí was offended, because the emperor ordered Karan (a grandson of Máldeo) to put on Jaimall's armour, and angrily demanded it back. Akbar then put off his own armour. Bhagwán Dás, however, thought it necessary to ask the emperor to pardon Rúpsí's rudeness.

119. I'tima'd Kha'n, Khwájahsará.

He has been mentioned above p. 13, note. His appointment to Bhakkar was made in 984, when Sayyid Muhammad Mír 'Adl (vide No. 140) had died.

Maqçúd 'Alí, who killed I'timád, is said to have been blind on one eye. When he explained to I'timád his miserable condition, his master insulted him by saying that some one should put urine into his blind eye. Maqçúd stabbed him on the spot. According to another account, I'timád was murdered by Maqçúd, whilst getting up from bed.

I'timád built I'timádpúr, 6 kos from Agrah. He had there a villa and a large tank. He also lies buried there.[1]

120. Ba'z Baha'dur, son of Shajáwal Khán [Súr].

Abulfazl says below (Third Book, Çúbah of Málwah) that his real name was Báyazíd.

Báz Báhadúr's father was Shujá'at Khán Súr, who is generally called in histories Shajáwal, or Sajáwal, Khán. The large town Shajáwalpúr, or Sajáwalpúr, in Málwah bears his name;[2] its original name, Shujá'atpúr, which Abulfazl gives below under Sirkár Sárangpúr, Málwah, appears to be no longer in use.

When Sher Sháh took Málwah from Mallú (Qádir Khán), Shujá'at Khán was in Sher Sháh's service, and was made by him governor of the conquered province. In Salím's reign, he returned to Court; but feeling dissatisfied with the king, he returned to Málwah. Salím despatched a corps after him, and Shujá'at fled to the Rájah of Dúngarpúr. Some time after, he surrendered to Salím and remained with him, Málwah being divided among the courtiers. Under 'Adlí, he was again appointed to Málwah. After a short time, he prepared himself to assume the royal purple, but died (962).

Báz Báhadur succeeded him. He defeated several opponents, and declared himself, in 963, king of Málwah. His expedition to Gaḍha was not successful, Ráni

---

[1] The Trigonometrical maps have a village of the name of I'timádpúr Mandra about 9 miles E. of Agrah, in the Parganah of Fatháhád, near Samúgar, where Aurangzíb defeated Dárá Shikoh.

[2] A few MSS. have Shujá' Khán for Shujá'at Khán, just as one MS. read Shujá'púr for Shujá'atpúr. Elphinstone also has Shujá' (p. 501, note 1). The word 'Shujá'at' should be spelled 'Shaja'at,' whilst شجاعت is pronounced Shujá'at, but the former also is pronounced with a u all over India.

Dúrgáwatí (p. 367) having repulsed him. He now gave himself up to a life of ease and luxury: his singers and dancing women were soon famous throughout Hindústán, especially the beautiful Rúpmatí, who is even now-a-days remembered.

In the very beginning of the 6th year of Akbar's reign, Adham Kokah (No. 19) was ordered to conquer Málwah. Pír Muhammad Khán (No. 20), 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak (No. 14), Qiyá Khán Gung (No. 33), Sháh Muhammad Khán of Qandahár (No. 95) and his son 'Ádil Khán (No. 125), Çádiq Khán (No. 43), Habíb 'Alí Khán (No. 133), Haidar Muhammad Khán (No. 66), Muhammad Qulí Toqbái (No. 129), Qiyá Khán (No. 184), Mírak Bahádur (No. 208), Samánjí Khán (No. 147), Páyandah Muhammad Mughul (No. 68), Mihr 'Alí Sildoz (No. 130), Sháh Fanáí (No. 115), and other grandees accompanied Adham. They met Báz Bahádur three kos from Sárangpúr and defeated him (middle of 968).[1] Báz Bahádur fled to the jungles on the Khandesh frontier. He collected a new army, but was defeated by Pír Muhammad, who had succeeded Adham. He then fled to Mírán Sháh of Khándesh, who assisted him with troops. Pír Muhammad in the mean time conquered Bíjágaḍh, threw himself suddenly upon Burhánpúr, sacked the town, and allowed an indiscriminate slaughter of the inhabitants. B. B. marched against him, and defeated him. As related above, Pír Muhammad fled, and was drowned in the Narbaddá. The imperialists thereupon got discouraged, and the jágírdárs left for Ágrah, so that Báz Bahádur without opposition re-occupied Málwah.

In the 7th year, Akbar sent 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak to Málwah. Before he arrived, B. B. fled without attempting resistance, and withdrew to the hills. He lived for some time with Bharjí, Zamíndár of Baglánah, and tried to obtain assistance from Chingiz Khán and Sher Khán of Gujrát, and lastly even from the Nizám ul Mulk. Meeting nowhere with support, B. B. went to Ráná Udai Singh. He then appears to have thrown himself on Akbar's generosity; for in the 15th year, Akbar ordered Hasan Khán Khizánchí[2] to conduct Báz Bahádur to Court. He now entered the emperor's service, and was made on his arrival a commander of One Thousand. Some time later, he was promoted to a manṣab of Two Thousand. He had been dead for some time in 1001.

Báz Bahádur and his Rúpmatí lie buried together. Their tomb stands in the middle of a tank in Ujjain. Vide No. 188.

121. Udai Singh, Mot'h Rajah, son of Rái Máldeo.

The Ṭabaqát says that he was in 1001 a commander of Fifteen Hundred and ruler of Jodhpúr.

Akbar, in 994, married Udai Singh's daughter to Jahángír. On p. 8 of the Tuzuk, Jahángír says that her name was Jagat Gosáiní. She was the mother of Prince Khurram (Sháhjahán); vide p. 310, l. 19.

---

[1] The 6th year of Akbar's reign commences on the 24th Jumádá II, 968, and the battle of Sárangpúr took place in the very beginning of the 6th year.

[2] This officer was often employed on missions. In the beginning of Akbar's reign, he was sent to Mukund Deo, the last Gajpatí of Oríśá.

In 981, he was at Kambháit, which he left on the approach of Muhammad Husain Mírzá, and withdrew to Ahmadábád to M. 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21).

Mírzá Hádí in his preface to Jahángír's Memoirs (the Tuzuk i Jahángírí) has the following remark (p. 6): 'Rájah Údai Sing is the son of Rájah Máldeo, who was so powerful that he kept up an army of 80,000 horse. Although Ráná Sánká, who fought with Firdaus-makání (Bábar) possessed much power, Máldeo was superior to him in the number of soldiers and the extent of territory; hence he was always victorious.'

From the Akbarnámah (Lucknow Edition, III. p. 183) we see that Mot'h Rájah accompanied in the 22nd year Çádiq Khán (No. 43), Rájah Askaran, and Ulugh Khán Habshí (No. 135) on the expedition against Madhukar (26th Rabí' I, 985). In the 28th year, he served in the Gujrát war with Muzaffar (Akbarnámah, III, 422).

Another daughter of Mot'h Rájah was married to Jaimall, son of Rúpsí (No. 118).

122. Khwa'jah Sha'h Mancu'r, of Shíráz.

Mançúr was at first Mushrif (accountant) of the Khúshbú Khánah (Perfume Department). Differences which he had with Muzaffar Khán (No. 37) induced Sh. Mançúr to go to Jaunpúr, where Khán Zamán made him his Díwán. Subsequently he served Mun'im Khán Khánán in the same capacity. After Mun'im's death, he worked for a short time with Todar Mall in financial matters. In the 21st year (983), he was appointed by the emperor Vazír. He worked up all arrears, and applied himself to reform the means of collecting the land revenue. The custom then was to depend on experienced assessors for the annual rate of the tax; but this method was now found inconvenient, because the empire had become greater; for at different places the assessment differed, and people and soldiers suffered losses. For this reason, the Khwájah, in the 24th year, prepared a new rent roll, based upon the preceding Dahsálah roll, and upon the prices current in the 24th year. The empire itself which did not then include Oŗisá, T'hat'hah, Kashmír, and the Dak'hin, was divided into 12 parts, called Çúbahs; and to each çúbah a sipahsálar (Military Governor), a Díwán, a Bakhshí (Military Paymaster and Secretary), a Mír 'Adl, a Çadr, a Kotwál, a Mír Bahr, and a Wáqi'ah Nawís (p. 258) were to be appointed. The strictness which the Khwájah displayed towards jágír-holders led to serious results. In the 25th year, he lowered the value of the jágírs of the grandees in Bengal by one-fourth of their former value, and those in Bihár by one-fifth. As Bengal and South Bihár were then not completely subjugated, and the Afgháns still mustered large forces in Eastern and Southern Bengal, in Oŗisá, and along the Western frontier of Bengal, Mançúr's rigour was impolitic; for Akbar's officers looked upon the old jágír emoluments as very moderate rewards for their readiness to fight the Afgháns. Akbar some time before, in consideration of the troubled state of both provinces, and the notorious climate of Bengal, had doubled the allowances of Bengal officers and increased by 50 per cent. the emoluments of those in Bihár. This Mançúr cut down: he allowed Bengal officers an increase of 50, and Bihár officers an increase of only 20 per cent. He then wrote to Muzaffar to enforce the new arrangements. But the dissatisfaction was also increased by the innovations of the emperor in religious matters, and his interference with Sayurghál tenures brought matters to a crisis. The jágír-holders in Jaunpúr, Bihár, and Bengal rebelled. That religious excitement was one of the causes of this Military revolt, which soon after was confined to Bengal, is best seen from the fact that not a single Hindú was on the side of the rebels.[1] Todar Mall tried to prevent the outbreak by reporting Mançúr and charging him with unnecessary harshness shewn especially towards Ma'çúm Khán i Farankhúdí (No. 157) and Muhammad Tarson (No. 32). Akbar deposed Mançúr and appointed temporarily Sháh Qulí Mahram (No. 45); but having satisfied himself of the justice of Mançúr's demands, he reinstated him in his office, to the great anxiety of the courtiers.

In the same year, Mírzá Muhammad Hakím, at Ma'çúm Khán i Kábulí's instigation, threatened to invade the Panjáb, and Akbar prepared to leave for the north. Mançúr's enemies charged him with want of loyalty, and shewed Akbar letters in the hand-writing of Mírzá M. Hakím's Munshí, addressed to Mançúr. Accidentally Malik Sání, Hakím's Díwán, who had the title of Vazír Khán, left his master, and paid his respects to Akbar at Sonpat. As he put up with Mançúr, new suspicions got afloat. Several words which Mançúr was said to have uttered, were construed into treason, and letters which he was said to have written to M. M. Hakím were sent to Akbar. 'Another letter from Sharaf Beg, his collector, was likewise handed to the emperor, in which it was said that Farídún Khán (maternal uncle to M. M. Hakím) had presented the Beg to the Mírzá. Akbar, though still doubtful, at the urgent solicitations of the grandees, gave orders to arrest Mançúr: he should remain in arrest till any of the grandees should stand bail for him; but as none dared to come forward, they ordered the Khidmat Rái (p. 252) to hang Man'çúr on a tree near Sarái Koṭ K'hachwah (beginning of 989).[2]

---

[1] The chief rebel was M a' ç ú m K h á n i K á b u l í, who has been frequently mentioned above (pp. 189, 342, 351, 400, &c.). He was a Turbatí Sayyid (vide p. 348, No. 37). His uncle, Mírzá 'Azíz, had been Vazír under Humáyún, and Ma'çúm himself was the foster-brother (Kokah) of Mírzá Muhammad Hakím, Akbar's brother. Having been involved in quarrels with Khwájah Hasan Naqshbandí (p. 322, l. 11) who had married the widow of Mír Sháh Abul Ma'álí, Ma'çúm, in the 20th year, went to Akbar and was made a commander of Five Hundred. He distinguished himself in the war with the Afgháns, and was wounded in a fight with Kálá Paháṛ. For his bravery, he was made a commander of One Thousand. In the 24th year, he received Oṛísá as tuyúl, when Man'çúr and Muzaffar's strictness drove him into rebellion. Historians often call him Ma'çúm Khán i 'Açí, 'Ma'çúm Khán, the rebel.' His fights with Muzaffar and Shahbáz have been mentioned above. He was at last driven to Bháṭí (p. 342, note), where he died in the 44th year (1007).

His son Shujá' i Kábulí was under Jahángír T'hánahdár of Ghaznín, and a commander of Fifteen Hundred under Sháhjahán, who bestowed upon him the title of Asad Khán. He died in the 12th year of Sháhjahán's reign. His son, Qubád, was a commander of Five Hundred.

The editors of the Pádisháhnámah, Ed. Bibl. Indica, have entered Shujá's name twice, I, b., p. 304 and p. 308. As he was a Commander of Fifteen Hundred, the second entry is wrong.

[2] So the Akbarnámah, كوت كهچوة سراي. Koṭ K'hachwah is a village on the road from Karnál to Ludhiyánah, Lat. 30° 17′; Long. 76° 53′. In the Ed. Bibl. Indica of Badáoní (II, p. 294, 293) the place is called كوت كجهة kajh koṭ, probably by mistake. Sharaf Beg, moreover, is called Musharraf Beg, and a few lines lower, again Sharaf Beg. Badáoní says nothing of Todar Mall's intrigues. Mançúr was hanged in the very beginning of 989, i. e. the end of the 25th year. The 26th year of Akbar's reign commences on the 5th Çafar 989 (the Lucknow Edition, III, 325, has wrong 990); and the 27th year commences 15th Çafar 990, which in the Bibl. Indica Edit. of Badáoní (II, p. 300, l. 2. from below) is wrongly called the 28th year.

This foul murder gave the nobles the greatest satisfaction. But when Akbar came to Kábul (10th Rajab 989), he examined into Mançúr's treasonable correspondence. It was then found, to the sorrow of Akbar, that every letter which had been shewn to him had been a forgery, and that Mançúr was not guilty of even one of the malicious charges preferred against him.

It is said, though at the time it was perhaps not proved, that Karamullah, brother of Shahbáz Khán i Kambú (p. 402, l. 19) had written the letters, chiefly at the instigation of Rájah Todar Mall.

Mançúr had been Vazír for four years.

123. Qutlugh Qadam Kha'n, Ákhtah-begí.[1]

The Turkish word qutlugh means mubárak, and qadam i mubárak, is the name given to stones bearing the impression of the foot of the Prophet. The Ṭabaqát calls him Qutlú, instead of Qutlugh, which confirms the conjecture in note 2, p. 356.

Qutlugh Qadam Khán was at first in the service of Mírzá Kámrán, and then went over to Humáyún.

In the 9th year of Akbar's reign, he assisted in the capture of Khwájah Mu'azzam, and served in the same year in Málwah against 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak (No. 14). In the battle of Khairábád, he held a command in the van.

In the 19th year, he was attached to Mun'im's Bengal corps, and was present in the battle of Takaroí (p. 375). He was no longer alive in 1001.

His son, Asad (?) Khán, served under Prince Murád in the Dak'hin, and was killed by a cannon ball before Daulatábád.

124. 'Alí' Quli' Kha'n, Indarábí.

Indaráb is a town of Southern Qunduz. The straight line drawn from Kábul north-wards to Tálikhán passes nearly through it.

'Alí Qulí had risen under Humáyún. When the Emperor left Kábul for Qandahár to enquire into the rumours regarding Bairám's rebellion, he appointed 'Alí Qulí governor of Kábul. Later, he went with Humáyún to India.

In the first year of Akbar's reign, he served under 'Alí Qulí Khán Zamán (No. 13) in the war with Hemú, and accompanied afterwards Khizr Khwájah (p. 365, note 2) on his unsuccessful expedition against Sikandar Súr.

In the fifth year, he served under Atgah Khán (No. 15), and commanded the van in the fight in which Bairám was defeated.

The Ṭabaqát says that he was commander of Two Thousand, and was dead in 1001.

125. 'A'dil Kha'n, son of Sháh Muhammad i Qalátí (No. 95).

He served under Adham Khán (No. 19) in Málwah, and took a part in the pursuit of 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak. Later, he assisted Muhammad Qulí Khán Barlás (No. 31) on his expedition against Iskandar Uzbak, and was present at the siege of Chítor (p. 368). In the beginning of the 13th year (Ramazán, 975), Akbar was on a tiger-hunt between Ajmír and Alwar. 'Adil, who was at that time mu'átab, [1] A'khtah means 'a gelding,' and ákhtah-begí, the officer in charge of the geldings (vide No. 66). This title is not to be confounded with the much higher title A'tbegí, from the Turkish át, a horse; vide p. 137, Aín 53.

i. e., under reprimand and not allowed to attend the Darbárs, had followed the party. A tiger suddenly made its appearance, and was on the point of attacking the Emperor, when 'Ádil rushed forward and engaged the tiger, putting his left hand into its mouth, and stabbing with the dagger in his right at the animal's face. The tiger got hold of both hands of his opponent, when others came up and killed the brute with swords. In the struggle, 'Ádil received accidentally a sword cut.

He died of his wounds after suffering for four months. In relating his end, Abulfazl says that the wrath of heaven overtook him. He had been in love (ta'alluq i khátir) with the wife of his father's Díwán; but he was not successful in his advances. His father remonstrated with him, and 'Ádil in his anger struck at him with a sword.

Qiyám Khán, brother of 'Ádil Khán. Jahángír made him a Khán. He served the Emperor as Qaráwalbegí (officer in charge of the drivers).

126. Khwa'jah Ghia'suddi'n ['Alí Khán, Áçaf Khán II.] of Qazwín.

He is not to be confounded with Mír Ghiásuddín 'Alí Khán (No. 161). For his genealogy, vide p. 368. The family traced its descent to the renowned saint Shaikh Shiháḥuddín Suhrawardí,[1] a descendant of Abú Bakr, the Khalífah.

Khwájah Ghiás was a man of learning. On his arrival from Persia in India, he was made a Bakhshí by Akbar. In 981, he distinguished himself in the Gujrátí war, and received the title of Áçaf Khán. He was also made Bakhshí of Gujrát, and served as such under M. 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21). In the 21st year, he was ordered to go with several other Amírs to Idar, 'to clear this dependency of Gujrát of the rubbish of rebellion.' The expedition was directed against the Zamíndár Naráin Dás Rát'hor. In the fight which ensued, the van of the Imperialists gave way, and Muqím i Naqshbandí, the leader, was killed. The day was almost lost, when Áçaf, with the troops of the wings, pressed forward and routed the enemies.

In the 23rd year, Akbar sent him to Málwah and Gujrát, to arrange with Shiháb Khán (No. 26) regarding the introduction of the Dágh (pp. 242, 256).

He died in Gujrát in 989.

Mírzá Núruddín, his son. After the capture of Khusrau, (p. 414) Jahángír made Áçaf Khán III. (No. 98), Núruddín's uncle, responsible for his safety. Núruddín who was an adherent of the Prince, found thus means to visit Khusrau, and told him that at the first opportunity he would let him escape. But soon after, Khusrau was placed under the charge of I'tibár Khán, one of Jahángír's eunuchs, and Núruddín had to alter his plans. He bribed a Hindú, who had access to Khusrau, and sent the Prince a list of the names of such grandees as favoured his cause. In four or six months, the number had increased to about 400, and arrangements were made to murder Jahángír on the road. But it happened that one of the conspirators got offended, and revealed the plot to Khwájah Waisí, Díwán of Prince Khurram, who at once reported matters to his august father. Núruddín and Muhammad Sharíf, son of I'timáduddaulah, and several others were impaled. The paper containing the list of names was also brought up; but Jahángír, at the request of Khán Jahán Lodí, threw it into the fire without having read it; "else many others would have been killed."

[1] Author of the 'Awárif ul Ma'árif. He died at Baghdád in 632. His uncle Abul-najíb (died 563) was also a famous saint. Wüstenfeld's Jacut, III., p. 203 Nafhátul Uns, pp. 478, 544. Safínat-ulaçfiá (Lahore Edition), pp. 681, 683.

127. Farrukh Husain Kha'n, son of Qásim Husain Khán. His father was an Uzbak of Khwárazm; his mother was a sister of Sulṭán Husain Mírzá.

The Maásir and the Ṭabaqát say nothing about him. A brother of his is mentioned in the Akbarnámah (II., p. 335).

128. Mu'i'nuddi'n [Ahmad] Kha'n i Farankhúdí.[1]

Mu'ín joined Humáyún's army when the Emperor left Kábul for Hindústán. In the 6th year of Akbar's reign, he was made Governor of Ágrah during the absence of the Emperor in the Eastern provinces. In the 7th year, when 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak was ordered to re-conquer Málwah, Mu'ín was made a Khán. After the conquest, he divided the province into kháliçah and jágír lands, and performed this delicate office to Akbar's satisfaction. In the 18th year, Mu'ín was attached to Mun'im's Bihár corps. He then accompanied the Khán Khánán to Bengal, was present in the battle of Takaroí, and died of fever at Gaur (vide p. 376).

The Ṭabaqát merely says of him that he had been for some time Mír Sámán.

For his son vide No. 157.

Badáoní III., p. 157) mentions a Jámi' Masjid built by Mu'ín at Ágrah.

129. Muhammad Quli' Toqba'i.

Toqbái is the name of a Chaghtái clan.

Muhammad Qulí served under Adham Khán (No. 19) in the conquest of Málwah (end of the 5th and beginning of the 6th year), and in the pursuit of Mírzá Sharafuddín (No. 17) in the 8th year. In the 17th year (980), he served in the Manqalá of Khán i Kalán (No. 16)[2]. In the 20th year, he was attached to Mun'im's corps, and was present in the battle of Takaroí, and the pursuit of the Afgháns to Bhadrak (p. 375).

---

[1] Many MSS. have Faranjúdí. The Mu'jam mentions a place فرنکد, Farankad, which is said to be near Samarqand.

[2] Akbar left Fathpúr Síkrí for Gujrát, on the 20th Çafar 980 (17th year), passed over Sangánír (8 miles south of Jaipúr), and arrived on the 15th Rabí' I. at Ajmír. On the 2nd Rabí' II., 980, he ordered Khán i Kalán (No. 16) to march in advance (Manqalá), and left Ajmír on the 22nd Rabí' II. Shortly before his arrival at Nágor, on the 9th Jumáda I., Akbar heard that Prince Dányál had been born at Ajmír on the 2nd Jumáda I., 980. He reached Patan on the 1st Rajab, 980, and Ahmadábád on the 14th of the same month. In the middle of Sha'bán, 980, the fight at Sarnál took place with Ibráhím Husain Mírzá. On the 25th Sha'bán, Akbar reached Barodah, and arrived at Súrat, on the 7th Ramazán, 980. On the 18th Ramazán, 980, Mírzá 'Azíz defeated Muhammad Husain Mírzá and the Fúládís at Patan. Súrat surrendered on the 23rd Shawwál.

There are serious discrepancies in the MSS. regarding the day and year of Prince Dányál's birth. The Tuzuk (Sayyid Ahmad's edition, p. 15) has the 10th Jumáda I., 979, which has been given above on p. 309. Badáoní (II., p. 139) has the 2nd Jumáda I., 980. The Akbarnámah has the 2nd Jumáda I., and relates the event as having taken place in 980. The MSS. of the Sawánih also place the event in 980, but say that Dányál was born on the 2nd Jumáda I., 979.

On the 6th Zí Qa'dah, 980, the 18th year of Akbar's reign commences. After the 'Íd i Qurbán (10th Zí Hajjah, 980) Akbar returned over Patan and Jálor to Ágrah, which he reached on the 2nd Çafar, 981. After this, Muhammad Husain Mírzá invaded Gujrát, and took Bah-130. Mihr 'Ali' Kha'n Sildoz.

Sildoz is the name of a Chaghtái clan. According to the Ṭabaqát, he was at first in Bairám's service. In the end of the 966, Akbar sent him to Fort Chanáḍh (Chunár), which Jamál Khán, the Afghán Commander, wished to hand over to the Imperialists for a consideration (vide Badáoni II., 32). Akbar offered him five parganahs near Jaunpúr, but Jamál did not deem the offer sufficiently advantageous, and delayed Mihr 'Alí with vain promises. Mihr 'Alí at last left suddenly for Ágrah.

On his journey to Chanáḍh, he had been accompanied by the Historian Badáoní, then a young man, whom he had given lodging in his house at Ágrah. On his return from the Fort, Badáoní nearly lost his life during a sudden storm whilst on the river. Badáoní calls him Mihr 'Alí Beg, and says that he was later made a Khán and Governor of Chítor.

He served under Adham Khán (No. 10) in Málwah, and in the Gujrát wars of 980 and 981. In the 22nd year, Akbar was on a hunting tour near Hiçár, and honored him by being his guest. In the following year, he attended Sakínah Bánú Begum, whom Akbar sent to Kábul to advise his brother, Mírzá Muhammad Hakím. In the 25th year, he served under Todar Mall against the rebel 'Arab.

The Ṭabaqát makes him a Commander of Fifteen Hundred, and says that he was dead in 1001.

131. Khwa'jah Ibra'hi'm i Badakhshi'.

He is not mentioned in the Maásir and the Ṭabaqát. From the Akbarnámah (II., p. 207) we see that he was Jágírdár of Sakít (in the Mainpúrí District). Near this town there were eight villages inhabited by robbers. In consequence of numerous complaints, Akbar resolved to surprise the dacoits. A great number were killed, and about one thousand of them were burnt in dwellings in which they had fortified themselves. Akbar exposed himself to great dangers: no less than seven arrows stuck in his shield, and his elephant fell with one foot into a grain pit, which threw the officer who was seated behind him with much force upon him. The fight chiefly took place in a village called in the MSS. برونکه or پرونکه.

The Ṭabaqát mentions a Sulṭán Ibráhím of Aubah (near Harát) among Akbar's grandees. His name is not given in the Aín. He was the maternal uncle of ronch and Kambháit, but was defeated by Qulij Khán and S. Hámid (No. 78). Ikhtiyárul Mulk also appeared and marched upon Ahmadábád. Muhammad Husain Mírzá joined him. Both besieged Ahmadábád. Akbar now resolved again to go to Gujrát. This is the famous nine days' march (24th Rabí' II., 981 to 4th Jumáda I., 981); vide p. 416, note. Muhammad Husain Mírzá was captured and killed, apparently without the order of the Emperor. Ikhtiyár was also killed. Akbar then returns, and arrives, after an absence of forty-three days, at Fathpúr Síkrí, 8th Jumáda II., 981.

---

It has been above remarked (p. 375) that the Lucknow Edition of the Akbarnámah, is not a trustworthy edition. An extraordinary error occurs in the events of the 17th year. The editors have divided the work into three, instead of two parts—the Aín i Akbarí is the third part,—and have ended their second volume with the birth of Dányál (2nd Jumáda I., 980). Their third volume opens with the beginning of the 18th year (6th Zí Qa'dah, 980). Hence they have omitted the important events which took place between those two days, viz., the conquest of Gujrát and the first defeat of the Mírzás.

Nizámuddín Ahmad, author of the Ṭabaqát. He conquered Kamáon and the Dáman i Koh.

132. Sali'm Kha'n Ka'kar.

Several MSS. of the Áín call him Salím Khán Kákar 'Alí. The Akbarnámah calls him Salím Khán Kákar, or merely Salím Khán, or Salím Khán Sirmúr. The Ṭabaqát has Salím Khán Sirmúr Afghán.

He served in the beginning of the 6th year in the conquest of Málwah, and later under Mu'izzulmulk (No. 61) in Audh, and was present in the battle of Khairábád. In 980, he took a part in the fight of Sarnál. He then served in Bengal, and was jágírdár of Tájpúr. In the 28th year, he accompanied Shahbáz Khán (No. 80) to Bháṭí. As there were no garrisons left in Upper Bengal, Vazír Khán having gone to the frontier of Oṛisá, Jabárí (vide p. 370, note 2) made an inroad from Kúch Bihár into G'horá'ghát, and took Tájpúr from Salím's men, and Púrniah from the relations of Tarson Khán (No. 32). Jabárí moved as far as Ṭándah. The Kotwál, Hasan 'Alí, was sick, and Shaikh Allah Baksh Çadr fled in precipitate haste. Fortunately, Shaikh Faríd arrived, and Jabárí withdrew to Tájpúr. In the 32nd year, Salím served under Maṭláb Khán (No. 83) against the Táríkís, and shortly after, in the 33nd year, under Çádiq Khán against the same Afghán rebels.

He was no longer alive in 1001.

133. Habi'b 'Ali' Kha'n.

He is not to be confounded with the Habíb 'Alí Khán mentioned on p. 422.

Habíb was at first in the service of Bairám Khán. In the third year, when Akbar had marched to Agrah, he ordered Habíb to assist Qiyá Khán (No. 33) in the conquest. Towards the end of the fourth year, Akbar sent him against Rantanbhúr. This fort had formerly been in the possession of the Afgháns, and Salím Sháh had appointed Jhujhár Khán governor. On Akbar's accession, Jh. saw that he would not be able to hold it against the Imperialists, and handed it over to Rái Surjan (No. 96), who was then in the service of Ráná U'dai Singh. But Habíb had to raise the siege. Abulfaẓl attributes this want of success partly to fate, partly to the confusion which Bairám's fall produced.

In the 6th year (968), he served under Adham (No. 19) in Málwah. According the Ṭabaqát, he died in 970.

134. Jagma'l, younger brother of Rájah Bihárí Mall (No. 23).

He must not be confounded with No. 218. Jagmál was mentioned on p. 329. In the 8th year, he was made governor of Mírṭha. In the 18th year, when Akbar marched to Patan and Ahmadábád, he was put in command of the great camp.

His son Kangár. He generally lived with his uncle Rájah Bihárí Mall at Court. When Ibráhím Husain Mírzá threatened to invade the Agrah District, he was ordered by the Rájah to go to Dihlí. In the 18th year, he joined Akbar at Patan. In the 21st year, he accompanied Mán Singh's expedition against Ráná Partáb. Later, he served in Bengal, chiefly under Shahbáz Khán (No. 80). When Shahbáz returned unsuccessfully from Bháṭí (p. 401), Kangár, Sayyid 'Abdullah Khán (No. 189), Rájah Gopál, Mírzádah 'Alí (No. 152) met a detachment of rebels and mistook them for their own men. Though surprised, the Imperialists held their ground and killed Naurúz Beg Qáqshál, the leader. They then joined Shahbáz, and arrived after a march of eight days at Sherpúr Múrcha.

According to the the Ṭabaqát, Kangár was in 1001 a Commander of Two Thousand. The phraseology of some MSS. implies that he was no longer alive in 1001.

135. Ulugh Kha'n Habshi', formerly a slave of Sulṭán Mahmúd of Gujrát.

Ulugh Khán is Turkish for the Persian Khán i Kalán (the great Khán).

He rose to dignity under Mahmúd of Gujrát. The word Habshí, for which MSS. often have Badakhshí, implies that he was of Abyssinian extraction, or a eunuch. In the 17th year, when Akbar entered for the first time Ahmadábád, he was one of the first Gujráti nobles that joined the Imperialists.

In the 22nd year, he served with distinction under Çádiq (No. 43) against Rájah Madhukar Bandelah, Zamíndár of Undchah. In the 24th year, he followed Çadiq, who had been ordered to assist Rájah Todar Mall on his expedition against the rebel 'Arab (Niyábat Khán) in Bihár. He commanded the left wing in the fight in which Khabíṭah (p. 356, note 1) was killed.

He died in Bengal.

136. Maqcu'd 'Ali' Kor.

The Ṭabaqát says that Maqçúd was at first in Bairám Khán's service. He had been dead for a long time in 1001.

From the Akbarnámah (II., 96) we see that he served under Qiyá Khán (No. 33) in the conquest of Gwáhár.

137. Qabu'l Kha'n.

From the Akbarnámah (II., p. 450, last event of the 15th year of Akbar's reign) we see that Qabúl Khán had conquered the District of Bhambar on the Kashmír frontier. One of the Zamíndárs of the District, named Jamál, made his submission, and obtained by flattery a great power over Qabúl, who is said to have been a good-hearted Turk. Jalál not only managed on various pretexts to send away Qabúl's troops, but also his son Yádgar Husain (No. 338), to Naushahrah. The Zamíndárs of the latter place opposed Yádgár, and wounded him in a fight. Exhausted and wounded as he was, Yádgár managed to escape and took refuge with a friendly Zamíndár. About the same time Jalál collected his men and fell over Qabúl, and after a short struggle killed him (5th Rámazan, 978).

Akbar ordered Khán Jahán to invade the District. The lands of the rebellious Zamíndárs were devastated and summary revenge was taken on the ringleaders.

Yádgár Husain recovered from his wounds. He is mentioned below among the commanders of Two Thousand.

The Akbarnámah mentions another Qabúl Khán among the officers who served in the Afghán war in Bengal under Mun'im Khán Khánán. He was present in the battle of Takaroí and pursued the Afgháns under Todar Mall to Bhadrak (p. 375).

Neither of the two Qabúl Kháns is mentioned in the Ṭabaqát and the Maásir.

LIBRARY

Commanders of Nine Hundred.[1]

138. Ku'chak 'Alí' Kha'n i Kola'bí'.

Koláb is the name of a town and a district in Badakhshán, Long. 70°, Lat. 38°. The District of Koláb lies north of Badakhshán Proper, from which it is separated by the Ámú (Oxus); but it was looked upon as part of the kingdom of Badakhshán. Hence Kúchak 'Alí is often called in the Akbarnámah Kúchak 'Alí Khán i Badakhshí.

He served under Mun'im Khán against Khán Zamán, and was present at the reconciliation at Baksar (Buxar) in the 10th year.

He also served under Mun'im Khán in Bengal, and held a command in the battle of Takaroí (p. 375).

His sons are mentioned below, No. 148, and No. 380.

139. Sabdal Kha'n, Sumbul, a slave of Humáyún.

140. Sayyid Muhammad, Mír 'Adl, a Sayyid of Amrohah.

Amrohah, formerly a much more important town than now, belongs to Sirkár Sambal. Its Sayyids belonged to old families of great repute throughout India. Mír Sayyid Muhammad had studied the Hadís and law under the best teachers of the age. The father of the Historian Badáoní was his friend. Akbar made Sayyid Muhammad Mír 'Adl. When the learned were banished from Court (ikhráj i 'ulamá), he was made governor of Bhakkar.[2] He died there two years later in 985 or 986.

From the Akbarnámah we see that S. Muhammad with other Amrohah Sayyids served, in the 18th year, under S. Mahmúd of Bárha in the expedition against Rájah Madhukar.

He advised the Historian Badáoní to enter the military service of the emperor, instead of trusting to learning and to precarious Madad i Ma'ásh tenures, an advice resembling that of 'Abdulghaffár (vide No. 99, p. 413). S. Muhammad's sons were certainly all in the army; vide No. 251, 297, 363.

141. Razawi' Kha'n, Mírzá Mírak, a Razawí Sayyid of Mashhad.

He was a companion of Khán Zamán (No. 13). In the 10th year, he went to the camp of the Imperialists to obtain pardon for his master. When in the 12th year Khán Zamán again rebelled, Mírzá Mírak was placed under the charge of Khán Báqí Khán (No. 60), but fled from his custody (at Dihlí, Badáoní II, 100). After Khán Zamán's death, he was captured, and Akbar ordered him daily to be thrown before a mast elephant; but the driver was ordered to spare him as he was a man of illustrious descent. This was done for five days, when at the intercession of the courtiers he was set at liberty. Shortly afterwards, he received a mançab and the title of Razawí Khán. In the 19th year, he was made Díwán of Jaunpúr, and in the 24th year, Bakhshí of Bengal in addition to his former duties.

---

[1] Not all MSS. of the A'ín have these words; they count the officers from No. 138 to 175 to the Hazáris. But the best MSS. have this mançab. In the lists of grandees in the Pádishákhnámah also the mançab of Nine Hundred occurs.

[2] In 983, the 20th year, (Akbarnámah III, 138). Badáoní (III. p. 75), has 984.

At the outbreak of the Bengal Military Revolt (25th year), he was with Muzaffar Khán (No. 37). His harsh behaviour towards the dissatisfied grandees is mentioned in the histories as one of the causes of the revolt. When the rebels had seceded (9th Zí Hajjah, 987) and gone from Ṭándah to Gaur, Muzaffar sent Razawí Khán, Rái Patr Dás (No. 196), and Mír Ahmad Munshí to them to try to bring them back to obedience. Things took indeed a good turn and everything might have ended peacefully, when some of Rái Patr Dás's Rájpúts said that the opportunity should not be thrown away to kill the whole lot. Rái Patr Dás mentioned this to Razawí Khán, and through him, it appears, the rebels heard of it. They took up arms and caught Rái Patr Dás. Razawí Khán and Mír Ahmad Munshí surrendered themselves.

The Maásir says that nothing else is known of Razawí Khán. The Ṭabaqát says that he was a Commander of Two Thousand and was dead in 1001.

Mírzá Mírak is not to be confounded with Mírak Khán, 'an old grandee, who died in 975' (Ṭabaqát); or with Mírak Bahádur (208).

Sháhjahán conferred the title of Razawí Khán on Sayyid 'Alí, son of Çadruççudúr Mírán S. Jalál of Bukhárá.

142. Mi'rza' Naja't Kha'n, brother of Sayyid Barkah, and 149. Mi'rza' Husain Kha'n, his brother.

Both brothers, according to the Ṭabaqát, were dead in 1001. Their names are often wrongly given in MSS., which call them Najábat, instead of Naját, and Hasan instead of Husain.

From the Akbarnámah (I, 411) we see that both brothers accompanied Humáyún on his march to India.

Mírzá Naját served, in the 10th year, against Khán Zamán (No. 13). In the end of the 21st year, he was attached to the corps which under Shihán Khán (No 26) moved to Khandesh, the king of which, Rájah 'Alí Khán, had shewn signs of disaffection. Later, he served in Bengal. When the Military Revolt broke out, Bábá Khán Qáqshál (vide p. 369, note 3), Jabárí (p. 370), Vazír Jamíl (No. 200), Sa'íd i Toqbái, and other grandees, marched on the 9th Zí Hajjah, 987, from Ṭándah to Gaur across the Ganges. Mír Naját was doubtful to which party to attach himself; and when Muzaffar sent his grandees [Mír Jamáluddín Husain Injú (No. 164), Razawí Khán (No. 141), Timúr Khán (No. 215), Rái Patr Dás (No. 196), Mír Adham, Husain Beg, Hakím Abulfath (No. 112), Khwájah Shamsuddín (No. 159), Ja'far Beg (No. 98), Muhammad Qulí Turkmán (No. 203), Qásim Khán i Sístání, 'Iwaz Bahádur, Zulf 'Alí Yazdí, Sayyid Abú Is-háq i Çafawí (No. 384), Muzaffar Beg, &c.] to the banks of the Ganges, where the rebels had drawn up their army, Mír Naját stayed with Vazír Jamíl, although Muzaffar, who was Naját's father-in-law, fully expected him to join. He must have soon after left the rebels and gone to Southern Bengal; for in the end of the 25th year he was at Sátgánw (Húglí). Abulfazl mentions him together with Murád Khán at Fathábád (No. 54), and Qiyá Khán in Oṛísá (No. 33), as one of the few that represented Imperialism in Bengal (Akbarn. III, 291). But these three were too powerless to check the rebels. Murád died, and Qiyá was soon after killed by the Afgháns under Qutlú, who looked upon the revolt as his opportunity. Mír Naját also was attacked by Qutlú and defeated near Salímábád (Sulaimán-ábád), S. of Bardwán. He fled to the Portuguese governor of Húglí.[1] Bábá Khán Qáqshál sent one of his officers to get hold of Naját; but the officer hearing of Qutlú's victory, attacked the Afgháns near Mangalkoṭ, N. E. of Bardwán. Qutlú, however, was again victorious.

143. Sayyid Ha'shim, son of Sayyid Mahmúd of Bárha. Vide No. 105, p. 419.

144. Gha'zi' Kha'n i Badakhshi'.

In MSS. Ghází is often altered to Qází, and Badakhshí to Bakhshí, and as Ghází Khán's first title was Qází Khán, his name is often confounded with No. 223. Other Ghází Kháns have been mentioned above, on pp. 367, 384.

Ghází Khán's name was Qází Nizám. He had studied law and Hadís under Mullá 'Içámuddín Ibráhím, and was looked upon as one of the most learned of the age. He was also the murid of Shaikh Husain of Khwárazm, a renowned Çúfí. His acquirements procured him access to the court of Sulaimán, king of Badakhshán (No. 5), who conferred upon him the title of Qází Khán. At the death of Humáyún, Sulaimán wishing to profit by the distracted state of the country, moved to Kábul and besieged Mun'im (No. 11). After the siege had lasted for some time, Sulaimán sent Qází Khán to Mun'im to prevail on him to surrender. But Mun'im detained him for several days, and treated him 'to the most sumptuous fare, such as Badakhshís cannot enjoy even in peaceful times.' The good dinners made such an impression on Qází Khán, that he advised Sulaimán to raise the siege, as there was no lack of provisions in the fort. Sulaimán thereupon returned to Badakhshán.

Subsequently, Qází Khán left his master, and went to India. At Khánpúr, he was introduced to the emperor on his return from Jaunpúr (Akbarn. III, 85). He received several presents, and was appointed Parwánchí writer (p. 263). Akbar soon discovered in him a man of great insight, and made him a commander of One Thousand. He also bestowed upon him the title of Ghází Khán, after he had distinguished himself in several expeditions.

In the 21st year, Ghází Khán commanded the left wing of Mán Singh's corps in the war with the Ráná. Though his wing gave way, he returned with the troops and joined the van, and fought bravely. He then received Awadh as tuqúl, and distinguished himself in Bihár against the rebellious grandees.

He died at Awadh in the 29th year (992) at the age of seventy, about the same time that Sulṭán Khwájah died (No. 108).

Ghází Khán is the author of several works (vide Badáoní III, 153).

The sijdah, or prostration, which formed so important a part in the ceremonies of the court, was his invention (vide p. 159, note).

His son Husámuddín. Akbar made him a commander of One Thousand, and sent him with the Khán Khánán (No. 29) to the Dak'hin. Suddenly a change came over Husám, and though a young man, he expressed to the commander his wish to resign the service and live as faqír at the tomb of Nizámuddín Auliá in Dihlí. The

[1] The MSS. of the Akbarnámah call him Bartab Bár Firingí, or Partáb Firingí.

Khán Khánán persuaded him in vain to give up this mad idea; but Husám next day laid aside his clothes, smeared his body over with clay and mud, and wandered about in the streets and bazars. Akbar permitted his resignation. Husám lived for thirty years as an ascetic in Dihlí. Khwájah Báqí Billah (born at Kábul and buried at Dihlí) conferred on him power of 'guiding travellers on the road of piety.' He died in 1034. His wife was Abulfazl's sister. She gave at the request of her husband her ornaments to Darwíshes, and fixed an annual sum of 12000 Rupees as allowance for the cell of her husband. Vide Tuzuk, p. 80.

145. Farhat Kha'n, Mihtar Sakáí, a slave of Humáyún.

The MSS. have Sakáí and Sakáhí. Farhat Khán is first mentioned in the war between Humáyún and Mírzá Kámrán, when many grandees joined the latter. In a fight, Beg Bábá of Koláb lifted up his sword to strike Humáyún from behind. He missed and was at once attacked by Farhat and put to flight. When Humáyún left Láhor on his march to Sarhind, where Sikandar Khán was, Farhat was appointed Shiqdár of Láhor.[1] Subsequently, Mír Sháh Abul Ma'álí was appointed Governor of Láhor. He sent away Farhat, and appointed his own men instead. Farhat therefore joined Prince Akbar on his arrival in the Panjáb.

After Akbar's accession, Farhat was made Tuyúldár of Korrah. He distinguished himself in the war with Muhammad Husain Mírzá near Ahmadábád. When the Mírzá was brought in a prisoner, Farhat refused him a drink of water which he had asked for; but Akbar gave him some of his own water, and remonstrated with Farhat for his cruelty. In the 19th year, he served in Bihár and was made jágírdár of Árah. In the 21st year (984), Gajpatí (p. 400) devastated the district. Farhang Khán, Farhat's son, marched against him, but was repulsed and slain. Farhat then moved against the enemy to avenge the death of his son, but met with the same fate (vide No. 80).

146. Ru'mi' Kha'n, Ustád Jalabí (?), of Rúm.

He is not mentioned in the Ṭabaqát and the Maásir, and but rarely in the Akbarnámah. In the 20th year, he and Báqí Khán (No. 60) and 'Abdurrahmán Beg (No. 185) accompanied a party of Begums from Court on their road to Makkah. The party consisted of Gulbadan Begum, Salímah Sulṭán Begum, Hájí Begum, Gul-'azár Begum, Sulṭán Begum (wife of Mírzá 'Askarí), Umm Kulsúm Begum (granddaughter of Gulbadan Begum), Gujnár Aghá (one of Bábar's wives), Bíbí Çafiyah, Bíbí Sarw i Sahí and Sháham Aghá (wives of Humáyún), and Salímah Khánum (daughter of Khizr Khwájah). They left in Rajab, 983.

Rúmí Khán has also been mentioned above (No. 111).

147. Sama'nji' Kha'n Qurghu'ji'. Vide No. 100.

He was a grandee of Humáyún. During the reign of Akbar, he reached the dignity of a Commander of Fifteen Hundred. The Ṭabaqát says, he was, in 1001, a Commander of 2000. In the same work, he is called a Mughul.

---

[1] Akbarnámah I, 416. At the same time, Mír Bábús (No. 73) was appointed Faujdár of the Panjáb, Mírzá Sháh Sulṭán was made Amín, and Mihtar Jauhar, treasurer.

Humáyún was on the 29th Muharram, 962, at Bigrám, crossed the Indus on the 5th Çafar, when Bairám arrived from Kábul, was at Láhor on the 2nd Rabí' II, and at Sarhind, on the 7th Rajab.

In the beginning of the 6th year (middle of 968), he served in Málwah under Adham Khán (No. 19) and was present in the battle of Sárangpúr. In the 9th year, he accompanied Muhammad Qásim Khán i Níshápúrí (No. 40) and pursued 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak (No. 14). In the 13th year, he was ordered, together with Ashraf Khán Mír Munshí (No. 74), to go to Rantanbhúr and suppress the disturbances created by Mírzá Muhammad Husain in Málwah. Later, he held a jágír in Árah.[1] He joined at first the rebellious grandees, but convincing himself of their selfishness, he went back to the Imperial camp.

In the 39th year, he was allowed to come to Court, and died a few years later. His sons received employments in the army.

From the Akbarnámah (III, 156) we see that he also served in the 21st year under Khán Jahán (No. 24), and was present in the battle of Ág Mahall. In the 30th year, he was in Málwah and was ordered to join the Dak'hin corps. Two years later, he served under Shiháb Khán (No. 26) against Rájah Madhukar.

148. Sha'hbeg Kha'n, son of Kúchak 'Alí Khán of Badakhshán (No. 138).

His name is not given in the Maásir and the Ṭabaqát. Amír Beg, a Pánçadí under Sháhjahán, appears to be his son.

149. Mi'rza' Husain Kha'n, brother of Mírzá Naját Khán (vide No. 142).

150. Haki'm Zanbi'l, brother of Mírzá Muhammad Ṭabíb of Sabzwár.

Zanbíl means 'a basket.' In the list of the physicians of the Court, lower down, he is called Hakím Zanbíl Beg. Badáoní says, he was a muqarrib, or personal attendant on the emperor.[2]

151. Khuda'wand Kha'n i Dak'hini'.

Khudáwand Khán was a Nizámsháhí Grandee. As his father was born at Mashhad, Kh. is often called Mashhadí. He was of course a Shí'ah.

He was a man of imposing stature, and well-known for his personal courage. When Khwájah Mírak of Içfahán, who had the title of Chingiz Khán, was the Vakíl of Murtazá Nizám Sháh, Kh. rose to dignity. He held several districts in Barár as jágír. The Masjid of Rohank'herah[3] was built by him.

In 993, when Mír Murtazá of Sabzwár (No. 162) commanded the army of Barár, and was no longer able to withstand Çalábat Khán Chirgis in the Dak'hin, Kh. accompanied M. Murtazá to Hindústán. Both were well received by Akbar, and Kh. was made a Commander of One Thousand. He received Paṭan in Gujrát as tuyúl.

He was married to Abulfazl's sister, and died in the end of the 34th year, before the middle of 998 (Badáoní II, 372, where in the Táríkh of his death the word Dak'hiní must be written without a h).

---

[1] The Maásir has Awadh. At the outbreak of the Bengal Military Revolt, he was Jágírdár of the Árah District (Akbarn. III, 244).

[2] The Edit. Bibl. Indica of Badáoní (III, 164) calls him wrongly Hakím Zínal Shírází. Zínal is the reading of bad MSS., and Sabzwárí is often altered to Shírází. Other bad MSS. have Ranbal.

[3] Rohank'herah lies in West Barár, in the district of Buldánah. In Abulfazl's list of parganahs in Sirkár Talingánah, there is one called Qiryát i Khudáwand Khán.

Once Abulfazl had invited several grandees, Khudáwand among them. The dishes placed before Kh. contained fowls and game and different kinds of vegetables, whilst the other guests had roast meat. He remarked it, took offence, and went away. Although Akbar assured him that Abulfazl had treated him to fowls and game according to a Hindústání custom, Kh. disliked Abulfazl, and never went again to his house. 'Hence Dak'hinís are notorious in Hindústán for stupidity.'

The Ṭabaqát puts Kh. among the Commanders of Fifteen Hundred, and says that he died in 995. The Maásir has 997.

152. Mi'rza'dah 'Ali' Kha'n, son of Muhtarim Beg.[1]

He served in the 9th year in Málwah during the expedition against 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak (No. 14). In the 17th year, he served in the Gujrát war under the Khán i Kalán (No. 16). Two years later, he commanded an expedition against Qásim Khán Kású, who with a corps of Afgháns ravaged the frontiers of Bihár. In the 23rd year, he accompanied Shahbáz Khán in the war with Ráná Partáb.[2] He then served in Bihár under Khán i A'zam (25th year) and in Bengal under Shahbáz Khán (vide No. 134, p. 436). In the 30th year (993), he was present in the fight with Qutlú near Mangalkoṭ (Bardwán). In the 31st year, he was ordered to join Qásim Khán (No. 59), who was on his way to Kashmír. Not long after, in 995 (32nd year), he was killed in a fight with the Kashmíris who defeated an Imperial detachment under Sayyid 'Abdullah Khán (No. 189).

Badáoní (III, p 326) says, he was a poet. He places his death in 996.

153. Sa'a'dat Mi'rza', son of Khizr Khwájah Khán (p. 365, note 2).

154. Shima'l Kha'n Chelah.

Chelah means 'a slave.' The Ṭabaqát says he was a Qurchí, or armour-bearer of the emperor, and a genial companion. He was made a Hazárí, and was no longer alive in 1001.

In the 9th year, he assisted in the capture of Khwájah Mu'azzam. In the 20th year, he served in the war against Chandr Sen, during which Jalál Khán (No. 213) had lost his life, and afterwards under Sayyid Ahmad (No. 91) and Shahbáz (No. 80) in the expedition to Siwánah.

155. Sha'h Gha'zi' Kha'n, a Sayyid from Tabríz.

The Ṭabaqát calls him a Turkmán, and says, he was dead in 1001. He served, in the 19th year with Mírzádah 'Alí Khán (No. 152) against Qásim Khán Kású.

He may be the Sháh Ghází Khán mentioned below under No. 161.

156. Fa'zil Kha'n, son of Khán i Kalán (No. 16).

He was mentioned above, on p. 322.

157. Ma'cu'm Kha'n, son of Mu'ín uddín Ahmad Farankhúdí (No. 128).

He is not to be confounded with Ma'çúm Khán i Kábulí (p. 431, note).

Ma'çúm was made a Hazárí on the death of his father, and received Gházípúr as tuyúl. He joined Todar Mall in Bihár, though anxious to go over to the rebels (p. 351).

---

[1] He is also called Mírzád 'Alí Khán. My text edition has wrong Mírzá 'Alí Khán. For Muhtarim many MSS. read wrongly Muhram. His father, Muhtarim Beg, was a grandee of Humáyún's Court.

[2] Generally called in the Histories Ráná Kíká.

Not long afterwards, Mírzá Muhammad Hakím, Akbar's brother, threatened to invade the Panjáb, and as the emperor had resolved to move personally against him, Ma'çúm thought it opportune to rebel. He seized Jaunpúr and drove away Tarson Kháu's men (No. 32). As Akbar had known him from a child, he was inclined to pardon him, provided he left Jaunpúr and accepted Awadh as tuyúl. This M. did; but he continued to recruit, and when Sháh Qulí Mahram and Rájah Bír Bar had failed to bring him to his senses, Shahbáz Khán, on hearing of his conduct, determined to punish him. The events of the expedition have been related on p. 400.

After his defeat near Awadh, M. threw himself into the town; but as several rebel chiefs had left him, he absconded, without even taking his family with him. He applied to two Zamíndárs for assistance; but the first robbed him of his valuables, and the latter waylaid him, and had it not been for a bribe, M. would not have escaped. About this time one of his friends of the name of Maqçúd joined him and supplied him with funds. M. collected men and surprised and plundered the town of Bahráich. Vazír Khán (No. 41) and others moved from Hájípúr against him; but M. escaped them. After plundering the town of Muhammadábád, he resolved to surprise Jaunpúr, when the tuyúldárs of the district marched against him. Being hard pressed, he applied to M. 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21) to intercede for him. Akbar again pardoned him, and gave him the Parganah Mihsí, Sirkár Champáran, as tuyúl. But M. continued in a rebellious attitude, and when M. 'Azíz prepared to punish him, he applied for leave to go to Court. He arrived, in the 27th year, in Ágrah, and was again pardoned, chiefly at the request of Akbar's mother.

Soon after, on going home one night from the Darbár, he was killed on the road. An enquiry was ordered to be held, but without result, and people believed that Akbar had connived at the murder. Compare with this the fate of Nos. 61 and 62, two other Bihár rebels.

158. Tolak Kha'n Qu'chi'n.

Tolak commenced to serve under Bábar. He joined Humáyún on his return from Persia. When the emperor had seized on Kábul, and M. Kámrán came near the town under the mask of friendship, many of Humáyún's grandees went over to him, and the emperor was obliged to retreat northwards to Zahák (ضحاک) and Bámiyán, where he hoped to find faithful officers. He sent, however, Tolak and several others to Kábul, to bring him correct information, but Tolak alone returned. For his faithfulness he was made Qurbegí.

Tolak accompanied Humáyún to India. After the emperor's death he belonged to those who supported the young Akbar, and was instrumental in the capture at a dinner party of Mír Sháh Abul Ma'álí. Afterwards, T. went to Kábul, where he remained for a long time. In the 7th year of Akbar's reign, he was suddenly imprisoned by the young and hasty Ghaní Khán, son of Mun'im Khán (No. 11), who was in charge of Kábul. Tolak managed to escape, and went to Bábá Khátún, his jágír, collecting men to take revenge on Ghaní. A favourable opportunity presented itself, when Ghaní one day had left Kábul for a place called Khwájah Sayyárán (خواجه سیاران), to waylay a caravan from Balkh. He was just feasting with his companions, when Tolak Khán fell upon them, Ghaní, who was drunk, was caught, and Tolak marched to Khwájah Awáish (خواجه اواش), a place two kos distant from Kábul. But he was opposed by Fazíl Beg (Mun'im's brother) and his son Abulfath (called wrongly Abdul Fath, on p. 318), and thought it advisable to let Ghaní go. Ghaní immediately collected men and pursued Tolak, who now prepared himself to go to Hindústán. Ghaní overtook him near the Áb i Ghorband, and killed Bábá Qúchín and several other relations and friends of Tolak. Tolak himself and his son Isfandiyár managed to cut their way through the enemies, and arrived safely in India. Akbar gave Tolak a jágír in Málwah, where he remained for a long time.

In the 28th year, T. served under the Khán Khánán (No. 29) in Málwah and Gujrát, and defeated Sayyid Daulat in Kambháit. He distinguished himself in the fights with Muzaffar, and served under Qulij Khán (No. 42) in the conquest of Bahronch. In the 30th year, he was attached to the corps which under M. 'Azíz Kokah was to be sent to the Dak'hin. Having indulged in slander during the disagreement between M. 'Azíz Kokah and Shihábúddín, he was imprisoned. After his release he was sent to Bengal, where in the 37th year he served under Mán Singh against the Afgháns.

He died in the beginning of the 41st year (1004).

159. Khwa'jah Shamsuddi'n Khawa'fí'.

Khawáfí means 'coming from Khawáf,' which is a district and town in Khurásán. Our maps have 'Kháff' or 'Khá,' due west of Harát, between Lat. 60° and 61°. According to the Mu'jamulbuldán, "Khawáf is a large town belonging [at the time the author wrote] to the revenue district of Nísháṕúr. Near it lies on one side Búshanj which belongs to the district of Harát, and on the other Zúzan. Khawáf contains one hundred villages and three towns (Sanján, Síráwand, and Kharjard)." Amín Rází in his excellent Haft Iqlím says that the district of Khawáf is famous for the kings, ministers, and learned men it has produced. The dynasty called, Al i Muzaffar, of whom seven kings ruled for 59 years over Fáris and Shíráz,[1] were Khawáfís. The author of the Zakhíratulkhawánín says that the people of Khawáf were known to be bigoted Sunnís. When Sháh 'Abbás i Çafawí, in the beginning of his reign, came to Khawáf, he forced the inhabitants to abuse, as is customary with Shí'ahs, the comp nions of the Prophet (sabb i çihábah); but as the people refused to do so, he had seventy of the principal men thrown down from a Masjid. Although then no one

---

[1] They succumbed to Timur. The Histories disagree regarding the length of their reign, some give 57 years, from A. H. 741 to 798.

Amín Rází mentions also several learned men and vazírs besides those mentioned in the Mu'jam, and relates some anecdotes illustrating the proverbial sagacity and quick-wittedness of the inhabitants of Khawáf.

The number of Khawáfís in the service of the Mughul emperors was considerable. One is mentioned below, No. 347. The Maásir has notes on the following,—Mírzá 'Izzat (under Jahángír); Mírzá Ahmad, and Mu'tamid Khán Muhammad Çálih (under Sháhjahán); Sayyid Amír Khán, Shaikh Mír, Khwájah Mír Khawáfí Çalábat Khán, 'Ináyat Khán, and Muçtafá Khán (under Aurangzíb). The lists of grandees in the Pádisháhnámah mention several other Khawáfís. In later times we have the name of 'Abdurrazzáq Çimçám uddaulah Aurangábádí, who was murdered in 1171. His ancestor, Mír Kamáluddín Khawáfí, had served under Akbar.

For Khawáfí, some MSS. have Kháfí. The Historian Muhammad Háshim Kháfí Khán has also been supposed to be a Khawáfí, though it must be observed that geographical titles are rare. There are a few, as Rúmí Khán, Ghazmín Khán, Habshí Khán. The authors of the Pádisháhnámah and the Maásir never use the form Kháfí.

was converted, the Khawáfís are now as stanch Shí'ahs as they were formerly bigoted Sunnís.

Khwájah Shamsuddín was the son of Khwájah 'Alá uddín, who was a man much respected in Khawáf. Shams accompanied Muzaffar Khán (No. 37), his countryman, to Bihár and Bengal. At the outbreak of the Military Revolt, he was caught by the rebels, and Ma'çúm i Kábulí had him tortured with a view of getting money out of him. Shams was half dead, when at the request of 'Arab Bahádur he was let off and placed under 'Arab's charge, who lay under obligations to him. But Shams eluded his vigilance, and fled to Singrám, Rájah of K'harakpúr (Bihár).[1] As the roads were all held by the rebels, Shams could not make his way to the Imperial army. He collected men, attacked the rebels, and carried off some of their cattle; and when some time after dissensions broke out among the mutineers, he found means to escape. Akbar received him with every distinction, and appointed him, in the same year (26th), to superintend the building of Fort Aṭak on the Indus, near which the Imperial camp then was.[2]

After this, Shams was for some time Díwán of Kábul. In the 39th year, when Qulij Khán (No. 42) after the death of Qásim Khán (No. 59) was made Çúbahdár of Kábul, Shams was made Díwán of the empire (Díwán i kul), vice Qulij.[3] When Akbar, in the 43rd year, after a residence of fourteen years in the Panjáb, moved to Ágrah, to proceed to the Dak'hin, the Begums with Prince Khurram (Sháhjahán) were left in Láhor, and Shams was put in charge of the Panjáb, in which office he continued, after Akbar's mother had returned, in the 44th year, with the Begums to Ágrah.

Shams died at Láhor in the 45th year (1008). The family vault which he had built near Bábá Hasan Abdál having been used for other purposes (p. 425), he was buried in Láhor in that quarter of the town which he had built, and which to his honour was called Khawáfípúrah.

---

[1] Singrám later fought with Shahbáz Khán (No. 80), and ceded Fort Mahdá. Though he never went to Court, he remained in submission to the Imperial governors of Bihár and Bengal. In the first year of Jahángír's reign, Jahángír Qulí Khán Lálah Beg, governor of Bihár, sent a corps against Singrám, who was killed in a fight. His son turned Muhammadan, and received the name 'Rájah Roz-afzún,' was confirmed in his zamíndárís, and reached under Jahángír the dignity of a Commander of Fifteen Hundred. Under Sháhjahán, he served with Mahábat Khán in Balkh, against Jhujár Singh Bundelah, in the siege of Parendah, and was at his death in 1044 a Commander of Two Thousand. His son, Rájah Bihrúz served in Qandahár, in the war between Aurangzíb and Sháh Shujá', and distinguished himself in the second conquest of Palámau (4th year of Aurangzíb). Rájah Bihrúz died in the 8th year of Aurangzíb's reign. Vide Proceedings, Asiatic Society, Bengal, for December, 1870.

[2] The author of the Maásir repeats Abulfazl's etymology of the name 'Aṭak,' which was given on p. 374, note. He also says that some derive it from the Hindí aṭak, prevention, a bar, "because Hindús will not go beyond the Indus." But there is no instance on record that Hindús ever did object to cross the Indus. Bhagwán Dás, Mán Singh, and others, were governors of Kábul and Zábulistán, and had their Rájpúts there; and during the reign of Sháhjahán, the Rájpúts distinguished themselves in the conquest of Balkh and the siege of Qandahár.

Abulfazl's etymology is also doubtful; for in the Akbarnámah (II, 302) he mentions the name 'Aṭak' long before the building of the Fort (III, 335).

[3] The twelve Díwáns, who in 1003 had deen appointed to the 12 Çúbahs, were under his orders. Díwán i Kul is the same as Vazír i Kul, or Vazír i Muṭlaq, or merely Vazír.

He is said to have been a man of simple manners, honest and faithful, and practical in transacting business.

Like Shaikh Farid i Bukhárí (No. 99), whom he in many respects resembles, he died childless.

His brother, Khwájah Múmin Khawáfí, was made, on his death, Díwán of the Panjáb. Múmin's son, 'Abdul Kháliq, was a favourite of Áçaf Khán IV. (p. 369). He was killed by Mahábat Khán, when Áçaf had been removed by Mahábat from Fort Aṭak and imprisoned.

160. Jagat Singh, eldest of Rájah Mán Sing (No. 30).

Kuṉwar Jagat Singh served in the 42nd year under Mírzá Ja'far Áçaf Khán (No. 98) against Rájah Bású, zamíndár of Mau and Paṭ'hán (Núrpúr, N. E., Panjáb). In the 44th year (1008), when Akbar moved to Málwah, and Prince Salím (Jahángír) was ordered to move against Ráná Amr Singh, Mán Singh was called from Bengal, and Jagat Singh was ordered to go to Bengal as náib of his father. While still at Ágrah, he died from excessive drinking. Regarding J. S.'s daughter, vide p. 310 and No. 175.

Mahá Sing, Jagat's younger son, was appointed in his stead. His youth and inexperience inclined the Afgháns under 'Usmán and Shujáwal Khán to attack him. They defeated him and Partáb Singh, son of Rájah Bhagwán Dás, (No. 336), near Bhadrak in Oṛisá (45th year). Mán Singh hastened to Bengal, and after defeating in 1009 the Afgháns near Sherpúr 'Atáí, between Shiúṛí (Sooree) in Bírbhúm and Murshidábád, recovered Lower Bengal and Oṛisá.

Mahá Singh died soon after, like his father, from excessive drinking.

161. Naqí'b Kha'n, son of Mír 'Abdullaṭíf of Qazwín.

Naqíb Khán is the title of Mír Ghiásuddín 'Alí. His family belongs to the Saifí Sayyids of Qazwín, who were known in Írán for their Sunní tendencies. His grandfather Mír Yahyá was 'a well known theologian and philosopher, who had acquired such extraordinary proficiency in the knowledge of history, that he was acquainted with the date of every event which had occurred from the establishment of the Muhammadan religion to his own time.'

'In the opening of his career, Mír Yahyá was patronized by Sháh Ṭahmásp i Çafawí, who called him Yahyá Ma'çúm,[1] and was treated by the king with such distinction, that his enemies, envious of his good fortune, endeavoured to poison his patron's mind against him, by representing that he and his son, Mír 'Abdullaṭíf, were the leading men among the Sunnís of Qazwín. They at last prevailed so far as to induce the king, when he was on the borders of Á'zarbáiján, to order Mír Yahyá and his son, together with their families, to be imprisoned at Içfahán. At that time, his second son, 'Alá-uddaulah was in Á'zarbáiján, and sent off a special messenger to convey this intelligence to his father. Mír Yahyá being too old and infirm to fly, accompanied the king's messenger to Içfahán, and died there, after one year and nine months, in A. H. 962, at the age of 77 years.'[2]

---

[1] I. e. exempt, probably from losing life and property for his attachment to Sunnism.

[2] Mír Yahyá is the author of a historical compendium, called Lubbuttawáríkh, composed in 1541. Vide Elliot's Bibl. Index to the Historians of India, p. 129. His second son 'Aláuddaulah

'Mír 'Abdullaṭíf, however, immediately on receipt of his brother's communication, fled to Gílán,[1] and afterwards at the invitation of the emperor Humáyún went to Hindústán, and arrived at Court with his family just after Akbar had ascended the throne. By him he was received with great kindness and consideration, and appointed in the second year of his reign as his preceptor. At that time Akbar knew not how to read and write, but shortly afterwards he was able to repeat some odes of Háfiz. The Mír was a man of great eloquence and of excellent disposition, and so moderate in his religious sentiments,[2] that each party used to revile him for his indifference.'

'When Bairám Khán had incurred the displeasure of the emperor and had left Ágrah and proceeded to Alwar, with the intention, as it was supposed, of exciting a rebellion in the Panjáb, the emperor sent the Mír to him, to dissuade him from such an open breach of fidelity to his sovereign.' Elliot, Index, l. c.

Mír 'Abdullaṭíf died at Síkrí on the 5th Rajab, 981,[3] and was buried at Ajmír near the Dargáh of Mír Sayyid Husain Khing-Suwár.

'Abdullaṭíf had several sons. The following are mentioned—1. Naqíb Khán; 2. Qamar Khán; 3. Mír Muhammad Sharíf. The last was killed in 984 at Fathpúr by a fall from his horse while playing hockey with the emperor (Bad. II., 230). For Qamar Khán, vide No. 243.

Naqíb Khán arrived with his father in India, when Akbar after his accession was still in the Panjáb (Akbarn. II., 23), and soon became a personal friend of the emperor (II., 281). In the 10th year, he conveyed Akbar's pardon to Khán Zamán, for whom Mun'im Khán had interceded (II., 281). In the 18th year, N. accompanied the emperor on the forced march to Patan and Ahmadábád (p. 435, note), and in the following year to Patna. In the end of the 21st year, he took part in the expedition to Idar (III., 165), and was sent in the following year to Málwah or Gujrát, after the appointment of Shiháb to the latter province. After the outbreak of the Military Revolt in Bengal, N. with his brother Qamar Khán served under Todar Mall and Çádiq Khán in Bihár against Ma'çúm i Kábulí (III., 273). In the 26th year, he received the title of Naqíb Khán.[4] Though during the reign of Akbar, he did not wrote under the political name of Kámí, and is the author of the Nafáis ul Maásir, a 'tazkirah,' or work on literature. Badáoní (III., 97) says he composed a Qaçídah in which, according to the manner of Shí'ahs, he abused the companions of the Prophet and the Sunnís, and among the latter his father and elder brother ('Abdullaṭíf), whom he used to call Hazrat i Áqá, as he had been his teacher. But the verse in which he cursed his relations is ambiguously worded.

---

Some fix the date of Mír Yahyá's death two years earlier.

[1] The MSS. of the Maásir have جبال كيلانات; so also Badáoní, l. c.

[2] He was the first that taught Akbar the principle of çulh i kul, 'peace with all,' the Persian term which Abulfazl so often uses to describe Akbar's policy of toleration. Abulfazl (Akbarn. II., 23) says that 'Abdullaṭíf was accused in Persia of being a Sunní and in Hindústán of being a Shí'ah.

[3] Elliot has by mistake 971. The Táríkh of his death in the Maásir and Badáoní (III., p. 99) is fakhr i ál i Yá-Sín, 'the pride of the descendants of Yásín (the Prophet)'=981, if the long alif in ál be not counted 2, but 1.

[4] Kewal Ram, according to Elliot, says in the Tazkirat ul Umará that the title was conferred on Naqíb Khán in the 25th year for his gallant conduct in repelling a night attack made by Ma'çúm Khán i Kábulí on the Imperialists under Todar Mall and Çádiq Khán. This night attack is related in the Akbarnámah (III., 293). The fight took place in the 28th year, near Gya; but Abulfazl says nothing of Naqíb's 'gallant conduct;' he does not even mention his name.

rise above the rank of a Hazárí, he possessed great influence at Court. He was Akbar's reader, and superintended the translations from Sanscrit into Persian, mentioned on p. 104. Several portions of the Tárikh i Alfí also (p. 106) are written by him.

Naqíb had an uncle of the name of Qází 'Ísá, who had come from Irán to Akbar's Court, where he died in 980. His son was Sháh Ghází Khán (vide No. 155). Akbar married the latter to Sakínah Bánú Begum, sister of Mírzá Muhammad Hakím (Akbar's half-brother); and as Naqíb Khán, in the 38th year, reported that Qází 'Ísá had expressed a dying wish to present his daughter to Akbar, the emperor married her. Thus two of Naqíb's cousins married into the imperial family.

On the accession of Jahángír, N. was made a Commander of 1500 (Tuzuk, p. 12). He died in the 9th year of J.'s reign (beginning of 1023) at Ajmír, and was buried at the side of his wife within the enclosure of Mu'ín i Chishtí's tomb (Tuzuk, p. 129). His wife was a daughter of Mír Mahmúd, Munshí ulmamálik, who had been for twenty-five years in Akbar's service (Badáoní III., 321).

Naqíb's son, 'Abdullatíf, was distinguished for his acquirements. He was married to a daughter of M. Yúsuf Khán (No. 35), and died insane.

Naqíb Khán, like his grandfather, excelled in history. It is said that he knew the seven volumes of the Rauzatuççafá by heart. Jahángír, in his Memoirs, praises him for his remarkable memory, and Badáoní, who was Naqíb's school fellow and friend, says that no man in Arabia or Persia was as proficient in history as Naqíb. Once on being asked how many pigeons there were in a particular flock then flying, he responded instantly, without making a mistake of even one.

162. Mi'r Murtaza' Kha'n, a Sabzwárí Sayyid.

Mír Murtazá Khán was at first in the service of 'Ádil Sháh of Bíjápúr. Murtazá Nizám Sháh called him to Ahmadnagar, and made him Military Governor of Barár, and later Amírul Umará. He successfully invaded, at Nizám Sháh's order, 'Ádil Sháh's dominions. But Nizám Sháh suffered from insanity, and the government was left in the hands of his Vakíl, Sháh Qulí Çalábat Khán; and as he reigned absolutely, several of the nobles, especially the tuyúldárs of Barár, were dissatisfied. Çalábat Khán being bent on ruining them, Mír Murtazá, Khudáwand Khán (No. 151), Jamshed Khán i Shírází, and others, marched in 992 to Ahmadnagar. Çalábat Khán and Sháhzádah Mírán Husain surprised them and routed them. Mír Murtazá lost all his property, and unable to resist Çalábat Khán, he went with Khudáwand Khán to Akbar, who made him a Commander of One Thousand.

M. M. distinguished himself under Sháh Murád in the Dak'hin invasion. When the Prince left Ahmadnagar, Çádiq Khán (No. 43) remained in Mahkar (South Barár), and M. M. in Ilichpúr, to guard the conquered districts. During his stay there, he managed to take possession of Fort Gáwíl, near Ilichpúr (43rd year, 1007), persuading the commanders Wajíhuddín and Biswás Ráo, to enter Akbar's service. Later, M. M. distinguished himself in the conquest of Ahmadnagar under Prince Dányál, and received a higher Mançab, as also a flag and a naqqárah.

Mír Murtazá is not to be confounded with the learned Mír Murtazá Sharíf i Shírází (Badáoní III., 320), or the Mír Murtazá mentioned by Badáoní, III., 279.

163. Shamsi', son of Khán i A'zam Mírzá Kókah (No. 21).

He was mentioned above on pp. 327 and 328. At the end of Akbar's reign, Shamsí[1] was a Commander of Two Thousand.

In the third year of Jahángír's reign, he received the title of Jahángír Qulí Khán, vacant by the death of Jahángír Qulí Khán Lálah Beg, Governor of Bihár, and was sent to Gujrát as náib of his father. Mírzá 'Azíz had been nominally appointed Governor of that Çúbah; but as he had given the emperor offence, he was detained at Court. Subsequently Shamsí was made a Commander of Three Thousand, and Governor of Jaunpúr. Whilst there, Prince Sháhjahán had taken possession of Bengal, and prepared himself to march on Patna, sending 'Abdullah Khán Fírúz-Jang and Rájah Bhím in advance towards Iláhábád. On their arrival at Chausá, Shamsí left Jaunpúr, and joined Mírzá Rustam (No. 9), Governor of the Çúbah of Iláhábád.

On Sháhjahán's accession, Shamsí was deposed, but allowed to retain his Mançab. A short time after, he was appointed to Súrat and Júnágaḍh, vice Beglar Khán. He died there in the 5th year of Sháhjahán's reign (1041).

Shámsí's son, Bahrám, was made by Sháhjahán a Commander of 1000, 500 horse (Pádisháhn. I., b., 309), and appointed to succeed his father. Whilst in Gujrát, he built a place called after him Bahrámpúrah. He died in the 18th year of Sháhjahán's reign (Pádisháhn. II., p. 733).

164. Mi'r Jama'luddi'n Husain, an Injú Sayyid.

From a remark in the Waççáf it appears that a part of Shíráz was called Injú; vide Journal, Asiatic Society, Bengal, 1868, p. 67 to p. 69.

Mír Jamáluddín Injú belongs to the Sayyids of Shíráz, who trace their descent to Qásim arrásí ibn i Hasan ibn i Ibráhím Ṭabáṭibá i Husainí. Mír Sháh Mahmúd and Mír Sháh Abú Turáb, two later members of this renowned family, were appointed during the reign of Sháh Ṭahmásp i Çafawí, at the request of the Chief Justice of Persia, Mír Shamsuddín Asadullah of Shushtar, the first as Shaikhul Islám of Persia, and the second as Qází-lquzát. Mír Jamáluddín is one of their cousins.

Mír Jamáluddín went to the Dak'hin, the kings of which had frequently intermarried with the Injús. He afterwards entered Akbar's service, took part in the Gujrát wars, and was present in the battle of Patan (p. 396). Later he was sent to Bengal. At the outbreak of the Military Revolt, he was with Muzaffar (Akbarnámah, III, p. 255). In the 30th year (993), he was made a Commander of Six Hundred, and accompanied, shortly after, A'zam Khán (No. 21) on his expedition to Gaḍha and Ráisín (Akbarn. III., 472). In the 36th year, he had a jágír in Málwah, and served under A'zam Khán in the Dak'hin. His promotion to the rank of a Hazárí took place in the 40th year. When in the 45th year the fort of Ásír had been conquered, 'Ádil Sháh, king of Bíjápúr wished to enter into a matrimonial alliance with Akbar, and offered his daughter to Prince Dányál. To settle matters, Akbar despatched the Mír in 1009 (Akbarn. III., 846) to the Dak'hin. But the marriage only took place in 1013, near Patan. After this, accompanied by the Historian Firishtah, he went to Ágrah, in order to lay before the emperor 'such presents and tribute, as had never before come from the Dak'hin.'

---

[1] Shamsí is an abbreviation for Shamsuddín.

At the end of Akbar's reign, Mír J. was a Commander of Three Thousand. Having been a favorite of Prince Salím, he was promoted after the Prince's accession to the post of a Chahár-Hazárí, and received a naqqárah and a flag. When Khusrau rebelled, the Mír received the order to effect an understanding by offering Khusrau the kingdom of Kábul with the same conditions under which M. Muhammad Hakím, Akbar's brother, had held that province. But the Prince did not consent; and when he was subsequently made a prisoner (p. 414) and brought before his father, Hasan Beg (No. 167), Khusrau's principal agent, told Jahángír that all Amírs of the Court were implicated in the rebellion; Jamáluddín had only a short time ago asked him (Hasan Beg) to promise him an appointment as Panjhazárí. The Mír got pale and confused, when Mírzá 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21) asked the emperor not to listen to such absurdities; Hasan Beg knew very well that he would have to suffer death and therefore tried to involve others; he himself ('Azíz) was the chief conspirator, and ready as such to undergo any punishment. Jahángír consoled the Mír, and appointed him afterwards Governor of Bihár. In the 11th year, Mír Jamál received the title of 'Azaduddaulah. On this occasion, he presented the emperor a dagger, inlaid with precious stones, the making of which he had himself superintended when at Bíjápúr. At the top of the handle, he had a yellow yáqút fixed, perfectly pure, of the shape of half an egg, and had it surrounded by other yáqúts and emeralds. The value was estimated at 50,000 Rupees.

In 1621, Jahángír pensioned him off, because he was too old, allowing him four thousand rupees per mensem. The highest rank that he had reached, was that of a brevet Panjhazárí with an actual command of Three Thousand and Five Hundred. In 1623, at the eighteenth anniversary of Jahángír's accession, he presented the emperor a copy of the great Persian Dictionary, entitled Farhang i Jahángírí, of which he was the compiler. The first edition of it had made its appearance in 1017.[1]

After having lived for some time in Bahráich, Mír Jamál returned to Ágrah, where he died.

Mír Jamáluddín had two sons. 1. Mír Amínuddín. He served with his father, and married a daughter of 'Abdurrahím Khán Khánán (No. 29). He died when young.

2. Mír Husámuddín. He married the sister of Ahmad Beg Khán, brother's son of Ibráhím Khán Fath-Jang (Núr Jahán's brother). Jahángír made him Governor of Ásír, which fort he handed over to Prince Sháhjahán during his rebellion. On Sháhjahán's accession, he was made a Commander of 4000, with 3000 horse, received a present of 50,000 Rupees, and the title of Murtazá Khán. He was also made Governor of T'hat'hah, where he died in the second year (1039).

Mír Husám's sons—1. Çimçámuddaulah. He was made Díwán of Sháh Shujá' in the 21st year. In the 28th year, he was appointed Governor of Oríssá with a command of 1500, and 500 horse. He died in the end of the same year. 2. Núrullah. He is mentioned in the Pádisháhnámah (I., b., p. 312) as a Commander of Nine Hundred, 300 horse.

---

[1] Regarding the Farhang i Jahángírí, vide Journal, Asiatic Society, Bengal, 1868, pp. 12 to 15, and 65 to 69.

165. Sayyid Ra'ju', of Bárha.

Historians do not say to which of the four divisions (vide p. 391) of the Bárha clan Ráju belongs.

He served in the 21st year, under Mán Singh, and in the 28th year, under Jagannáth (No. 69), against the Ráná. While serving under the latter, Rájú commanded the Imperial garrison of Mandalgarh, and successfully conducted an expedition against a detachment of the Ráná's troops. In the 30th year, Jagannáth and Rájú attacked the Ráná in his residence; but he escaped.

Later, Rájú served under Prince Murád, Governor of Málwah, whom, in the 36th year, he accompanied in the war with Rájah Madhukar; but as the Prince was ordered by Akbar to return to Málwah, Rájú had to lead the expedition. In the 40th year, he served in the siege of Ahmadnagar. Once the enemies surprised the Imperialists, and did much damage to their cattle. Rájú attacked them, but was killed in the fight together with several of his relations (1003 A. H.).

166. Mi'r Shari'f i A'muli'.

His antecedents and arrival in India have been mentioned above on p. 176. In the 30th year, (993) Prince Mírzá Muhammad Hakím of Kábul died, and the country was annexed to India. Mír Sharíf was appointed Amín and Çadr of the new province. In the following year, he served under Mán Singh in Kábul. In the 36th year,[1] he was appointed in the same capacity, though with more extensive powers, to Bihár and Bengal. In the 43rd year, he received Ajmír as aqṭá', and the Parganah of Mohán near Lak'hnau as tuyúl. During the siege of Asír, he joined the Imperial camp with his contingent, and was well received by the emperor.

He is said to have risen to the rank of a Commander of Three Thousand. He was buried at Mohán. On his death, neither books nor official papers were found; his list of soldiers contained the names of his friends and clients, who had to refund him six months' wages per annum.

Jahángír in his memoirs (Tuzuk, p. 22) praises him very much.

The Ṭabaqát says, 'Mír Sharíf belongs to the heretics of the age. He is well acquainted with çúfism, and is at present (1001) in Bihár.'

Note on the Nuqṭawiah Sect (نقطوية).

It was mentioned above (p. 177) that Mír Sharíf spread in India doctrines which resembled those of Mahmúd of Basakhwán.[2] The curious sect which Mahmúd founded, goes by the name of Mahmúdiyah, or Wáhidiyah, or Nuqṭawiyah, or Umaná.[3] Mahmúd

[1] The Lucknow edition of the Akbarnámah (III., p. 629) says he was made at the same time a Commander of Four Thousand. This must be a mistake, because Mír Sharíf was at Jahángír's accession a Commander of 2500 (Tuzuk, p. 22).

[2] Badáoní (Ed. Bibl. Indica) has Basakkwán; the MSS. of the Maásir Basákhwán (with a long penultima) and on other places Basákhán, without a w; the Calcutta edition of the Dabistán (p. 374) and Shea and Troyer's Translation have Masajwán,—a shifting of the diacritical points.

[3] The name nuqṭawí was evidently used by Badáoní, though the MSS. from which the Bibl. Indica edition was printed, have Nabaṭí, which was given on p. 176. For Umaná, Shea's translation of the Dabistán has Imaná; but امنا (umaná) is, no doubt, the plural of امين amín.

called himself Shakhç i Wáhid, or 'the individual,' and professed to be the Imám Mahdí, whose appearance on earth ushers in the end of the world. According to the Calcutta edition of the Dabistán and Shea's Translation, he lived about 600 A. H.; but the MSS. of the Maásir have A. H. 800, which also agrees with Badáoní's statement that Mahmúd lived at the time of Timur. The sect found numerous adherents in Irán, but was extinguished by Sháh 'Abbás i Mází,[1] who killed them or drove them into exile.

Mahmúd had forced into his service a passage from the Qorán (Sur. XVII., 81), 'asá an yab'asaka rabbuka maqáman mahmúdan, 'Peradventure thy Lord will raise thee to an honorable (mahmúd) station.' He maintained that the human body (jasad) had since its creation been advancing in purity, and that on its reaching a higher degree of perfection, 'Mahmúd' would arise, as indicated in the passage from the Qorán, and with his appearance the dispensation of Muhammad would come to an end. He taught the transmigration of souls, and said that the beginning of every thing was the nuqṭah i khák, or earth-atom, from which the vegetables, and from these the animals, arose. The term nuqṭah i khák has given rise to their name Nuqṭawís. For other of Mahmúd's tenets, vide Shea's translation of the Dabistán, vol. III., pp. 12 to 26.

Some of Mahmúd's doctrines must have been of interest to Akbar, whose leanings towards the 'man of the millennium,' transmigration of souls, &c., have been mentioned above, and Mír Sharíf i Ámulí could not have done better than propounding the same doctrine at Court, and pointing to Akbar as the restorer of the millennium.

The author of the 'Álam Árái Sikandarí, as the Maásir says, mentions Mír Sharíf i Ámulí under the following circumstances. In 1002, the 7th year of Sháh 'Abbás i Mází's reign, the astrologers of the age predicted, in consequence of certain very inauspicious conjunctions, the death of a great king, and as this prediction was universally referred to Sháh 'Abbás, Jaláluddín Muhammad of Tabríz, who was looked upon as the greatest astronomer of the period, proposed that Sháh 'Abbás should lay aside royalty for the two or three days the dreaded conjunction was expected to last, and that a criminal who had been sentenced to death, should sit on the throne. This extraordinary expedient was everywhere approved of; the criminals threw lots, and Yúsuf the quiver-maker, who belonged to the heretical followers of Darwísh Khusrau of Qazwín, was raised to the throne. He reigned for three days, and was then killed. Soon after, Darwísh Khusrau was hanged. His ancestors had been well-diggers, but he was a dervish, and though he had been wise enough never to speak of his Nuqṭawiyah belief, he was known as one of the sect, and was accordingly killed. So also Mír Sayyid Ahmad of Káshán, whom 'Abbás killed with his own sword. Among his papers treatises were found on the Nuqṭah doctrine, and also a letter addressed to him by Abulfazl in Akbar's name. Mír Sharíf i Á'mulí, a good poet and the head of the sect, heard of these persecutions, and fled from Astrábád to Hindústán.

Regarding the last sentence, the author of the Maásir remarks that it involves an anachronism, for Mír Sharíf was in India in 984, when Akbar was at Dípálpúr in Málwah; and besides, Sharíf i Ámulí was mentioned in no Tazkirah as a poet.

---

[1] Mází (ماضي), i. e., who passed away, is the epithet which Historians give to Sháh 'Abbás I. of Persia, the contemporary of Akbar and Jahángír.

167. Hasan Beg [Kha'n i Badakhshi'] Shaikh 'Umari'.[1]

Hasan Beg was a good soldier. In the 34th year, Akbar, after his stay in Kashmír, marched to Zábulistán, and passed through the district of Pak'halí, 'which is 35 kos long and 25 broad, and lies west of Kashmír. In Pak'halí, Sulṭán Husain Khán i Pak'haliwál (No. 301) paid his respects. This Zamíndár belonged to the descendants of the Qárlyghs (قارلوغ), whom Timur on his return from India to Túrán had left in Pak'halí as garrison. After following Akbar's Court for a few days, Sulṭán Husain Khán withdrew without leave, and the emperor ordered Hasan Beg to occupy Pak'halí (Akbarnámah III, 591, 598). He speedily subdued the district. In the 35th year, during Hasan Beg's temporary absence at Court, Sulṭán Husain Khán again rebelled, assumed the title of Sulṭán Naçíruddín, and drove away Hasan Beg's men. But soon after, he had again to submit to Hasan Beg. In the 46th year, Hasan was made a Commander of Two Thousand and Five Hundred for his services in Bangash, and was put, towards the end of Akbar's reign, in charge of Kábul, receiving Fort Rohtás[2] (in the Panjab) as jágír.

In the beginning of Jahángír's reign, he was called from Kábul to Court. On his way, at Mat'hurá (Muttra), Hasan Beg met Prince Khusrau, who had fled from Ágrah on Sunday, the 8th Zí Hajjah, 1014.[3] From distrust as to the motives of the emperor which led to his recall from Kábul, or "from the innate wickedness of Badakhshís," he joined the Prince with his three hundred Badakhshí troopers, received the title of Khán Bábá, and got the management of all affairs. Another officer who attached himself to Khusrau, was 'Abdurrahím, Díwán of Láhor. After the defeat near Bhaironwál on the Biáh,[4] the Afgháns who were with the Prince, advised him to retreat to the Eastern provinces of the empire; but Hasan Beg proposed to march to Kábul, which, he said, had always been the starting-place of the conquerors of India; he had, moreover, four lacs of rupees in Rohtás, which were at the Prince's service. Hasan Beg's counsel was ultimately adopted. But before he could reach Rohtás, Khusrau was captured on the Chanáb. On the 3rd Çafar 1015, the Prince, Hasan Beg, and 'Abdurrahím, were taken before Jahángír in the Bágh i Mírzá Kámrán, a villa near Láhor, Khusrau himself, according to Chingiz's law (batorah i Chingízí), with his hands tied and fetters on his feet. Hasan Beg after making a useless attempt to incriminate others (p. 451), was put into a cow-hide, and 'Abdurrahím into a donkey's skin, and in this state they were tied to donkeys, and carried through the bazars.

---

[1] Badakhshí is the adjective formed from Badakshán, as Káshí from Káshán. The words Shaikh 'Umarí are to be taken as an adjective formed like Akbarsháhí, Jahángírí, &c., which we find after the names of several grandees. Thus Shaikh 'Umarí would mean 'belonging to the servants of Shaikh 'Umar,' and this explanation is rendered more probable by the statement of historians that Hasan Beg belonged to the Bábarián, or 'nobles of Bábar's Court.'

Hasan Beg is often wrongly called Husain Beg. Thus in the Tuzuk, p. 25, ff.; Pádisháhn. I, p. 306; Akbarn. III, 598.

[2] Generally spelt روهتاس. The fort in Bihár is spelt without wáw, رهتاس, though both are identical.

[3] So the Tuzuk. The Maásir has the 20th, instead of the 8th. MSS. continually confound هشتم and بیستم. But Jahángír on his pursuit reached Hodal on the 10th Zí Hajjah, and the Tuzuk is correct.

[4] Vide p. 414, note. There is another Bhaironwál between Wazírábád and Siálkot, south of the Chanáb.

'As cow-hides get sooner dry than donkey-skins,' Hasan died after a few hours from suffocation; but 'Abdurrahím was after 24 hours still alive, and received, at the request of several courtiers, free pardon.[1] The other accomplices and the troopers of Khusrau were impaled; their corpses were arranged in a double row along the road which leads from the Bágh i Mírzá Kámrán' to the Fort of Láhor, and Khusrau, seated on a sorry elephant, was led along that way. People had been posted at short intervals, and pointing to the corpses, kept calling out to Khusrau, "Behold, your friends, your servants, do you homage."

Hasan Beg was mentioned above on p. 346. His son Isfandiyár Khán, was under Sháhjahán, a commander of 1500. He served in Bengal, and died in the 16th year of Sháhjahán's reign (Pádisháhn. I., 476; I., b., 304) The 'Árif Beg i Shaikh 'Umarí mentioned in the Pádisháhn. (I., b., 319) appears to be a relation of his.

168. Sheroyah Kha'n, son of Sher Afkan Khán.

Sher Afkan Khán was the son of Qúch Beg. Qúch Beg served under Humáyún, and was killed in the successful attempt made by several grandees to save Maryam Makání, Akbar's mother, after the fatal battle of Chausá (vide No. 96, p. 410). When Humáyún fled to Persia, Sher Afkan remained with Mírzá Kámrán in Kábul; but he joined the emperor on his return from Irán, and was made governor of Qalát. Later he received Zahák-Bámiyán as jágír, but went again over to Kámrán. Humáyún, soon after, captured and killed him.

Sheroyah Khán served at first under Mun'im (No. 11) in Bengal and Oṛisá. In the 26th year, he was appointed to accompany Prince Murád to Kábul. In the 28th year, he served under 'Abdurrahím (No. 29) in Gujrát, and was present in the battle of Sarkich (Akbarnámah III., 408, 422). In the 30th year, he served under Maṭlab Khán (No. 83) against Jalálah Táríkí (p. 403). In the 39th year, he was made a Khán, and was appointed to Ajmír. According to the Ṭabaqát, he was a Hazárí in 1001.

169. Nazar Be Uzbak.

The Akbarnámah (III., p. 500) says, 'On the same day[2] Nazar Be, and his sons Qanbar Be, Shádí Be (No. 367), and Báqí Be (No. 368), were presented at Court, and were favourably received by the emperor.'

Shádí Be distinguished himself in the expedition under Maṭlab Khán (No. 83) against the Táríkís. He may be the Shádí Khán Shádí Beg, mentioned in the Pádisháhnámah (I., b., 308) as a commander of One Thousand. Be is the abbreviation of Beg. Nazar Be is not to be confounded with Nazar Beg (No. 247).

170. Jala'l Kha'n, son of Muhammad Khán, son of Sulṭán Adam, the Gakk'har.

171. Muba'rak Kha'n, son of Kamál Khán, the Gakk'har.

The Gakk'hars are a tribe inhabiting, according to the Maásir, the hilly districts

---

[1] In Zú Hajjah, 1018, he got an appointment as a Yúzbáshí, or commander of 100, and was sent to Kashmír (Tuzuk, p. 79). In the Tuzuk, he is called 'Abdurrahím Khar, 'Abdurrahím 'the Ass.'

[2] When the news was brought to Akbar that Mán Singh, soon after the defeat of the Imperialists and the death of Bír Bar in the Khaibar Pass, had defeated the Táríkís at 'Alí Masjid (end of the 30th year, or beginning of Rabí' I., 994).

between the Bahat and the Indus.[1] At the time of Zainu'l'ábidín, king of Kashmír, a Ghaznín noble of the name of Malik Kid (كد, or كيد), who was a relation of the then ruler of Kábul, took away these districts from the Kashmíris, and gradually extended his power over the region between the Níláb (Indus) and the Sawáliks and the frontier of modern Kashmír.[2] Malik Kid was succeeded by his son Malik Kalán, and Malik Kalán by Malik Bír. After Bír, the head of the tribe was Sulṭán Tatár, who rendered Bábar valuable service, especially in the war with Ráná Sánká. Sulṭán Tatár had two sons, Sulṭán Sárang, and Sulṭán Ádam. Sárang fought a great deal with Sher Sháh and Salím Sháh, capturing and selling a large number of Afgháns. The Fort Rohtás was commenced by Sher Sháh with the special object of keeping the Gakk'hars in check. Sher Sháh in the end captured Sulṭán Sárang and killed him, and confined his son Kamál Khán in Gwáliár, without, however, subjugating the tribe. Sulṭán Ádam was now looked upon as the head of the clan. He continued to oppose the Afgháns. Once Salím Sháh gave the order to blow up a portion of the Gwáliár Fort, where the state prisoners were kept. Kamál Khán, who was still confined, had a miraculous escape and was in consequence pardoned. Kamál went to his kinsfolk; but as Sulṭán Ádam had usurped all power, he lived obscurely with his brother Sa'íd Khán, avoiding to come in conflict with his uncle. Immediately after Akbar's accession, however, Kamál paid his respects to the emperor at Jálindhar, was well received, and distinguished himself in the war with Hemú, and during the siege of Mánkoṭ. In the 3rd year, he was sent against the Miyánah Afgháns, who had revolted near Saronj (Málwah), and was made on his return jágírdár of Karah and Fathpúr Huswah. In the 6th year, he served under Khán Zamán (No. 13) against the Afgháns under the son of Mubáriz Khán 'Adlí (p. 320). In the 8th year (970), he was called to Court, and as Akbar wished to reward him, Kamál Khán begged the emperor to put him in possession of the Gakk'har district, which was still in the hands

[1] Mr. J. E. Delmerick informs me that the Gakk'hars inhabited the hilly parts of the Ráwul Pindí and Jhelam districts from Khánpúr on the borders of the Hazárah district along the lower range of hills skirting the Tahṣíls of Ráwul Pindí, Kuhúta, and Gújar Khán, as far as Domeli in the Jhelam district. Their ancient strongholds were Pharwálah, Sulṭánpúr, and Dangálí. They declare that they are descended from the Kaianian kings of Irán. Their ancestor Kid invaded Tibet, where he and his descendants reigned for ten generations. His tenth descendant Kab conquered Kashmír, and took possession of half of it. The Gakk'hars then reigned for 16 generations after Kab in Kashmír. The 16th descendant, Zain Sháh fled to Afghánistán, where he died. His son, Gakk'har Sháh, came to the Panjáb with Mahmúd of Ghazní, and was made lord of the Sind Ságar Duáb. Malik Bír is said to have been the grandfather of Tatár, whose father was Malik Pílú. Vide Mr. Delmerick's History of the Gakk'hars, Journal, A. S. B., 1871.

[2] The Maásir says, he subjected the tribes called چترنیه ، ایوان ، جانوهه ، کهتر ، بهوکیان ، جهیه , باریه, and میکرال. Mr. Delmerick says, the Khatars inhabit the western parts of the Ráwul Pindí district. The second tribe is that of the Janjú'ahs who inhabit the Salt Range. The third, Áwán (اوان), are found in the southern parts of the Ráwul Pindí and the Jhelam districts; their tract is called Awánkárí to this day. The fourth, he says, may, be the Jodrahs (جودرة), a great clan about Pindí Gheb. The fifth, he believes is intended for the Kokharán (کهوکران), a tribe of some importance in Pind Dádan Khán. The sixth and the eighth are the Chibh (چهیه) and Mangarál (منگرال), large tribes in Jammú. The seventh he supposes to be a mistake for پهاڑیه pahárjah or hill tribes, which were the Dhúnds (دهوندة) and Sattís (سدّي).

of his usurping uncle. Akbar ordered the Khán i Kalán (No. 16) and other Panjábí grandees, to divide the district into two parts, and to give one of them to Kamál Khán; if Sulṭán Ádam was not satisfied with the other, they should occupy the country and punish Sulṭán Ádam. The latter alternative was rendered necessary by the resistance of Sulṭán Ádam. The Panjáb army, therefore, and Kamál Khán entered the Gakk'har district, and defeated and captured Ádam after a severe engagement near the 'Qaçbah of Hílán.'[1] Sulṭán Ádam and his son Lashkarí were handed over to Kamál Khán, who was put in possession of the district. Kamál Khán killed Lashkarí, and put Sulṭán Ádam into prison, where he soon after died. (Akbarnámah, II, 240ff.)

It is stated in the Ṭabaqát that Kamál Khán was a commander of Five Thousand, distinguished for courage and bravery, and died in 972.[2]

Múbárak Khan and Jalál Khán served in the 30th year under Mírzá Sháhrukh, Bhagwán Dás, and Sháh Qulí Mahram, in Kashmír (Akbarnámah, III, 485). The Ṭabaqát calls both, as also Sa'íd Khán, commanders of Fifteen Hundred. A daughter of Sa'íd Khán was married to Prince Salím; vide No. 225, note.

172. Ta'sh Beg Kha'n Mughul, [Táj Khán].

Tásh Beg served at first under Mírzá Muhammad Hakím, king of Kábul, and entered, after the death of his master, Akbar's service. He received a jágír in the Panjáb. According to the Akbarnámah (III, 489), he went with Bír Baṛ (No. 85) to Sawád and Bijor, and distinguished himself under 'Abdul Maṭlab (No. 83) against the Táríkís (III, 541).

In the 40th year, he operated against the 'Isá Khail Afgháns, though with little success. Two years later, he served under Áçaf Khán (No. 98) in the conquest of Mau, and received the title of Táj Khán. When Rájah Bású again rebelled (47th year), Khwájah Sulaimán, Bakhshí of the Panjáb, was ordered to march against him with the contingents of Qulij Khán (No. 42), Husain Beg i Shaikh 'Umarí (No. 167), Ahmad Beg i Kábulí (No. 191), and Táj Khán. Without waiting for the others, T. Kh. moved to Paṭhán. Whilst pitching his tents, Jamíl Beg, T. Kh.'s son, received news of Bású's approach. He hastily attacked him, and was killed with fifty men of his father's contingent.

Jahángír on his accession, promoted him to a command of 3000. In the second year of his reign he officiated as governor of Kábul till the arrival of Sháh Beg Khán (No. 57). He was afterwards appointed governor of T'hat'hah, where he died in the ninth year (1023).

173. Shaikh 'Abdullah, son of Shaikh Muhammad Ghaus [of Gwáliár].

Shaikh 'Abdullah at first lived a retired and saintly life, but entered subsequently the Emperor's service. He distinguished himself, and is said to have risen to the dignity of a commander of Three Thousand. He died when young.

His brother Ziáullah lived as Faqír, and studied during the lifetime of his

---

[1] Not Hailán (هیلان), south of Chiliánwálá between the Jhelam and the Chanáb; but Hílán, or Híl, which Mr. Delmerick says, is a ferry on the Jhelam near Dangálí, Sulṭán Ádam's stronghold.

[2] So in my MSS. of the Ṭabaqát. The author of the Maásir found 970 in his MS., which would be the same year in which Kamál Khán was restored to his paternal inheritance; hence he adds a واللہ اعلم. He was certainly alive in the middle of 972 (Akbarnámah, II, p. 302) father under the renowned saint Wajíhuddín in Gujrát, who himself was a pupil of Muhammad Ghaus.

Biographies of Muhammad Ghaus (died 970 at Ágrah, buried in Gwáliár) will be found in the Maásir, Badáoní (III., p. 4), and the Khazínatullaçfiá (p. 969). He was disliked by Bairám Khán, Shaikh Gadáí, and Shaikh Mubárak, Abulfazl's father. Vide also Maásir i 'Alamgírí, p. 166.

174. Ra'jah Ra'jsingh, son of Rájah Askaran, the Kachhwáhah.

Rájah Askaran is a brother of Rájah Bihárí Mall (No. 23). He served in the 22nd year with Çádiq Khán (No. 43) against Rájah Madhukar of Uṇḍchah,[1] and in the 25th year under Todar Mall in Bihár. In the 30th year, he was made a commander of One Thousand, and served in the same year under 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21) in the Dak'hin. In the 31st year, when Akbar appointed two officers to each çúbah, Askaran and Shaikh Ibráhím (No. 82) were appointed to Ágrah. In the 33rd year, he served a second time against Rájah Madhukar under Shiháb Khán (No. 26), and died soon after.

Abulfazl has not given his name in this list of grandees. The Ṭabaqát says he was a commander of Three Thousand.

Ráj Sing, his son, received the title of Rájah after the death of his father. He served for a long time in the Dak'hin, was called in the 44th year to Court, and was appointed commandant of Gwáliár. In the 45th year, he joined the Imperial army, which under Akbar besieged Fort Ásír. In the 47th year, he pursued, together with Rái Ráyán Patr Dás (No. 196), the notorious Bir Singh Deo Bundelah, who at Jahángír's instigation had murdered Abulfazl. For his distinguished services in the operations against the Bundelah clan, he was promoted, and held, in the 50th year, the rank of a commander of 4000, 3000 horse. In the 3rd year, of Jahángír's reign, he served in the Dak'hin, where he died in 1024 (10th year).

Rám Dás, his son, was a Commander of 1000, 400 horse. He received, in the 12th year, the title of Rájah, and was made, in the same year, a commander of 1500, 700 horse.

One of his grandsons, Prasuttam Singh, turned Muhammadan in the 6th year of Sháhjahán's reign, and received the name of 'Ibádatmand.[2]

175. Ra'i Bhoj, son of Rái Surjan Háḍá (No. 96).

When Búndí, in the 22nd year, was taken from Daudá, elder brother of Rái Bhoj, the latter was put in possession of it. Bhoj served under Mán Singh against the Afgháns of Oṛísá, and under Shaikh Abulfazl in the Dak'hin (Akbarn. III., 851, 855).

His daughter was married to Jagat Singh (No. 160).

In the first year of his reign, Jahángír wished to marry Jagat Singh's daughter. Rái Bhoj, her grandfather, refused to give his consent, and Jahángír resolved to punish him on his return from Kábul. But Rái Bhoj, in the end of 1016, committed suicide. The marriage, however, took place on the 4th Rabí' I., 1017, (Tuzuk, pp. 68, 69).

---

[1] Uṇḍchah is generally spelt on our maps Oorcha. It lies near Jhánsí on the left bank of the Betwah. The name of the river 'Dasthárá,' mentioned on p. 356, is differently spelled in the MSS. In one place the Maásir has Satdahárá.

[2] Regarding the Kachhwáhahs see my article in the Calcutta Review, for April, 1871, entitled 'A Chapter from Muhammadan History.'

It is said that Rá'thor and Kachhwáhah princesses entered the imperial Harem; but no Háḍá princess was ever married to a Timuride.

XIV. Commanders of Eight Hundred.

176. Sher Khwa'jah.

He belonged to the Sayyids of Itáwah (ساداتِ اتائی.) His mother was a Naqshbandí (p. 423, note 2). Sher Kh.'s name was 'Pádisháh Khwájah,' but Akbar called him on account of his bravery and courage Sher Khwájah.

In the 30th year, Sh. Kh. served under Sa'íd Khán Chaghtái (No. 25) against the Yúsufzaís, and afterwards under Sulṭán Murád in the Dak'hin. In the 40th year, the Prince sent him with a corps to Paṭan, where he distinguished himself against Ikhláç Khán. He continued to serve in the Dak'hin under Abulfazl. In the engagement near Bír he was wounded. He entered the town victoriously, but was besieged. From want of provisions, his men had to subsist on horse-flesh. As in consequence of the swelling of the Gangá (Godávarí) he did not expect assistance from the north, he resolved to try a last sortie and perish, when Abulfazl arrived and raised the siege. Abulfazl proposed to leave his own son 'Abdurrahmán at Bír; but Sh. Kh. refused to quit his post. In the 46th year, he received a drum and a flag.

Sh. Kh. remained in favour during the reign of Jahángír. He was with the emperor when Mahábat Khán near the Bahat had taken possession of Jahángír's person. After Jahángír's death, he served with Açaf Khán against Shahryár in Láhor.

In the 1st year of Sháhjahán's reign, he was made a commander of 4000, with 1000 horse, and received the title of Khwájah Báqí Khán. He was also appointed governor of T'hat'hah, vice Mírzá 'Ísá Tarkhán (p. 363). He died on his way to his province in 1037. Pádisháhn., I., 181, 200.

His son Khwájah Háshim was made a commander of 500 (Pádisháhnámah, I., b., 327). Another son, Asadullah, is mentioned as a commander of 900, 300 horse, (Pádisháhn., II., 738).

177. Mi'rza' Khurram, son of Khán i A'zam Mírzá 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21). He has been mentioned above, p. 328.

XV. Commanders of Seven Hundred.

178. Quraish Sulta'n, son of 'Abdurrashíd Khán, king of Káshghar.

182. Sulta'n 'Abdullah, brother (by another mother) of Quraish Sulṭán.

310. Sha'h Muhammad, son of Quraish Sulṭán.

Quraish Sulṭán is a descendant of Chingiz Khán.[1] His genealogical tree is given in the Akbarnámah (III., 584) and the Táríkh i Rashídí as follows:—

1. Chingiz Khán.
2. Chaghtái Khán.
3. Mawátkán (second son of Chaghtái Khán).

[1] Chingiz Khán, in the histories, is often called Qáán i Buzurg.

4. يدسون تورا (the MSS. give various readings).
5. Yaráq Khán (called after his conversion Sulṭán Ghiásuddín).
6. Dawá Khán.[1]
7. Alsínúqá, or Alsánúqá, Khán.
8. Tughluq Timur Khán.
9. Khizr Khwájah Khán[2] (father-in-law of Timur).
10. (a.) Muhammad Khán....(b.) Sham' Jahán Khán....(c.) Naqsh Jahán Khán.
11. (a.) Sher Muhammad Khán. (b.) Sher 'Alí Ughlán.
12. Uwais Khán, son of Sher 'Alí Ughlán.
13. Yúnas Khán, father of Bábar's mother.
14. Sulṭán Ahmad Khán, known as Álánchah Khán.
15. Sulṭán Abú Sa'íd Khán.
16. 'Abdurrashíd Khán.

17. (1) 'Abdul Karím Khán. (2) Quraish Sulṭán (No. 178). (3) Sulṭán 'Abdullah (No. 178).

(1) Sháh Muhammad (No. 310).
(2) Khudábandah.

After the death of 'Abdurrashíd Khán (16.), 'Abdulkarím Khán, elder brother of Quraish Sulṭán, succeeded to the throne of Káshghar. He treated his relations well, partly in fulfilment of his father's wish, partly from natural benevolence. But Khudábandah, son of Quraish Sulṭán, quarrelled with Muhammad Khán, his uncle, and Khudábandah occupied the town of Ṭarfán. 'Abdulkarím, doubting the loyalty of his relations, ordered Quraish Sulṭán to go to Makkah. Q. went first with his family to Badakhshán and Balkh, and lastly, with the permission of 'Abdullah Khán of Túrán, to Hindústán. He met Akbar,* in the 34th year, at Shihábuddínpúr, when the emperor was just returning from Kashmír, was well received, and appointed to a command of Seven Hundred.

Quraish died in the 37th year, (1000) at Hájípúr.

179. Qara' Baha'dur, son of Mírzá Mahmúd, who is the paternal uncle of Mírzá Haidar [Gurgání].

Like the preceding, Qará Bahádur belonged to the royal family of Káshghar. Mírzá Haidar's father, Muhammad Husain, was the son of Bábar's maternal aunt.

Mírzá Haidar,[3] during his stay in Káshghar, had accompanied the son of Sulṭán

[1] Dawá invaded India during the reign of 'Aláuddín; vide Journal, As. Soc. Bengal, for 1869, p. 194, and 1870, p. 44.

[2] His daughter is called Tukul Khánum تكل خانم. It is said that Timur after the marriage received the title of Gurgán گورگان, the Mughul term for the Persian dámád, a son-in-law. Hence Timurides are often called Gurgánis.

[3] Mírzá Haidar was a historian and poet. He wrote in 951 the Táríkh i Abdurrashídí, in honor of Abdurrashíd, Abú Sa'íd on several expeditions to Kashmír, and had thus acquired some knowledge of the people and the state of that province. He subsequently went over Badakhshán to India, and arrived at Láhor, where Mírzá Kámrán made him his náib during his absence on an expedition to Qandahár, which the Sháh of Persia had taken from Khwájah Kalán Beg. M. Haidar afterwards accompanied Kámrán to Agrah, and tried on several occasions to persuade Humáyún, to take possession of Kashmír. When the emperor after his second defeat by Sher Sháh retreated to Láhor, he gave M. Haidar a small corps and sent him to Kashmír. The country being in a distracted state, M. H. took possession of it without bloodshed, and ruled as absolute king for ten years. But afterwards he ordered the khuṭbah to be read, and coins to be struck, in Humáyún's name. He was killed in 958 by some treacherous Kashmírís.

The father of Qará Bahádur was Mírzá Mahmúd; hence Q. B. was M. Haidar's cousin. As he had been with M. H. in Kashmír, Akbar, in the 6th year, ordered him to re-conquer the province, and gave him a large corps. But Q. B. delayed his march, and when he arrived in the hot season at Rájor, he found the passes fortified. Soon afterwards, he was attacked and defeated by Ghází Khán, who had usurped the throne of Kashmír. Q. B. discomfited returned to Akbar.

In the 9th. year, he accompanied the emperor to Málwah, and was appointed, on Akbar's return, governor of Mandú. He died soon after.

For a relation of Qará Bahádur, vide No. 183.

180. Muzaffar Husain Mirza', son of Ibráhím Ḥusain Mírzá, [son of Muhammad Sulṭán Mírzá].

Muzaffar Husain Mírzá is a Timuride. His tree is as follows:—

'Umar Shaikh Mírzá (second son of Timur).
|
Mírzá Báiqrá.
|
Mírzá Mançúr.
|
M. Báiqrá.
|
Wais Mírzá.
|
Muhammad Sulṭán Mírzá.
|

(1) Ulugh Mírzá.	(2) Sháh Mírzá.	(3) Ibrábím Husain M.	(4) Muhammad Husain M.
			(5) Mas'úd Husain M.
			(6) 'Aqil Husain M.
(1) Sikandar Mírzá, sive Ulugh Mírzá.		Muzaffar Husain Mírzá. (No. 180.)
(2) Mahmúd Sulṭán M., sive Sháh Mírzá.

king of Káshghar. The villa known as Bágh i Çafá was erected by him. Akbarnámah III., 585.

The MS. of the Táríkh i Rashídí in the Library of the Asiatic Society (Persian MSS, No. 155, three parts, 19 lines per page) is a fair, though modern copy, and was brought by Capt. H. Strachey from Yárkand.

The Táríkh commences with the reign of Tughluq Timur Khán, who was converted to Islám by Maulánà Arshaduddín, and goes down to the reign of 'Abdurrashíd. The second daftar contains the Memoirs of Mírzá Haidar. The style is elegant.

The mother of Muhammad Sulṭán Mírzá was the daughter of the renowned Sulṭán Husain Mírzá, king of Khurásán, at whose court Muhammad Sulṭán Mírzá held a place of distinction. After Sulṭán Husain's death, Muhammad Sulṭán Mírzá went to Bábar, who treated him with every distinction. Humáyún also favoured him, though on several occasions he rebelled, and extended his kindness to his sons, Ulugh Mírzá and Sháh Mírzá, who had given him repeatedly cause of dissatisfaction. Ulugh Mírzá was killed in the expedition against the Hazárahs, and Sháh Muḥámmad died, soon after, a natural death.

Ulugh Mírzá had two sons, Sikandar Mírzá and Mahmúd Sulṭán Mírzá; but Humáyún changed their names, and gave Sikandar the name of Ulugh Mírzá, and Mahmúd Sulṭán Mírzá that of Sháh Mírzá.

As Muhammad Sulṭán Mírzá was old, Akbar excused him from attending at Court (taklíf i bár), and gave him the parganah of A'zampúr in Sambhal as a pension. He also bestowed several other places upon his grandsons Ulugh and Sháh Mírzá. At A'zampúr, in his old age, Muhammad Sulṭán M. had four other sons born to him— 1. Ibráhím Husain Mírzá, 2. Muhammad Husain Mírzá, 3. Mas'úd Husain Mírzá, and 4. 'Aqil Husain Mírzá

In the 11th year of Akbar's reign, Mírzá Muhammad Hakím, king of Kábul, invaded India and besieged Láhor; and when Akbar marched against him, Ulugh M. and Sháh M. rebelled. They were joined in their revolt by their (younger) uncles Ibráhím Husain M. and Muhammad Husain M. The rebellious Mírzás went plundering from Sambhal to Khán Zamán (No. 13) at Jaunpúr; but as they could not agree with him, they marched on Dihlí, and from there invaded Málwah, the governor of which, Muhammad Qulí Khán Barlás (No. 31), was with the emperor. The consequence of their revolt was, that Akbar imprisoned the old Muhammad Sulṭán Mírzá. He died a short time after in his prison at Biánah. In the 12th year, when Akbar had defeated and killed Khán Zamán, and conquered Chítor, he made Shiháb Khán (No. 26) governor of Málwah, and ordered him to punish the Mírzás.

About this time Ulugh M. died. The other Mírzás unable to withstand Shiháb Khán, fled to Chingiz Khán (p. 386), who then ruled over a portion of Gujrát. Chingiz Khán was at war with I'timád Khán (No. 67) of Ahmadábád; and as the Mírzás had rendered him good service, he gave them Bahroṇch as jágír. But their behaviour in that town was so cruel, that Chingiz Khán had to send a corps against them. Though the Mírzás defeated his troops, they withdrew to Khándesh, and re-entered Málwah. They were vigorously attacked by 'Ashraf Khán (No. 74), Çádiq Khán (No. 43), and others, who besieged Rantanbhúr (13th year), and were pursued to the Narbadá, where many soldiers of the Mírzás perished in crossing. In the meantime Chingiz Khán had been murdered by Jhujhár Khán, and as Gujrát was in a state of disorder, the Mírzás, with litte fighting, occupied Champánír, Bahroṇch, and Súrat.

In the 17th year, Akbar entered Gujrát and occupied Ahmadábád. Dissensions having broken out among the Mírzás, Ibráhím Husain M. left Bahroṇch, and arrived at a place 8 miles from Akbar's camp. Most of Akbar's Amírs had the day before been sent away towards Súrat in search of Muhammad Husain M. Hearing of Ibráhím Husain's arrival, the emperor despatched Shahbáz Khán (No. 80) after the Amírs, whilst he himself marched to the Mahindrí River, where it flows past the town of Sarnál. Akbar had about 40 men with him, few of whom had armour; but when the Amírs returned, the number rose to about 200. The signal of attack was given, and after a hard fight, Ibráhím Husain M. was defeated. He fled towards Agrah, whilst his wife, Gulrukh Begum, a daughter of Mírzá Kámrán, on hearing of his defeat, fled with Muzaffar Husain Mírzá, from Súrat to the Dak'hin.

Akbar now resolved to invest Súrat, and left M. 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21) with a garrison in Ahmadábád, ordering at the same time Quṭbuddín (No. 28) to join 'Azíz with the Málwah contingent. Muhammad Husain M. and Sháh M. thereupon united their troops with those of Sher Khán Fúládí, a Gujrátí noble, and besieged Paṭan. 'Azíz marched against them, and defeated them (p. 396). Muhammad Husain M. then withdrew to the Dak'hin.

Ibráhím Husain M. and his younger brother Mas'úd Husain M. having met with resistance at Nágor (p. 357), invaded the Panjáb. The governor, Husain Qulí Khán (No. 24), at that time besieged Nagarkoṭ, and hearing of the inroad of the Mírzás, made peace with the Rájah, attacked the rebels, defeated them, and captured Mas'úd. Ibráhím Husain fled towards Multán, and was soon afterwards wounded and captured by some Balúchís. He then fell into the hands of Sa'íd Khán (No. 25), and died of his wounds.

After Akbar's return to Agrah, Muhammad Husain Mírzá left the Dak'hin, invaded Gujrát, and took possession of several towns. He was defeated at Kambháit by Naurang Khán (p. 334), and joined the party of Ikhtiyárulmulk and the sons of Sher Khán Fúládí. They then marched against Ahmadábád, and besieged M. 'Azíz Kokah. To relieve him, Akbar hastened in forced marches from Agrah to Paṭan, and arrived, on the 5th Jumáda I, 981 (p. 416), with about 1000 horse, at a place 3 kos from Ahmadábád. Leaving Ikhtiyár to continue the siege, Muhammad Husain opposed the emperor, but was defeated and wounded. In his flight his horse fell over a bramble, when two troopers captured him, and led him to Akbar. Each of the two men claimed the customary reward, and when Bír Baṛ, at Akbar's request, asked Muhammad Husain which of the two had taken him prisoner, he said, "The salt of the emperor has caught me; for those two could not have done it." Ikhtiyár on hearing of the defeat and capture of Muhammad Husain, raised the siege, and fled with his 5000 troopers. Akbar at once pursued him. Ikhtiyár got detached from his men, and in jumping over a shrub fell with his horse to the ground, when Suhráb Turkmán who was after him, cut off his head, and took it to the emperor. Muhammad Husain also had, in the meantime, been executed by Rái Singh (No. 44), whom Akbar had put over him.

Sháh Mírzá had fled in the beginning of the battle.

In the 22nd year, Muzaffar Husain Mírzá, whom his mother had taken to the Dak'hin, entered Gujrát and created disturbances. He was defeated by Rájah Todar Mall and Vazír Khán (p. 353), and fled to Júnágaḍh. When the Rájah had gone, Muzaffar besieged Vazír in Ahmadábád. During the siege he managed to attach Vazír's men to his cause, and was on the point of entering the town, when a cannon ball killed Mihr 'Alí Kolábí, who had led the young Muzaffar into rebellion. This so affected Muzaffar, that he raised the siege, though on the point of victory, and withdrew to Nazrbár. Soon after, he was captured by Rájah 'Alí of Khándesh, and handed over to Akbar. He was kept for some time in prison; but as he shewed himself loyal, Akbar, in the 36th year, released him, and married him to his eldest daughter, the Sulṭán Khánum. He also gave him Sirkár Qanauj as tuyúl. Muzaffar, however, was addicted to the pleasures of wine, and when complaints were brought to Akbar, he cancelled the tuyúl, and again imprisoned him. But he soon after set him at liberty. In the 45th year (1008), when Akbar besieged Asír, he sent Muzaffar to besiege Fort Lalang. But he quarrelled with Khwájah Fathullah, and one day, he decamped for Gujrát. His companions deserted him; and dressing himself in the garb of a faqír, he wandered about between Súrat and Baglánah, when he was caught by Khwájah Waisí and taken before the emperor. After having been imprisoned for some time, he was let off in the 46th year. He died, not long after, a natural death.

His sister, Núrunnisá, was married to Prince Salím (vide No. 225, note). Gulrukh Begum, Muzaffar's mother, was still alive in 1023, when she was visited on her sick-bed by Jahángír at Ajmír.

181. Qundu'q Kha'n, brother of the well-known Bairám Oghlán.

The Akbarnámah (I., 411) mentions a Qundúq Sulṭán, who accompanied Humáyún on his march to India.

For Qundúq, some MSS. read Qúndúz. A grandee of this name served in Bengal under Mun'im, and died at Gaur (p. 376).

182. Sulta'n 'Abdullah, brother (by another mother) of Quraish Sulṭán (No. 178).

183. Mi'rza' 'Abdurrahma'n, son of Mírzá Haidar's brother (vide No. 179).

184. Qiya' Kha'n, son of Çáhib Khán.

In the Ṭabaqát and the Akbarnámah he is generally called قیا صاحب حسن, which may mean 'Qiyá, the beautiful,' or 'Qiyá, son of Çáhib Hasan.' Proper nouns ending in a long vowel rarely take the Izáfat.[1] It looks as if the reading صاحب خان of the A'ín MSS. was a mistake. The words صاحب حسن are intended to distinguish him from Qiyá Gung (No. 33).

Qiyá served under Shamsuddín Atgah against Bairám (p. 317). He was also present in the battle of Sárangpúr (vide No. 120).

185. Darba'r Kha'n, 'Ináyat [ullah], son of Takaltú Khán, the Reader.

Darbár's father was Sháh Ṭahmásp's reader. 'Ináyat, on his arrival in India, was appointed to the same post by Akbar, and received the title of Darbár Khán. He served in the 9th year (end of 971) in Málwah, and in the 12th year, in the last war with Khán Zamán. He accompanied the emperor to Rantanbhúr, and when Akbar, in the 14th year, after the conquest of the fort, made a pilgrimage to the tomb of Mu'ín i Chishtí in Ajmír, Darbár Khán took sick leave, and died on his arrival at A'grah.

According to his dying wish—to the disgust of the author of the Maásir—he was buried in the mausoleum of one Akbar's dogs, which he had built. The dog had shewn great attachment to its imperial master.

---

[1] Thus you say هلاگو ملعون, for هلاگوی ملعون, the accursed Hulágú.

186. 'Abdurrahma'n, son of Muayyid Dúldai.

The name Dúldai had been explained above on p. 388. 'Abdurrahmán's great grandfather, Mír Sháh Malik, had served under Timur. 'Abdurrahmán was killed in a fight with the Bihár rebel Dalpat. Vide under his son Barkhurdár, No. 328, and under No. 146. Another son is mentioned below, No. 349.

187. Qa'sim 'Ali' Kha'n.

When Akbar, in the 10th year, moved against Khán Zamán (No. 13), Qásim 'Alí Khán held Gházípúr. In the 17th year, he served in the siege of Súrat, and in the following year, with Khán 'Álam (No. 58) in the conquest of Patna under Mun'im. For some reason he returned to Court, and took Shujá'at Khán (No. 51) a prisoner to Mun'im, whom he had slandered. In the 22nd year, he served under Çádiq (No. 43) against Madhukar Bundelah, and in the 25th year, under 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21) in Bihár. In the 26th year, he was employed to settle the affairs of Hájí Begum, daughter of the brother of Humáyún's mother (taghái zádah i wálidah i Jannat-ástání)[1] who after her return from Makkah (p. 441) had been put in charge of Humáyún's tomb in Dihlí, where she died. In the 31st year, when Akbar appointed two officers for each çúbah, Q. A. and Fath Khán Tughluq were sent to Audh. He returned, in the 35th year, from Khairábád to Court, and soon after received Kálpí as jágír. 'Nothing also is known of him.' [1] Maásir. For his brother, vide No. 390.

188. Ba'z Baha'dur, son of Sharíf Khán (No. 63).

Vide above p. 383.

189. Sayyid 'Abdullah Kha'n, son of Mír Khwánandah.

Some MSS. have 'Khwánd' instead of 'Khwánandah.' Sayyid 'Abdullah had been brought up at Court. In the 9th year, he served in the pursuit of 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak. In the 17th year, he was with the Khán i Kalán (No. 16) in the first Gujrát war. Later, he served under Mun'im in Bengal, and was with Khán 'Álam (No. 58) in the battle of Takaroí (p. 375). In 984, he brought the news of Dáúd's defeat and death at Ágmahall (p. 331) to Akbar. During the Bengal military revolt, he served under Mírzá 'Azíz (No. 21) and under Shahbáz Khán (No. 80), chiefly against Ma'çúm i Farankhúdí (No. 157). In the 31st year, Akbar sent him to Qásim Khán (No. 59) in Kashmír. In the 34th year (997), he was one night surprised by a body of Kashmíris, and killed with nearly three hundred Imperialists.

190. Dha'ru', son of Rájah Todar Mall (No. 39).

Vide above p. 352.

191. Ahmad Beg i Ka'buli'.

Ahmad Beg traces his origin to Mír Ghiásuddín Tarkhán, a Chaghtái noble who served under Timur. Like Sháh Beg (No. 57), Táj Khán (No. 172), Abul Qásim (No. 199), Ma'çúm Khán (p. 431, note 1), and Takhtah Beg (No. 195), A. B. entered, after M. Muhammad Hakím's death, Akbar's service. He was made a commander of 700, and received, in 1003, on the removal of Yúsuf Khán i Razawí (No. 35), a jágír in Kashmír. He married the sister of Ja'far Beg Áçaf Khán (No. 98).

[1] Sayyid Ahmad's edition of the Tuzuk mentions a Qásim 'Alí on p. 58, l. 2 from below; but according to the Maásir, we have there to read Qásim Beg for Qásim 'Alí.

During the reign of Jahángír, he rose to the post of a commander of 3000, and received the title of Khán, and also a flag. He was for some time governor of Kashmír. On his removal, he went to court, and died.

From the Tuzuk we see that Ahmad Beg in the first year of Jahángír, was made a commander of 2000, and held Pasháwar as jágír. In the second year, he was ordered to punish the Afghán tribes in Bangash, and was for his services there promoted, in the 5th year, to a command of 2500. In the 9th year, in consequence of complaints made by Qulij Khán (No. 42), he was called to court, and confined in Fort Rantanbhúr (Tuzuk, p. 136). In the following year, he was released (l. c., p. 146), and sent to Kashmír (l. c., p. 149).

Ahmad Beg's sons, especially his second eldest, were all distinguished soldiers. They are—

1. Muhammad Mas'úd (eldest son). He was killed in the war with the Táríkís. His son, Ardsher, was a commander of 1000, 600 horse, and died in the 18th year of Sháhj.'s reign.

2. Sa'íd Khán Bahádur Zafar-jang (second son). He rose during the reign of Sháhjahán to the high dignity of a commander of 7000, and distinguished himself in every war. He was governor of Kábul, the Panjáb, and Bihár. He died on the 2nd Çafar, 1062. Of his twenty-two sons, the two eldest, Khánahzád Khán and Luṭfullah, were killed in the Balkh war, where Sa'íd also was severely wounded. Two other sons, 'Abdullah and Fathullah, rose to high commands.

3. Mukhliçullah Khán, Iftikhár Khán. He rose under Sháhjahán to a command of 2000, 1000 horse, and was Faujdár of Jammú (Pádisháhn. I., p. 258), and died in the 4th year of Sháhj.'s reign.

4. Abul Baqá. He was the younger brother (by the same mother) of Sa'íd, under whom he served. He was thánahdár of Lower Bangash. In the 15th year, after the Qandahár expedition, he got the title of Iftikhár Khán, at the same time that his elder brother received that of Zafar-jang, and was made a commander of 1500, 1000 horse.

192. Haki'm 'Ali', of Gílán.

'Alí came poor and destitute from Persia to India, but was fortunate enough to become in course of time a personal attendant (mulázim) and friend of Akbar. Once the emperor tried him by giving him several bottles of urine of sick and healthy people, and even of animals. To his satisfaction, 'Alí correctly distinguished the different kinds. In 988, he was sent as ambassador to 'Alí 'Ádil Sháh of Bíjápúr, and was well received; but before he could be sent back with presents for his master, 'Ádil Sháh suddenly died.[1]

In the 39th year, Hakím 'Alí constructed the wonderful reservoir (hauz), which is so often mentioned by Mughul historians. A staircase went to the bottom of the reservoir, from where a passage led to an adjoining small room, six gaz square, and capable of holding ten or twelve people. By some contrivance, the water of the reservoir was prevented from flowing into the chamber. When Akbar dived to the bottom of the reservoir and passed into the room, he found it lighted up, and furnished with cushions, sleeping apparel, and a few books. Breakfast was also provided.

[1] 'Ádil Sháh was murdered in 988, by a young handsome eunuch, whom he attempted to use for an immoral purpose. The king was known as much for his justice and goodwill towards his subjects, as for his mania for boys and unnatural crimes. He obtained with some exertion two young and handsome eunuchs from Malik Baríd of Bedar, and was stabbed by the elder of the two at the first attempt of satisfying his inordinate desires. Maulaná Razá of Mashhad, poetically styled Razáí, found the táríkh of his death in the words Sháh i jahán shud shahíd (988), 'The king of the world became a martyr.'

In the 40th year, 'Alí was a commander of 700, and had the title of Jálínús uzzamání, 'the Galenus of the age.' His astringent mixtures enjoyed a great reputation at Court.

He treated Akbar immediately before his death. It is said that the Emperor died of dysentry or acute diarrhœa, which no remedies could stop. 'Alí had at last recourse to a most powerful astringent, and when the dysentry was stopped, costive fever and strangury ensued. He therefore administered purgatives, which brought back the diarrhœa, of which Akbar died. The first attack was caused, it is said, by worry and excitement on account of the behaviour of Prince Khusrau at an elephant fight. Salím (Jahángír) had an elephant of the name of Giránbár, who was a match for every elephant of Akbar's stables, but whose strength was supposed to be equal to that of Ábrúp, one of Khusrau's elephants. Akbar therefore wished to see them fight for the championship, which was done. According to custom, a third elephant, Rantahman, was selected as ṭabánchah, i. e., he was to assist either of the two combatants when too severely handled by the other. At the fight, Akbar and Prince Khurram (Sháhjahán) sat at a window, whilst Salím and Khusrau were on horseback in the arena. Giránbár completely worsted Ábrúp, and as he mauled him too severely, the ṭabánchah elephant was sent off to Ábrúp's assistance. But Jahángír's men, anxious to have no interference, pelted Rantahman with stones, and wounded the animal and the driver. This annoyed Akbar, and he sent Khurram to Salím to tell him not to break the rules, as in fact all elephants would once be his. Salím said that the pelting of stones had never had his sanction, and Khurram, satisfied with the explanation, tried to separate the elephants by means of fireworks, but in vain. Unfortunately Rantahman also got worsted by Giránbár, and the two injured elephants ran away, and threw themselves into the Jamnah. This annoyed Akbar more; but his excitement was intensified, when at that moment Khusrau came up, and abused in unmeasured terms his father in the presence of the emperor. Akbar withdrew, and sent next morning for 'Alí, to whom he said that the vexation caused by Khusrau's bad behaviour had made him ill.

In the end of 1017, Jahángír also visited 'Alí's reservoir, and made him a commander of 2000. He did not long enjoy his promotion, and died on the 5th Muharram, 1018. Jahángír says of him (Tuzuk, p. 74) that he excelled in Arabic, and composed a commentary to the Qánún. "But his subtlety was greater than his knowledge, his looks better than his walk of life, his behaviour better than his heart; for in reality he was a bad and unprincipled man." Once Jahángír hinted that 'Alí had killed Akbar. On the other side it is said that he spent annually 6000 Rupees on medicines for the poor.[1]

---

[1] Badáoní (III., 166) says that 'Alí was the son of the sister of Hakím ul Mulk of Gílán and learned medicine and science under Sháh Fathullah of Shíráz. He was a rabid Shí'ah, and a bad doctor who often killed his patients. Thus he

He had a son, known as Hakím 'Abdulwahháb. He held a mançab. In the 15th year of Jahángír's reign, he claimed from certain Sayyids in Láhor the sum of 80,000 Rs. which, he said, his father had lent them. He supported his claim by a certificate with the seal of a Qází on it, and the statements of two witnesses. The Sayyids who denied all knowledge, seeing that the case went against them, appealed to the emperor. Jahángír ordered Áçaf Khán (No. 93) to investigate the case. 'Abdulwahháb got afraid, and tried to evade the investigation by proposing to the Sayyids a compromise. This looked suspicious, and Áçaf by cross-questioning found that the claim was entirely false. He therefore reported 'Abdulwahháb, and the emperor deprived him of his mançab and jágír. He seems to have been afterwards restored to favor; for in the Pádisháhnámah (I, 6., 328) he is mentioned as a commander of 500, 50 horse.

193. Gu'jar Kha'n, son of Quṭbuddín Khán Atgah (No. 28).

He was mentioned above on p. 334.

194. Sadr Jaha'n Mufti'.

Mírán Çadr Jahán was born in Pihání, a village near Qanauj.[1] Through the influence of Shaikh 'Abdunnabí he was made Mufti. When 'Abdullah Khán Úzbak, king of Túrán, wrote to Akbar regarding his apostacy from Islám, Mírán Çadr and Hakím Humám (No. 205) were selected as ambassadors. The answer which they took to 'Abdullah contained a few Arabic verses which 'Abdullah could construe into a denial of the alleged apostacy,— قيل ان الاله ذو ولد قيل ان الرسول قد كهنا

ما نجا الله و الرسول معا من لسان الورى فكيف انا

"Of God people have said that He had a son; of the Prophet some have said that he was a sorcerer. Neither God nor the Prophet has escaped the slander of men—Then how should I?"

Mírán returned in the 34th year, and was made Çadr (vide p. 274). In the 35th year, at the feast of Ábánmáh, the Court witnessed a curious spectacle. The Çadr and 'Abdul Hai (No. 230), the Chief Justice of the empire, took part in a drinking feast, and Akbar was so amused at seeing his ecclesiastical and judicial dignitaries over their cups, that he quoted the well-known verse from Háfiz,— در دور پادشاه خطابخش جرم پوش حافظ قرابه کش شد و مفتي پیاله نوش

Up to the 40th year, he had risen to the dignity of a commander of 700; but later, he was made an Amír, and got a mançab of 2000 (vide p. 208).

During the reign of Jahángír, who was very fond of him, he was promoted to a command of 4000, and received Qanauj as tuyúl. As Çadr under Jahángír he is said to have given away more lands in five years than under Akbar in fifty. He died in 1020, at the age, it is believed, of 120 years. His faculties remained unimpaired to the last.

His position to Akbar's 'Divine Faith,' has been explained above (p. 208). There is no doubt that he temporized, and few people got more for it than he. He also killed Fathullah by prescribing harísah (vide p. 33, note).

---

[1] So Badáoní. The Maásir says, Pihání lies near Lak'hnau.

composed poems, though in the end of his life, like Badáoní, he repented and gave up poetry as against the spirit of the Muhammadan law.

He had two sons :—

1. Mír Badr i 'Alam. He lived a retired life.

2. Sayyid Nizám Murtazá Khán. His mother was a Bráhman woman, of whom his father had been so enamoured, that he married her; hence Nizám was his favourite son. He was early introduced at Court, and, at the death of his father, was made a commander of 2500, 2000 horse. In the first year of Sháhjahán's reign, he was a promoted to command of 3000, and received, on the death of Murtazá Khán Injú (p. 451) the title of Murtazá Khán. He served a long time in the Dak'hin. His tuyúl was the Parganah of Dalamau, where he on several occasions successfully quelled disturbances. He was also Faujdár of Lak'hnau. In the 24th year of Sháhj.'s reign, he was pensioned off, and received 20 lacs of dáms per annum out of the revenue of Pihání, which was one kror. He enjoyed his pension for a long time.

His sons died before him. On his death, his grandsons 'Abdul Muqtadir and 'Abdullah were appointed to mançabs, and received as tuyúl the remaining portion of the revenue of Pihání. 'Abdul Muqtadir rose to a command of 1000, 600 horse, and was Faujdár of Khairábád.

195. Takhtah Beg i Kábulí [Sardár Khán].

He was at first in the service of M. Muhammad Hakím, and distinguished himself in the wars with India; but on the death of his master (30th year), he joined Akbar's service. He served under Mán Singh and Zain Kokah against the Yúsufzaís. As Thánahdár of Pasháwar he punished on several occasions the Táríkís. In the 49th year, he was made a Khán.

After Jahángír's accession, he was made a commander of 2000, and received the title of Sardár Khán. He was sent with Mírzá Ghází Tarkhán (p. 363), to relieve Sháh Beg Khán (No. 57) in Qandahár. As Sháh Beg was appointed governor of Kábul, Takhtah was made governor of Qandahár, where, in 1016, he died.

He had a villa near Pasháwar, called the Bágh i Sardár Khan. His two sons Hayát Khán and Hidáyatullah got low mançabs.

196. Rai Patr Da's, [Rájah Bikramájít], a Khatrí.

Patr Dás was in the beginning of Akbar's reign accountant (mushrif) of the elephant stables, and had the title of Rái Ráyán. He distinguished himself, in the 12th year, during the siege of Chítor. In the 24th year, he and Mír Adham were made joint díwáns of Bengal. At the outbreak of the Bengal military revolt, he was imprisoned by the rebels (p. 439), but got off and served for some time in Bengal. In the 30th year, he was made díwán of Bihár. In the 38th year, he was ordered to occupy Bándhú (p. 407), the capital of which after a siege of 8 months and 25 days surrendered (42nd year). In the 43rd year, he was made díwán of Kábul, but was in the following year again sent to Bándhú. In the 46th year, he was made a commander of 3000. When Abulfazl, in the 47th year, had been murdered by Bir Singh, Akbar ordered Patr Dás to hunt down the rebel, and bring his head to Court. Patr defeated Bir Singh in several engagements, and shut him up in Irich. When the siege had progressed, and a breach was made in the wall, Bir Singh escaped and withdrew to the jungles with Patr close at his heels. Akbar, at last, in the 48th year, called

P. to Court, made him in the next year a commander of 5000, and gave him the title of Rájah Bikramájít.

After Jahángír's accession, he was made Mír Átash, and was ordered to recruit and keep in readiness 50.000 artillery (topchí) with a train of 3000 gun-carts, the revenue of fifteen parganahs being set aside for the maintenance of the corps (Tuzuk, p. 10).

When the sons of Muzuffar of Gujrát created disturbances, and Yatím Bahádur had been killed, Patr was sent to Ahmadábád with powers to appoint the officers of the rebels who submitted, up to commands of Yúzbáshís, or recommend them, if they had held higher commands, for appointments to the emperor.

'The year of his death is not known.' Maásir.

The Rái Mohan Dás mentioned occasionally in the Akbarnámah and the Tuzuk p. 50) appears to be his son.

197. Shaikh 'Abdurrahí'm, of Lak'hnau.

He belongs to the Shaikhzádahs of Lak'hnau, and was in the 40th year a commander of 700. He was a great friend of Jamál Bakhtyár (No. 113), from whom he learned wine-drinking. In fact he drank so hard, that he got frequently insane. In the 30th year, when Akbar was in the Panjáb, 'Abdurrahím wounded himself in a fit whilst at Siálkoṭ in Hakím Abulfath's dwelling. Akbar looked after the wound himself.

His wife was a Bráhman woman of the name of Kishná. After the death of her husband, she spent his money in laying out gardens and villas. In one of them her husband was buried, and she entertained every one who passed by the tomb, from a panjhazárí to a common soldier, according to his position in life.

'Abdurrahím was mentioned above on p. 338.

198. Mední' Ra'i Chauha'n.

From the Akbarnámah we see that he served, in the 28th and 32nd years, in Gujrát. Nizámuddín Ahmad, who was with him in Gujrát, says in the Ṭabaqát,— 'Mední Rái is distinguished for his bravery and liberality, and is now (i. e., in 1001) a commander of 1000.'

199. Mi'r Abul Qa'sim Namaki'n, [Qásim Khán].

The MSS. have almost invariably Tamkín (تمکین), instead of Namakín. He is not to be confounded with Nos. 240 and 250.

Mír Abul Qásim was a Sayyid of Harát. He was at first in the service of Mírzá Muhammad Hakím, Akbar's brother and king of Kábul. But he left Kábul, and on entering Akbar's service, he received Bhírah and Khusháb in the Panjáb as jágír. As his lands lay within the Namaksár,[1] or salt range, he once presented Akbar, evidently in allusion to his faithful intentions (namak-halálí,) with a plate and a cup made of salt (namakín), from which circumstance he received the nickname of Namakín.

[1] The namaksár, or salt-range, says the Maásir, is a district 20 kos long, and belongs to the Sind Ságar Duáb, between the Bahat and the Indus. People break off pieces from the salt rocks, and carry them to the banks of the river, where the price is divided between the miners and the carriers, the former taking ¾ and the latter ¼ of the amount realized. Merchants buy the salt at a price varying from half a dám to two dáms (one rupee = 40 dáms) per man, and export it. The Government takes 1 Rupee for every 17 mans. The salt is also often made into ornaments.

Abul Qásim served in the war with Dáúd of Bengal. In the 26th year, he was in Kábul, and accompanied, in the 30th year, Ismá'íl Qulí Khán (No. 46) on his expedition against the Balúchís. In the 32nd year, the Afghán chiefs of Sawád and Bajor, and Teráh, waited with their families on Akbar, who made Abul Qásim Krorí and Faujdár of those districts, and ordered him to take the families of the chiefs back to Afghánistán. The chiefs themselves were retained at Court. Renewed fights, in the 33rd year, gave him frequent occasions of distinguishing himself.

Up to the 40th year, he rose to a command of 700. In the 43rd year, he was appointed to Bhakkar. He built the great mosque in Sukkhar, opposite to Bhakkar. The inhabitants accused him of oppressions, and he was deposed. A party of the oppressed arrived with him at Court, and lodged a new complaint against him with 'Abdul Hai (No. 230), the Q'ází of the imperial camp (urdú). But Abul Qásim, though summoned, did not appear before the judge, and when the matter was reported to Akbar, he was sentenced to be tied to the foot of an elephant, and paraded through the bazars. To avoid the disgrace, he came to an immediate settlement with the complainants, chiefly through the mediation of Shaikh Ma'rúf, Çadr of Bhakkar, and prevailed on them to return the very day to their homes. The next day he went to the emperor, and complained of the Qází, stating that there were no complainants, and 'Abdul Hai tried in vain to produce the oppressed parties. This case led to the order that Qázís should in future prepare descriptive rolls of complainants, and present them to the emperor.

Abul Qásim was, soon after, made a Khán, got a higher mançab, and received Gujrát in the Panjáb as tuyúl. In the first year of Jahángír's reign, he was made a commander of 1500. The part which he played in the capture of Prince Khusrau has been mentioned above (p. 414, note 2, where Tamkín is to be altered to Namakín). For his services he was again appointed to Bhakkar with the rank of a commander of 3000. He now resolved to make Bhakkar his home. Most of his illustrious descendants were born there. On a hill near the town southwards towards Loharí, near the branch of the river called Kahármátrí, (كهارماترى), he built a mausoleum, to which he gave the name of Çuffah i Çafá (the dais of purity). He and several of his descendants were buried in it.

He is said to have been a most voracious man. He could eat—historians do not specify the time—1000 mangoes, 1000 sweet apples, and 2 melons, each weighing a man. The Maásir says, he had 22 sons, and the Tuzuk (p. 13) says, he had 30 sons and more than 15 daughters.

The following tree is compiled from several notes in the Maásir :—

Mír Abul Qásim Namakín (settled at Bhakkar in 1015).

1. Mír Abul Baqá Amír Khán. (died 1057 A. H.)	2. Mírzá Kashmírí.	3. M Husámuddín.	4. M. Záidullah.

1. M. 'Abdurrazzáq.	2. Ziáuddín Yúsuf Khán.	3. Mír 'Abdulkarím Sindhí Amír Khán. (under Aurangzíb to Farrukh Siyar)	A daughter, married in 1066 to Prince Murád Bakhsh.
	A son.
	M. Abul Wafá. (end of Aurangzíb's reign)	Abul Khair Khán. (under Farrukh Siyar)

Mír Abul Baqá Amír Khán rose under Jahángír to a command of 2500, 1500 horse. Through the influence of Yamínuddaulah he was made governor of Multán, and in the 2nd year of Sháhjahán, he was made a commander of 3000, 2000 horse, and appointed to T'hat'hah, vice Murtazá i Injú deceased (p. 451). In the 9th year, he was made Tuyúldár of Bír in the Dak'hin, and was sent, in the 14th year, to Síwistán vice Qaráq Khán. In the following year, he was again appointed to T'hat'hah, where in 1057 (20th year) he died. He was buried in the mausoleum built by his father. Under Jahángír he was generally called Mír Khán. Sháhjahán gave him the title of Amír Khán.

One of his daughters was married in 1066, after his death, to Prince Murád Bakhsh, who had no children by his first wife, a daughter of Shahnawáz Khán i Çafawí.[1] Amír Khán had a large family. His eldest son, Mír 'Abdurrazzáq, was a commander of 900, and died in the 26th year of Sháhjahán's reign. His second son, Ziáuddín Yúsuf, was made a Khán, and held under Sháhjahán a mançab of 1000, 600 horse. Ziá's grandson, Abul Wafá was in the end of Aurangzíb's reign in charge of his majesty's prayer room (dároghah i já-namáz). Amír Khán's youngest son, Mír 'Abdulkarím, was a personal friend of Aurangzíb. He received in succession the titles of Multafit Khán, Khánahzád Khán (45th year of Aurangzíb), Mír Khánahzád Khán, and Amír Khán (48th year,) and held a command of 3000. After Aurangzíb's death, he was with Muhammad A'zam Sháh; but as he had no contingent, he was left with the baggage (bungáh) at Gwáliár. After the death of Muhammad A'zam in the battle of Sarái Jájú,[2] Bahádur Sháh made him a commander of 3500. He was generally at Court, and continued so under Farrukh Siyar. After Farrukh's death, [1] Shahnawáz Khán i Çafawí is the title of Mírzá Badíuzzamán, alias Mírzá Dak'hiní, son of Mírzá Rustam (No. 9). One of his daughters, Dilras Bánú Begum, was married, in the end of 1046, to Aurangzíb. Another was married, in 1052, to Prince Murád Bakhsh. Elphinstone (History of India, 5th edition, p. 607) calls Shahnawáz Khán by mistake the brother of Sháistah Khán; but Sháistah is the son of Yamínuddaulah Açaf Khán, elder brother of Núr Jahán.

[2] Sarái Jájú, near Dholpúr. The battle was fought on the 18th Rabí' I., 1119, and Muhammad A'zam was killed with his two sons Bedár Bakht and Wálá-jáh.

the Bárha brothers made Amír Khán çadr of the empire. He died shortly after. His son, Abulkhair, was made a Khán by Farrukh Siyar; the other sons held no mançabs, but lived on their zamíndáris.

2. Mírzá Kashmírí was involved in the rebellion of Prince Khusrau. As the associates were to be punished in an unusual way (siásat i ghair-mukarrar, Tuzuk, p. 32), Jahángír ordered his penis to be cut off.

3. Mírzá Husámuddín. He held a mançab, but died young.

4. Mírzá Záidullah. He was in the service of Khán Jahán Lodí.

200. Wazi'r Beg Jami'l.[1]

Wazír Jamíl, as he is often called, served in the 9th year of Akbar's reign against 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak, and in the war with Khán Zamán (No. 13). In the final battle, when Bahádur Khán (No. 22) was thrown off his horse, W. J. instead of taking him prisoner, accepted a bribe from him, and let him off. But Nazar Bahádur, a man in the service of Majnún Khán (No. 50) saw it, and took Bahádur prisoner. Afterwards, he received a jágír in the Eastern Districts, and took part in the expeditions to Bengal and Oṛísá under Mun'im Khán. At the outbreak of the Bengal military revolt, he joined the Qáqsháls; but when they separated from Ma'çúm i Kábulí (p. 431, note) and tendered their submission, W. J. also was pardoned. In the 29th year, he came to court, and served in the following year under Jagnáth (No. 69) against the Ráná. He seems to have lived a long time. Jahángír on his accession made him a commander of 3000 (Tuzuk, p. 8).

He is not to be confounded with the Jamíl Beg mentioned under No. 172.

201. Ta'hir, [son of] Saiful-mulúk.

The Ṭabaqát says that Ṭáhir was the son of Sháh Muhammad Saiful-mulúk. His father was governor of Gharjistán in Khurásán, and was killed by Sháh Ṭahmásp of Persia. Ṭáhir went to India, was made an Amír at Akbar's Court, and served in Bengal, where he was when the author of the Ṭabaqát wrote (1001).

He is also mentioned in Dowson's Edition of Elliot's Historians, I., pp. 241, 242.

202. Ba'bu' Mankli'.

Regarding the name 'Manklí,' vide p. 370, note. The Ṭabaqát says that Bábú Manklí was an Afghán, and a commander of 1000.

He was at first in Dáúd's service, and occupied G'horág'hát at the time when Mun'im Khán had invaded Oṛísá (p. 370). Soon after, he entered Akbar's service, but continued to be employed in Bengal. In the 30th year, he suppressed disturbances at G'horág'hát (Akbarn. III., 470), and took part, in the 35th year, in the operations against Qutlú Khán. Two years later, he accompanied Mán Singh's expedition to Oṛísá.

He may have lived under Jahángír; for the Manklí Khán mentioned in the Tuzuk (pp. 70, 138) can only refer to him. The Tuzuk (p. 12) mentions a son of his, Hátim. Another son, Mahmúd, appears to have been a commander of 500, 300 horse under Sháhjahán (Pádisháhn. I., b., p. 323), though the text edition of the Bibl. Indica calls him son of Yábú Maikalí (يابو ميكلي, for يابو منكلي)

[1] Jamíl is a common name among Turks. It is scarcely ever used in Hindústán.

XVI. Commanders of Six Hundred.

203. Muhammad Qulí Khán Turkmán [Afshár, p. 411].

He served at first in Bengal. At the outbreak of the military revolt, he took the side of the rebels, but left them, and was pardoned by Akbar. In the 30th year, he marched with Mán Singh to Kábul, where he greatly distinguished himself. In the 39th year, when Qulij Khán (No. 42) was appointed to Kábul, Muhammad Qulí Khán, his brother Hamzah Beg (perhaps No. 277), and others, were sent to Kashmír, vice Yúsuf Kháu (No. 35, and p. 411). In the 45th year, a party of Kashmíris tried to set up Ambá Chak[1] as king; but they were defeated by 'Alí Qulí, son of M. Q. Kh. In the 47th year, M. Q. Kh. was made a commander of 1500, 600 horse; and Hamzah Beg, one of 700, 350 horse. New disturbances broke out, when in the following year 'Alí Rái, king of Little Tibet, invaded the frontier districts of Kashmír. He retreated on M. Q. Kh.'s arrival, and was vigorously pursued, when the imperialists were enforced by Saifullah (No. 262) from Láhor. In the 49th year, Ambá again appeared, but was driven, with some difficulty, from his mountains.

In the 2nd year of Jahángír's reign, M. Q. K. was removed from Kashmír. Hamzah Beg was in the 49th year of Akbar's reign a commander of 1000.

204. Bakhtyár Beg Gurd i Sháh Mansúr.

The Izáfat most likely means that he was the son of Sháh Mançúr, in which case the word gurd (athlete) would be Bakhtyár's epithet. Two MSS. have the word pisar (son) instead of gurd.

The Ṭabaqát says, 'Bakhtyár Beg Turkmán in an Amír, and governs at present (1001) Síwistán.' In the 32nd year, he served against the Táríkís.

205. Hakím Humám,[2] son of Mír 'Abdurrazzáq of Gílán.

Regarding his family connection, vide No. 112, p. 424. Humám's real name is Humáyún. When he came to Akbar's Court, he discreetly called himself Humáyún Qulí, or 'slave of Humáyún;' but soon afterwards, Akbar gave him the name of Humám. He held the office of Bakáwal Beg (p. 57), and though only a commander of 600, he was a personal friend of Akbar, and possessed great influence at court. In the 31st year, he was sent with Çadr Jahán (No. 194) to Túrán as ambassador. Akbar often said that he did not enjoy his meals on account of Humám's absence. He returned to India, about a month after his brother's death. He died in the 40th year, on the 6th Rabí' I., 1004. Badáoní (II., p. 406) says, the day after Humám's death, Kamálá (p. 264) also died, and their property was at once put under seal and escheated to the government, so that they were destitute of a decent shroud.

Humám had two sons—

1. Hakím Háziq (حاذق). He was born at Fathpúr Síkrí, and was a young man when his father died. At Sháhjahán's accession, he was made a commander of 1500, 600 horse, and was sent, in the 1st year, to Túrán as ambassador. He rose to a command of 3000. Later, for some reason, his mançab was cancelled, and he lived at Ágrah on a pension of 20,000 rupees per annum, which in the 18th

[1] The MSS. have ابنا. The Tuzuk mentions 'a Kashmírí of royal blood,' of the name of ابده. He was killed by Sher Afkan (vide No. 394) at Bardwán, on the 3rd Çafar, 1016.

[2] Humám, not Hammám, is the Indian pronunciation.

year, was doubled. He died in the 31st year (1068).[1] He was a poet of some distinction, and wrote under the name of Háziq. His vanity is said to have been very great. A copy of his díwán was kept on a golden stool in his reception room, and visitors, when it was brought in or taken away, were expected to rise and make saláms; else he got offended.

2. Hakím Khushhál. He grew up with Prince Khurram. Sháhjahán, on his accession, made him a commander of 1000. He was for some time Bakhshí of the Dak'hin.

206. Mi'rza' Anwar, son of Khán i A'zam Mírzá Kokah (No. 21).

He was mentioned above on p. 328.

XVII. Commanders of Five Hundred.

207. Baltu' Kha'n of Turkistán.

He was a grandee of Humáyún, and served in the Kábul war, and in the battles which led to H.'s restoration.

208. Mi'rak Baha'dur Arghu'n.

The Ṭabaqát says, he reached a command of 2000, and died. From the Akbarnámah (II., 170, 248) we see that he served in the conquest of Málwah (vide No. 120), and in the pursuit of Sharafuddín Husain (No. 17).

209. La'l Kha'n Kola'bi'.

He is also called La'l Khán Badakhshí (vide p. 438), and served under Humáyún in the war of the restoration (Akbarn. I., 411). He distinguished himself in the defeat of Hemú. Later, he served under Mun'im in Bengal and Oṛísá, and died of fever at Gaur (p. 376).

210. Shaikh Ahmad, son of Shaikh Salím.

He is the second (miyáni) son of Shaikh Salím of Fathpúr Síkrí. He served at court with Shaikh Ibráhím (No. 82), and died in the 22nd year (985).

211. Iskandar Beg i Badakhshi'.

He is mentioned in the Akbarnámah (II., 251), as having served in the pursuit of Abul Ma'álí (end of the 8th year).

212. Beg Nu'ri'n Kha'n Qu'chi'n.

He served under Mu'izzul Mulk (No. 61) in the battle of Khairábád. In the 32nd and 33rd years, he served under 'Abdul Maṭlab (No. 83) and Çádiq Khán (No. 43) against the Táríkís.

The Ṭabaqát says he was a commander of 1000, and was dead in 1001.

213. Jala'l Kha'n Qu'rchi'.

Akbar was much attached to him. In the 5th year, he was sent to Rám Chand Bhagelah (No. 89) with the request to allow Tánsín to go to court. In the 11th year, it came to the emperor's ears that J. was passionately attached to a beautiful boy. Akbar had the boy removed; but J. managed to get him again, and fled with him from Court. M. Yúsuf Razawí pursued and captured them. After some time, J. was restored to favour. Later, he took a part in the expedition to Siwánah, and distinguished himself, in the 20th year, in the war with Rájah Chandr Sen of Márwár. During the expedition a Rájpút introduced himself to him, who pretended to be Devi Dás, who had been killed at Mírt'ha, evidently with the view of obtaining through him an introduction to Court. The stranger also reported that Chandr Sen had taken refuge with Kallá, son of Rám Rái and brother's son to Ch. S., and a detachment of imperialists was sent to Kallá's palace. Kallá now wished to take revenge on the stranger for spreading false reports, and induced Shimál Khán (No. 154) to help him. Shimál therefore invited the stranger; but though surrounded by Sh.'s men, the pretender managed to escape. He collected a few men, and entered one night a tent which he supposed to belong to Shimál. But it happened to be that of Jalál, who was cut down by the murderers (end of 983, Akbarn. III., 140).

---

[1] The Maásir says that the author of the Mir-át-ul 'Alam mentions 1080 as the year of his death; but my MS. of the Mir-át (Chapter on the poets of the period from Humáyún to Aurangzíb) mentions no year.

It was Jalál who introduced the historian Badáoní at Court.

214. Parma'nand, the Khatrí.

He is mentioned in Dowson's edition of Elliot's Historians, I., p. 244.

215. Timur Kha'n Yakkah.

He served under Mun'im (No. 11) in Kábul, and, in the 10th year, against Khán Zamán (Akbarn., II., 236, 326).

The Timur i Badakhshí mentioned several times in the Akbarnámah (III., 165, 174) appears to be another officer. Vide No. 142.

216. Sa'ni' Kha'n of Harát.

He was born at Harát, and belonged to the Arlát (ارلات) clan. According to the Akbarnámah (I., 379), Maulánà Sání, 'who is now called Sání Khán', was in the service of Mírzá Hindál; but after the Mírzá's death (21st Zí Qa'dah, 958) he was taken on by Humáyún. He served in the wars with Khán Zamán.

Badáoní (III., 206) says that his real name was 'Alí Akbar. He was a fair poet, but a heretic, and like Tashbíhí of Káshán, wrote treatises on the Man of the Millennium, according to the Nuqṭawí doctrines (p. 452). Hence he must have been alive in 990.

217. Sayyid Jama'luddi'n, son of Sayyid Ahmad Bárha (No. 91).

Vide above p. 408. He had also served in the final war with Khán Zamán.

218. Jagma'l, the Punwár.

He served in the second Gujrát war after Akbar's forced march to Patan and Ahmadábád (p. 416, note).

219. Husain Beg, brother of Husain Khán Buzurg.

220. Hasan Kha'n Batani'.[1]

The Ṭabaqát classes him among the commanders of 1000. He was at first in the service of the Bengal king Sulaimán, and was present with Sulaimán Mankli (p. 370) and Kálá Pahár at the interview between Mun'im and Khán Zamán (No. 13) at Baksar (Buxar). Akbarn., II., 325.

Hasan was killed with Bír Bar in the Khaibar Pass; vide p. 204. MSS. often call him wrongly Husain instead of Hasan.

---

[1] Baṭaní is the name of an Afghán tribe, N. W. of Derá Ismá'il Khán.

221. Sayyid Chhajhu',[1] of Bárha.

The Ṭabaqát says that S. Chhajhú was a brother of S. Mahmúd (No. 75), and distinguished for his courage and bravery. From the family genealogies of the Bárha clan it appears that S. Ch. was a Kúndlíwál. His tomb still exists at Majherah, and according to the inscription he died in 967.

222. Munsif Kha'n, Sulṭán Muhammad of Harát.

223. Qa'zi' Kha'n Bakẖshi'.

Some MSS. have Badakhshí instead of Bakhshi. Vide No. 144. On p. 383, l. 10, we have to read No. 144 for No. 223.

224. Haj'i Yu'suf Kha'n.

He was at first in Kámrán's service. In the 12th year, he joined the corps of Qiyá Khán (No. 33), and rendered assistance to M. Yúsuf Khán, whom Khán Zamán No. 13) besieged in Qanauj. In the 17th year, he operated under Khán 'Alam (No. 58) against M. Ibráhím Husain, and was present in the battle of Sarnál. In the 19th year, he went with Mun'im to Bengal and Oṛísá, and died after his return at Gaur (p. 376).

225. Ra'wul Bhi'm of Jaisalmír.

The Tuzuk says (p. 159),—'On the 9th Khurdád (middle of 1025), Kalyán of Jaisalmír was introduced at court by Rájah Kishn Dás, whom I had sent to him. Kalyán's elder brother was Ráwul Bhím, a man of rank and influence. When he died, he left a son two months old, who did not live long. Bhím's daughter had been married to me when I was prince, and I had given her the title of Malikah i Jahán. This alliance was made, because her family had always been faithful to our house. I now called Bhím's brother to court, invested him with the ṭiká, and made him Ráwul'.[2]

For Kalyán, vide under No. 226. In the 12th year of Jahángír's reign, he was made a commander of 2000, 1000 horse (Tuzuk, p. 163).

226. Ha'shim Beg, son of Qásim Khán (No. 59).

After the death of his father (39th year) and the arrival of Qulij Khán (No. 42), the new governor of Kábul, Háshim returned to court. In the 41st year, he served

[1] The spelling 'Chhajhú' is preferable to 'Jhajhú.'

[2] The list of Jahángír's wives on p. 310, may be increased by ten other princesses. (1) Malikah i Jahán, daughter of Ráwul Bhím of Jaisalmír. (2) The beautiful daughter of Zain Kokah, mentioned on p. 345. There is a curious discrepancy between Tuzuk, p. 8, and Akbarnámah, III., 594: Jahángír says that Parwíz was his son by Zain Kokah's daughter, and Abulfazl says that Parwíz's mother was the daughter of Khwájah Hasan, Zain Khán's uncle (vide also p. 344); but there is no doubt that Parwíz was born in the 34th year, on the 19th Abán, 997, whilst Jahángír, only in the 41st year, fell in love with Zain Khán's daughter (p. 345). It is therefore evident, assuming that Sayyid Ahmad's text of Tuzuk, p. 8, be correct, that Jahángír had forgotten who among his many wives was mother to his second son. (3) Núrunnisá Begum, sister of Mírzá Muzaffar Husain, p. 464. (4) A daughter of the king of Khandesh. This princess died in the 41st year of Akbar's reign. (5) Çálihah Bánú, daughter of Qáim Khán, p. 371. (6) A daughter of Khwájah Jahán i Kábulí (Dost Muhammad). (7) A daughter of Sa'íd Khán Gakk'har. Her daughter, 'Iffat Bánú, is mentioned, Akbarnámah, III., 561. (8) The mother of Daulat Nisá, Akbarn. III., 597. The MSS. do not clearly give the name of the father of this princess. (9) A daughter of Mírzá Sanjar, son of Khizr Khán Hazárah; Akbarn., III., 607. (10) A daughter of Rám Chand Bundelah, (No. 248), married in 1018; Tuzuk, p. 77.

under M. Rustam (No. 9) against Bású and other rebellious zamíndárs in the north-eastern part of the Panjáb, and distinguished himself in the conquest of Mau. In the 44th year, he served under Farid i Bukhárí (No. 99) before Ásír. Later, he went with Sa'ádat Khán to Násik.[1] After the conquest of Tiranbak, he returned to court (46th year), and was appointed, in the following year, to a command of 1500.

In the first year of Jahángír's reign, he was made a commander of 2000, 1500 horse. In the 2nd year, his mançab was increased to 3000, 2000 horse, and he was made governor of Oṛísá. In the 5th year, he was transferred to Kashmír, his uncle Khwájagí Muhammad Husain (No. 241) officiating for him there till his arrival from Oṛísá. His successor in Oṛísá was Rájah Kalyán, brother of Bhím (No. 225).

Háshim's son is the renowned Muhammad Qásim Khán Mír A'tish. He was, in the 18th year of Sháhjahán, a commander of 1000, 500 horse, Dároghah of the Top-khánah and Koṭwál of the camp. He distinguished himself in Balkh, Andkhúd, received the title of Mu'tamid Khán, and was made, in the 21st year, a commander of 2000, 1000 horse, and Akhtah Begí. In the following year, he was promoted to a command of 3000, and also got the title of Qásim Khán. He then served under Aurangzíb in Qandahár, and was made, in the 28th year, a commander of 4000, 2500 horse. In the next year, he destroyed Fort Sántúr (سانتور), which the ruler of Srínagar had repaired. Later, he was made by Dárá Shikoh a commander of 5000, 5000 sihaspah-duaspah, received a present of a lac of rupees, and was appointed governor of Ahmadábád (Gujrát), whilst Jaswant Singh was made governor of Málwah. Both were ordered to unite their contingents near Ujjain, and keep Prince Murád Bakhsh in check. When the Prince left Gujrát, the two commanders marched against him viâ Bánswárah; but when approaching K'háchrod, Murád suddenly retreated 18 kos, and joined, seven kos from Ujjain, the army of Aurangzíb. The two chiefs had received no information of Aurangzíb's march. They attacked him, however, but were totally defeated (near Ujjain, 22nd Rajab, 1068). In the first battle between Aurangzíb and Dárá, at Samogar,[2] Qásim commanded the left wing. Soon after, he made his submission, and received Sambhal and Murádábád as tuyúl, as Rustam Khán i Dak'hiní, the former jágírdár, had fallen at Samogar. Qásim was then charged with the capture of Sulaimán Shikoh. In the 3rd year of Aurangzíb's reign, he was appointed to Mathurá. On the way, he was murdered by a brother of his, who is said to have led a miserable life (1071). The murderer was executed at Aurangzíb's order.

227. Mi'rza' Fari'du'n, son of Muhammad Qulí Khán Barlás (No. 31).

He has been mentioned above, p. 342. His death took place at Udaipúr in 1023 (Tuzuk, p. 131).

228. Yu'suf Kha'n [Chak], king of Kashmír.

Yúsuf's father was 'Alí Khán Chak, king of Kashmír. He died from a hurt he received during a game at chaugán (p. 297), having been violently thrown on the pommel of the saddle (pesh-kohah i zín). On his death, Yúsuf was raised to the throne (Akbarnámah, III., 237). He first surrounded the palace of his uncle Abdál,

[1] This Sa'ádat Khán had first been in the service of the Dak'hin kings as commander of the Forts of Gálnah and Tiranbak; but later he entered Akbar's service.

[2] Vide Journal, Asiatic Society, Bengal, 1870, p. 275.

who aimed at the crown, and in the fight which ensued, Abdál was shot. A hostile party, thereupon, raised one Sayyid Mubárak to the throne, and in a fight which took place on the maidán of Srínagar, where the 'Íd prayer is said, Yúsuf was defeated. Without taking further part in the struggle, he fled, and came, in the 24th year, to Akbar's Court, where he was well received. During his stay at court, Sayyid Mubárak had been forced to retire, and Lohar Chak, son of Yúsuf's uncle, had been made king. In the 25th year, (Akbarn., III., 288), the emperor ordered several Panjáb nobles to reinstate Yúsuf. When the imperial army reached Pinjar, the Kashmíris sued for mercy, and Yúsuf, whom they had solicited to come alone, without informing Akbar's commanders, entered Kashmír, seized Lohar Chak without fighting, and commenced to reign.

Some time after, Çálih Díwánah reported to the emperor how firmly and independently Yúsuf had established himself, and Akbar sent Shaikh Ya'qúb i Kashmírí, a trusted servant, with his son Haidar to Kashmír, to remind Yúsuf of the obligations under which he lay to the emperor. In the 29th year, therefore, Yúsuf sent his son Ya'qúb with presents to Akbar, but refused personally to pay his respects, although the court, in the 30th year, had been transferred to the Panjáb; and Ya'qúb, who had hitherto been with the emperor, fled from anxiety for his safety. The emperor then sent Hakím 'Alí (No. 192) and Baháuddín Kambú to Yúsuf, to persuade him to come, or, if he could not himself come, to send again his son. As the embassy was without result, Akbar ordered Sháhrukh Mírzá (No. 7) to invade Kashmír. The imperial army marched over Pak'hlí, and was not far from Bárah Múlah, when Yúsuf submitted and surrendered himself (Akbarn. III., 492).[1] Sháhrukh was on the point of returning, when he received the order to complete the conquest. Yúsuf being kept a prisoner, the Kashmíris raised Aulád Husain, and, soon after, Ya'qúb, Yúsuf's son, to the throne; but he was every where defeated. Information of Yúsuf's submission and the defeat of the Kashmíris was sent to court, and at Srínagar the khuṭbah was read, and coins were struck, in Akbar's name. The cultivation of za'farán (p. 84)[2] and silk, and the right of hunting, were made imperial monopolies (p. 411). On the approach of the cold season, the army returned with Yúsuf Khán, and arrived, in the 31st year, at court. Todar Mall was made responsible for Yúsuf's person.

As Ya'qúb Khán and a large party of Kashmíris continued the struggle, Qásim (No. 59) was ordered to march into Kashmír, to put an end to the rebellion. Ya'qúb was again on several occasions defeated.

In the 32nd year, Yúsuf was set at liberty, received from Akbar a jágír in Bihár (Akbarn., III., 547), and was made a commander of 500. He served in Bengal. In the 37th year, he accompanied Mán Singh, to Oṛísá, and commanded the detachment, which marched over Jhárkand and Kokrah[3] (Chutiá Nágpúr) to Mednípúr (Akbarn., III., 641).

[1] The Akbarnámah (III., 492) calls the pass near Bárah Múlah, where Yúsuf surrendered, بولياس. The Maásir has بولباس. It is evidently the same pass which the Tuzuk (p. 292) calls بهول‌باس كوتل, 2½ kos from Bárah Múlah. The Tuzuk says that Bárah Múlah means 'place of the boar (bárá)', which is one of the avatárs.

[2] Regarding the cultivation of za'farán (saffron) vide also Tuzuk, p. 45.

[3] Kokrah was mentioned above on p. 401. It is the old name of Chutiá Nágpúr, one of the parganahs of which is still called Kokrah, or Khukra, as spelt Ya'qúb Khán, soon after, submitted, and paid his respects to Akbar, when, in the 31th year, the court had gone to Kashmír (p. 380).

Yúsuf Khán is not to be confounded with No. 388.

229. Nu'r Qulij, son of Áltún Qulij.

Áltún or áltún is Turkish, and means 'gold.'

Núr Qulij was a relation of Qulij Khán (No. 42). He served under him in the expedition to Idar, which Akbar had ordered to be made when moving, in the 21st year, from Ajmír to Gogundah. In the fight with the zamíndár of Idar, N. Q. was wounded. In the 26th year, he served under Sulṭán Murád against Mírzá Muhammad Hakím. In the 30th year, he again served under Qulij Khán, who had been made governor of Gujrát. He continued to serve there under the Khánkhánán (No. 29), and returned with him, in the 32nd year, to court.

230. Mi'r 'Abdul Hai, Mír 'Adl.

The Ṭabaqát calls him Khwájah 'Abdul Hai, and says that the was an Amír. He had been mentioned above on pp. 468,471.

231. Sha'h Quli' Kha'n Na'ranji'.

Abulfazl says that Sháh Qulí was a Kurd from near Baghdád. He was an old servant of Humáyún. In the first year of Akbar's reign, he served under Khizr Khán (p. 365, note 2) in the Panjáb. He was much attached to Bairám. In the 11th year, he was sent to Gaḍha, when Mahdí Qásim Khán (No. 36) had left that province without permission for Makkah.

The Ṭabaqát calls him a commander of 1000.

His son, Pádisháh Qulí, was a poet, and wrote under the name of Juzbí. A few verses of his are given below in the list of poets.

232. Farrukh Kha'n, son of Khán i Kalán (No. 16).

He was mentioned on pp. 322 and 357. According to the Ṭabaqát, he served, in 1001, in Bengal.

233. Sha'dma'n, son of Khán i A'zam Kokah (No. 21).

Vide above, p. 328.

234. Haki'm 'Ainul Mulk, of Shíráz.

He is not to be confounded with Hakím ul Mulk; vide below among the Physicians of the court.

---

on the survey maps. The Rájah, Col. Dalton informs me, once resided in Kokrah at a place in Lat. 23° 20′ and Long. 88° 87′, nearly, where there is still an old fort. Vide also Vth Report (Madras edition, vol. I., p. 503; old edition, p. 417).

The Rájah of Kokrah who, in the 30th year, succumbed to Shahbáz Khán (p. 401) is called Mádhú. In the 37th year, Mádhú and Lak'hmí Rái of Kokrah served in Yúsuf Khán's detachment, to which the contingents also of Sangrám Singh Sháhá of K'harakpúr (p. 446, and Proceedings, A. S. Bengal, for May, 1871), and Púran Mall of Gidhor belonged (Akbarnámah, III., 641).

Kokrah is again mentioned in the Tuzuk i Jahángírí (pp. 154, 155), where it is defined as a hilly district between south Bihár and the Dak'hin. It was run over, in the beginning of 1025, by Ibráhím Khán Fath-jang, governor of Bihár, who was dissatisfied with the few diamonds and elephants which the Rájahs sent him as tribute. The then Rájah is called Durjun Sál. He was captured with several of his relations in a cave, and the district was annexed to Bihár.

The Tuzuk has (l. c.) a few interesting notes on the diamonds of Kokrah.

He was a learned man and a clever writer. He traced his origin, on his mother's side, to the renowned logician Muhaqqiq i Dawwání. The Historian Badáoní was a friend of his. Akbar also liked him very much. In the 9th year, he was sent as ambassador to Chingiz Khán of Gujrát. In the 17th year, he brought I'timád Khán (No. 67) and Mír Abú Turáb to the emperor. He also accompanied Akbar on his march to the eastern provinces of the empire. Afterwards, in 983, he was sent to 'Ádil Khán of Bíjápúr, from where, in 985, he returned to court (Badáoní, II., 250). He was then made Faujdár of Sambhal. In the 26th year, when 'Arab Bahádur and other Bengal rebels created disturbances, he fortified Barelí, and refusing all offers, held out till the arrival of an Imperial corps, when he defeated the rebels. In the same year, he was made Çadr of Bengal, and in the 31st year, Bakhshí of the Çúbah of Ágrah. He was then attached to the Dak'hin corps of 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21), and received Handiah as jágír. When 'Azíz, for some reason, cancelled his jágír, he went without permission to court (35th year), but was at first refused audience. On enquiry, however, Akbar reinstated him.

He died at Handiah on the 27th Zí Hajjah, 1003 (Badáoní II., 403).

The Mírzáí Masjid, also called Pádisháhí Masjid, in Old Barelí, Mírzáí Mahallah, was built by him. The inscription on it bears the date 987 (24th year), when the Hakím was Faujdár of Sambhal.

He was also a poet, and wrote under the takhalluç of Dawáí.

235. Ja'nish Baha'dur.

Jánish Bahádur was mentioned on p. 345. He was at first in the service of Mírzá Muhammad Hakím, king of Kábul. After the death, in the 30th year, of his master, he came with his sons to India. Soon after, he served under Zain Kokah (No. 34) against the Yúsufzaís, and saved Zain's life in the Khaibar catastrophe. In the 35th year, he served under the Khánkhánán in T'hat'hah, and returned with him, in the 38th year, to court. Later, he served in the Dak'hin. He died in the 46th year (1009). He was an excellent soldier.

His son, Shujá'at Khán Shádí Beg. He was made, in the 7th year of Sháhjahán's reign, a commander of 1000, and received the title of Shád Khán. In the 12th year, he was sent as ambassador to Nazr Muhammad Khán of Balkh. On his return, in the 14th year, he was made a commander of 1500, and was appointed governor of Bhakkar, vide Sháh Qulí Khán. Afterwards, on the death of Ghairat Khán, he was made governor of T'hat'hah, and a commander of 2000. In the 19th year, he was with Prince Murád Bakhsh in Balkh and Badakhshán. In the 21sth year, he was appointed governor of Kábul, vice Síwá Rám, and held, in the following year, an important command under Aurangzíb in the Qandahár expedition and the conquest of Bust. In the 23rd year, he was made a commander of 3000, 2500 horse, and received the coveted distinction of a flag and a drum. Two years later, in the 25th year, he served again before Qandahár, and was made, on Sháhjahán's arrival in Kábul, a commander of 3500, 3000 horse, with the title of Shujá'at Khán. In the 26th year, he served under Dárá Shikoh before Qandahár, and with Rustam Khán Bahádur at Bust. He died soon after. He had a son of the name of Muhammad Sa'íd.

236. Mi'r Ta'hir i Músawí.

He is not to be confounded with Nos. 94, 111, and 201. According to the Ṭabaqát, Mír Ṭáhir is 'the brother of Mírzá Yúsuf Razawí (No. 37), and was distinguished for his bravery." It would thus appear that Abulfazl makes no difference between the terms Razawí and Músawí (vide p. 381, under No. 61).

237. Mi'rza' 'Ali' Beg 'Alamsháhí.

He is mentioned in the Akbarnámah among the grandees who accompanied Mun'im to Bengal and Oṛísá, and took part in the battle of Takaroí (p. 375). After the outbreak of the Bengal Military revolt, he joined a conspiracy made by Mír Zakí, 'Abdí Kor, Shiháb i Badakhshí, and Kújak Yasáwul, to go over to the rebels. The plot, however, was discovered; they were all imprisoned, but Mír Zakí alone was executed. Akbarnámah, III., 262.

His epithet 'Alamsháhí is not clear to me.

He must not be confounded with the more illustrious

[Mi'rza' 'Ali' Beg i Akbarsháhí].[1]

He was born in Badakhshán, and is said to have been a highly educated man. When he came to India, he received the title of Akbarsháhí. In the 30th year, he commanded the Ahadís on Sháhrukh's expedition to Kashmír (p. 479).

Later, he served under Prince Murád in the Dak'hin. When the prince, after making peace, returned from Ahmadnagar, Çádiq Khán (No. 43) occupied Mahkar. But new disturbances broke out under the Dak'hin leaders Azhdar Khán and 'Ain Khán, against whom Çádiq sent a corps under M. 'Alí Beg. He suddenly fell over them, and routed them, carrying off much plunder and many dancing girls (zanán i ak'háṛah). In consequence of this defeat, Khudáwand Khán and other Amírs of the Nizámsháh marched against the imperialists with 10,000 horse, but Çádiq and M. A. B. defeated them. In the 43rd year, M. A. B. took Fort Ráhútarah (راهوترة) near Daulatábád, after a siege of one month, occupied, in the same year, Paṭan on the Godávarí, and took Fort Lohgaḍh. "Both forts," says the author of the Maásir, "have, from want of water, become uninhabitable (mismár shudah), and are so to this day." Later, M. A. B. served under Abulfazl, and distinguished himself in the conquest of Ahmadnagar. In the 46th year, he received a drum and a flag, and continued to serve, under the Khánkhánán, in the Dak'hin.

In the beginning of Jahángír's reign, he was made a commander of 4000, jágírdár of Sambhal, and governor of Kashmír. He served in the pursuit of Khusrau (Tuzuk, p. 30). Later, he received a tuyúl in Audh. When Jahángír went to Ajmír, he went to court. One day, he paid a visit to the tomb of Mu'ínuddín i Chishtí. On seeing the tomb of Shahbáz Khán (p. 401), he stooped down, and embracing it, exclaimed, "Oh! he was an old friend of mine." The same moment, he fell forward a corpse, and was buried at the same spot (22nd Rabí' I., 1025).

It is said that he kept few soldiers and servants, but paid them well. In his habits he was an epicurean. He was looked upon as a great patron of the learned. He died childless, at the age of seventy-five (Tuzuk, p. 163).

---

[1] The Tuzuk (p. 11) says, he belonged to the ulús i Dihlí, a very doubtful term, as he belonged to Badakhshán. Perhaps we have to read ulús i duldai (p. 388).

238. Ra'm Da's, the Kachwáhah.

His father was a poor man of the name of Ordat (اوردت), and lived at Lúní (or Baunlí, vide p. 398). Rám Dás was at first in the service of Rái Sál Darbárí (No. 106), and was recommended by him to the emperor. His faithfulness was almost proverbial. In the 17th year, when Todar Mall was ordered to assist Mun'im in Bihár, he was made his náib in the Financial Department, and gained Akbar's favour by his regularity and diligence. He amassed a fortune, and though he had a palace in A'grah near Hatiápul, he lived in the guard house, 'always watching with his 200 Rájpúts, spear in hand.'

Immediately before Akbar's death, he put his men over the treasures of the palace with a view to preserve them for the lawful heir. Jahángír, with whom he stood in high favour, sent him, in the 6th year, with 'Abdullah Khán to Gujrát and the Dak'hin, and gave him the title of Rájah and a flag, Rantanbhúr being assigned to him as jágír (Tuzuk, p. 98). It seems that he received the title of Rájah Karan. After the defeat of the Imperialists, Jahángír wished to make an example of the Amírs who had brought disgrace on the imperial arms. He ordered their pictures to be drawn, and taking the portraits one after the other into his hand, abused each Amír right royally. Looking at Rám Dás's portrait, he said, "Now, when thou wert in Rái Sál's service, thou hadst a tankah per diem; but my father took an interest in thee, and made thee an Amír. Do not Rájpúts think flight a disgraceful thing? Alas! thy title, Rájah Karan, ought to have taught thee better. Mayest thou die without the comforts of thy faith." Rám Dás was immediately sent to Bangash, where, in the same year, he died (1022). When Jahángír heard of his death, he said, "My curse has come true; for the Hindús believe that a man who dies beyond the Indus, will go straight to hell."

He was a liberal man, and gave rich presents to jesters and singers.

His eldest son, Naman Dás, in the 48th year of Akbar's reign, left the court without permission, and went home. At the request of his father, Sháh Qulí Khán's men were to bring him back to court by force. But Naman defied them; a struggle ensued, and he was killed. Rám Dás was so grieved, that Akbar paid him a visit of condolence.

His second son, Dalap Dás, had the same character as his father; but he died young.

In the Tuzuk (p. 312), a villa near a spring called Inch (انچ), between Bánpúr and Kákápúr in Kashmír, is mentioned, which Akbar had given Rám Dás. Vide also Tuzuk, p. 39, l. 3.

239. Muhammad Kha'n Niya'zi'.

Abulfazl ranks him among the commanders of 500. Under Jahángír, he rose to a command of 2000. Like Mírzá Rustam Çafawí and Abul Hasan Turbatí, he refused a title; for he said that his name was Muhammad, than which no better name existed.

He served under Shahbáz Khán (No. 80) in Bengal, and distinguished himself in the fights near the Brahmaputra. It is said that Shahbáz was so anxious to retain his services, that he gave him a lac of rupees per annum. Later, he served under the Khánkhánán in the conquest of T'hat'hah, and inflicted the final blow on Mírzá Jání Beg (No. 47) near Lak'hí,[1] where he obtained a signal victory, though far outnumbered by the enemies. From that time, the Khánkhánán was his friend.

Under Jahángír, he took a leading part in the Dak'hin wars, especially in the fights with Malik 'Ambar near Kharkí, a famous battle field (vide note to No. 255), and continued to serve there under Prince Sháhjahán.

He died in 1037. The táríkh of his death is محمد خان اولیا بمرد, 'Muhammad Khán, the saint, is dead.' He was a man of great piety. His day was carefully divided; religious exercises, the reading of commentaries on the Qorán, conversing with holy men, sleeping and eating, each had its fixed time. Nor did he ever depart from his routine except on the march. He never neglected the ablution (wuzú) prescribed by the law. People told many miraculous stories (khawáriq) of him.

During his long stay in the Dak'hin, he held Ashtí (in the Wardah district) as jágír, and made it his home. He adorned the town with several mosques, houses, and gardens. "At present," says the author of the Maásir, "there is only one of his hundred houses left, the store house where his lamps were kept; the whole town and the neighbourhood are deserted, and do not yield the tenth part of the old revenue. Even among his descendants there is none left that may be called a man of worth (kase namánd kih rushde dáshtah báshad)."[2]

He was buried in Ashtí. People often pray at his tomb.

The men of his contingent were mostly Niyází Afgháns. If one of them died, he gave a month's pay to his family; or, if he had no children, half a month's pay to his heirs.

His son, Ahmad Khán Niyází, was in the 20th year of Sháhjahán's reign a commander of 2500 (Pádisháhnámah, II., 386, 725).

240. Abul Muzaffar, son of Ashraf Khán (No. 74).

From the Akbarnámah (III., 248) we see that in the 24th year (987) he was stationed in Chanderí and Narwar, and was ordered to assist in suppressing the Bihár

---

[1] Vide Dowson's edition of Elliot's Historians, Vol. I., p. 250.

[2] "The emperor Jahángír gave the Ashtí, Amner, Paunár, and Tálígánw (Barár) parganahs in jágír to Muhammad Khán Niyází. He restored Ashtí, and brought the country round under cultivation. A handsome mausoleum was built over his grave in Mughul style. Muhammad Khán was succeeded by Ahmad Khán, who died in 1061. A similar mausoleum was erected over his tomb, but smaller and of inferior workmanship. The two stand side by side within an enclosure, and are the sights of Ashtí. They are indeed striking monuments of art to find in such a remote spot as this. After the death of Ahmad Khán, the power of the Niyázís gradually declined; in time Ashtí itself passed from their hands into the possession of the Marhatta officials, and now nothing remains to them save a few rent-free fields, sufficient merely for their subsistence. The tombs of their ancestors were already falling into disrepair owing to the poverty of the family, when they were taken in hand by the district authorities as worthy objects of local interest, and restored from municipal funds. Lately, in consideration of the past history of the family, and the local respect which it commands, the Government conferred on Nawáb Wáhid Khán, one of its representatives in Ashtí, the powers of an honorary magistrate."

"Karanja. A small octroi town in the Arví tahçíl of the Wardah district. It was founded some 260 years by Nawáb Muhammad Khán Niyází of Ashtí." Extracts from C. Grant's Gazetteer of the Central Provinces of India, second edition, 1870, pp. 7 and 236.

rebels (III., 273). In the 28th year, he served in Gujrát (III., 423, and Badáoní II., (323). Vide also p. 389.

241. Khwa'jagi 'Muhammad Husain, Mír Barr.

He is the younger brother of Qásim Khán (No. 59), and had the title of Mír Barr, in contradistinction to that of his brother. He came in the 5th year with Mun'im (No. 11) from Kábul to India. When dissensions broke out between Ghaní Khán, Mun'im's son, and Haidar Muhammad Khán Akhtahbegí (No. 66), whom Mun'im had left as his náibs in Kábul, Haidar was called to court, and Abul Fath,[1] son of Mun'im's brother, was sent there to assist Ghaní. Muhammad Husain accompanied Abul Fath. He remained a long time in Kábul. After his return to India, he accompanied the emperor on his march to Kashmír. His honesty and punctuality made him a favorite with the emperor, and he was appointed Mír Bakáwal (master of the imperial kitchen), and was also made a commander of 1000.

In the 5th year of Jahángír, he officiated for Háshim (No. 226) as governor of Kashmír. On Háshim's arrival he returned to court, and died in the end of the 7th year (1021; Tuzuk, p. 114).

He had no children. The Tuzuk says that he was quite bald, and had neither moustache nor beard. His voice was shrill like that of a eunuch.

242. Abul Qa'sim, brother of 'Abdul Qádir Akhúnd.

He is not to be confounded with Nos. 199 and 251. Badáoní (II., 323) calls him a native of Tabríz, and says that his brother was Akbar's teacher (ákhúnd). In 991, Abul Qásim was made Díwán of Gujrát.

243. Qamar Kha'n, son of Mír 'Abdullatíf of Qazwín (No. 161).

He served under Mun'im (No. 11) in Bengal, and was present in the battle of Takaroí (p. 375). In the 22nd year, he served under Shihán in Gujrát (Akbarn., III., 190), and in the 24th year, under Todar Mall in Bihár. In the 25th year, he took part in the battle near Sultánpúr Bilharí (p. 400, and Akbarn., III., 305).

His son, Kaukab, fell under Jahángír for some fault into disgrace. He was flogged and imprisoned. Regarding his restoration to favour, vide Tuzuk, p. 219.

244. Arjun Singh,
245. Sabal Singh,
256. Sakat Singh,
} sons of Rájah Mán Singh (No. 30).

Some MSS. have Durjan[2] instead of Arjun. The name of Sakat Singh, moreover, recurs again at No. 342. There is little doubt that at the latter place we should read Himmat Singh, though all MSS. have Sakat.

Nor is it clear why Abulfazl has not entered the name of Bháo Singh, who at Akbar's death was a commander of 1000, and was gradually promoted, during Jahángír's reign, to a mançab of 5000. Like his elder brother Jagat Singh (No. 160), he died from excessive drinking (1030). His name often occurs in the Tuzuk.

---

[1] Abul Fath, who on p. 318 has erroneously been called Abdul Fath, was the son of Fazíl Beg, Mun'im's brother. Badáoní II., 56 has Fazáil Beg, but the Akbarnámah and the Maásir have Fazíl.

[2] The Lucknow edition of the Akbarnámah (III., 642) has also Durjan, and (by mistake) Síl for Sabal Singh. The Subhán Singh mentioned in the same passage, would also appear to be a son of Mán Singh.

Arjun Singh, Sabal Singh, and Sakat Singh, served in the 37th year in the conquest of Oṛísá. Sakat Singh, in the 26th year (989), had served in Kábul. They died before their father.

Himmat Singh distinguished himself under his father in the wars with the Afgháns.

Col. J. C. Brooke in his Political History of the State of Jeypore (Selections from the Records, Government of India, Foreign Department, No. LXV, 1868) mentions six sons of Mán Singh, Jagat, Arjun, Himmat, Sakat, Bhím, and Kalyán Singh. The last two are not mentioned by Muhammadan historians; nor are Bháo and Sabal mentioned by Brooke. Vide 'A Chapter from Muhammadan History,' in the Calcutta Review, April, 1871.

246. Mustafa' Ghilzi'.

A Sayyid Muçṭafá is mentioned in the Akbarnámah (III., 416). He served in the 28th year in Gujrát, and was present in the battle near Maisánah, 18 kos S. E. of Paṭan, in which Sher Khán Fúládí was defeated.

247. Nazar Kha'n, son of Sa'íd Khán, the Gakk'har.

A brother of his is mentioned below, No. 332. Vide Nos. 170, 171.

The Ṭabaqát calls him Nazar Beg, son of Sa'íd Khán, and says that in 1001, he was a Hazárí.

Mughul Historians give the following tree of the Gakk'har chiefs—

Sulṭán Tatár, the Gakk'har.

1. Sulṭán Sárang ..... 2. Sulṭán Ádam

1. Sulṭán Sárang		2. Sulṭán Ádam
1. Kamál Khán	2. Sa'íd Khán	1. Lashkarí	2. Muhammad Khán
Mubárak Khán (No. 171)	1. Nazar Khán (No. 247) 2. Sháh Muhammad (No. 332)		Jalál Khán (No. 170) Akbar Qulí Sulṭán Murád Qulí Sulṭán Allah Qulí

Jalál Khán was killed in 1620 (15th year) in Bangash, and his son Akbar Qulí, who then served at Kángṛah, was made a commander of 1000, and sent to Bangash (Tuzuk, pp. 307, 308).

Jahángír, after the suppression of Khusrau's revolt passed on his way to Kábul through the Gakk'har district (Tuzuk, pp. 47,48). He left the Bahat (1st Muharram, 1016) and came to Fort Rohtás, the cost of which he states to have been 161,000,000 dáms, 'which is equal to 4,025,000 rupees in Hindústání money, or 120,000 Persian tumáns, or 1 irb, 2,175,000 silver Hálís of Turání money.' After a march of 4¾ kos, he came to Ṭílah, ṭílah in the Gakk'har dialect meaning 'a hill.' He then came to Dih Bhakrálah, bhakrá meáning 'forest.' The way from Ṭílah to Bhakrá passes along the bed of the Káhan river, the banks of which are full kanír flowers. He then came to Hatiá, which was built by a Gakk'har of the name of Hát'hí (mentioned in Mr. Delmerick's History of the Gakk'hars, Journal, Asiatic Society, Bengal, 1871). The district from Márgalah to Hatiá is called Poṭ'hwár; and from Rohtás to Hatiá dwell the Bhúgiáls, a tribe related to the Gakk'hars. From Hatiá, he marched 4½ kos and reached Pakkah, so called because it has a pucca sarái. Four and a half kos further on, he came to Kuṛaṛ, which means in the Gakk'har dialect 'rugged.' He then went to Ráwalpiṇḍí, which is said to have been built by a Hindú of the name Ráwal, piṇḍí meaning 'a village,' and gives a few curious particulars regarding the river and the pool of the place. From Ráwalpiṇḍí he went to Kharbuzah, where a dome may be seen which has the shape of a melon (kharbuzah). The Gakk'hars used formerly to collect tolls there. He then came to the Kálápání, and to the Márgalah pass, már meaning 'killing,' and galah 'a carawan.' "Here ends the country of the Gakk'hars. They are a brutish race, always at feud with each other. I asked them to live in peace; but they will not."[1]

The Pádisháhnámah (II., 240, 264, 266, 722, 733, 740) mentions several Gakk'har chiefs—

1. Akbar Qulí Sulṭán, a commander of 1500, 1500 horse, died in the 18th year of Sháhjahán's reign. His son Murád Qulí Sulṭán, was under Sháhjahán a commander of 1500, 1000 horse (Pádisháhn. II., 410, 485, 512, 523, 565, 595, 655, 730).

2. Jabbár Qulí, (brother of Jalál Khán),[2] 1000, 800 horse.

3. Khizr Sulṭán, (son of Nazar Khán),[2] 800, 500 horse, died in the 12th year Shahj.'s reign.

The Pádisháhnámah (I., p. 432) mentions Gakk'hars' mules as famous.

The Maásir í 'A'lamgírí (p. 155) also mentions Murád Qulí and his son Allah Qulí. Allah Qulí's daughter was married to Prince Muhammad Akbar, fourth son of Aurangzíb, on the 3rd Rajab, 1087.

248. Ra/m Chand, son of Madhukar [Bundelah].

He is also called Rám Sáh, and was mentioned on p. 356. He was introduced at court by Çádiq Khán (No. 43), when Akbar was in Kashmír (1000). In the first year of Jahángír's reign, we find him in rebellion, evidently because his right of succession was rendered doubtful by the predilection of the emperor for Bir Singh Deo, Rám Chand's younger brother. In the end of the first year, he was attacked by 'Abdullah Khán, who moved from Kálpí, his jágír, to Uṇḍchah. On the 27th Zí Qa'dah 1015, Rám Chand was brought fettered to court; but Jahángír had his fetters taken off, gave him a dress of honor, and handed him over to Rájah Bású of Dhamerí. 'He never thought that he would be treated so kindly' (Tuzuk, p. 42). But Uṇḍchah was handed over to Bir Singh Deo as reward for the murder of Abulfazl.

---

[1] For the geographical details of this passage I am indebted to Mr. J. G. Delmerick. The Tuzuk has Pílah of Tílah; Bhakrá for Bhakrálah, and the Persian word khánah for Káhan (کاہن), the name of the river near Bhakrálah—a most extraordinary mistake; kor for Kuṛaṛ or Gúrá, a village near Manikyálah; Ponhúhár for Poṭhwár. Mr. Delmerick also says that the river near Hatiá, or Hát'hiá, is called Kásí, and that near Ráwalpiṇḍí is the Lahí, which forces a passage through low hills where there is a very deep pool, just before its junction with the Sohan. Sarái Kharbuzah is also called Sarái Mádhú.

On the same page of Sayyid Ahmad's edition of the Tuzuk, we have to read Khattar and Dilah-zák, for Khar and Dilah-zák. The Khattars occupy the district called Khátar, and the Dilah-záks are found in the Ch'hach valley of the Indus.

Poṭ'hwár is the country between the Jhelam and the Sohan; but Jahángír extends it to the Márgalah pass from Hatiá (30 miles from the Jhelam).

[2] So according to Mr. Delmerick.

In the 4th year of his reign (1018), Jahángír married Rám Chand's daughter at the request of her father (vide Tuzuk, p. 77; and No. 225, note).

He appears to have died in 1021, and was succeeded by his son Bhárat Singh. Tuzuk, p. 112.

Muhammadan Historians give the following tree of the Undchah Bundelahs—

Rájah Partáb, founds Undchah in 1531, A. D.

- 1. Bhárat Chand, (died childless).
- 2. Madhukar Singh, (dies 1000).
  - 1. Rám Chand, (dies 1021).
    - A son.
      - Bhárat.
        - Debí Singh.
  - 2. Hodal Ráo, (killed, p. 356).
    - 1. Jhujhár Singh.
      - Bikramájít.
    - 2. Paháṛ Singh.
      - Subhán Singh.
        - Prit'hí Singh.
          - Sanwal Singh.
  - 3. Bir Singh Deo, the murderer of Abulfazl (dies 1036).
    - 3. Chandr Man.
    - 4. Bení Dás.
    - 5. Bhagwán Dás.

The Maásir contains biographical notes of nearly all of them. Vide also Thornton's Gazetteer, under Oorcha.

Bení Dás and Bhagwán Dás were killed by a Rájpút in the 13th year of Sháhjahán's reign. They held commands of 500, 200 horse, and 1000, 600 horse, respectively.

Chandr Man was in the 20th year of Sh. a commander of 1500, 800 horse.

Vide Pádisháhnámah I., 172 (where another Bundelah of the name of Suhk Dev is mentioned), 205, 241, 368, 372, 425; II., 731, 734.

The Maásir i 'Alamgírí mentions several Bundelahs, as Satr Sál, Jáswant Singh, Indarman (died 1088) and the rebellious sons of Champat (l. c., pp. 161, 163, 169, 273, 424). Vide also under No. 249.

Bir Singh Deo, the murderer of Abulfazl, in often called in bad MSS. Nar Singh Deo. Thus also in the printed editions of the Tuzuk, the 1st volume of Pádisháhnámah, the 'Alamgírnámah, &c., and in Elphinstone's History. The temples which he built in Mat'hurá at a cost of 33 lacs of Rupees, were destroyed by Aurangzíb in 1080. (Maásir i 'Alamgírí, p. 95).[1]

249. Ra'jah Mukatman, the Bhadauriah.

Bhadáwar is the name of a district S. E. of A'grah; its chief town is Hatkánt'h (vide p. 323, note 4). The inhabitants are called Bhadauriahs. They were known as daring robbers, and though so near the capital, they managed to maintain their independence till Akbar had their chief trampled to death by an elephant, when they submitted.

The next chief, Mukaṭman, entered the imperial service, and rose to a manṣab of 1000. In 992, he served in Gujrát (Akbarnámah III., 423, 438).

---

[1] The Dutch traveller DeLaët has an interesting passage regarding Abulfazl's death (De Imperio Magni Mogulis, Leyden, 1631, p. 209). He calls Bir Singh Radzia Bertzingh Bondela.

Under Jahángír, we find a chief of the name of Rájah Bikramájít, who served under 'Abdullah against the Ráná, and later in the Dak'hin. He died in the 11th year of Jahángír and was succeeded by his son Bhoj. Sayyid Ahmad's edition of the Tuzuk (p. 108) mentions a Bhadauriah chief Mangat, who in the 7th year served in Bangash; but the name is doubtful.

Under Sháhjahán, the head of the Bhadauriah clan was Rájah Kishn Singh. He served in the first year under Mahábat Khán against Jhujhár Singh, and in the 3rd year, against Khán Jahán Lodí and the Nizám ul Mulk, who had afforded Khán Jahán protection. In the 6th year, he distinguished himself in the siege of Daulatábád. Three years later, in the 9th year, he served under Khán Zamán against Sáhú Bhonslah. He died in the 17th year (1053).

In the Pádisháhnámah (I., b., 309) he is mentioned as a commander of 1000, 600 horse.

As Kishn Singh had only a son by a concubine, he was succeeded by Badan Singh,[1] grandson of Kishn's uncle. He was made Rájah and a commander of 1000. In the 21st year, at a darbár, a mast elephant ran up to him, took up one of his men with the tusks, when Badan Singh stuck his dagger into the animal which, frightened as it was at the same time by a fire wheel, dropped the unfortunate man. Sháhjahán rewarded the bravery of the Rájah with a khil'at, and remitted 50,000 Rs. out of the 2 lacs, which was the assessment of the Bhadáwar district. In the 22nd year, he was made a commander of 1500. In the 25th year, he served under Aurangzíb, and in the 26th, under Dárá Shikoh, before Qandahár, where in the following year he died.

His son Mahá Singh was then made Rájah, and received a mançab of 1000, 800 horse. He served in the 28th year in Kábul. After Dárá's defeat, he paid his respects to Aurangzíb, in whose reign he served against the Bundelah rebels. In the 10th year, he served under Kámil Khán against the Yúsufzaís. He died in the 26th year.

He was succeeded by his son Odat Singh (vide Maásir i 'Álamgírí, p. 226 and p. 228, where the Bibl. Ind. edition has wrong Rúdar Singh for Odat S.). He had before served under Jai Singh in the Dak'hin, and was in the 24th year made commandant of Chítor (l. c., p. 196).

250. Ra'jah Ram Chandr, zamíndár of Oṛísá.

Regarding him vide Stirling's report on Oṛísá, Asiatic Researches, vol. XV. His name occurs often in the narrative of Mán Singh's conquest of Oṛísá (37th year of Akbar's reign).

The province of Khurdah (South Oṛísá) was conquered and annexed to the Dihlí empire by Mukarram Khán (vide No. 260), in the 12th year of Jahángír's reign (Tuzuk, p. 215).

251. Sayyid Abul Qa'sim, son of Sayyid Muhammad Mír 'Adl (No. 140).

He served in the 25th year (998) in Bihár, and in the battle of Sulṭánpúr Bi[illegible] also, in the 33rd year, against the Yúsufzaís.

[1] So Pádisháhnámah, II., 732. The Maásir calls him Bad Singh or [illegible]

The Táríkh Ma'çúmí (Dowson, Elliot's Historians I., p. 243) gives earlier but perhaps more correct dates regarding the appointment to Bhakkar and the death of the Mír 'Adl, viz. his arrival at Bhakkar, 11th Ramazán, 983, and his death there, 8th Sha'bán, 984 (October, 1576). He was succeeded by his son Abulfazl, who is not mentioned in the Aín. On the 9th Zilhajjah, 985 (Feb. 1578), I'timád (No. 119) arrived at Bhakkar.

252. Dalpat, son of Rái Rái Singh.

He has been mentioned above, p. 359.

XVIII. Commanders of Four Hundred.

253. Shaikh Faizi', son of Shaikh Mubárak of Nágor.

The name of this great poet and friend of Akbar was Abul Faiz. Faizí is his takhalluç. Towards the end of his life, in imitation of the form of the takhalluç of his brother 'Allámí, he assumed the name of Fayyází.

Faizí was the eldest son of Shaik Mubárak of Nágor. Shaikh Mubárak (vide pp. 169, 185, 198, 209) traced his origin to an Arabian dervish from Yaman, who in the 9th century of the Hijrah had settled in Síwistán, where he married. In the 10th century, Mubárak's father went to Hindústán, and settled at Nágor. Several of his children having died one after the other, he called his next child Mubárak. He was born in 911. When a young man, Mubárak went to Gujrát, and studied under Khatíb Abulfazl of Kázarún and Mauláná 'Imád of Láristán. In 950, Mubárak settled at Agrah. It is said that he often changed his religious opinions. Under Islem Sháh, he was a Mahdawí, and had to suffer persecution in the beginning of Akbar's reign; he then became a Naqshbandí, then a Hamadání, and lastly, when the court was full of Persians, he inclined to Shí'ism. But whatever his views may have been, the education which he gave his sons Faizí and Abulfazl, the greatest writers that India has produced, shews that he was a man of comprehensive genius. Shaikh Mubárak wrote a commentary to the Qorán, in four volumes, entitled Manba'ul-'uyún,[1] and another work of the title of Jawámi' ulkilam. Towards the end of his life, he suffered from partial blindness, and died at Láhor, on the 17th Zí Qa'dah, 1001, at the age of 90 years. The táríkh of his death will be found in the words Shaikh i kámil.

Shaikh Faizí was born at Agrah in 954. His acquirements in Arabic Literature, the art of poetry, and in medicine, were very extensive. He used to treat poor people gratis. One day, he appeared with his father before Shaikh 'Abdunnabí, the Çadr, (p. 272) and applied for a grant of 100 bíg'has; but he was not only refused, but also turned out of the hall with every contumely on account of his tendencies to Shí'ism. But Faizí's literary fame reached Akbar's ears, and in the 12th year, when Akbar was on the expedition to Chítor, he was called to court. Faizí's bigoted enemies in Agrah interpreted the call as a summons before a judge, and warned the governor of the town, [illegible]t to let Faizí escape. He therefore ordered some Mughuls to surround Mubárak's [illegible]e; but accidentally Faizí was absent from home. Mubárak was ill-treated, and [illegible]Faizí at last came, he was carried off by force. But Akbar received him most favorably, and Faizí, in a short time, became the emperor's constant companion and friend. He was instrumental in bringing about the fall of Shaikh 'Abdunnabí.

[1] Badáoní (III., 74) calls it Manba'u nafáis-il'uyún.

In the 30th year, he planned a khamsah, or collection of five epics, in imitation of the Khamsah of Nizámí. The first, Markiz uladwár, was to consist of 3000 verses, and was to be a jawáb (imitation) of Nizámí's Makhzan ulasrár; the Sulaimán o Bilqís and the Nal Daman were to consist of 4000 verses each, and were to be jawábs of the Khusrau Shírín and Lailí Majnún respectively; and the Haft Kishwar and the Akbarnámah, each of 5000 verses, were to correspond to the Haft Paikar and the Sikandarnámah. In the 33rd year, he was made Malikushshu'ará, or Poet Laureate (Akbarn., III., 559). Though he had composed portions of the Khamsah, the original plan was not carried out, and in the 39th year, Akbar urged him to persevere, and recommended the completion of the Nal-Daman. Faizí thereupon finished the poem, and presented, in the same year, a copy of it to his imperial master.

Faizí suffered from asthma, and died on the 10th Çafar 1004 (40th year). The táríkh of his death is Fayyáz i 'Ajam. It is said that he composed 101 books. The best known, besides his poetical works, are the Sawáti' ul Ilhám, and the Mawárid ul kilam, regarding which vide below the poetical extracts. His fine library, consisting of 4300 choice MSS., was embodied with the imperial library.

Faizí had been employed as teacher to the princes; sometimes, he also acted as ambassador. Thus, in 1000, he was in the Dak'hin, from where he wrote the letter to the historian Badáoní, who had been in temporary disgrace at court.

Vide also pp. 105, 106, 183, 185, 197, 207, 209; and Journal, Asiatic Society, Bengal, for 1869, pp. 137, 142.

254. Haki'm Misrí'.

According to Badáoní (III., 165), Hakím Miçrí was a very learned man and a clever doctor. He also composed poems. A satire of his is mentioned which he wrote against Khwájah Shamsuddín Khawáfí (No. 159). He died in Burhánpúr, and was buried there.

Miçrí is mentioned in the Akbarnámah, III., p. 629, and p. 843. In the latter passage, Abulfazl mentions his death (middle of 1009), and states that he saw his friend on the deathbed. It is impossible to reconcile Abulfazl's date with Badáoní's statement; for Badáoní died in 1004 (Journal, Asiatic Society, Bengal, for 1869, p. 143). But both Abulfazl and Badáoní speak of the Hakím as a man of a most amiable and unselfish character.

255. I'rij, son of Mírzá Khánkhánán (No. 29).

He was mentioned on p. 339. During the reign of Jahángír, he was made Çúbahdár of Barár and Ahmadnagar. He greatly distinguished himself during several fights with Malik 'Ambar, especially at K'harkí,[1] for which victories he was made a commander of 5000. In the 12th year, he served under Prince Sháhjahán in the Dak'hin.

[1] کھرکی. Lachmí Naráin Shafíq, the author of the Haqíqat i Hindústán, says that it was called K'harkí from the Dak'hin word کھرڑی, which means 'stony,' 'a stony place.' It lies 5 kos S.E. of Daulatábád (the old Dhárágarh and Deogír of 'Aláuddín Khiljí). K'harkí under Jahángír was called Fathábád. In 1024, a canal was dug from K'harkí to Daulatábád. Its name was Chahárnah[illegible] and the táríkh of its completion is kh[illegible] i járí (pr. a running benefit). Aurangzíb changed the name of [illegible] to Aurangábád, under which na[illegible] now known. K'harkí was [illegible] Malik 'Ambar.

It is said that he was a good soldier, but stingy, and careless in his dress. A daughter of his was married (2nd Ramazán, 1026) to Prince Sháhjahán. The offspring of this marriage, Prince Jahán-afroz, was born at Ágrah on the 12th Rajab, 1028, and died at Burhánpúr, at the age of 1 year, 9 months (Pádisháhnámah).

According to Grant's Gazetteer of the Central Provinces (2nd edition, p. 128), Irij's tomb is at Burhánpúr. "The tomb was built during his lifetime, and is really a handsome structure." The statement of the Gazetteer that Irij, towards the end of his life, "lived as a recluse" at Burhánpúr, is not borne out by the histories; for according to the Tuzuk (p. 270), he died of excessive wine drinking.

At his death (1028), he was only thirty-three years of age. The mançab of 400, which Abulfazl assigns him, must therefore have been conferred upon him, when he was a mere child.

256. Sakat Singh, son of Rájah Mán Singh (No. 30).

Vide above, under No. 244.

257. 'Abdullah [Sarfaráz Khán], son of Khán i A'zam Mírzá Kokah (No. 21).

Vide p. 328.

It was stated (p. 328) on the authority of the Maásir that he received the title of Sardár Khán, which had become vacant by the death of Takhtah Beg (No. 195). But the Tuzuk (p. 71) gives him the title of Sarfaráz Khán. This is evidently a mistake of the author of the Maásir; for the title of Sardár Khán was in the 8th year (1022) conferred on Khwájah Yádgár, brother of 'Abdullah Khán Fírúz-jang (Tuzuk, p. 116), when 'Abdullah Sarfaráz Khán was still alive.

The Maásir also says that 'Abdullah accompanied his father to Gwáliár (p. 317); but the Tuzuk (p. 141) states that he was imprisoned in Rantanbhúr, from where, at the request of his father, he was called to court.

258. 'Alí' Muhammad Asp.

Badáoní says (II., p. 57) that "'Alí Muhammad Asp, who is now in the service of the emperor, at the instigation of Júják Begum, killed Abul Fath Beg (p. 318)." In the 9th year, he was in the service of Mírzá Muhammad Hakím, king of Kábul. Afterwards, he came to India. In the 26th year (989), he served under Prince Murád against his former master (Akbarnámah, III., 345); in the 30th year (993), he served in Kábul (III., 487, 490). In the 32nd year, he distinguished himself under 'Abdul Matlab (No. 83) against the Táríkís (III., p. 541).

In the Lucknow edition of the Akbarnámah, he is wrongly called 'Alí Muhammad Alif.

259. Mi'rza' Muhammad.

A Mírzá Muhammad was mentioned on p. 370.

260. Shaikh Ba'yazíd [Mu'azzam Khán], grandson of Shaikh Salím of Fathpúr Síkrí.

[illegible]azíd's mother nursed Prince Salím (Jahángír) on the day he was born [illegible]13). In the 40th year of Akbar's reign, B. was a commander of 400, and gradually rose to a command of 2000. After Jahángír's accession, he received a manṣab of 3000, and the title of Mu'azzam Khán. Soon after, he was made Ṣúbahdár of Dihlí (l. c., p. 37), and in the 3rd year, a commander of 4000, 2000 horse. On his death, he was buried at Fathpúr Síkrí (l. c., p. 262).

His son Mukarram Khán was son-in-law to Islám Khán Shaikh 'Aláuddín (another grandson of Shaikh Salím), under whom he served in Bengal.[1] He distinguished himself in the expedition to Kúch Hájú, and brought the zamíndár Parích'hat before the governor.[2] At the death of his father-in-law, Muhtashim Khán Shaikh Qásim, brother of Islám Khán, was made governor of Bengal, and Mukarram Khán continued for one year in his office as governor of Kúch Hájú; but as he could not agree with Qásim, he went to court.

Later, he was made governor of Oṛísá, and conquered the province of Khurdah (l. c., pp. 214, 215), for which he was made a commander of 3000, 2000 horse. He seems to have remained in Oṛísá till the 11th year (1029), when Hasan 'Alí Turkmán was sent there as governor (Tuzuk, p. 308). In the 16th year, M. Kh. came to court, and was made Ṣúbahdár of Dihlí and Faujdár of Mewát (l. c., p. 332).

In the 21st year, he was sent to Bengal as governor, vice Khánahzád Khán. He travelled by boat. One day he ordered his ship to be moved to the bank, as he wished to say the afternoon prayer, when a sudden gale broke forth, during which he and his companions were drowned.

261. Ghazni'n Kha'n, of Jálor.

Ghaznín Khán was in the 40th year of Akbar's reign a commander of 400. He is mentioned in the Pádisháhnámah (I., 167)[3] as having served during the reign of Jahángír against the Ráná.

Bird in his History of Gujrat (pp. 124, 405) calls him Ghaznawí Khán and Ghazní Khán, and says, he was the son of Malik Khanjí Jálorí. Ghaznín Khán seems to have been inclined to join the insurrection of Sulṭán Muzaffar. The Khánkhánán, on the 9th Muharram, 998, sent a detachment against Jálor; but perceiving

---

[1] Islám Khán was married to a sister of Abulfazl, by whom he had a son called Hoshang. Islám Khán died as governor of Bengal on the 5th Rajab, 1022. Tuzuk, p. 126.

[2] The Pádisháhnámah (II., 64), where Mukarram Khán's expedition is related, distinguishes between Kúch Hájú and Kúch Bihár. The former was in the beginning of Jahángír's reign under Parichhat, the latter under Lachmí Naráin. Hájú is the name of a famous leader of the Kúch people, who in ethnological works is said to have expelled the Kachárís and founded a dynasty which lasted two hundred years. His descendants still exercise jura regalia in Kúch Bihár Proper. Materials for a history of Kúch Bihár will be found in the Akbarnámah (Lucknow Edition, III., p. 208, annals of the 41st year); in the Tuzuk i Jahángírí (pp. 147, 220, 221, 223); in the Pádisháhnámah I., 496; II., 64 to 79, 87, 88, 94; and in the Fath i A'shám; vide also Journal, Asiatic Society, Bengal, Vol. VII; Stewart's History of Bengal, p. 96; and above, pp. 315, 340, 343.

[3] Wrongly called in the Bibl. Indica Edition of the Pádisháhnámah (I., 167), Ghazalí Khán.

Ghaznín's jágír before Akbar's conquest of Gujrát, as detailed by Bird (p. 124) includes portions of Nágor and Mírt'ha, and fixes the revenue at nearly 10 lacs of rupees, with 7,000 horse. This can only have been nominal. Abulfazl, in his description of Ṣúbah Ajmír, IIIrd book, mentions 3½ lacs of rupees, with 2000 horse, as the jama' of Jálor and Sánchor (S. W. of Jálor).

that he was not in a fit condition to offer resistance, Ghaznín went submissively to court. The emperor took compassion on him, and confirmed him in his hereditary possessions.

His son Paháṛ was executed by Jahángír. "When I came to Dih Qáziyán, near Ujjain, I summoned Paháṛ. This wretch had been put by me, after the death of his father, in possession of the Fort and the district of Jálor, his ancestral home. He is a young man, and was often checked by his mother for his bad behaviour. Annoyed at this, he entered with some of his companions her apartments, and killed her. I investigated the case, found him guilty, and had him executed." (Çafar, 1026; Tuzuk, p. 174).

Another son of Ghaznín Khán is Nizám, who died in the 6th year of Sháhjahán's reign. He was a commander of 900, 550 horse (Pádisháhn., I,, b., 313).

Gházníṇ's brother Fírúz was a commander of 600, 400 horse, and died in the 4th year (Pádisháhn., I., b, 319).

The Pádisháhnámah (II., 739) mentions also a Mujáhid of Jálor, who in the 20th year of Sháhjahán's reign was a commander of 800, 800 horse.

262. Kí'jak Khwa'jah, son of Khwájah 'Abdullah.

The first volume of the Akbarnámah (p. 411) mentions a Kíjak Khwájah among the grandees who accompanied Humáyún to India. The third volume of the same work (p. 470) mentions a Kíjak Khwájah, who in 993 served against Qutlú Lohání in Bengal. Vide No. 109.

263. Sher Kha'n Mughul.

264. Fathullah, son of Muhammad Wafá.

He appears to be the Fathullah mentioned in the Akbarnámah (III., 825) as the sharbatdár of the emperor. Akbar made him an Amír. For some fault he was sent to the Dak'hin; but as he got ill, he was recalled. He recovered, and went on sick leave to Mándú, where he died (1008).

265. Ra'i Manohar, son of Rájah Loṇkaran.

Rájah Loṇkaran belonged to the Shaikháwat branch of the Kachhwáhahs. He served, in the 21st year, under Mán Singh against the Ráná, and went in the same year with Rájah Bír Baṛ to Dongarpúr,[1] the zamíndár of which wished to send his daughter to Akbar's ḥarem. In the 24th year, he served under Todar Mall in Bihár, and in the 24th year, under the Khán Khánán in Gujrát.

Manohar, in the 22nd year, reported to the emperor on his visit to Amber, that in the neighbourhood an old town existed, the site of which was marked by huge mṇunds of stone. Akbar encouraged him to rebuild it, and laid the foundation himself. The new settlement was called Mol Manoharnagar.[2] In the 45th year,

[1] The word dongar which occurs in the names of places from Soraṭh to Málwah and Central India, is a Gond word meaning a forest. There are many Dongarpúrs, Dongargáṇws, Dongartáls, Dongars, &c. Similarly, the word bir in Muṇdárí signifies a jungle, whence Birbhúm (Western Bengal). Thus also Jhárkand, or jungle region, the general name of Chutiá Nágpúr. The abovementioned Dongarpúr lies on the N. W. frontier of Gujrát (Akbarn,. III., 169, 170, 477).

[2] The maps give a Manoharpúr, north of Amber, about Lat. 27° 20′.

he was appointed with Rái Durgá Lál (No. 103) to pursue Muzaffar Husain Mírzá (p. 464), who was caught by Khwájah Waisí.

In the 1st year of Jahángír's reign, he served under Prince Parwíz against the Ráná, and was made, in the 2nd year, a commander of 1500, 600 horse (Tuzuk, p. 64). He served long in the Dak'hin, and died in the 11th year.

His son Prit'hí Chánd received after the death of his father the title of Rái, and was made a commander of 500, 300 horse (l. c., p. 160).

Manohar wrote Persian verses, and was called at court Mírzá Manohar; vide my article A chapter from Muhammadan History, Calcutta Review, April, 1871.

266. Khwa'jah 'Abdussamad, Shírín-qalam (sweet-pen).

He is not to be confounded with No. 353.

Khwájah 'Abduççamad was a Shírází. His father Khwájah Nizámul Mulk was Vazír to Sháh Shujá' of Shíráz. Before Humáyún left Írán, he went to Tabríz, where 'Abduççamad paid his respects. He was even at that time known as painter and calligraphist. Humáyún invited him to come to him, and though then unable to accompany the emperor, he followed him in 956 to Kábul.

Under Akbar, 'A. was a commander of 400; but low as his mançab was, he had great influence at court. In the 22nd year, he was in charge of the mint at Fathpúr Síkrí (Akbarnámah, III., 195); and in the 31st year, when the officers were redistributed over the several çúbahs, he was appointed Díwán of Multán.

As an instance of his skill it is mentioned that he wrote the Súratulikhlás (Qorán, Sur. CXII) on a poppy seed (dánah i khashkhásh). Vide p. 107.

For his son vide No. 351.

267. Silhadí, son of Rájah Bihárí Mall (No. 23).

268. Ra'm Chand Kachhwáhah.

Vide p. 387.

[Ra'm Chand Chauha'n]. The Maasír says that he was the son of Badal Singh, and a commander of 500. In the 17th year, he served under M. 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21) in Gujrát, and in the 26th year, under Sultán Murád against M. Muhammad Hakím, king of Kábul. In the 28th year, he was under M. Sháhrukh in the Dak'hin. In the fight, in which Rájah 'Alí of Khandesh fell, R. Ch. received twenty wounds and fell from his horse. Next day he was found still alive. He died a few days later (41st year, 1005).

269. Baha'dur Kha'n Qúrdár.

He served in the beginning of the 18th year in Gujrát (Akbarnámah, III., 25), in the 26th in Kábul (l. c., 333), and in the siege of Asír (1008).

The Pádisháhnámah (I., b., pp. 311, 315) mentions Abábakr and 'Usmán, sons of Bahádur Khán Qúrbegí, who seems to be the same officer. They died in the 8th and 9th years of Sháhjahán.

270. Ba'nka', the Kachhwáhah.

He served in the 26th year in Kábul (Akbarn., III., 333). His son Haridí Rám was under Sháhjahán a commander of 1500, 1000 horse, and died in the 9th of his reign.

XIX. Commanders of Three Hundred and Fifty.

271. Mi'rza' Abu' Sa'i'd,
272. Mi'rza' Sanjar. } sons of Sulṭán Husain Mírzá.

They were mentioned above on p. 314. Mírzá Sanjar is not to be confounded with the Mírzá Sanjar mentioned on p. 477, note 2.

273. 'Ali' Marda'n Baha'dur.

The Ṭabaqát mentions him as having been in 984 (21st year) at court, from where he was sent to Qulij Khán (No. 42) at Idar, who was to go to Gujrát to see the ships off which under Sulṭán Khwájah (No. 108) were on the point of leaving for Makkah. Later he served under the Khán Khánán in Sind,[1] and in the 41st year, in the Dak'hin. Subsequently, he commanded the Talingánah corps. In the 46th year, he marched to Pát'hrí to assist Sher Khwájah (No. 176), when he heard that Bahádur Khán Gílání, whom he had left with a small detachment in Talingánah, had been defeated. He returned, and attacked the enemies who were much stronger than he; his men fled, and he himself was captured. In the same year, Abulfazl made peace, and 'Alí Mardán was set at liberty. In the 47th year, he served with distinction under Mírzá Irij (No. 255) against Malik 'Ambar.

In the 7th year of Jahángír's reign, he was attached to the corps commanded by 'Abdullah Khán Fírúz-jang, who had been ordered to move with the Gujrát army over Násik into the Dak'hin, in order to co-operate with the second army corps under Khán Jahán Lodí. 'Abdullah entered the hostile territory without meeting the second army, and returned towards Gujrát, now pursued by the enemies. In one of the fights which ensued, 'A. M. was wounded and captured. He was taken before Malik 'Ambar, and though the doctors did everything to save him, he died two days later of his wounds, in 1021 A. H. (Tuzuk, p. 108).

His son Karamullah served under Jahángír (Tuzuk, p. 269), and was under Sháhjahán a commander of 1000, 1000 horse. He was for some time commandant of Fort Odgír, and died in the 21st year of Sháhj.'s reign.

274. Raza' Quli', son of Khán Jahán (No. 24).

Vide above p. 331.

275. Shaikh Khu'bu' [Quṭbuddín Khán i Chishtí] of Fathpúr Síkrí.

His father was a Shaikhzádah of Badáon, and his mother a daughter of Shaikh Salím. Khúbú was a foster-brother of Jahángír.[2] When the prince was at Iláhábád in rebellion against Akbar, he conferred upon Khúbú the title of Quṭbuddín Khán, and made him Çúbahdár of Bihár. On his accession, he made him Çúbahdár of Bengal, vice Mán Singh (9th Jumáda I., 1015; Tuzuk, p. 37).

At that time, Sher Afkan 'Alí Qulí Istajlú (vide No. 394) was tuyúldár of Bardwán, and as his wife Mihrunnisá [Núr Jahán] was coveted by the emperor, Quṭb was ordered to send Sher Afkan to court, who, however, refused to go. Quṭb, therefore, went to Bardwán, sending Ghiásá, son of his sister, before him, to persuade Sher Afkan that no harm would be done to him. When Quṭb arrived, Sher Afkan went to meet him, accompanied by two men. On his approach, Q. lifted up his horse-whip as a sign for his companions to cut down Sher Afkan. "What is all this?" exclaimed Sher. Quṭb waved his hand to call back his men, and advancing towards Sher, upbraided him for his disobedience. His men mistaking Quṭb's signal to withdraw, closed round Sher, who rushed with his sword against Quṭb, and gave him a deep wound in the abdomen. Quṭb was a stout man, and seizing his protruding bowels with his hands, called out to his men to cut down the scoundrel. Ambah Khán, a Kashmírí noble of royal blood, thereupon charged Sher Afkan, and gave him a sword cut over the head; but he fell at the same time pierced through by Sher's sword (p. 474, note 1). The men now crowded round him and struck him to the ground. Quṭbuddín was still on horseback, when he heard that Sher Afkan had been killed, and he sent off Ghiásá to bring his effects and his family to Bardwán. He then was removed in a palkee. He died whilst being carried away. His corpse was taken to Fathpúr Síkrí and buried.

[1] Vide Dowson, Elliot's Historians, I., p. 248.

[2] Jahángír says that Khúbú's mother was dearer to him than his own mother.

In 1013, he built the Jámi' mosque of Badáon.

His son, Shaikh Ibráhím, was, in 1015, a commander of 1000, 300 horse, and had the title of Kishwar Khán. He was for some time governor of Rohtás, and served in the beginning of 1021 against 'Usmán.

Ilahdiah, son of Kishwar Khán, is mentioned in the Pádisháhnámah (I., b., 100, 177, 307; II, 344, 379, 411, 484).

276. Zia'-ul Mulk, of Káshán.

The Akbarnámah (III, 490, 628) and the Tuzuk (p. 11) mention a Ziáuddín.

The Hakím Ziáuddín of Káshán, who under Sháhjahán held the title of Rahmat Khán, can scarcely be the same.

277. Hamzah Beg Ghatra'ghali'.

He may be the brother of No. 203. The Akbarnámah (III., 255) mentions also a Husain Beg Ghatrághalí.

278. Mukhta'r Beg, son of Aghá Mullá.

Mukhtár Beg served under A'zam Khán Kokah (No. 21) in Bihár, Gaḍha-Ráisín (Akbarn., III., 276, 473), and in the 36th year, under Sulṭán Murád in Málwah.

Naçrullah, son of Mukhtár Beg, was under Sháhjahán a commander of 700, 150 horse, and died in the 10th year.

Fathullah, son of Naçrullah, was under Sháhjahán a commander of 500, 50 horse (Pádisháhn., I., b, 318; II., 752).

Abulfazl calls Mukhtár Beg the son of Aghá Mullá. This would seem to be the Aghá Mullá Dawátdár, mentioned on p. 369. If so, Mukhtár Beg would be the brother of Ghiásuddín 'Alí (No. 126). The Aghá Mullá mentioned below (No. 376), to judge from the Tuzuk (p. 27), is the brother of Açaf Khán III. (No. 98), and had a son of the name of Badí'uzzamán, who under Sháhjahán was a commander of 500, 100 horse (Pád., I., b., 327; II., 751). In Muhammadan families the name of the grandfather is often given to the grandchild.

279. Haidar 'Ali' 'Arab.

He served, in the 32nd year, in Afghánistán (Akbarn., III., 540, 548).

280. Peshrau Kha'n [Mihtar Sa'ádat].

Mihtar Sa'ádat had been brought up in Tabríz, and was in the service of Sháh Ṭahmásp, who gave him as a present to Humáyún. After Humáyun's death, he was promoted, and got the title of Peshrau Khán. In the 19th year, Akbar sent him on a mission to Bihár, where he was caught on the Ganges by Gajpatí, the great zamíndár (p. 399, note 2). When Jagdespúr, the stronghold of the Rájah, was conquered, Gájpatí ordered several prisoners to be killed, among them Peshrau. The executioner, however, did not kill him, and told another man to do so. But the latter accidentally could not get his sword out of the scabbard; and the Rájah, who was on the point of flying, having no time to lose, ordered him to take P. on his elephant. The elephant was wild and restive, and the man who was in charge of P., fell from the animal and got kicked, when the brute all at once commenced to roar in such a manner, that the other elephants ran away frightened. Although P.'s hands were tied, he managed to get to the kaláwah (p. 127) of the driver, and thus sat firm; but the driver unable to manage the brute, threw himself to the ground and ran away, leaving P. alone on the elephant. Next morning it got quiet, and P. threw himself down, when he was picked up by a trooper who had been searching for him.

In the 21st year, he reported at court the defeat of Gajpatí[1] (Akbarn., III., 163). In the 25th year, he served in Bengal (l. c., p. 289). Later he was sent to Nizámulmulk of the Dak'hin, and afterwards to Bahádur Khán, son of Rájah 'Alí Khán of Khándesh. His mission to the latter was in vain, and Akbar marched to Asír. P. distinguished himself in the siege of Málígadh.

Jahángír made him a commander of 2000, and continued him in his office as superintendent of the Farrásh-khánah (Quarter-Master).

P. died in the 3rd year, on the 1st Rajab, 1017. Jahángír says (Tuzuk, p. 71), "He was an excellent servant, and though ninety years old, he was smarter than many a young man. He had amassed a fortune of 15 lacs of rupees. His son Riáyat is unfit for anything; but for the sake of his father, I put him in charge of half the Farrásh-khánah.

281. Qa'zi' Hasan Qazwíní.

In the 32nd year (995), he served in Gujrát (Akbarn., III., 537, 554, where the Lucknow edition has Qází Husain), and later in the siege of Asír (l. c., III., 825).

282. Mi'r Mura'd i Juwainí.

He is not to be confounded with No. 380, but may be the same as mentioned on p. 354.

Juwain is the Arabic form of the Persian Gúján, the name of a small town,[2] in Khurásán, on the road between Bisṭám and Nísháṗur. It lies, according to the Maásir, in the district of Baihaq, of which Sabzwár is the capital, and is renowned as the birth-place of many learned men and poets.

Mír Murád belongs to the Sayyids of Juwain. As he had been long in the Dak'hin, he was also called Dak'hiní. He was an excellent shot, and Akbar appointed him rifle-instructor to Prince Khurram. He died, in the 46th year, as Bakhshí of Láhor. He had two sons, Qásim Khán and Háshim Khán.

Qásim Khán was an excellent poet, and rose to distinction under Islám Khán, governor of Bengal, who made him treasurer of the çúbah. Later, he married

---

[1] Gajpatí's brother, Bírí Sál, had been killed (Akbarn., III., 162).

[2] Vide Wüstenfeld's Yacut, II., 164.

Manijah Begum, sister of Núr Jahán, and thus became a friend of Jahángír. An example of a happy repartee is given. Once Jahángír asked for a cup of water. The cup was so thin, that it could not bear the weight of the water, and when handed to the emperor, it broke. Looking at Qásim, J. said (metre Ramal)—

کاسهٔ نازك بود آب آرام نتوانست کرد

The cup was lovely, and the water lost its rest—

when Qásim, completing the verse, replied :

دید حالم را و چشمش ضبط اشك خود نکرد

It saw my love grief, and could not suppress its tears.

In the end of J.'s reign, he was Çúbahdár of Ágrah, and was in charge of the treasures in the fort. When the emperor died, and Sháhjahán left the Dak'hin, Qásim paid his respects in the Bágh i Dahrah (Ágrah), which in honor of Jahángír had been called Núr Manzil, and was soon after made a commander of 5000, 500 horse, and appointed governor of Bengal, vice Fidáí Khán.

As Sháhjahán when prince, during his rebellion, had heard of the wicked practices of the Portuguese in Bengal, who converted natives by force to Christianity, he ordered Qásim to destroy their settlement at Húglí. In the 5th year, in Sha'bán, 1041, or February, 1632, A. D. (Pádisháhn., I., 435, 437), Q. sent a corps under his son 'Ináyatullah and Allah Yár Khán to Húglí. The Portuguese held out for three months and a half, when the Muhammadans succeeded in laying dry the ditch in front of the Church, dug a mine, and blew up the church. The fort was taken. Ten thousand Portuguese are said to have perished during the siege, and 4400 were taken prisoners. About 10,000 natives whom they had in their power, were liberated. One thousand Musalmáns died as martyrs for their religion.[1]

Three days after the conquest of Húglí, Qásim died (l. c., p. 444). The Jámi' Masjid in the Atgah Bázár of Ágrah was built by him.

283. Mi'r Qa'sim Badakhshí.

He served in the Dak'hin (Akbarn., III., 830).

284. Bandah 'Ali' Maidání.

Maidání is the name of an Afghán clan; vide No. 317. Bandah 'Alí served in the 9th year with Muhammad Hakím of Kábul, who was attacked by Mírzá Sulaimán of Badakhshán (No. 5), and had applied to Akbar for help. In the 30th and 32nd years, he served in Kábul (Akbarn., II., 299; III., 477, 540).

The Akbarnámah (II., 209) also mentions a Bandah 'Alí Qurbegí.

285. Khwa'jagi' Fathullah, son of Hájí Habíbullah of Káshán.

He was mentioned above on pp. 359, 464. He served in the 30th year under Mírzá 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21). Akbarn., III., 473.

286. Za'hid
287. Dost [Muhammad]
288. Ya'r [Muhammad]

} sons of Çádiq Khán (No. 43).

[1] The siege of Húglí commenced on the 2nd Zí Hajjah, 1041, or 11th June, 1632, and the town was taken on the 14th Rabí' I, 1042, or 10th September, 1632. The village of Haldípúr, mentioned in the Pádisháhnámah as having for some time been the head quarters of the Mughul army, is called on our maps Holodpur, and lies N. W. of Húglí.

The Portuguese church at Bandel (a corruption of bandar ?) bears the year 1599 on its keystone.

They have been mentioned above on p. 357. Záhid, in the end of 1015, served against Dalpat (No. 252).

Regarding Záhid, vide also a passage from the Táríkh i Ma'çúmí, translated in Dowson's edition of Elliot's Historians, I., 246.

289. 'Izzatullah Ghujduwání.

Ghujduwán is a small town in Bukhárá.

The Akbarnámah (III., 548) mentions a Qází 'Izzatullah, who, in the 32nd year, served in Afghánistán.

XX. Commanders of Three Hundred.

290. A'ltu'n Qulij.

291. Ja'n Qulij.

Two MSS. have Áltún Qulij, son of Khán Qulij, which latter name would be an unusual transposition for Qulij Khán. They are not the sons of Qulij Khán (No. 42), vide Nos. 292 and 293.

Áltún Qulij is mentioned in the Akbarnámah (III., 554) as having served in Baglánah with Bharjí, the Rájah, who was hard pressed in Fort Molher by his relations. Bharjí died about the same time (beginning of the 33rd year).

292. Saifullah [Qulijullah]
293. Chi'n Qulij } sons of Qulij Khán (No. 42).

Saif is Arabic, and means the same as the Turkish qulij, a sword. Saifullah was mentioned under No. 203. In the beginning of the 33rd year, he served under Çádiq Khán (No. 43) in Afghánistán.

Regarding Mírzá Chín Qulij, the Maásir says that he was an educated, liberal, man, well versed in government matters. He had learned under Mullá Muçṭafá of Jaunpúr, and was for a long time Faujdár of Jaunpúr and Banáras.

At the death of his father, his younger brother Mírzá Láhaurí, the spoiled pet son of his father, joined Chín Qulij in Jaunpúr. He had not been long there, when he interfered in government matters, and caused disturbances, during which Chín Qulij lost his life. His immense property escheated to the state; it is said that it took the clerks a whole year to make the inventory.

In 1022, when Jahángír was in Ajmír, he summoned Mullá Muçṭafá, who had been the Mírzá's teacher, with the intention of doing him harm. While at court, he got acquainted with Mullá Muhammad of Thatthah, a teacher in the employ of Áçafjáh (or Áçaf Khán IV.; vide p. 369), who had scientific discussions with him, and finding him a learned man, interceded on his behalf. Muçṭafá was let off, went to Makkah and died.

Mírzá Láhaurí was caught and imprisoned. After some time, he was set at liberty, and received a daily allowance (yaumiyyah). He had a house in Ágrah, near the Jamnah, at the end of the Darsan, and trained pigeons. He led a miserable life.

The Maásir mentions a few instances of his wicked behaviour. Once he buried one of his servants alive, as he wished to know something about Munkir and Nakír, the two angels who, according to the belief of the Muhammadans, examine the dead in the grave, beating the corpse with sledge hammers, if the dead man is found wanting in belief. When the man was dug out, he was found dead. Another time, when with his father in Láhor, he disturbed a Hindú wedding-feast, and carried off the bride; and when the people complained to his father, he told them to be glad that they were now related to the Çúbahdár of Láhor.

The other sons of Qulij Khán, as Qulijullah, Chín Qulij, Báljú Q., Bairam Q., Ján Q., held mostly respectable mançabs.

The Tuzuk i Jahángírí relates the story differently. Both M. Chín Qulij and M. Láhaurí are described as wicked men. Chín Q., after the death of his father, came with his brothers and relations to court (Çafar, 1023; Tuzuk, p. 127), and received Jaunpúr as jágír. As the emperor heard of the wicked doings of M. Láhaurí, from whom no man was safe, he sent an Áhadí to Jaunpúr to bring him to court, when Chín Qulij fled with him to several Zamíndárs. The men of Jahángír Qulí Khán, governor of Bihár, at last caught him; but before he was taken to the governor, Chín died, some say, in consequence of an attack of illness, others from wounds he had inflicted on himself. His corpse was taken to Jahángír Qulí Khán, who sent it with his family and property to Iláhábád. The greater part of his property had been squandered or given away to zamíndárs (1024; Tuzuk, p. 148).

294. Abul Fatta'h Ata'li'q,

295. Sayyid Ba'yazi'd of Bárha.

He served in the 33rd year (996) in Gujrát (Akbarn., III., 553). In the beginning of the 17th year of Jahángír's reign (1031), he received the title of Muçṭafá Khán (Tuzuk, p. 344).

In the 1st year of Sháhjahán's reign, he was made a commander of 2000, 700 horse (Pád., I., 183). His name is not given in the list of grandees of the Pádisháh-námah.

296. Balbhadr, the Ráṭhor.

297. Abul Ma'a'li', son of Sayyid Muhammad Mír 'Adl (No. 140).

298. Ba'qir Ançárí.

He was in Bengal at the outbreak of the military revolt. In the 37th year, he served under Mán Singh in the expedition to Oṛísá (Akbarn., III., 267, 641).

299. Ba'yazi'd Beg Turkmán.

He was at first in Mun'im's service (Akbarn., II., 238, 253). The Pádisháhnámah (I., b., 328) mentions Mahmúd Beg, son of Báyazíd Beg. Vide No. 335.

300. Shaikh Daulat Bakhtyár.

301. Husain, the Pak'hlíwál.

The story of the origin of his family from the Qárlüqs under Timur (vide p. 454) is given in the Tuzuk (p. 290). Jahángír adds, "but they do not know who was then their chief. At present, they are common Panjábís (Láhaurí i mahaz), and speak Panjábí. This is also the case with Dhantúr" (vide No. 396).

Sulṭán Husain, as he called himself, is the son of Sulṭán Mahmúd. His rebellious attitude towards Akbar has been mentioned above, on p. 454. When Jahángír in the 14th year (beginning of 1029) paid him a visit, Husain was about seventy years old, but still active. He was then a commander of 400, 300 horse, and Jahángír promoted him to a mançab of 600, 350 horse.

Husain died in the 18th year (end of 1032; Tuzuk, p. 367). His command and the district of Pak'hlí were given to his son Shádmán.

Shádmán served under Dárá Shikoh in Qandahár (beginning of 1052), and was in the 20th year of Sháhjahán's reign a commander of 1000, 900 horse. Pádisháh-námah, II., 293, 733.

The Tuzuk (p. 290) mentions a few places in the district of Pak'hlí, and has a remark on the thick, strong beer which the inhabitants make from bread and rice.

302. Kesu' Da's, son of Jai Mall.

Vide No. 408. One MS. has Jait Mall, instead of Jai Mall. The Pádisháh-námah (I., b., 310) mentions a Rájah Girdhar, son of Kesú Dás, grandson of Jat Mall of Mírt'ha. The Tuzuk frequently mentions a Kesú Dás Márú (Tuzuk, pp. 9, 37, 203).

303. Mi'rza' Kha'n of Níshápúr. One MS. has Ján for Khán.

304. Muzaffar, brother of Khán 'Álam (No. 58).

My text edition has wrongly Khán i A'zam, for Khán 'Álam.

305. Tulsi' Da's Ja'don.

He served in 992 against Sulṭán Muzaffar of Gujrát (Akbarn., III., 422).

The Akbarnámah (III., 157, 434, 598) mentions another Jádoṇ, Rájah Gopál. He died in the end of the 34th year, and is mentioned in the Ṭabaqát as a commander of 2000.

306. Rahmat Kha'n, son of Masnad i 'Álí.

Masnad i 'Álí is an Afghán title, as Majlis ul Majális, Majlis i Ikhtiyár, &c. It was the title of Fattú Khán, or Fath Khán, a courtier of Islem Sháh, who afterwards joined Akbar's service. He served under Husain Qulí Khán Jahán (No. 24) in 980 against Nagarkoṭ (Badáoní II, 161). The Ṭabaqát makes him a commander of 2000. He seems to be the same Fath Khán whom Sulaimán Kararáni had put in charge of Rohtás in Bihár (Bad., II., 77).

He died in the 34th year in Audh (Akbarn., III., 599).

A Rahmat Khán served in the 45th year in the Dak'hin. Rahmat Khán's brother, Sháh Muhammad, is mentioned below, No. 395.

307. Ahmad Qa'sim Kokah.

He served in 993 against the Yúsufzaís, and in 996, under Çádiq Khán, against the Táríkís (Akbarn., III., 490, 552).

The Tuzuk (p. 159) mentions a Yár Beg, son of A. Q.'s brother.

308. Baha'dur Gohlot.

309. Daulat Kha'n Lodí.

He was a Lodí Afghán of the Sháhú-khail clan, and was at first in the service of 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21). When 'Abdurrahím (No. 29) married the daughter of 'Azíz, Daulat Khán was transferred to 'Abdurrahím's service, and 'Azíz in sending him to his son-in-law, said, "Take care of this man, and you may yet get the title of your father (KhánKhánán)." Daulat distinguished himself in the wars in Gujrát (p. 335, l., 1, where for Dost Khán, as given in the Maásir, we have to read Daulat Khán), in T'hat'hah, and the Dak'hin. His courage was proverbial. In his master's contingent he held a command of 1000. Sulṭán Dányál won him over, and made him a commander of 2000.

He died in the end of the 45th year (Sha'bán, 1009) at Ahmadnagar (Akbarn., III., 846). It is said that Akbar stood in awe of him, and when he heard of his death, he is reported to have said, "To-day Sher Khán Súr died."

Daulat Khán's eldest son, whom the Maásír calls Mahmúd, was half mad. In the 46th year, on a hunting tour, he left his companions, got into a quarrel with some Kolís near Pál, and perished.

Daulat's second son is the renowned Pír Khán, or Pírú, better known in history under his title Khán Jahán Lodí. If Akbar's presentiments were deceived in the father, they were fulfilled in the son.

Pír Khán, when young, fell out with his father, and fled with his elder brother, whom the Maásir here calls Muhammad Khán, to Bengal, where they were assisted by Mán Singh. Muhammad Khán died when young.

Like his father, P. Kh. was in the service of Sultán Dányál, who treated him like a friend and called him 'son.' On the death of the Prince, Pír, then twenty years old, joined Jahángír's service, was made in the second year a commander of 3000, and received the title of Çalábat Khán (Tuzuk, p. 42). He gradually rose to a mançab of 5000, and received the title of Khán Jahán, which was looked upon as second in dignity to that of KhánKhánán. Although Jahángír treated him like an intimate friend rather than a subject, Khán Jahán never forgot his position and formed no ambitious plans.

When Prince Parwíz, Rájah Mán Singh and Sharíf Khán (No. 351) were sent to the Dak'hin to reinforce the Khán Khánán, and matters took an unfavorable turn, Khán Jahán, in 1018, was sent with 12000 troopers to their assistance. At the review, Jahángír came down from the state window, put his turban on Kh. J.'s head, seized his hand, and helped him in mounting. Without delaying in Burhánpúr, Kh. J. moved to Bálághát, where the imperial army was. At Mulkápúr, a great fight took place with Malik 'Ambar, and the imperialists, unaccustomed to the warfare of the Dak'hinís, lost heavily. The KhánKhánán met him with every respect, and took him to Bálághát. According to the original plan, Kh. J. was to lead the Dak'hin corps, and 'Abdullah Khán the Gujrát army, upon Daulatábád (p. 496). Malik 'Ambar afraid of being attacked from two sides, succeeded in gaining over the Khán Khánán, who managed to detain Kh. J. in Zafarnagar; and 'Abdullah, when marching forward, found no support, and had to retreat with heavy losses. Kh. J. got short of provisions; his horses died away, and the splendid army with which he had set out, returned in a most disorderly state to Burhánpúr.

Kh. J. accused the KhánKhánán of treason, and offered to conquer Bíjápúr in two years, if the emperor would give him 30000 men and absolute power. This Jahángír agreed to, and the Khán i A'zam (No. 21) and Khán 'Alam (No. 328) were sent to his assistance. But though the KhánKhánán had been removed, the duplicity of the Amírs remained what it had been before, and matters did not improve. The command was therefore given to the Khán i A'zam, and Kh. J. received T'hálner as jágír, and was ordered to remain at Ilichpúr. After a year, he returned to court, but was treated by the emperor in as friendly a manner as before.

In the 15th year, when the Persians threatened Qandahár, Kh. J. was made governor of Multán. Two years later, in the 17th year, Sháh 'Abbás took Qandahár after a siege of forty days. Kh. J. was called to court for advice, having been forbidden to attack Sháh 'Abbás, because kings should be opposed by kings. When he came to court, Prince Khurram was appointed to reconquer Qandahár, and Kh. J. was ordered back to Multán, to make preparations for the expedition. It is said that the Afghán tribes from near Qandahár came to him in Multán, and declared themselves willing to be the vanguard of the army, if he would only promise every horseman five tankahs, and each foot soldier two tankahs per diem, to keep them from starving; they were willing to go with him to Içfahán, and promised to be responsible for the supplies. But Kh. J. refused the proffered assistance, remarking that Jahángír would kill him, if he heard of the attachment of the Afgháns to him.

In the meantime matters changed. Sháhjahán rebelled, and the expedition to Qandahár was not undertaken, The emperor several times ordered Kh. J. to return, and wrote at last himself, adding the curious remark that even Sher Khán Súr, in spite of his enmity, would after so many requests have obeyed. The delay, it is said, was caused by severe illness. On his arrival at court, Kh. J. was made commandant of Fort Agrah and was put in charge of the treasures.

In the 19th year, on the death of the Khán i A'zam, he was made governor of Gujrát, and when Mahábat Khán was sent to Bengal, he was appointed atálíq to Prince Parwíz, whom he joined at Burhánpúr.

In 1035, the 21st year, Parwíz died, and the Dak'hin was placed under Kh. J. He moved against Fath Khán, son of Malik 'Ambar, to Bálághát. His conduct was now more than suspicious: he accepted proposals made by Hamíd Khán Habshí, the minister of the Nizám Sháh, to cede the conquered districts for an annual payment of three lacs of húns, though the revenue was 55 krors of dáms (Pádisháhn., I., 271), and ordered the imperial Faujdárs and Thánahdárs to give up their places to the agents of the Nizám Sháh and repair to Burhánpúr. Only Sipahdár Khán who stood in Ahmadnagar, refused to do so without express orders from the Emperor.

Soon after, Mahábat Khán joined Sháhjahán at Junír, and was honored with the title of Sipahsálár. On the death of Jahángír, which took place immediately afterwards, Sháhjahán sent Ján Nisár Khán to Kh. J., to find out what he intended to do, and confirm him at the same time in his office as Çúbahdár of the Dak'hin; but as he in the meantime had formed other plans, he sent back Ján Nisár without answer. He intended to rebel. It is said that he was misled by Daryá Khán Rohílah and Fázil Khán, the Díwán of the Dak'hin: Dáwar Bakhsh, they insinuated, had been made emperor by the army, Shahryár had proclaimed himself in Láhor, whilst Sháhj. had offended him by conferring the title of Sipahsálár on Mahábat Khán, who only lately had joined him; he, too, should aim at the crown, as he was a man of great power, and would find numerous adherents.

Sháhj. sent Mahábat to Mándú, where Kh. J.'s family was. Kh. J. renewed friendly relations with the Nizám Sháh, and leaving Sikandar Dutání in Burhánpúr, he moved with several Amírs to Mándú, and deposed the governor Muzaffar Khán Ma'múrí. But he soon saw how mistaken he was. The Amírs who had come with him, left him and paid their respects to Sháhj.; the proclamation of Dáwar Bakhsh proved to be a scheme made by Açaf Khán in favor of Sháhj., and Kh. J. sent a vakíl to court and presented, after Sháhj.'s accession, a most valuable present.

The Emperor was willing to overlook past faults, and left him in possession of the government of Málwah.

In the second year, after punishing Jhujhár Singh, Kh. J. came to court, and was treated by the Emperor with cold politeness. Their mutual distrust soon showed itself. Sháhj. remarked on the strong contingent which he had brought to Ágrah, and several parganahs of his jágírs were transferred to others. One evening, at a darbár, Mírzá Lashkarí, son of Mukhliç Khán, foolishly said to the sons of Kh. J., "He will some of these days imprison your father." Kh. J. on hearing this, shut himself up at home, and when the Emperor sent Islám Khán to his house to enquire, he begged the messenger to obtain for him an amán-námah, or letter of safety, as he was hourly expecting the displeasure of his master. Sháhj. was generous enough to send him the guarantee; but though even Áçaf Khán tried to console him, the old suspicions were never forgotten. In fact it would seem that he only feared the more for his safety, and on the night from the 26th to the 27th Çafar, 1039, after a stay at court of eight months, he fled from Ágrah. When passing the Hatiápul[1] Darwázah, he humbly threw the reins of his horse over his neck, bent his head forward on the saddle, and exclaimed, "O God, thou knowest that I fly for the preservation of my honor; to rebel is not my intention." On the morning before his flight, Áçaf had been informed of his plan, and reported the rumour to the emperor. But Sháhj. said that he could take no steps to prevent Kh. J. from rebelling; he had given him the guarantee, and could use no force before the crime had actually been committed.

An outline of Kh. J.'s rebellion may be found in Elphinstone's history, where the main facts are given.

When he could no longer hold himself in the Dak'hin, he resolved to cut his way to the Panjáb. He entered Málwah, pursued by 'Abdullah Khán and Muzaffar Khán Bárha. After capturing at Sironj fifty imperial elephants, he entered the territory of the Bundelah Rájah. But Jagráj Bikramájít, son of Jhujhár Singh, fell upon his rear (17th Jumáda II, 1040), defeated it, and killed Daryá Khán (a commander of 4000) and his son, Kh. J.'s best officers (Pádisháhn., I., 339; I., b., 296.) On arriving in Bhánder,[2] Kh. J. met Sayyid Muzaffar, and sending off his baggage engaged him with 1000 men. During the fight Mahmúd Khán, one of Kh. J.'s sons, was killed. On approaching Kálinjar, he was opposed by Sayyid Ahmad, the commandant of the Fort, and in a fight another of his sons, Hasan Khán, was captured. Marching farther, he arrived at the tank of Sehondá, where he resolved to die. He allowed his men to go away, as his cause was hopeless. On the 1st Rajab, 1040, he was again attacked by 'Abdullah Khán and S. Muzaffar, and was mortally wounded by Mádhú Singh with a spear. Before Muzaffar could come up, the soldiers had cut him and his son 'Azíz to pieces (Pádisháhn. I., 351). Their

[1] The two large stone elephants which stood upon the gate were taken down by Aurangzíb in Rajab, 1079, because the Muhammadan law forbids sculpture. Maás. 'Alamgírí, p. 77.

[2] So the Maásir. The Bibl. Ind. Edition of the Pádisháhnámah, I., 348, has Bándhú. So likewise for Salwání (Pád. I., 290), the Maásir has Lánjhí (Gondwánah), where Kh. J. after the fight near Dholpúr and his march through the Bundelah State for the first time rested.

Bhánder lies N. E. of Jhánsí. Sehondá lies N. of Kálinjar, on the Ken.

heads were sent to Sháhjahán at Burhánpúr, fixed for some time to the walls of the city, and then buried in the vault of Daulat Khán, Kh. J.'s father.

Kh. J. had been a commander of 7000 (Pádisháhn., I., b., 293).

Several of Kh. J.'s sons, as Husain, 'Azmat, Mahmúd, and Hasan, had perished during the rebellion of their father. Another, Açálat Kháu, a commander of 3000, died during the rebellion at Daulatábád, and Muzaffar had left his father, and gone to court. Faríd and Ján Jahán were captured; 'Alam and Ahmad had fled, and went after some time to court. 'But none of his sons ever prospered.'

The historical work entitled Makhzan i Afgháni, or some editions of it, contain a chapter in praise of Khán Jahán, after whom the book is sometimes called Táríkh i Khán Jahán Lodí.

310. Sha'h Muhammad, son of Quraish Sulṭán (No. 178).

311. Hasan Kha'n Miyánah.

He was at first a servant of Çádiq Khán (No. 43), but later he received a mançab. He died in the Dak'hin wars.

Of his eight sons, the eldest died young (Tuzuk, p. 200). The second is Buhlúl Khán. He rose to a mançab of 1500 under Jahángír (l. c., pp. 184, 200), and received the title of Sarbaland Khán. He was remarkable for his courage and his external appearance. ..He served in Gondwánah.

At the accession of Sháhjahán, B. was made a commander of 4000, 3000 horse and jágírdár of Bálápúr. He joined Khán Jahán Lodí on his march from Gondwánah to Bálághát. When he saw that Khán Jahán did not succeed, he left him, and entered the service of the Nizám Sháh.

A grandson of Buhlúl, Abul Muhammad, came in the 12th year of Aurangzíb's reign to court, was made a commander of 5000, 4000, and got the title of Ikhláç Khán (Maás. 'Alamgírí, p. 81).

For other Miyánah Afgháns, vide Pádisháhn., I., 241; Maás. 'Alamgírí, p. 225.

312. Ta'hir Beg, son of the Khán i Kalán (No. 16).

313. Kishn Da's Tunwar.

He was under Akbar and Jahángír accountant (mushrif) of the elephant and horse stables. In the 7th year of J., he was made a commander of 1000. A short time before, he had received the title of Rájah (Tuzuk, p. 110).

314. Ma'n Singh Kachhwáhah.

The Akbarnámah (III., 333, 335) mentions a Mán Singh Darbárí.

315. Mi'r Gada'i', son of Mír Abú Turáb.

Abú Turáb belonged to the Salámí Sayyids of Shíráz. His grandfather, Mír Ghiásuddín, had come to Gujrát during the reign of Quṭbuddín, grandson of Sulṭán Ahmad (the founder of Ahmadábád); but he soon after returned to Persia. The disturbances, however, during the reign of Sháh Ismá'íl i Çafawí obliged him to take again refuge in Gujrát, where he arrived during the reign of Sulṭán Mahmúd Bígarah.[1] He settled with his son Kamáluddín (Abú Turáb's father) in Champánír-

[1] بیکڑہ. This word is generally pronounced بیگڑہ, and is said to mean having conquered two forts (garh), because Mahmúd's army conquered on one day the forts of Champánír and Júnágarh. But Jahángír in his 'Memoirs'

Mahmúdábád, and set up as a teacher and writer of school books (darsiyah kitáb). Kamáluddín also was a man renowned for his learning.

The family had for a long time been attached to the Salsalah i Maghribiyah, or Maghribí (Western) Sect, the "lamp" of which was the saintly Shaikh[1] Ahmad i Khaṭṭú. The name 'Salámí Sayyids' is explained as follows. One of the ancestors of the family had visited the tomb of the Prophet. When coming to the sacred spot, he said the customary salám, when a heavenly voice returned his greeting.

Abú Turáb was a highly respected man. He was the first that paid his respects to Akbar on his march to Gujrát, and distinguished himself by his faithfulness to his new master. Thus he was instrumental in preventing I'timád Khán (No. 67) from joining, after Akbar's departure for Kambháyat, the rebel Ikhtiyár-ul-Mulk. Later, Akbar sent him to Makkah as Mír Hajj, in which quality he commanded a large party of courtiers and begums. On his return, he brought a large stone from Makkah, which bore the footprint of the prophet (qadam i sharíf, or qadam i mubárak); vide p. 198. The 'táríkh' of his return is khair ul aqdám (A. H. 987), or 'the best of footprints.' The stone was said to be the same which Sayyid Jalál i Bukhárí at the time of Sulṭán Fírúz had brought to Dihlí. Akbar looked upon the whole as a pious farce, and though the stone was received with great éclat, Abú Turáb was graciously allowed to keep it in his house.

When I'timád was made governor of Gujrát, Abú Turáb followed him as Amín of the Çúbah, accompanied by his sons Mír Muhibbullah and Mír Sharafuddín.

Abú Turáb died in 1005, and was buried at Ahmadábád.

His third son Mír Gadáí, though he held a mançab, adopted the saintly mode of life which his ancestors had followed. In the 46th year, he served in the Dak'hin.

316. Qa'sim Khwa'jah, son of Khwájah 'Abdul Bárí. Vide No. 320.

317. Na'di 'Alí' Maidání.

In MSS. he is often wrongly called Yád 'Alí.

The word nádi is an Arabic Imperative, meaning call. It occurs in the following formula used all over the East for amulets.

Nádi 'Aliyan mazhara'l'ajáib,
Tajidhu 'aunan fi kulli-lmaçáib.
Kullu hammin wa ghammin sayanjalí
Binubuwwatika yá Muhammad, biwiláyitika yá 'Alí.
Yá 'Alí, yá 'Alí, yá 'Alí.

Call upon 'Alí, in whom all mysteries reveal themselves, says that بیکرو means burút i bargashtah, 'having a turned up, or twisted, moustache,' which Sulṭán Mahmúd is said to have had (Tuzuk, p. 212).

---

Champánír, according to Bird, is also called Mahmúdábád. The Maásir has Champánír-Muhammadábád.

[1] Born A. H. 738, died at the age of 111 (lunar) years, on the 10th Shawwál, 849. Shaikh Ahmad lies buried at Sark'hej near Ahmadábád. The biographical works on Saints give many particulars regarding this personage, and the share which he had, as one of the four Gujráti Ahmads, in the foundation of Ahmadábád (founded 7th Zí Qa'dah 813). Khazínatul Aṣfiá (Láhor), p. 957.

Khaṭṭú, where Shaikh Ahmad was educated by his adoptive father Shaikh Is-háq i Maghribí (died 776, A. H.) lies east of Nágor.

Thou wilt find it a help in all afflictions.
Every care and every sorrow will surely vanish
Through thy prophetship, O Muhammad, through thy saintliness, O 'Alí.
O 'Alí, O 'Alí, O 'Alí!

The beginning of the amulet suggested the name.

In the 26th year, Nádi 'Alí served against M. Muhammad Hakím, in 993 (the 30th year) in Kábul, and two years later under Zain Kokah (No. 34) against the Táríkís.

In the 6th year of Jahángír's reign, he was made a commander of 1500, chiefly for his services against the Kábul rebel Ahdád. In the 10th year, he served in Bangash, when he was a commander of 1500, 1000 horse. He died in the following year (1026); vide Tuzuk, p. 172. His sons were provided with mançabs.

His son Bízan (or Bízhan) distinguished himself, in the 15th year, in Bangash, and was made a commander of 1000, 500 horse (l. c., pp. 307, 309).

The Pádisháhnámah (I., b., 322) mentions a Muhammad Zamán, son of Nádi 'Alí Arlát, who in the 10th year of Sháhjahán was a commander of 500, 350 horse.

Nádi 'Alí is not to be confounded with the Háfiz Nádi 'Alí, who served under Jahángír as Court Háfiz (Tuzuk, p. 155, and its Díbájah, p. 19), nor with the Nádi 'Alí who served under Sháhjahán (Pádisháhn., II., 749) as a commander of 500, 200 horse.

318. Ní'l Kant'h, Zamíndár of Oṛísá.

319. Ghia's Beg of Ṭahrán [I'timád-uddaulah].

His real name is Mírzá Ghiásuddín Muhammad. In old European histories his name is often spelled Ayás, a corruption of Ghiás, not of Ayáz (ایاز).

Ghiás Beg's father was Khwájah Muhammad Sharíf, who as poet wrote under the assumed name of Waçlí. He was Vazír to Tátár Sulṭán, son of Muhammad Khán Sharafuddín Ughlú Taklú, who held the office of Beglar Begí of Khurásán. After Tátár Sulṭán's death, the Khwájah was continued in office by his son Qazáq Khán, and on Qazáq's death, he was made by Sháh Ṭahmásp Vazír of Yazd.[1]

Khwájah Muhammad Sharíf is said to have died in A. H. 984. He had two brothers, Khwájah Mírzá Ahmad, and Khwájagí Khwájah. The son of Kh. Mírzá Ahmad was the well known Khwájah Amín Rází (رازي, i. e. of the town of Rai, of which he was kalántar, or magistrate), who travelled a good deal and composed the excellent work entitled Haft Iqlím, A. H. 1002. Khwájagí Khwájah had a son of the name of Khwájah Shápúr, who was likewise a literary man.

Ghiás Beg was married to the daughter of Mírzá 'Alá-uddaulah, son of[2] Aghá Mullá. After the death of his father, in consequence of adverse circumstances, Gh. B. fled with his two sons and one daughter from Persia. He was plundered on the way, and had only two mules left, upon which the members of the family alternately rode. On his arrival at Qandahár, his wife gave birth to another daughter, who received the name of Mihrunnisá ('the Sun of Women'), a name which her future title of Núr Jahán has almost brought into oblivion.[1] In their misfortune, they found a patron in Malik Mas'úd, leader of the caravan, who is said to have been known to Akbar. We are left to infer that it was he who directed Ghiás Beg to India. After his introduction at Court in Fathpúr Síkrí,[2] Gh. rose, up to the 40th year, to a command of 300. In the same year, he was made Díwán of Kábul, and was in course of time promoted to a manṣab of 1000, and appointed Díwán i Buyútát.

[1] The Díbájah (preface) of the Tuzuk (p. 20) and the Iqbálnámah (p. 54) agree verbatim in Ghiás Beg's history. They do not mention Qazáq Khán. For Yazd of the Maásir, Sayyid Ahmad's text of the Tuzuk has Marw; and the Bibl. Indica edition of the Iqbálnámah has ‘he made him his own Vazír.’

[2] The words son of are not in the Maásir, but in the Tuzuk and the Iqbálnámah. Two Aghá Mullás have been mentioned on p. 369, and under No. 278, p. 497.

Regarding Mihrunnisá's marriage with 'Alí Qulí, vide No. 394.

In the beginning of Jahángír's reign, Ghiás Beg received the title of I'timád-uddaulah. In the second year, his eldest son, Muhammad Sharíf[3] joined a conspiracy, to set Khusrau at liberty and murder the emperor; but the plot being discovered, Sharíf was executed, and I'timád himself was imprisoned. After some time, he was let off on payment of a fine of two lacs of rupees. At the death of Sher Afkan (p. 497), Mihrunnisá was sent to court as a prisoner "for the murder of Quṭbuddín," and was handed over to Ruqaiyah Sulṭán Begum,[4] with whom she lived 'unnoticed (banákámí) and rejected.' In the 6th year (1020), she no longer slighted the emperor's proposals, and the marriage was celebrated with great pomp. She received the title of Núr Mahall, and a short time afterwards that of Núr Jahán.[5]

Ghiás, in consequence of the marriage, was made Vakíl i kul, or prime-minister, and a commander of 6000, 3000 horse. He also received a flag and a drum, and was in the 10th year allowed to beat his drum at court, which was a rare privilege. In the 16th year, when J. was on his way to Kashmír, Ghiás took ill. The imperial couple were recalled from a visit to Kángṛah Fort, and arrived in time to find him dying. Pointing to the Emperor, Núr Jahán asked her father whether he recognized him. He quoted as answer a verse from Anwarí—

آنکه نابیناي مادرزاد اگر حاضر بود در جبین عالم آرا پس به بیند مهتری

'If one who is blind from birth stood here, he would recognize his majesty by his august forehead.'

He died after a few hours. The Tuzuk (p. 339) mentions the 17th Bahman, 1031, (Rabí' I, 1031) as the day of his death, and says that he died broken-hearted three months and twenty days after his wife, who had died on the 29th Mihr, 1030, i. e., 13th Zí Qa'dah, 1030).

Ghiás Beg was a poet. He imitated the old classics, which ruling passion, as we

---

[1] It is said that Núr Jahán at her death in 1055 was in her seventy-second year. She would thus have been born in A. H. 984; hence Ghiás Beg's flight from Persia must have taken place immediately after the death of his father.

It is well to bear this in mind; for when Núr Jahán was married by Jahángír (in 1020), she must have been as old as 34 (solar) years, an age at which women in the East are looked upon as old women.

[2] Where he had some distant relations, as Ja'far Beg (No. 98).

[3] Who according to custom had the same name as his grandfather; vide p. 497, No. 278.

[4] The Tuzuk and the Iqbálnámah have Ruqaiyah Sulṭán Begum (p. 309). The Maásir has Salímah Sulṭán Begum (p. 309). The Iqbálnámah (p. 56) has wrong رقیه for رقیه.

[5] In accordance with the name of her husband Núrúddín Jahángír.

saw, shewed itself a few hours before he died. He was a clever correspondent, and is said to have written a beautiful Shikastah hand. Jahángír praises him for his social qualities, and confessed that his society was better than a thousand mufarrih i yáqúts.[1] He was generally liked, had no enemies, and was never seen angry. 'Chains, the whip, and abuse, were not found in his house.' He protected the wretched, especially such as had been sentenced to death. He never was idle, but wrote a great deal; his official accounts were always in the greatest order. But he liked bribes, and shewed much boldness in demanding them.[2]

His mausoleum near A'grah has often been described.

Núr Jahán's power over Jahángír is sufficiently known from the histories. The emperor said, "Before I married her, I never knew what marriage really meant," and, "I have conferred the duties of government on her; I shall be satisfied, if I have a ser of wine and half a ser of meat per diem. With the exception of the khuṭbah (prayer for the reigning monarch), she possessed all privileges of royalty. Thus her name was invariably mentioned on farmáns, and even on coins. The jágírs which she held, would have conferred on her the title of a commander of 30000. A great portion of her zamíndárís lay near Rámsir, S. E. of Ajmír (Tuzuk, p. 169). She provided for all her relations; even her nurse, Dáí Dilárám, enjoyed much influence, and held the post of 'Çadr of the Women' (çadr i anás), and when she conferred lands as sayúrgháls, the grants were confirmed and sealed by the Çadr of the empire. Núr Jahán is said to have particularly taken care of orphan girls, and the number whom she betrothed or gave outfits to, is estimated at five hundred. She gave the tone to fashion, and is said to have invented the 'atr i Jahángírí (a peculiar kind of rosewater). She possessed much taste in adorning apartments and arranging feasts. For many gold ornaments she laid down new patterns and elegant designs, and her Dudámí for peshwáz (gowns), her pánchtoliah for orhnís (veils), her bádlah (brocade), kinárí (lace), and farsh i chandaní,[3] are often mentioned.

Her influence ceased with Jahángír's death and the capture of Shahryár, fifth son of the emperor, to whom she had given her daughter (by Sher Afkan), Ládlí Begum, in marriage. She had no children by Jahángír. Sháhjahán allowed her a pension of two lacs per annum.[4]

She died at Láhor at the age of 72, on the 29th Shawwál, 1055, and lies buried near her husband in a tomb which she herself had built (Pádisháhn., II., 475).[5] She composed occasionally Persian poems, and wrote like Salímah Sulṭán Begum and Zebunnisá Begum under the assumed name of Makhfí.

Ghiás Beg's sons. The fate of his eldest son Muhammad Sharíf has been alluded to. His second son, Mírzá Abul Hasan Açaf Khán (IV.), also called Açaf-jáh or

---

[1] As the diamond when reduced to powder was looked upon in the East as a deadly poison, so was the cornelian (yáqút) supposed to possess exhilarating properties. Mufarrih means an exhilarative.

[2] So the Tuzuk and the Iqbálnámah.

[3] Dudámí, weighing two dáms; pánchtoliyah, weighing five tolahs. The latter was mentioned on p. 94. Farsh i chandaní, carpets of sandalwood colour.

[4] Elphinstone has by mistake 2 lacs per mensem. The highest allowance of Begums on record is that of Mumtáz Mahall, viz. 10 lacs per annum. Vide Pádisháhn., I., 96.

[5] In the Pádisháhnámah Núr Jahán is again called Núr Mahall.

A'çaf-jáhí, is the father of Mumtáz Mahall (Táj Bibí), the favorite wife of Sháhjahán, whom European Historians occasionally call Núr Jahán II. He received from Sháhjahán the title of Yamínuddaulah and KhánKhánán Sipahsálár, and was a commander of 9000. He died on the 17th Sha'bán, 1051, and was buried at Láhor, north of Jahángír's tomb. As commander of 9000 duaspah, sihaspah troopers, his salary was 16 krors, 20 lacs of dáms, or 4,050,000 Rupees, and besides, he had jágírs yielding a revenue of five millions of Rupees. His property at his death, which is said to have been more than double that of his father, was valued at 25 millions of Rupees, and consisted of 30 lacs of jewels, 42 lacs of Rupees in gold muhurs, 25 lacs of Rupees in silver, 30 lacs of plate, &c., and 23 lacs of other property. His palace in Láhor, which he had built at a cost of 20 lacs, was given to Prince Dárá Shikoh, and 20 lacs of rupees, in cash and valuables, were distributed among his 3 sons and 5 daughters. The rest escheated to the state.

Áçáf Khán was married to a daughter of Mírzá Ghíasuddín 'Alí Áçaf Khán II., p. 369).

His eldest son is the renowned Mírzá Abú Ṭálib Sháistah Khán, who, as governor of Bengal, is often mentioned in the early history of the E. I. Company. Sháistah was married to a daughter of Írij Shahnawáz Khán (No. 255), son of 'Abdurrahím KhánKhánán, by whom he had however no children. He died at Ágrah in 1105, the 38th year of Aurangzíb's reign. His eldest son, Abú Ṭálib,[1] had died before him. His second son was Abul Fath Khán. One of his daughters was married to Rúhullah (I.), and another to Zulfaqár Khán Nuçrat-jang.

Áçaf Khán's second son, Bahmanyár, was in the 20th year of Sháhj. a commander of 2000, 200 horse (Pádisháhn., II., 728).

Ghiás Beg's third son is Ibráhím Khán Fath-jang, who was governor of Bihár (p. 480, note) and Bengal. He was killed near his son's tomb during Sháhjahán's rebellion. His son had died young, and was buried near Rájmahall, on the banks of the Ganges (Tuzuk, p. 383). Ibráhím Khán was married to Hájí Húr Parwar Khánum, Núr Jahán's maternal aunt (khálah). She lived up to the middle of Aurangzíb's reign, and held Kol Jalálí as áltamghá.

An Ahmad Beg Khán is mentioned in the histories as the son of Núr Jahán's brother.[2] He was with Ibráhím Fath-jang in Bengal, and retreated after his death to Dháká, where he handed over to Sháhjahán 500 elephants and 45 lacs of rupees (Tuzuk, p. 384). On Sháhj.'s accession, he received a high mançab, was made governor of T'hat'hah and Síwistán, and later of Multán. He then returned to court, and received as jágír the Parganahs of Jáis and Ameṭhí, where he died. In the 20th year of Sháhj., he was a commander of 2000, 1500 horse (Pádisháhn., II., 727).

A sister of Núr Jahán, Manijah Begum, was mentioned on p. 499.

A fourth sister, Khadíjah Begum, was married to Hákim Beg, a nobleman of Jahángír's court.

The following tree will be found serviceable—

---

[1] Also called Muhammad Ṭálíb. Vide Pádisháhn., II., 248.

[2] It seems therefore that he was the son of Muhammad Sharíf.

1. Khwájah Muhammad Sharíf (d. 984)
2. Khwájah Mírzá Ahmad
3. Khwájagí Khwájah

Mírzá Amín i Rází (author of the Haft Iqlím).

Khwájah Shápúr.

1. Aghá Muhammad Táhir, Waqlí.
2. Mírzá Ghiás Beg I'timád-uddaulah. (d. 1031.)

1. Muhammad Sharíf (executed) — ? — Ahmad Beg Khán.
2. Mírzá Abul Hasan Áçaf Khán (IV.) (d. 1051.)
3. 4. Two daughters Manijah and Khadíjah.
4. Núr Jahán (wife of Jahángír, (d. 1055).
5. Ibráhím Khán Fathjang (left no children).

1. Mírzá Abú Tálib Sháistah Khán (d. 1105.)
   1. Abú Tálib.
   2. Abul Fath Khán.
2. Bahmanyár.
3. A son.
4. Mumtáz Mahall, wife of Sháh Jahán (died 1040).
5. 6. Two daughters.

320. Khwa'jah Ashraf, son of Khwájah 'Abdul Bárí.

One MS. has Sharaf for Ashraf. Vide No. 316.

321. Sharaf Beg, of Shíráz.

322. Ibra'hi'm Quli', son of Ismá'íl Qulí Khán (No. 46).

XXI. Commanders of Two Hundred and Fifty.

323. Abul Fath, son of Muzaffar, the Mughul.

324. Beg Muhammad Toqbái.

He served in the end of the 28th year in Gujrát, and was present in the fight near Maisánah, S. E. of Patan, in which Sher Khán Fúládí was defeated, and also against Muzaffar of Gujrát (Akbarn., III., 423).

Regarding Toqbái, vide No. 129.

325. Ima'm Quli' Shighálí.

The Akbarnámah (III., 628) mentions an Imám Qulí, who, in the 37th year, served under Sultán Murád in Málwah.

The meaning of Shighálí is unclear to me. A Muhammad Qulí Shighálí played a part in Badakhshán history (Akbarn., III., 132, 249).

326. Safdar Beg, son of Haidar Muhammad Khán Akhtah Begí (No. 66).

A Çafdar Khán served, in the 21st year, against Daudá of Bundí (p. 410).

327. Khwa'jah Sulaima'n of Shíráz.

He has been mentioned on pp. 356, 457.

328. Barkhurda'r [Mírzá Khán 'Alam], son of 'Abdurrahmán Duldai (No. 186).

Mírzá Barkhurdár was in the 40th year of Akbar's reign a commander of 250.

His father (No. 186) had been killed in a fight with the rebel Dalpat.[1] This Bihár Zamíndár was afterwards caught and kept in prison till the 44th year, when, on the payment of a heavy peshkásh, he was allowed to return to his home. But B. wished to avenge the death of his father, and lay in ambush for Dalpat, who, however, managed to escape. Akbar was so annoyed at this breach of peace, that he gave orders to hand over B. to Dalpat; but at the intercession of several countries, B. was imprisoned.

As Jahángír was fond of him, he released him after his accession,[2] and made him Qúshbegí, or superintendent of the aviary. In the fourth year (beginning of 1018), B. received the title of Khán 'Álam (Tuzuk, p. 74). Two years later, in 1020, Sháh 'Abbás of Persia sent Yádgár 'Alí Sultán Tálish as ambassador to Agrah, and B. was selected to accompany him on his return to Persia. The suite consisted of about twelve hundred men, and was according to the testimony of the 'Álamárá i Sikandarí the most splendid embassy that had ever appeared in Persia. In consequence of a long delay at Harát and Qum, caused by the absence of the Sháh in Azarbáiján on an expedition against the Turks, nearly one half of the suite were sent back. In 1027, the Sháh returned to Qazwín, and received the numerous presents, chiefly elephants and other animals, which B. had brought from India. The embassy returned in 1029 (end of the 14th year), and B. met the emperor at Kalánúr on his way to Kashmír. Jahángír was so pleased, that he kept B. for two days in his sleeping apartment, and made him a commander of 5000, 3000 horse.

The author of the Pádisháhnámah (I., 427), however, remarks that B. did not possess the skill and tact of an ambassador, though he has not stated his reasons or the source of his information.

On Sháhjahán's accession, B. was made a commander of 6000, 5000 horse, received a flag and a drum, and was appointed governor of Bihár, vice M. Rustam Safawí. But as he was given to koknár (opium and hemp), he neglected his duties, and was deposed before the first year had elapsed. In the fifth year (end of 1041), when Sháhj. returned from Burhánpúr to Agrah, B. was pensioned off, as he was old

---

[1] Dalpat is called in the Akbarnámah اجنیه, Ujjainiah, for which the MSS. have various readings, as اجنیه, اوجینیه, &c. Under Sháhjahán, Dalpat's successor was Rájah Pratáb, who in the 1st year received a mansab of 1500, 1000 horse (Pádisháhn. I., 221). From the same work we see that the residence of the Ujjainiah Rájahs was Bhojpúr, west of Árah and north of Sahasrám (Sasseram), a parganah in Sirkár Rohtás, Bihár. Pratáb rebelled in the 10th year of Sháhjahán's reign, when 'Abdullah Khán Fíróz-jang besieged and conquered Bhojpúr (8th Zí Hajjah, 1046). Pratáb surrendered, and was at Sháhj.'s order executed. His wife was forcibly converted, and married to 'Abdullah's grandson. The particulars of this conquest will be found in the Pádisháhnámah (I., b., pp. 271 to 274).

The maps shew a small place of the name of Pratáb near Bhojpúr.

It is said that the Bhojpúr Rájahs call themselves Ujjainiahs, because they claim descent from the ancient Rájahs of Ujjain in Málwah.

In the 17th year of Sháhjahán, Dharnídhar Ujjainiah is mentioned to have several in the second expedition against Palámau; Journal, As. Soc., Bengal, for 1871, No. II, p. 123.

[2] If we can trust the Lucknow edition of the Akbarnámah, B. could not have been imprisoned for a long time; for in the end of the 44th year of Akbar's reign, he served again at court (Akbarn., III., 825).

and given to opium, and received an annual pension of one lac of rupees (Pádisháhn. I., 426). He died a natural death at Ágrah. He had no children.

B. is not to be confounded with Khwájah Barkhurdár, a brother of 'Abdullah Khán Fírúz-jang.

B. 's brother Mírzá 'Abdussubhán (No. 349) was Faujdár of Iláhábád. He was then sent to Kábul, where he was killed, in 1025, in a fight with the A'fridís (Tuzuk, beginning of the 11th year, p. 158).

'Abdussubhán's son, Sherzád Khán Bahádur, was killed in the last fight with Khán Jahán Lodí at Sehondah (p. 505). Pádisháhn., I., 349.

329. Mi'r Ma'su'm of Bhakkar.

Mír Ma'çúm belongs to a family of Tirmizí Sayyids, who two or three generations before him had left Tirmiz in Bukhárá, and settled at Qandahár, where his ancestors were mutawallís (trustees) of the shrine of Bábá Sher Qalandar.

His father, Mír Sayyid Çafáí, settled in Bhakkar, and received favors from Sulṭán Mahmúd (p. 362). He was related by marriage to the Sayyids of كهاروث in Síwistán. Mír Ma'çúm and his two brothers were born at Bhakkar.

After the death of his father, M. M. studied under Mullá Muhammad of Kingú, كنگري, S. W. of Bhakkar, and soon distinguished himself by his learning. But poverty compelled him to leave for Gujrát, where Shaikh Is-háq i Fárúqí of Bhakkar introduced him to Khwájah Nizámuddín Ahmad, then Díwán of Gujrát. Nizám was just engaged in writing his historical work, entitled 'Ṭabaqát i Akbarí,' and soon became the friend of M. M., who was likewise well versed in history. He was also introduced to Shiháb Khán (No. 26), the governor of the province, and was at last recommended to Akbar for a mançab. In the 40th year, he was a commander of 250. Akbar became very fond of him, and sent him in 1012 as ambassador to Irán, where he was received with distinction by Sháh 'Abbás.

On his return from Irán, in 1015, Jahángír sent him as Amín to Bhakkar, where he died. It is said that he reached under Akbar a command of 1000.

From the Akbarnámah (III., 416, 423, 546) and Bird's History of Gujrat (p. 426) we see that M. M. served in 992 (end of the 28th year) in Gujrát, was present in the fight of Maisánah, and in the final expedition against Muzaffar in Kachh.

M. M. is well-known as poet and historian. He wrote under the poetical name of Námí. He composed a Díwán, a Masnáwí entitled Ma'dan-ulafkár in the metre of Nizámí's Makhzan, the Táríkh i Sindh, dedicated to his son, and a short medical work called Mufridát i Ma'çúmí. The author of the Riyázushshu'ará says that he composed a Khamsah (p. 491), and the Tazkirah by Taqí (vide under No. 352) says the same, viz. one masnawí corresponding to the Makhzan, the Husn o Náz to the Yúsuf Zalíkhá, the Parí Çúrat to the Lailí Majnún, and two others in imitation of the Haft Paikar and Sikandarnámah. Badáoní (died 1004) only alludes to the 'Husn o Náz,' though he gives no title (III., 366).

M. M. was also skilled as a composer and tracer of inscriptions, and the Riyázushshu'ará says that on his travels he was always accompanied by sculptors. From India to Içfahán and Tabríz, where he was presented to Sháh 'Abbás, there are numerous mosques and public buildings, which he adorned with metrical inscriptions. Thus the inscriptions over the gate of the Fort of Ágrah, on the Jámi' Mosque of Fathpúr Síkrí, in Fort Mándú (vide p. 372, and Tuzuk, p. 189) are all by him. Sayyid Ahmad in his edition of the Tuzuk (Díbájah, p. 4, note) gives in full the inscription which he wrote on the side of the entrance to Salím i Chishtí's shrine at Fathpúr Síkrí, the last words of which are—"Said and written by Muhammad Ma'çúm poetically styled Námí, son of Sayyid Çafáí of Tirmiz, born at Bhakkar, descended from Sayyid Sher Qalandar, son of Bábá Hasan Abdál, who was born at Sabzwár and settled at Qandahár. Dowson, in his edition of Elliot's Historians, mentions Kirmán as the residence of Sayyid Çáfáí, and gives (I, 239) a few particulars from the Táríkh i Sindh regarding the saint Bábá Hasan Abdál, who lived under Mírzá Sháhrukh, son of Timur. The town of Hasan Abdál in the Panjáb, east of Aṭak, is called after him.

M. M. built also several public edifices, especially in Suk'har opposite to Bhakkar, and in the midst of the branch of the Indus which flows round Bhakkar he built a dome, to which he gave the name of Satiásur (ستیاسر). "It is one of the wonders of the world, and its Táríkh is contained in the words گنبذ دریائی, water-dome, which gives 1007, A.H.

He was a pious man, and exceedingly liberal; he often sent presents to all the people of Bhakkar, great and small. But when he retired, he discontinued his presents, and the people even felt for some cause oppressed (mutaazzí). It is especially mentioned of him that on his jágír lands he laid out forests for hunting.

His eldest son, for whose instruction he wrote the Táríkh i Sindh, was Mír Buzurg. He was captured in full armour on the day Prince Khusrau's rebellion was suppressed, but he denied having had a share in it. Jahángír asked him why he had his armour on. "My father," replied he, "advised me to dress in full armour when on guard," and as the Chaukínawís, or guard writer, proved that he had been on guard that day, he was let off.

On the death of his father, Jahángír is said to have left Mír Buzurg in possession of his father's property. He was for a long time Bakhshí of Qandahár, but he was haughty and could never agree with the Çúbahdárs. He spent the 30 or 40 lacs of Rupees which he had inherited from his father. His contingent was numerous and well mounted. He subsequently served in the Dak'hin; but as his jágír did not cover his expenses, he resigned and retired to Bhakkar, contenting himself with the landed property which he had inherited. He died in 1044. Some of his children settled in Multán.

330. Khwa'jah Malik Ali', Mír Shab.

His title of Mír Shab implies that he was in charge of the illuminations and the games and animal fights held at night (p. 222).

331. Ra'i Ra'm Da's Di'wa'n. Vide No. 238.

332. Sha'h Muhammad, son of Sa'íd Khán, the Gak'khar.

For his relations vide under No. 247.

333. Rahi'm Quli', son of Khán Jahán (No. 24).

334. Sher Beg, Yasáwulbáshí

Karam Beg, son of Sher Beg, is mentioned in the Akbarnámah (III., 623).

XXII. Commanders of two Hundred.

335. Iftikha'r Beg, son of Báyazíd Beg (No. 299).

He was alive in the end of 1007 A. H. (Akbarn., III., 804).

336. Prata'b Singh. son of Rájah Bhagwán Dás (No. 27).

He was mentioned on p. 447, under No. 160.

337. Husain Kha'n Qazwi'ni'. Vide No. 281.

338. Ya'dga'r Husain, son of Qabúl Khán (No. 137).

He was mentioned on p. 437. In the 31st year, he served under Q'ásim Khán in Kashmír. The Yádgár Husain mentioned in the Tuzuk (p. 146) may be the same. He was promoted, in the 10th year of Jahángír's reign, to a command of 700, 500 horse, for his services in the Dak'hin. Vide also Pádisháhnámah I., b., p. 323, l. 2 from below.

He is not to be confounded with Khwájah Yádgár, a brother of 'Abdullah Khán Fírúz-jang.

339. Ka'mra'n Beg of Gílán.

He served in the 33rd year (996) in Gujrát and Kachh against Fáth Khán, the younger son of Amín Khán Ghorí, and Muzaffar, and in the 36th year, against Muzaffar and the Jám. Akbarn., III., 553, 621.

340. Muhammad Kha'n Turkmán.

341. Niza'muddi'n Ahmad, son of Sháh Muhammad Khán (No. 95).

He is not to be confounded with the author of the Ṭabaqát.

342. Sakat Singh, son of Rájah Mán Singh (No. 30).

Vide No. 256.

343. 'Ima'd ul Mulk.

The Akbarnámah mentions a Qází 'Imád ul Mulk, who in the end of 984 (21st year) accompanied a party of courtiers to Makkah.

344. Shari'f i Sarmadi'.

He was a poet. Vide below, among the poets of Akbar's reign.

345. Qara' Bahri', son of Qarátáq.

Qarátáq, whose name in the Akbarnámah is spelled Qarátáq, was killed by Gajpatí in the same fight in which Farhang Khán, son of Farhat Khán (No. 145), was slain (p. 441).

346. Ta'ta'r Beg, son of 'Alí Muhammad Asp. (No. 258).

347. Khwa'jah Muhibb 'Ali' of Khawáf.

Vide p. 445, note.

348. Haki'm [Jaláluddín] Muzaffar of Ardistán.

Ardistán is a Persian town which lies between Káshán and Içfahán. He was at first a doctor at the court of Sháh Ṭahmásp, and emigrated when young to India, where he was looked upon as a very experienced doctor, though his theoretical reading is said to have been limited. Badáoní (III, 169) and the Tuzuk (p. 59) praise the purity of his character and walk of life.

He served in 988 (25th year) in Bengal, returned in the end of the 28th year with Mírzá 'Azíz Kokah (No. 21) to court, and served subsequently under him in Gujrát and Kachh. Akbarn., III, 283, 418, 620. Under Jahángír, he was made a commander of 3000, 1000 horse (Tuzuk, p. 37). The emperor was fond of him, as he had been with him in Iláhábád, when as prince he had rebelled against Akbar. The news of the Hakím's death reached J. on the 22nd Jumáda I, 1016. For about twenty years before his death, he had suffered from qarhah i shush, or disease of the lungs, but his uniform mode of living (yakṭauri) prolonged his life. His cheeks and eyes often got quite red, and when he got older, his complexion turned bluish. He was accidentally poisoned by his compounder.

349. 'Abdussubhán, son of 'Abdurrahmán Duldai (No. 186).

He was mentioned under No. 328, p. 514.

350. Qásim Beg of Tabríz.

He served in the 36th year under Sulṭán Murád in Málwah, and died on the 23rd Ábán, (end of) 1007; vide Akbarn., III., 628, 803. Vide below under the learned men of Akbar's reign.

351. Sharíf [Amír ul Umará], son of Khwájah 'Abduççamad (No. 266).

Muhammad Sharíf was the school companion of Prince Salím, who was much attached to him. When the prince had occupied Iláhábád in rebellion against Akbar, Sharíf was sent to him to advise him; but he only widened the breach between the prince and his father, and gained such an ascendancy over Salím, that he made the rash promise to give him half the kingdom, should he obtain the throne. When a reconciliation had been effected between Salím and Akbar, Sh. had to fly for his life, and concealed himself in the hills and jungles. He was reduced to starvation, when he heard of Akbar's death. He went at once to court, and Jahángír, true to his promise, made him Amír ul Umará, Vakíl, entrusted him with the great seal (úzuk) and allowed him to select his jágír lands. The emperor says in his Memoirs, 'He is at once my brother, my friend, my son, my companion. When he came back, I felt as if I had received new life. I am now emperor, but consider no title sufficiently high to reward him for his excellent qualities, though I can do no more than make him Amír ul Umará and a commander of 5000. My father never did more.'

Sharíf seems to have advised the emperor to drive all Afgháns from India; but the Khán i A'zam (No. 21) warned Jahángír against so unwise a step. Though Sh.'s position at court was higher than that of Mírzá 'Azíz, the latter treated him contemptuously as a mean upstart, and Sh. recommended the emperor to kill 'Azíz for the part he had played in Khusrau's rebellion. But 'Azíz was pardoned, and advised to make it up with Sharíf, and invite him to his house. The Khán i A'zam did so, and invited him and the other Amírs. At the feast, however, he said to him, in the blandest way, "I say, Nawáb, you do not seem to be my friend. Now your father 'Abduççamad, the Mullá, was much attached to me. He was the man that painted the very walls of the room we sit in." Khán Jahán (p. 503) and Mahábat Khán could not stand this insolent remark, and left the hall; and when Jahángír heard of it, he said to Sh., "The Khán cannot bridle his tongue; but don't fall out with him."

In the second year, Sh. accompanied the emperor on his tour to Kábul, but fell so ill, that he had to be left in Láhor, Áçaf Khán (No. 98, p. 412) being appointed to officiate for him. On his recovery, he was sent to the Dak'hin, but was soon afterwards called to court, as he could not agree with the KhánKhánán (No. 29).

It is said that illness deprived him of the faculty of memory, and Jahángír was on the point of making him retire, when Khán Jahán interceded on his behalf. He was again sent to the Dak'hin, and died there a natural death.

Like his father, Sh. was a good painter. He also made himself known as a poet, and composed a Díwán. His takhalluç is Fárisí (Badáoní, III., 310).

Sh.'s eldest son, Shahbáz Khán, died when young. A Sarái near Lak'hnau, about a kos from the town, bears his name.

His two younger sons, Mírzá Gul and Mírzá Járullah, used to play with Jahángír at chess and nard; but this ceased at the death of their father. M. Járullah was married to Miçrí Begum, a daughter of Açaf Khán (No. 98); but from a certain aversion, the marriage was never consummated. At Açaf's death, Jahángír made him divorce his wife, and married her to Mírza Lashkarí (No. 375), son of Mírzá Yúsuf Khán (p. 347).

Both brothers followed Mahábat Khán to Kábul, where they died.

352. Taqiya' of Shustar.

Taqiyá is the Írání form for Taqí. The Ṭabaqát calls him Taqí Muhammad. Badáoní (III., 206) has Taqíuddín, and says that he was a good poet and a well educated man. At Akbar's order he undertook a prose version of the Sháhnámah. He is represented as a 'murid,' or disciple of Akbar's Divine Faith.

He was still alive in the 3rd year of Jahángír's reign (1017), when he received for his attainments the title of Muarrikh Khán (Tuzuk, p. 69, where in Sayyid Ahmad's edition we have to read Shushtarí for the meaningless Shamsherí).

Taqiyá is not to be confounded with the more illustrious Taqiyá of Balbán (a village near Içfahán), who, according to the Mir-át ul 'Álam came in the beginning of Jahángír's reign to India. He is the author of the rare Tazkirah, or Lives of Poets, entitled 'Arafát o 'Araçát, and of the Dictionary entitled Surmah i Sulaimání, which the lexicographer Muhammad Husain used for his Burhán i Qáṭi.'

353. Khwajah Abdussamad of Káshán.

354. Haki'm Lutfullah, son of Mullá 'Abdurrazzáq of Gílán.

He is the brother of Nos. 112 and 205, and arrived in India after his brothers. Badáoní (III., 169) calls him a very learned doctor.

355. Sher Afkan
356. Ama'nullah } sons of Saif Khán Kokah (No. 38, p. 350).

Amánullah died in the 45th year of Akbar's reign at Burhánpúr. "He was an excellent young man, but fell a victim to the vice of the age, and died from excessive wine-drinking." Akbarnámah, III., 835.

357. Sali'm Quli'
358. Khali'l Quli' } sons of Ismá'íl Qulí Khán (No. 46).

359. Wali' Beg, son of Páyandah Khán (No. 68).

He served under Qásim Khán (No. 59) in the conquest of Kashmír.

360. Beg Muhammad Uighúr.

361. Mi'r Kha'n Yasáwul.

When Akbar during the first Gujrátí war (p. 434, note 2) had left Patan for Chotánah (Rajab, 980), it was reported that Muzaffar of Gujrát had fled from Sher Khán Fúládí, and was concealed in the neighbourhood; vide p. 386. Akbar, therefore, sent Mír Khán the Yasáwul and Farid the Qaráwul, and afterwards Abul Qásim Namakín (No. 199) and Karam 'Alí in search of him. Mír Khán had not gone far, when he found the chatr and sáibán (p. 50) which Muzaffar had dropped, and soon after captured Muzaffar himself in a field. Mír Khán took him to Akbar.

362. Sarmast Kha'n, son of Dastam Khán (No. 79).

363. Sayyid Abul Hasan, son of Sayyid Muhammad Mír 'Adl (No. 140).

364. Sayyid 'Abdul Wa'hid, son of the Mír 'Adl's brother.

365. Khwa'jah Beg Mi'rza', son of Ma'çúm Beg.

366. Sakra', brother of Ráná Pratáb.

Sakrá is the son of Ráná Udai Singh, son of Ráná Sánká (died 934, A. H.). When his brother Pratáb, also called Ráná Kíká, was attacked by Akbar (p. 418, note 2), he paid his respects at court, and was made a commander of 200.

In the 1st year of Jahángír's reign, he got a present of 12000 Rupees, and joined the expedition led by Prince Parwíz against Ráná Amrá, Pratáb's successor. In the end of the same year, he served against Dalpat (p. 359), and was in the 2nd year made a commander of 2500, 1000 horse. He received, in the 11th year, a mançab of 3000, 2000 horse.

The Akbarnámah mentions another son of Udai Singh, of the name of Sakat Singh, who in the 12th year of Akbar's reign was at court. The emperor had just returned from the last war with Khán Zamán, when he heard that Udai Singh had assisted the rebellious Mírzás. He therefore resolved to punish the Ráná, and on a hunting tour in Parganah Bárí told Sakat Singh of his intentions, and expressed a hope that he would accompany him. Sakat, however, fled to his father, and told him of Akbar's intentions. This determined the emperor to carry out his plan without delay. Udaipúr was invaded, and Chítor surrendered.

367. Sha'di' Be Uzbak
368. Ba'qi' Be Uzbak } sons of Nazar Be (No. 169).

They have been mentioned above on p. 455. From the Akbarnámah (III., 628) we see that Nazar Be received a jágír in Handiah, where he rebelled and perished (36th year).

369. Yu'na'n Beg, brother of Murád Khán (No. 54).

Some MSS. have Mírzá Khán for Murád Khán.

370. Shaikh Kabi'r[1] i Chishti' [Shujá'at Khán, Rustam i Zamán].[2]

The Maásir calls him "an inhabitant of Mau." He was a relation of Islám Khán (p. 493) i Chishtí, and received the title of Shujá'at Khán from Prince Salím, who on his accession made him a commander of 1000 (Tuzuk, p. 12). He served under Khán Jahán (p. 503) in the Dak'hin as karáwal, an office which the Sayyids of Bárha claimed as hereditary in their clan. Afterwards, he went to Bengal, and commanded the imperialists in the last war with 'Usmán. During the fight, he wounded 'U.'s elephant, when the Afghán chief received a bullet, of which he died the night after the battle. The day being lost, Walí Khán, 'Usmán's brother, and Mamrez Khán, 'Usmán's son, retreated to a fort with the dead body of their relation, and being hotly pursued by Shaikh Kabír, they submitted with their families, and received his promise of protection. The 49 elephants which they surrendered, were taken by Sh. K. to Islám Khán in Jahángírnagar (Dháká), 6th Çafar, 1021. Tuzuk, p. 104.

[1] He is not to be confounded with another Shaikh Kabír, who in the 25th year served in Bengal at the outbreak of the military revolt; in the 26th year, in Kábul; and in the 32nd year against the Táríkís under Matlab Khán (No. 83). He died in the 36th year, in the war with the Jám and Muzaffar of Gujrát (Akbarn., III., 283, 408, 541, 621, where the Lucknow edition calls him the son of Mukammal Khán.

[2] Khafí Khán calls him wrongly (I, 273) Shujá' Khán and Rustam Khán.

Jahángír gave him for his bravery the title of Rustam i Zamán. The Maásir says that Islám Khán did not approve of the promise of protection which Sh. K. had given the Afgháns, and sent them prisoners to court. On the road, they were executed by 'Abdullah Khán at the emperor's orders. Sh. K., annoyed at this breach of faith, left Bengal. While on the way, he received an appointment as governor of Bihár. At his entry in Patna, he sat upon a female elephant, when another elephant suddenly came up against his. Sh. K. jumped down, and broke his neck.

The Tuzuk tells the story differently, and says that Islám Khán appointed Sh. K. to Oṛísá, and that on his way to that province the accident took place. Nothing is said about Usmán's relations.

Note on the death of 'Usmán Lohání.

There are few events in Indian history so confused as the details attending the death of 'Usmán. Khwájah 'Usmán, according to the Makhzan i Afgháni, was the second son of Miyán 'Ísá Khán Lohání, who after the death of Qutlú Khán was the leader of the Afgháns in Oṛísá and Southern Bengal. Qutlú left three sons— Naçíb Sháh, Lodí Khán, Jamál Khán. 'Ísá Khán left five sons, Khwájah Sulaimán, 'Usmán, Walí, Ibráhím. Stewart makes 'Usmán a son of Qutlú (History of Bengal, p. 133). Sulaimán 'reigned' for a short time. He killed in a fight with the imperialists, Himmat Singh, son of Rájah Mán Singh (vide p. 485, No. 244), held lands near the Bráhmaputra, and subjected the Rájahs of the adjacent countries. 'Usmán succeeded him, and received from Mán Singh lands in Oṛísá and Sátgánw, and later in Eastern Bengal, with a revenue of 5 to 6 lacs per annum. His residence is described to have been the Kohistán i Dháká, or 'hills of Dháká' (Tipárah?), the vilávat i Dháká, or District of Dháká, and Dháká itself. The fight with Usmán took place on Sunday, 9th Muharram, 1021, or 2nd March, 1612,[1] at a distance of 100 kos from Dháká. My MS. of the Makhzan calls the place of the battle Nek Ujyál.[2] Stewart (p. 134) places the battle "on the banks of the Subarnríkhá river" in Oṛísá, which is impossible, as Shujá'at Khán arrived again in Dháká on the 6th Çafar, or 26 days after the battle. According to the Tuzuk, Islám Khán was in Dháká, when the fight took place, and Walí Khán submitted to Shujá'at, who had been strengthened by a corps under [1] According to Prinsep's Useful Tables, the 9th Muharram was a Monday, not a Sunday, Tuzuk, p. 102.

[2] There are several Ujyáls mentioned below among the Parganahs of Sirkár Mahmúdábád (Bosnah) and Sirkár-Bázúhá (Mymensing-Bogra).

'Abdussalám, son of Mu'azzam Khán (No. 260); but the Makhzan says that Islám besieged Walí in the Mahalls where 'Usmán used to live, between the battle-field and Dháká, and afterwards in the Fort of Dháká itself. Walí, on his submission, was sent to court, with 7 lacs of rupees and 300 elephants taken from 'Usmán, received a title, a jágír, and was made a commander of 1000, after which he lived comfortably. According to the Maásir, as said above, he was murdered before he came to court. The Tuzuk says nothing about him.

Stewart says (p. 136) that he was taken to court by Hoshang, Islám Khán's son; but the Tuzuk, p. 115, though it has a long passage on the Mugs which he brought with him, does not mention the Afghán prisoners.

The Makhzan also says that 'Usmán, after receiving his wound at the time when the battle was nearly decided in his favor, was carried off by Walí in a litter, and buried on the road. When Shujá'at came up to the place where he had been buried, he had 'Usmán's corpse taken out, cut off the head, and sent it to court.

'Usmán is said to have been so stout, that he was obliged to travel on an elephant. At his death, he was forty-two years of age.

The Dutch traveller De Laët (p. 488, note) has the following interesting passage: Rex (Jahángír) eodem tempore misit Tseziad ghanum Chiech zaden (Shujá'at Khán Shaikhzádah) ad Tzalanghanum (Islám Khán) qui Bengalae praeerat, ut illum in praefecturam Odiae (Oṛísá) mitteret. Sed Osmanchanus Patanensis, qui jam aliquot annis regionem quae Odiam et Daeck (between Oṛísá and Dháká, i. e. the Sunderban) interjacet, tenuerat et limites regni incursaverat, cum potentissimo exercitu advenit, Daeck oppugnaturus. Tzalanchanus autem praemisit adversus ipsum (Usmán) Tzesiad chanum, una cum Mirza Ifftager et Ethaman chano (Iftikhár Khán and Ihtimám Khán[1]) et aliis multis Omerauvvis, cum reliquis copiis X aut XV cosarum intervallo subsequens, ut suis laborantibus subsideo esset. Orto dein certamine inter utrumque exercitum, Efftager et Mierick Zilaier (Mirak Jaláir—not in the Tuzuk) tam acrem impressionem fecerunt, ut hostes loco moverent; sed Osman inter haec ferocissimum elephantum in illos emisit, ita ut regii vicissim cedere cogerentur, et Efftager caederetur; Tzesiad gaunus autem et ipse elephanto insidens, ut impetum ferocientis belluae declinaret, se e suo dejecit, et crus prefregit, ita ut aegre a suis e certamine subduceretur, et regii passim fugam capescerent; actumque fuisset de regiis, nisi inopinatus casus proelium restituisset; miles quidem saucius humi jacens, casu Osmano, qui elephanto vehebatur, oculum globo trajecit, e quo vulnere paulo post expiravit, cujus morte milites illius ita fuerunt consternati, ut statim de fuga cogitarent. Regii vero ordinibus sensim restitutis, eventum proelii Tzalanchano perscripsere: qui biduo post ad locum venit ubi pugnatum fuerat, et Tzedsiatgano e vulnere defuncto, magnis itineribus fratrem (Walí Khán) et biduam atque liberos Osmanis assecutus, vivos cepit, eosque cum elephantis et omnibus thesauris defuncti, postquam Daeck Bengalae metropolim est reversus, misit ad regem Anno..... (the year is left out).

[1] The Tuzuk (p. 102) mentions Kishwar Khán (p. 497), Iftikhár Khán, Sayyid Adam Bárha, Shaikh Achhe, brother's son of Muqarrab Khán, Mu'tamid Khán, and Ihtimám Khán, as under Shujá'at's command. Sayyid Adam (the Tuzuk, p. 132, l. 4 from below has wrong Sayyid A'zam), Iftikhár, and Shaikh Achhe were killed. Later, 'Abdussalám, son of Mu'azzam Khán (No. 260) joined, and pursued 'Usmán.

De Laët says that Shujá'at Khán died from a fall from his elephant during the battle; but the accident took place some time later. The Maásir says that he was on horseback, when Usmán's elephant, whom the Tuzuk calls Gajpatí, and Stewart Bukhtah (?), knocked him over, but Sh. quickly disentangled himself, and stuck his dagger into the animal's trunk.

The Makhzan says that the plunder amounted to 7 lacs of rupees and 300 elephants.

371. Mi'rza' Khwa'jah, son of Mírzá Asadullah. Vide No. 116.

372. Mi'rza' Shari'f, son of Mírzá 'Alá-uddín.

373. Shukrullah [Zafar Khán], son of Zain Khán Kokah (No. 34).

He was mentioned above on p. 346. On the death of his father, he was made a commander of 700, and appears to have received, at the end of Akbar's reign, the title of Zafar Khán.

As his sister was married to Jahángír (p. 345, and p. 477, note 2), Z. Kh. was rapidly promoted. When the emperor, in the second year of his reign, left Láhor for Kábul, he halted at Mauza' Ahroí,[1] near Fort Aṭak, the inhabitants of which complained of the insecurity of the district arising from the predatory habits of the K'hatar (p. 456, note 2) and Dilahzák tribes (p. 487, note). Zafar was appointed to Aṭak, vice Ahmad Beg Khán (No. 191), and was ordered to remove the tribes to Láhor, keep their chiefs imprisoned, and restore all plunder to the rightful owners. On Jahángír's return from Kábul, he joined the emperor, and was in the following year promoted to a mançab of 2000, 1000 horse. In the 7th year, he was made a commander of 3000, 2000 horse, and governor of Bihár. In the 10th year, he was removed, went back to court, where he received an increase of 500 horse, and then served in Bangash. 'Nothing else is known of him.' Maásir.

From the Tuzuk (p. 343) we see that Zafar Khán died in the beginning of 1031, when Jahángír made his son Sa'ádat a commander of 800, 400 horse.

Sa'ádat Khán, his son. He served in Kábul, and was at the end of Jahángír's reign a commander of 1500, 700 horse. In the 5th year after Sháhjahán's accession, he was made a commander of 1500, 1000 horse, and was promoted up to the 25th year to a full command of 3000 horse. He again served in Kábul, and under Murád Bakhsh in Balkh and Badakhshán, was made commandant of Tirmiz, and distinguished himself in repelling a formidable night attack made by Subhán Qulí Khán, ruler of Bukhárá (19th year). Later he served in the Qandahár wars, was in the 29th year Faujdár of Upper and Lower Bangash, and two years later commandant of Fort Kábul.

In 1069, the second year of Aurangzíb's reign, he was killed by his son Sherullah. Mahábat Khán, çúbahdár of Kábul, imprisoned the murderer.

374. Mi'r 'Abdul Mu'min, son of Mír Samarqandí.

Mír Samarqandí was a learned man who came during Bairám's regency to Ágrah. Badáoní III., 149.

375. Lashkari', son of Mírzá Yúsuf Khán (No. 35).

Vide above p. 374, and for his wife under No. 351.

---

[1] The Maásir has هروئی; the Tuzuk, p. 48, هروهی. I cannot find it on the maps. It is described as a green flat spot. The K'hatars and Dilahzáks are estimated in the Tuzuk at 7 to 8000 families.

376. A'gha' Mulla' Qazwíní. Vide No. 278.

377. Muhammad 'Ali' of Jám.

Jám is a place in Khurásán, famous for its Bábá Shaikhí melons. It has given name to the two poets Púr Bahá and the renowned 'Abdurrahmán Jámí.

378. Mat'hura' Da's, the K'hatrí.

379. Sat'hura' Da's, his son.

The latter served in the 26th year (989) under Sulṭán Murád in Kábul. Akbarn., III., 333.

380. Mi'r Mura'd, brother of Sháh Beg Kolabí (No. 148). Vide No. 282.

381. Kalla', the Kachhwáhah.

He served in 989 under Prince Murád in Kábul.

382. Sayyid Darwi'sh, son of Shams i Bukhárí.

383. Junaid Murul.

A Shaikh Junaid served under Shiháb Khán (No. 26) in Gujrát. He was killed in the Khaibar catastrophe (Akbarn., III., 190, 498).

384. Sayyid Abu' Is-ha'q, son of Mírzá Rafí'uddín i Çafawí.

He was mentioned on p. 439. In the 36th year, he served against the Jám and Muzaffar of Gujrát.

His father Rafí'uddín was a learned man of saintly habits, and died at Agrah in 954 or 957. One of his ancestors was Mu'ínuddín, author of a commentary to the Qorán, entitled Tafsír i Ma'ání.

385. Fath Kha'n, superintendent of the leopards.

In 985, Akbar cured his sore eyes by blood letting, which Abulfazl describes, according to his custom, as a miracle. F. K. was in change of the hunting leopards.

There is some confusion in the histories regarding the Fath Kháns of Akbar's reign. First, there is Fattú Khán Afghán. Fattú is the same as Fath. His title is Masnad i 'Alí, and his son was mentioned above, No. 306. Secondly, Fath Khán Fílbán, who when young was Akbar's elephant driver (fílbán). He was subsequently made Amír, and according to my two MSS. of the Ṭabaqát, died in 990. But Badáoní (II, 353) mentions Fath Khán Fílbán as alive in 994, when he accompanied Qásim Khán (No. 59) on his march to Kashmír; but the Akbarnámah, in the corresponding passage (III., 512) calls him Fath Khán Masnad i 'Alí. Dowson's edition of Elliot's Historians (I, 244, 250) mentions a Fath Khán Bahádur. A Fath Khán Tughluq was mentioned under No. 187, p. 465.

386. Muqi'm Kha'n, son of Shujá'at Khán (No. 51). Vide p. 371.

He served in the siege of Asír, and in the 46th year in the Dak'hin. Akbarn., III., 825, 865.

387. La'lah, son of Rájah Bír Baṛ (No. 85).

The Akbarnámah (III., 865) calls him the eldest son of Rájah Bír Baṛ. Vide p. 405.

388. Yu'suf i Kashmi'rí'. Vide No. 228.

389. Habi' Yasa'wul.

Habí is an abbreviation of Habíb.

390. Haidar Dost, brother of Qásim 'Alí Khán (No. 187).

391. Dost Muhammad, son of Bábá Dost.

392. Sha'hrukh Dantúrí.

Dantúr, Dhantúr, or Dhantáwar, is a district near the Kashmír[1] frontier. The Tuzuk (pp. 287, 291) says that Dhantúr, during Akbar's reign, was ruled over by Sháhrukh, but now (in 1029, 14th year of Jahángír) by his son Bahádur. Bahádur was a commander of 200, 100 horse, and served under Mahábat in Bangash.

393. Sher Muhammad.

He served in 993 in the Dak'hin. Akbarn., III., 472.

A Sher Muhammad Díwánah was mentioned on p. 316. He had at first been in the service of Khwájah Mu'azzam, brother of Akbar's mother. When Akbar, in the 10th year, was at Jaunpúr, engaged with the rebellion of Khán Zamán, Sher Muhammad Díwánah plundered several places in Parganah Samánah, the faujdár of which was Mullá Núruddín Tarkhán. The Mullá had left his vakíl Mír Dost Muhammad in Samánah. Sh. M. D. invited him and treacherously murdered him at the feast. Plundering several places he went to Máler, when he was surprised by the Mullá at a place called Dhanúrí in Samánah. Sh. M. D. fled, but his horse ran against the trunk of a tree and threw him down. He was captured and executed, A. H. 973. Akbarn., II., 332.

394. 'Alí' Quli' [Beg, Istajlú, Sher Afkan Khán].

He was the safarchí, or table-attendant, of Ismá'íl II, king of Persia. After his death, he went over Qandahár to India, and met at Multán the KhánKhánán (No. 29), who was on his march to T'hat'hah. At his recommendation, he received a mançab. During the war he rendered distinguished services. Soon after his arrival at court, Akbar married him to Mihrunnisá (the future Núr Jahán), daughter of Mírzá Ghiás Ṭahrání (No. 319). Ghiás's wife had accession to the imperial harem, and was on her visits often accompanied by her daughter. Prince Salím saw her, and fell in love with her, and Akbar, to avoid scandal, married her quickly to 'Alí Qulí.

'Alí Qulí accompanied the prince on his expedition against the Ráná, and received from him the title of Sher Afkan Khán. On his accession, he received Bardwán as tuyúl. His hostile encounter with Shaikh Khúbú (No. 275) was related on p. 496. The Maásir says that when he went to meet the Çúbahdár, his mother put a helmet (dubalghah) on his head, and said, "My son make his mother cry, before he makes your mother weep," then kissed him, and let him go.

'Alí Q.'s daughter, who, like her mother, had the name of Mihrunnisá, was later married to Prince Shahryár, Jahángír's fifth son.

Jahángír in the Tuzuk expresses his joy at 'A. Q.'s death, and hopes that "the blackfaced wretch will for ever remain in hell." Kháfí Khán (I., p. 267) mentions an extraordinary circumstance, said to have been related by Núr Jahán's mother. According to her, Sher Afkan was not killed by Quṭbuddín's men, but, wounded as he was, managed to get to the door of his house, with the intention of killing his wife, whom he did not wish to fall into the emperor's hands. But her mother would not let him enter, and told him to mind his wounds, especially as Mihrunnisá had committed suicide by throwing herself into a well. "Having heard the sad news, Sher Afkan went to the heavenly mansions."

[1] Vide Cunningham's 'Geography of Ancient India,' p. 131. It lies on the Dor River, near Naushahrah.

His body was buried in the shrine of the poet Bahrám Saqqá (vide below among the poets); the place is pointed out to this day at Bardwán.

A verse is often mentioned by Muhammadans in allusion to four tigers which Núr Jahán killed with a musket. The tigers had been caught (Tuzuk, p. 186), and Núr Jahán requested Jahángír to let her shoot them. She killed two with one ball each, and the other two with two bullets, without missing, for which the emperor gave her a present of one thousand Ashrafís. One of the courtiers said on the spur of the moment—

نور جهان گرچه بصورت زن است در صف مردان زن شیر افکن است

"Though Núr Jahán is a woman, she is in the array of men a zan i sher afkan," i. e. either the wife of Sher Afkan, or a woman who throws down (afkan) tigers (sher).

395. Sha'h Muhammad, son of Masnad i 'Alí.

Vide Nos. 306 and 385.

396. Sanwalda's Ja'don.

He accompanied Akbar on his forced march to Patan and Ahmadábád (p. 416, note), and served in 989 under Prince Murád in Kábul. In 992, he was assaulted and dangerously wounded by some Bháṭí. Akbar visited him, as he was given up by the doctors; but he recovered after an illness of three years.

He was the son of Rájah Gopál Jádon's brother (vide No. 305), and Abulfazl calls him a personal attendant of the emperor. Akbarn., III., 24, 333, 435.

397. Khwa'jah Zahi'ruddi'n, son of Shaikh Khalílullah.

He served in the 31st year under Qásim Khán (No. 59) in the conquest of Kashmír, and in the 46th year in the Dak'hin.

His father is also called Sháh Khalílullah. He served in the 10th year against Khán Zamán, and under Mun'im Khán in Bengal and Oṛísá, and died in 983 at Gaur of fever (p. 376).

Father and son are not to be confounded with the more illustrious Mír Khalílullah of Yazd and his son Mír Zahíruddín, who in the 2nd year of Jahángír came as fugitives from Persia to Láhor. The history of this noble family is given in the Maásir.

398. Mi'r Abul Qa'sim of Nísháṕúr.

399. Ha'ji' Muhammad Ardistání.

400. Muhammad Kha'n, son of Tarson Khán's sister (No. 32).

401. Khwa'jah Mu'qi'm, son of Khwájah Mírakí.

He served under 'Azíz Kokah in Bengal, and returned with him to court in the 29th year. In 993, he served again in Bengal, and was besieged, together with Ṭáhir Saiful Mulúk (No. 201) in Fort G'horág'hát by several Bengal rebels. In the end of the 35th year (beginning of 999), he was made Bakhshí. Akbarn., III., 418, 470, 610.

Vide Dowson's edition of Elliot's Historians, I., pp. 248, 251.

402. Qa'di' Quli', foster brother of Mírzá Sháhrukh (No. 7).

He served in the 36th year in Gujrát. Akbarn., III., 621.

403. Fi'ru'zah, a slave of the emperor Humáyún.

Badáoní (III, 297) says that he was captured, when a child, by a soldier in one of the wars with India, and was taken to Humáyún, who brought him up with Mírzá Muhammad Hakím, Akbar's brother. He played several musical instruments and composed poems. He came to India with Ghází Khán i Badakhshí (No. 141).

Badáoní also says that he was a Langá.

404. Ta'j Kha'n K'hatriah. Vide No. 172.

405. Zainuddi'n 'Ali'.

He served in the 25th year (end of 988) under Mán Singh against M. Muhammad Hakím.

406. Mi'r Shari'f of Koláb.

407. Paha'r Kha'n, the Balúch.

He served in the 21st year against Daudá, son of Surjan Háḍá (No. 96), and afterwards in Bengal. In 989, the 26th year, he was tuyúldár of Gházípúr, and hunted down Ma'çúm Khán Farankhúdí, after the latter had plundered Muhammadábád (p. 444). In the 28th year, he served in Gujrát, and commanded the centre in the fight at Maisánah, S. E. of Patan, in which Sher Khán Fuládí was defeated. Akbarn., III., 160, 355, 416.

Dr. Wilton Oldham, C. S., states in his 'Memoir of the Ghazeepoor District' (p. 80) that Faujdár Pahár Khán is still remembered in Gházípúr, and that his tank and tomb are still objects of local interest.

408. Keshu' Da's, the Ráṭ'hor.

In the beginning of 993 (end of the 29th year), he served in Gujrát. A daughter of his was married to Prince Salím (p. 310). From the Akbarnámah, III., 623, it appears that he is the son of Rái Rái Singh's brother (No. 44), and perished, in the 36th year, in a private quarrel.

409. Sayyid La'd Ba'rha.

In 993, Sayyid Láḍ served with the preceding in Gujrát, and in the 46th year, in the Dak'hin.

410. Nasi'r Maín.

Maín (مَيْن), or Munj, is the name of a subdivision of Rang'har Rájpúts, chiefly inhabiting Sarhind and the Bahat Duáb. "The only famous man which this tribe has produced, is 'Isá Khán Maín. He served under Bahádur Sháh and Jahándár Sháh." Maásir.

411. Sa'ngah, the Puṇwar.

412. Qa'bil, son of 'Atíq.

413. Adwand
414. Sundar } Zamíndárs of Oṛísá.

415. Nu'ram, foster brother of Mírzá Ibráhím.

He served in the 31st year against the Afgháns on Mount Teráh, and in 1000, under Mán Singh in the expedition to Oṛísá. Akbarn., III., 532, 642.

Mírzá Ibráhím was Akbar's youngest brother, who died as an infant.

The above list of Grandees includes the names of such Mançabdárs above the rank of commanders of Five hundred as were alive and dead in the 40th year of his Majesty's reign, in which this book was completed; but the list of the commanders from Five hundred to Two hundred only contains such as were alive in that year. Of those who hold a lower rank and are now alive, I shall merely give the number. There are at present of Commanders of	150	53

Do.	of 120	1
Do.	of 100, or Yúzbáshís,	250
Do.	of 80	91
Do.	of 60	204
Do.	of 50	16
Do.	of 40	260
Do.	of 30, or Tarkashbands,	39
Do.	of 20	250
Do.	of 10	224

[Total, 1388 Mançabdárs below the rank of a Commander of 200.]

Scarcely a day passes away on which qualified and zealous men are not appointed to mançabs or promoted to higher dignities. Many Arabians and Persians also come from distant countries, and are honoured with commissions in the army, whereby they obtain the object of their desires. A large number again, both of old and young servants, receive their discharge, and are rewarded by his Majesty with daily allowances or grants of land, that render them independent.

As I have mentioned the Grandees of the state, both such as are still alive and such as have gone to their rest, I shall also give the names of those who have been employed in the administration of the government, and thus confer upon them everlasting renown.

The following have been Vakíls, or prime-ministers,—[1]

Bairám Khán (No. 10); Mun'im Khán (No. 11); Atgah Khán (No. 15); Bahádur Khán (No. 22); Khwájah Jahán (No. 110); KhánKhánán Mírzá Khán (No. 29); Khán i A'zam Mírzá Kokah (No. 21).

The following have been Vazírs, or ministers of finances—

Mír 'Azízullah Turbatí; Khwájah Jaláluddín Mahmúd[2] of Khurásán (No. 65); Khwájah Mu'ínuddín i Farankhúdí (No. 128); Khwájah 'Abdul Majíd Açaf Khán (No. 49); Vazír Khán (No. 41); Muzaffar Khán (No. 37); Rájah Todar Mall (No. 39); Khwájah Sháh Mançúr of Shíráz (No. 122); Qulij Khán (No. 42); Khwájah Shamsuddín Khawáfí (No. 159).

[1] Abulfazl's list is neither complete, nor chronologically arranged.

[2] The MSS. and my text have wrong Mas'úd, for Mahmúd.

The following have been Bakhshis—

Khwájah Jahán (No. 110); Khwájah Ṭáhir of Sijistán (No. 111); Maulánà Habí Bihzádí,[1] Maulánà Darwísh Muhammad of Mashhad; Maulánà 'Ishqí,[2] Muqím of Khurásán (No. 401); Sulṭán Mahmúd of Badakhshán; Lashkar Khán (No. 90); Shahbáz Khán (No. 80); Rái Puruk'hotam; Shaikh Faríd i Bukhárí (No. 99); Qází 'Alí of Baghád; Ja'far Beg Áçaf Khán (No. 98); Khwájah Nizámuddín Ahmad;[3] Khwájagí Fathullah (No. 258).

The following have been Çadrs—[4]

Mír Fathullah; Shaikh Gadáí, son of Shaikh Jamál i Kambú; Khwájagí Muhammad Çálih, descendant in the third generation from Khwájah 'Abdullah Marwáríd; Maulánà 'Abdul Báqí; Shaikh 'Abdunnabí; Sulṭán Khwájah (No. 108); Çadr Jahán (No. 194).

Concluding Note by the Translator on Akbar's Mançebdárs.

The principal facts which Abulfazl's list of Grandees discloses are, first, that there were very few Hindústání Musulmáns in the higher ranks of the army and the civil service, most of the officers being foreigners, especially Persians and Afgháns; secondly, that there was a very fair sprinkling of Hindú Amírs, as among the 415 Mançabdárs there are 51 Hindús.

The Mançabdárs who had fallen into disgrace, or had rebelled, have mostly been excluded. Thus we miss the names of Mír Sháh Abul Ma'álí; Khwájah Mu'azzam, brother of Akbar's mother; Bábá Khán Qáqshál; Ma'çúm i Kábulí (p. 431, note); 'Arab Bahádur; Jabárí, &c. But there are also several left out, as Khizr Khwájah (p. 365, note 2), Sulṭán Husain Jaláir (vide under No. 64), Kamál Khán the Gak'khar (vide p. 456), Mír Gesú (p. 421), Naurang Khán, son of Quṭbuddín Khán (p. 334), Mírzá Qulí (p. 385), Rájah Askaran (p. 458), and others, for whose omission it is difficult to assign reasons.

Comparing Abulfazl's list with that in the Ṭabaqát, or the careful lists of Sháhjahán's grandees in the Pádisháhnámah, we observe that Abulfazl has only given the mançab, but not the actual commands, which would have shewn the strength of the contingents (tábínán). In other words, Abulfazl has merely given the zátí rank (p. 241). This will partly account for the discrepancies in rank between his list and that by Nizámuddín in the Ṭabaqát, which

---

[1] Some MSS. have Hai instead of Habí (an abbreviation for Habíb).

[2] Regarding him vide Akbarnámah, III., 210. He was of Ghazní.

[3] The Historian.

[4] Vide pp. 270 to 274. Regarding Maulánà 'Abdul Báqí., who was Çadr in the fifth year, vide Akbarnámah, II., 143, may advantageously be given here. Nizám only gives mançabdárs of higher rank, viz.

In the Ṭabaqát.[1]	In Abulfazl's list.
1. KhánKhánán Bairám Khán, ...	No. 10. Mançab, 5000.
2. Mírzá Sháhrukh, 5000, ...	„ 7; 5000.
3. Tardí Beg Khán, ...	„ 12; do.
4. Mun'im Khán, ...	„ 11; do.
5. Mírzá Rustam, 5000, ...	„ 9; do.
6. Mírzá KhánKhánán, ...	„ 29; do.
7. 'Alí Qulí Khán Zamán, ...	„ 13; do.
8. Adham Khán, ...	„ 19; do.
9. Mírzá Sharafuddín Husain, ...	„ 17; do.
10. Shamsuddín Muhammad Atgah Khán, ...	„ 15; do.
11. Muhammad 'Azíz Kokultash, 5000, ...	„ 21; do.
12. Khizr Khwájah, ...	„ not in the Á'ín; vide p. 365.
13. Bahádur Khán, 5000	„ 22; 5000.
14. Mír Muhammad Khán Atgah, ...	„ 16; do.
15. Muhammad Qulí Khán Barlás,*	„ 31; do.
16. Khán Jahán, 5000, ...	„ 24; do.
17. Shihábuddín Ahmad Khán, 5000, ...	„ 26; do.
18. Sa'íd Khán, 5000, ...	„ 25; do.
19. Pír Muhammad Khán, ...	„ 20; do.
20. Rájah Bihárá Mall,*	„ 23; do.
21. Rájah Bhagwán Dás, 5000, ...	„ 27; do.
22. Mán Singh, 5000, ...	„ 30; do.
23. Khwájah 'Abdul Majíd Á'çaf Khán, maintained 20,000 horse, ...	„ 49; 3000.
24. Sikandar Khán Uzbak,*	„ 48; 3000.
25. 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak, ...	„ 14; 5000.
26. Qiyá Khán Gung,*	„ 33; 5000.
27. Yúsuf Muhammad Khán Kokah, 5000, ...	„ 18; 5000.
28. Zain Khán Kokah, 5000, ...	„ 34; 4500.
29. Shujá'at Khán, 5000, ...	„ 51; 3000.
30. Sháh Budágh Khán, ...	„ 52; 3000.
31. Ibráhím Khán Uzbak, 4000, ...	„ 64; 2500.
32. Tarson Muhammad Khán, 5000, ...	„ 32; 5000.

[1] According to MS. No. 87 of the Library of the As. Soc., Bengal, and my own MS. The occasional differences in the names are mostly traceable to Akbar's hatred, which Abulfazl shared, of the names 'Muhammad,' 'Ahmad.'

* Mentioned in the Ṭabaqát as belonging to the Umará i kibár, 'the great Amírs', i. e., probably, the commanders of 5000.

In the Ṭabaqát.	In Abulfazl's list.
33. Vazír Khán, 5000,	No. 41; 4000.
34. Muhammad Murád Khán,*	„ 54; 3000.
35. Ashraf Khán,*	„ 74; 2000.
36. Mahdí Qásim Khán,*	„ 36; 4000.
37. Muhammad Qásim Khán,	„ 40; 4000.
38. Khwájah Sulṭán 'Alí,	„ 56; 3000.
39. Rájah Todar Mall, 4000,	„ 39; 4000.
40. Mírzá Yúsuf Khán Razawí, 4000,	„ 35; 4500.
41. Mírzá Qulí Khán,*	not in the Aín; vide p. 385.
42. Muzaffar Khán,	No. 37; 4000.
43. Haidar Muhammad Khán, 2000,	„ 66; 2500.
44. Sháham Khán Jaláir, 2000,	„ 97; 2000.
45. Ismá'íl Sulṭán Duldai,	„ 72; 2000.
46. Muhammad Khán Jaláir,[1]	not in the Aín.
47. Khán i 'Alam, 3000,	No. 58; 3000.
48. Quṭbuddín Muhammad Khán, maintained 5000 horse,	„ 28; 5000.
49. Muhibb 'Alí Khán, 4000,	„ 107; 1000.
50. Qulij Khán, 4000,	„ 42; 4000.
51. Muhammad Çádiq Khán, 4000,	„ 43; 4000.
52. Mírzá Jání Beg, 3000,	„ 47; 3000.
53. Ismá'íl Qulí Khán, 3000,[2]	„ 46; 3500.
54. I'timád Khán Gujrátí, 4000,	„ 67; 2500.
55. Rájah Rái Singh, of Bíkánír and Nágor, 4000,	„ 44; 4000.
56. Sharíf Muhammad Khán, 3000,	„ 63; 3000.
57. Sháh Fakhruddín, Naqábát Khán, 1000,	„ 88; 2000.
58. Habíb 'Alí Khán,	„ 133; 1000.
59. Sháh Qulí Mahram, 1000,	„ 45; 3500.
60. Muhibb 'Alí Khán Rahtásí, 4000,	not in the Aín; vide p. 422.
61. Mu'ínuddín Ahmad,	No. 128; 1000.
62. I'timád Khán Khwájahsará,	„ 119; 1000.
63. Dastam[3] Khán,	„ 79; 2000.
64. Kamál Khán, the Gakk'har, 5000,	not in the Aín; vide pp. 456, 486.
65. Ṭáhir Khán Mír Farághat, 2000,	No. 94; 2000.

[1] He got insane. Ṭabaqát.
[2] MS., 1000.
[3] The MSS. of the Ṭabaqát also have wrong Rustam Khán.

* Mentioned in the Ṭabaqát as belonging to the Umará i kibár, 'the great Amírs', i. e., probably, the commanders of 5000.

In the Ṭabaqát.	In Abulfazl's list.
66. Sayyid Hámid of Bukhárá, 2000, ...	No. 78; 2000.
67. Sayyid Mahmúd Khán, Bárha, 4000, ...	„ 75; 2000.
68. Sayyid Ahmad Khán, Bárha, 3000, ...	„ 91; 2000.
69. Qará Bahádur Khán,[1] 4000, (?)	„ 179; 700.
70. Báqí Muhammad Khán Kokah, 4000, ...	„ 60; 3000.
71. Sayyid Muhammad Mír 'Adl, ...	„ 140; 1000.
72. Ma'çúm Khán Farankhúdí, 2000, ...	„ 157; 1000.
73. Naurang Khán, 4000, ...	not in the Aín; vide p. 334.
74. Sháh Muhammad Khán Atgah, younger brother of Shamsuddín Atgah,[2]	not in the Aín.
75. Maṭlab Khán, 2000, ...	No. 83; 2000.
76. Shaikh Ibráhím, 2000, ...	„ 82; 2000.
77. 'Alí Qulí Khán, 2000, ...	„ 124; 1000.
78. Tolak Khán Qúchín, 2000, ...	„ 158; 1000.
79. Sháh Beg Khán Kábulí, 3000, ...	„ 57; 3000.
80. Fattú Khán Afghán, 2000, ...	not in the Aín; vide p. 523.
81. Fath Khán, Fílbán, 2000, ...	not in the Aín; vide p. 523.
82. Samánjí Khán Mughul, 2000, ...	No. 100; 1500.
83. Bábú Manklí, 1000, ...	„ 202; 700.
84. Darwísh Muhammad Uzbak, 2000, ...	„ 81; 2000.
85. Shahbáz Khán Kambú, 2000, ...	„ 80; 2000.
86. Khwájah Jahán Khurásání, ...	„ 110; 1000.
87. Majnún Khán Qáqshál, kept 5000 horse, ...	„ 50; 3000.
88. Muhammad Qásim Khán,[3] 3000, ...	„ 40; 4000.
89. Muzaffar Husain Mírzá, 1000, ...	„ 180; 700.
90. Rájah Jagannáth, 3000, ...	„ 69; 2500.
91. Rájah Askaran, 3000, ...	not in the Aín; vide p. 458.
92. Rái Loṇkaran, 2000, ...	not in the Aín; vide p. 494.
93. Mádhú Singh, "brother of R. Mán Singh," 2000, ...	No. 104; 1500.
94. Saif Khán Kokah, ...	„ 38; 4000.
95. Ghiásuddín 'Alí Açaf Khán, ...	„ 126; 1000.
96. Páyandah Khán Mughul, 2000, ...	„ 68; 2500.
97. Mubárak Khán, the Gak'khar, 1000, ...	„ 171; 1000.
98. Báz Bahádur Afghán, 2000, ...	„ 120; 1000.
99. Mírak Khán Jinkjank (?), ...	not in the Aín.
100. Sayyid Qásim Bárha, 2000, ...	„ 105; 1500.
101. Rájah Kangár, 2000, ...	not in the Aín; vide p. 436.

[1] MS., Bahádur Khán.

[2] This is probably a mistake of the author of the Ṭabaqát.

[3] The same as No. 37 on p. 530.

In the Ṭabaqát.	In Abulfazl's list.
102. Muhammad Husain Lashkar Khán, kept 2000 horse,	No. 90; 2000.
103. Husain Khán Tukriyah, 2000,	„ 53; 3000.
104. Jalál Khán, the Gakk'har, 1500,	„ 170; 1000.
105. Sa'íd Khán, the Gakk'har, 1500,	not in the Aín; vide pp. 457, 486.
106. I'tibár Khán, the Eunuch, 2000.	No. 84; 2000.
107. Khwájah Ṭáhir Muhammad Tátár Khán,	„ 111; 1000.
108. Mot'h Rájah, 1500,	„ 121; 1000.
109. Mihtar Khán, Kháçah Khail, 2000,	„ 102; 1500.
110. Çafdar Khán, Kháçah Khail, 2000,[1]	not in the Aín.
111. Bahár Khán, Kháçah Khail, 2000,	No. 87 (?); 2000.
112. Farhat Khán, Kháçah Khail, 2000,	„ 145; 1000.
113. Rái Sál Darbárí, 2000,	„ 106; 1250.
114. Rái Durgá, 1500,[1]	„ 103; 1500.
115. Mírak Khán Bahádur,[2] 2000,	„ 208; 500.
116. Sháh Muhammad Qalátí,	„ 95; 2000.
117. Maqçúd 'Alí Kor,	„ 136; 1000.
118. Ikhláç Khán, the Eunuch, 1000,	„ 86; 2000.
119. Mihr 'Alí Sildoz, 1500,	„ 130; 1000.
120. Khudáwand Khán Dak'hiní, 1500,	„ 151; 1000.
121. Mír Murtazá Dak'hiní, 1000,	„ 162; 1000.
122. Hasan Khán, a Batani Afghán, 1000,	„ 220; 500.
123. Nazar Beg, son of Sa'íd, the Gakk'har, 1000,	„ 247; 500.
124. Rájah Gopál, 2000,	not in the Aín; vide p. 502.
125. Qiyá Khán, 1000,	No. 184; 700.
126. Sayyid Háshim Bárha, 2000,	„ 143; 1000.
127. Razawí Khán, 2000,	„ 141; 1000.
128. Rájah Bír Bal, 2000,	„ 85; 2000.
129. Shaikh Faríd i Bukhárí, 1500,	„ 99; 1500.
130. Rájah Surjan, 2000,	„ 96; 2000.
131. Ja'far Beg Açaf Khán, 2000,	„ 98; 2000.
132. Rájah Rúpsí Bairágí, 1500,	„ 118; 1000.
133. Fázil Khán, 1500,	„ 156; 1000.
134. Sháh Qulí Khán Náranjí, 1000,	„ 231; 500.
135. Shaikh Muhammad Khán Bukhárí, 2000,	„ 77; 2000.
136. La'l Khán Badakhshí,	„ 209; 500.

[1] MS., 1000.

[2] He died in the explosion of a mine before Chítor.

In the Ṭabaqát.	In Abulfazl's list.
137. Khanjar Beg Chaghtá,[1]	not in the Aín.
138. Makhçúç Khán, 2500, ...	No. 70; 2500.
139. Sání Khán Arlát, ...	„ 216; 500.
140. Mírzá Husain Khán, ...	„ 149; 1000.
141. Jagat Singh, 1500, ...	„ 160; 1000.
142. Mírzá Naját Khán, ...	„ 142; 1000.
143. 'Alí Dost Khán, 1000,[2]	not in the Aín.
144. Sulṭán Husain Khán, ...	not in the Aín.
145. Khwájah Sháh Mançúr Shírází, ...	No. 122; 1000.
146. Salím Khán, 1000, ...	„ 132; 1000.
147. Sayyid Chhajhú Bárha, ...	„ 221; 500.
148. Darbár Khán, 1000, ...	„ 185; 700.
149. Hájí Muhammad Sístání, 1000 (?)	„ 55; 3000.
150. Muhammad Zamán,[3]	not in the Aín.
151. Khurram Khán, 2000,[4]	not in the Aín.
152. Muhammad Qulí Toqbái, 1000, ...	No. 129; 1000.
153. Mujáhid Khán, 1000,[5]	not in the Aín.
154. Sulṭán Ibráhím Aubahí,[6]	not in the Aín.
155. Sháh Ghází Khán Turkmán, ...	not in the Aín.
156. Sheroyah, 1000, ...	No. 168; 1000.
157. Kákar 'Alí Khán, 1000, ...	„ 92; 2000.
158. Naqíb Khán, 1000, ...	„ 161; 1000.
159. Beg Núrín Khán, 1000, ...	„ 212; 500.
160. Qutlú Qadam Khán, 1000, ...	„ 123; 1000.
161. Jalál Khán Qurchí, 1000, ...	„ 213; 500.
162. Shimál Khán Qurchí, 1000, ...	„ 154; 1000.
163. Mírzádah 'Alí Khán, ...	„ 152; 1000.
164. Sayyid 'Abdullah Khán, ...	„ 189; 700.

[1] "He belongs to the old Amírs of the present dynasty. He was an accomplished man, excelled in music, and composed poems. There exists a well known Masnawí by him, dar báb i ak'hárah, on the subject of dancing girls." Ṭabaqát. Vide Akbarnámah, II., 82.

[2] "He was a servant of Humáyún. In Akbar's service he rose to a command of 1000, and died at Láhor." One MS. calls him 'Alí Dost Khán Nárangí, the other has Bárbegí, an unusual title for the Mughul period.

[3] "Muhammad Zamán is the brother of Mírzá Yúsuf Khán (No. 35). He belonged to the commanders of 1000, and was killed in Gadha." Ṭabaqát.

[4] According to the Ṭabaqát, he was dead in 1000. Vide Akbarnámah, II., 98, 108, 200, 284, 287.

He is not to be confounded with Mírzá Khurram (No. 177).

[5] Mujáhid Khán was the son of Muçáhib Khán, one of Humáyún's courtiers. He was killed at Kouhbalmír. Akbarnámah, III., 146, 168.

[6] He was the khál, or maternal uncle, of the author of the Ṭabaqát, and distinguished himself in leading a successful expedition into Kamáon.

In the Ṭabaqát.	In Abulfazl's list.
165. Mír Sharíf i Ámulí, 1000,	No. 166; 1000.
166. Farrukh Khán,	„ 232; 500.
167. Dost Khán,[1]	not in the Ain.
168. Ja'far Khán Turkmán, 1000,	No. 114; 1000.
169. Rái Manohar,	„ 265; 400.
170. Shaikh 'Abdurrahím of Lak'hnau,	„ 197; 700.
171. Mírzá Abul Muzaffar,	„ 240; 500.
172. Ráj Singh, son of Rájah Askaran,	„ 174; 1000.
173. Rái Patr Dás,	„ 196; 700.
174. Jánish Bahádur,	„ 235; 500.
175. Muhammad Khán Niyází,	„ 239; 500.
176. Rám Dás Kachhwáhah,	„ 238; 500.
177. Mír Abul Qásim,	„ 251; 500.
178. Khwájah 'Abdul Hai, Mír 'Adl,	„ 230; 500.
179. Shamsuddín Husain, son of A'zam Khán,	„ 163; 1000.
180. Khwájah Shamsuddín Khawáfí,	„ 159; 1000.
181. Mír Jamáluddín Husain Injú, 1000,	„ 164; 1000.
182. Shaikh 'Abdullah Khán, son of Muhammad Ghaus, 1000,	„ 173; 1000.
183. Sayyid Rájú Bárha, 1000,	„ 165; 1000.
184. Mední Rái Chauhán, 1000,	„ 198; 700.
185. Mír Ṭáhir Razawí, brother of M. Yúsuf Khán,	„ 236; 500.
186. Tásh Beg Kábulí,	„ 172; 1000.
187. Ahmad Beg Kábulí, keeps 700 horse,	„ 191; 700.
188. Sher Khwájah,	„ 176; 800.
189. Muhammad Qulí Turkmán,	„ 203; 600.
190. Mírzá 'Alí 'Alamsháhí,[2]	„ 237; 500.
191. Wazír Jamíl,	„ 200; 700.
192. Rái Bhoj, 1000,	„ 175; 1000.
193. Bakhtyár Beg Turkmán,	„ 204; 600.
194. Mír Çadr Jahán,	„ 194; 700.
195. Hasan Beg Shaikh 'Umarí,	„ 167; 1000.
196. Shádmán, son of 'Azíz Kokah,	„ 233; 500.
197. Rájah Mukaṭmán Bhadauriah,	„ 249; 500.
198. Báqí Sasarchí, son of Ṭáhir Khán Farághat,	not in the Ain; vide p. 408.

[1] One MS. calls his بهاري, the other سهاري. "He belonged to the commanders of 1000, and is now (A. H. 1001) dead."

[2] "He is the brother of 'Alamsháh, a courageous man, skilful in the use of arms." Ṭabaqát. This remark is scarcely in harmony with the facts recorded on p. 482.

In the Ṭabaqát.	In Abulfazl's list.
199. Farídún Barlás, ...	No. 227; 500.
200. Bahádur Khán Qurdár, a Tarín Afghán, ...	„ 269; 400.
201. Shaikh Báyazíd i Chishtí, ...	„ 260; 400.

In this above list, a few grandees are mentioned whom Abulfazl classes among the commanders of 400. Nizám, however, adds the following note to his own list—"Let it be known that the title of Amír is given to all such as hold Mançabs from 500 upwards. None of those whom I have enumerated holds a less rank."

The Historian Badáoní has not given a list of Amírs, but has compiled instead a very valuable list of the poets, doctors, learned men, and saints of Akbar's reign, together with biographical notices, which make up the third volume of the edition printed by the Asiatic Society of Bengal. With his usual animus he says (III. 1,)—"I shall not give the names of the Amírs, as Nizám has given them in the end of his work, and besides, most of them have died without having obtained the pardon of God.

I have seen none that is faithful in this generation;
If thou knowest one, give him my blessing."

Of the Mançabdárs whose names Abulfazl has not given, because the Áín list refers to the period prior to the 40th year of Akbar's reign, the most famous are Mahábat Khán, Khán Jahán Lodí (p. 503), and 'Abdullah Khán Fírúz-jang.

We have no complete list of the grandees of Jahángír's reign; but the Dutch traveller De Laët, in his work on India (p. 151), has a valuable note on the numerical strength of Jahángír's Mançabdárs, which may be compared with the lists in the Áín and the Pádisháhnámah (II., 717). Leaving out the princes, whose mançabs were above 5000, we have—

Commanders of	Under Akbar. (Áín)	Under Jahángír. (De Laët)	Under Sháhjahán (Pádisháhnámah)
5000	30	8	20
4500	2	9	0
4000	9	25	20
3500	2	30	0
3000	17	36	44
2500	8	42	11
2000	27	45	51
1500	7	51	52
1250	1	0	0
1000	31	55	97
900	38	0	23
800	2	0	40

700	25	58	61
600	4	0	30
500	46	80	114
Total, ..	249	439	563
400	18	73
350	19	58
300	33	72	not specified.
250	12	85
200	81	150
Total, ..	163	438
150	53	242
120	1	0
100	250	300
80	91	245	not specified.
60	204	397
50	16	0
40	260	298
30	39	240
20	250	232
10	224	110
Total, ..	1388	2064

The number of Ahadís under Jahángír, De Laët fixes as follows—

Chaháraspahs, ...	741
Sihaspahs, ...	1322
Duaspahs, ...	1428
Yakaspahs, ...	950
	4441 Ahadís.

Under Sháhjahán, 17 Grandees were promoted, up to the 20th year of his reign, to mançabs above 5000. There is no Hindú among them.

De Laët has not mentioned how many of the Amírs were Hindús. But we may compare the lists of the Aín and the Pádisháhnámah.

We find under Akbar—

among 252 mançabdárs from 5000 to 500 ..... 32 Hindús
„ 163 „ from 400 to 200 ..... 25 Do.

Under Sháhjahán (20th year of his reign), we have—among 12 mançabdárs above 5000 ..... no Hindús.

„ 580 „ from 5000 to 500 .....110 Do.

The names of commanders below 500 are not given in the Pádisháh-námah. Regarding other facts connected with the relative position of Hindús and Muhammadans at the Mughul court, I would refer the reader to my 'Chapter from Muhammadan History,' Calcutta Review, April, 1871.

ÁÍ'N 30 (continued).

THE LEARNED MEN OF THE TIME.

I shall now speak of the sages of the period and classify them according to their knowledge, casting aside all differences of creed. His Majesty who is himself the leader of the material and the ideal worlds, and the sovereign over the external and the internal, honours five classes of sages as worthy of attention. And yet all five, according to their light, are struck with his Majesty's perfection, the ornament of the world. The first class, in the lustre of their star, perceive the mysteries of the external and the internal, and in their understanding and the breadth of their views fully comprehend both realms of thought, and acknowledge to have received their spiritual power from the throne of his Majesty. The second class pay less attention to the external world; but in the light of their hearts they acquire vast knowledge. The third class do not step beyond the arena of observation (nazar), and possess a certain knowledge of what rests on testimony. The fourth class look upon testimony as something filled with the dust of suspicion, and handle nothing without proof. The fifth class are bigoted, and cannot pass beyond the narrow sphere of revealed testimony. Each class has many subdivisions.

I do not wish to set up as a judge and hold forth the faults of people. The mere classification was repugnant to my feelings; but truthfulness helps on the pen.

First Class.—Such as understand the mysteries of both worlds.

1. Shaikh Mubárak of Nágor.[1]

Vide p. 490. The Ṭabaqát also mentions a Shaikh Mubárak of Alwar, and a Sayyid Mubárak of Gwáliár.

[1] The notes are taken from the Ṭabáqát, the third volume of Badáoní, and the Mir-átul 'Álam.

2. Shaikh Nizám.

Abul Fazl either means the renowned Nizámuddín of Amet'hí, near Lak'hnau, of the Chishtí sect, who died A. H. 979; or Nizámuddín of Nárnaul, of the same sect, who died in 997.

3. Shaikh Adhan.

He also belonged to the Chishtís, and died at Jaunpúr in 970.

4. Miyán Wajíhuddín.

Died at Ahmadábád in 998. The Ṭabaqát mentions a contemporary, Shaikh Wajíhuddín Gujrátí, who died in 995.

5. Shaikh Ruknuddín.

He was the son of Shaikh 'Abdul Quddús of Gango. Badáoní saw him at Dihlí at the time of Bairám's fall.

6. Shaikh 'Abdul 'Azíz (of Dihlí).

7. Shaikh Jaláluddín.

He belongs to T'hanesar, and was the pupil and spiritual successor (khalífah) of 'Abdul Quddús of Gango. Died 989.

8. Shaikh Iláhdiyah.

Iláhdiyah is Hindústání for the Persian Iláhdád, 'given (diyá) by God,' 'Theodore.' He lived at Khairábád, and died in 993.

9. Maulánā Husámuddín.

"Mauláná Husámuddín Surkh of Láhor. He differed from the learned of Láhor, and studied theology and philosophy. He was very pious." Ṭabaqát.

10. Shaikh 'Abdul Ghafúr.

He belongs to A'zampúr in Sambhal, and was the pupil of 'Abdul Quddús. died in 995.

11. Shaikh Panjú.

He was wrongly called Bechú on p. 104, note 2. He died in 969. Badáoní II., 53.

12. Mauláná Ismá'il.

He was an Arabian, and the friend of Shaikh Husain, who taught in Humáyún's Madrasah at Dihlí. He was a rich man, and was killed by some burglars that had broken into his house.

13. Madhú Sarsutí.
14. Madhúsúdan.
15. Náráin Asram.
16. Harijí Súr.
17. Damúdar Bhat.
18. Rámtírt'h.
19. Nar Sing.
20. Parmindar.
21. Ádit.

Second Class.—Such as understand the mysteries of the heart.

22. Shaikh Ruknuddín Mahmúd[1] Kamángar (the bow maker).
23. Shaikh Amánullah.
24. Khwájah 'Abdushshahíd.

He is the son of Khwájagán Khwájah, son of the renowned Khwájah Ahrár. Vide No. 17, p. 322, and No. 108, p. 423. He died in 982, and was buried at Samarqand. He had been for twenty years in India, and held a jágír in Parganah جماري, in the Bárí Duáb, where he maintained two thousand poor.

25. Shaikh Músá.

He was a smith (áhangar), and performed many miracles. He died in the beginning of Akbar's reign, and was buried at Láhor. The elder brother of Shaikh Salím i Chishtí also was called Shaikh Músá; vide p. 402. Vide also below, No. 102.

26. Bábá Balás.
27. Shaikh 'Aláuddín Majzúb. Vide Badáoní III., 61.
28. Shaikh Yúsuf Harkun.

The Ṭabaqát calls him Shaikh Yúsuf Harkun Majzúb of Láhor.

29. Shaikh Burhán.

He lived as a recluse in Kálpí, and subsisted on milk and sweetmeats, denying himself water. He knew no Arabic, and yet explained the Qurán. He was a Mahdawí. He died in 970 at the age of one hundred years, and was buried in his cell.

30. Bábá Kapúr.

Shaikh Kipúr Majzúb of Gwáliár, a Husainí Sayyid, was at first a soldier, then turned a bhishtí, and supplied widows and the poor with water. He died in 979 from a fall from his gate.

31. Shaikh Abú Is-háq Firang. Vide Badáoní III., 48.
32. Shaih Dáúd.

He is called Jhanníwál from Jhanní near Láhor. His ancestors had come from Arabia and settled at Sítpúr in Multán, where Dáúd was born. Badáoní (III., p. 28) devotes eleven pages to his biography. He died in 982.

33. Shaikh Salím i Chishtí.

He was a descendant of Shaikh Faríd i Shakarganj, and lived in Fathpúr Síkrí, highly honoured by Akbar. Jahángír was called after him Salím. He died in 979. Several of his relations have been mentioned above, pp. 402, 492.

34. Shaikh Muḥammad Ghaus of Gwáliár.

Vide No. 173, p. 457.

35. Rám Bhadr. 36. Jadrúp.

---

[1] Badáoní (III., p. 151) mentions a | Zainuddín Mahmúd Kamángar.

Third Class.—Such as know philosophy and theology.[1]

37. Mír Fathullah of Shíráz.

Vide pp. 33, 104, 199, 274. His brother was a poet and wrote under the *takhallu*ç of Fárighí; vide Badáoní III., 292. His two sons were Mír Taqí and Mír Sharíf.

38. Mír Murtazá.

He is not to be confounded with Mír Murtazá, No. 162, p. 449. Mír Murtazá Sharíf of Shíráz died in 974 at Dihlí, and was buried at the side of the poet Khusrau, from where his body was taken to Mashhad. He had studied the Hadís under the renowned Ibn Hajar in Makkah, and then came over the Dak'hin to Ágrah. Vide Akbarnámah II., 278, 337.

39. Maulánà Sa'íd of Turkistán.

He came in 968 from Máwará-lnahr to Ágrah. Bad. II., 49. He died in Kábul in 970; l. c., III., 152.

40. Háfiz of Táshkand.

He is also called Háfiz Kumakí. He came in 977 from Táshkand to India, and was looked upon in Máwará-lnahr as a most learned man. He had something of a soldier in him, and used to travel about, like all Turks, with the quiver tied to his waist. He went over Gujrát to Makkah, and from there to Constantinople, where he refused a vazírship. Afterwards he returned to his country, where he died. Vide Badáoní II., 187.

41. Maulánà Sháh Muhammad.

Vide p. 106; Bad. II., 295, l. l.

42. Maulánà 'Aláuddín.

He came from Láristán, and is hence called Lárí. He was the son of Maulánà Kamáluddín Husain, and studied under Maulánà Jalál Dawwání Sháfi'í. He was for some time Akbar's teacher. Once at a darbár he placed himself before the Khán i A'zam, when the Mír Tozak told him to go back. "Why should not a learned man stand in front of fools," said he, and left the hall, and never came again. He got 4000 bíghahs as sayúrghál in Sambhal, where he died.

43. Hakím Miçrí. Vide No. 254, p. 491.

44. Maulánà Shaikh Husain (of Ajmír).

He was said to be a descendant of the great Indian saint Mu'ín i Chishtí of Ajmír, was once banished to Makkah, and had to suffer, in common with other learned men whom Akbar despised, various persecutions. Badáoní III., 87.

45. Maulánà Mír Kalán.

He died in 981, and was buried at Ágrah. He was Jahángír's first teacher. Bad. II., 170.

46. Ghází Khán. Vide No. 144, p. 440.

---

[1] Ma'qúl o manqúl, pr. that which is based on reason ('aql) and traditional testimony (naql).

47. Mauláná Çádiq.

He was born in Samarqand, came to India, and then went to Kábul, where he was for some time the teacher of Mírzá Muhammad Hakím, Akbar's brother. He then went back to his home, where he was alive in 1001. The Ṭabaqát calls him Mullá Çádiq Halwáí. Badáoní (III., 255, where the Ed. Bibl. Indica has wrong Halwání) puts him among the poets.

48. Mauláná Sháh Muhammad.

Vide No. 41. This seems to be a mere repetition. Other Histories only mention one Mauláná of that name.

Fourth Class.—Such as know philosophy ('aqlí kalám[1]).

49. Mauláná Pír Muhammad. Vide No. 20, p. 324.

50. Mauláná 'Abdul Báqí.

He was a Çadr; vide pp. 272, 528.

51. Mírzá Muflis.

He was an Uzbak, came from Máwará-lnahr to India, and taught for some time in the Jámi' Masjid of Mu'inuddín Farankhúdí (p. 434) at Ágrah. He died in Makkah at the age of seventy. Vide Bad. II., 187.

52. Maulánázádah Shukr.

53. Mauláná Muhammad.

He lived at Láhor and was in 1004 nearly ninety years old. Badáoní (III., 154) calls him Mauláná Muhammad Muftí.

Abulfazl, however, means perhaps Mauláná Muhammad of Yazd, a learned and bigoted Shí'ah, who was well received by Akbar and Abulfazl, with whose innovations he at first agreed. But he got tired of them and asked for permission to go to Makkah. He was plundered on the road to Súrat. Mir-át. But Badáoní tells quite a different story; vide p. 189.

Or it may refer to No. 140, p. 438.

54. Qásim Beg.

Vide No. 350, p. 517, and p. 106. The Ṭabaqát also says of him that he was distinguished for his acquirements in the 'aqlí 'ulúm.

55. Mauláná Núruddín Tarkhán.

Vide p. 524. He was a poet and a man of great erudition. Towards the end of his life "he repented" and gave up poetry. He was for a long time Mutawallí of Humáyún's tomb in Dihlí, where he died.

The Ṭabaqát says that he was a good mathematician and astronomer. According to the Maásir, he was born in Jám in Khurásán, and was educated in Mashhad. He was introduced to Bábar, and was a private friend of Humáyún's, who like him was fond of the astrolabe. He went with the emperor to 'Iráq, and remained twenty years in his service. As poet, he wrote under the takhalluç of 'Núrí.' He is also called 'Núrí of Safídún,' because he held Safídún for some time as jágír. Akbar gave him the title of Khán, and later that of Tarkhán[1], and appointed him to Samánah.

[1] This means chiefly religious testimony based on human reason, not on revelation. Abulfazl evidently takes it in a wider sense, as he includes the doctors in this class.

56. Náráin.
57. Madhú bhat.
58. Sríbhat.
59. Bishn Nát'h.
60. Rám Kishn.
61. Balbhadr Misr.
62. Básúdev Misr.
63. Báman bhat.
64. Bidyá niwás.
65. Gorínát'h.
66. Gopínát'h.
67. Kishn Pandit.
68. Bhaṭṭáchárj.
69. Bhagírat Bhaṭṭáchárj.
70. Káshí Nát'h Bhaṭṭáchárj.

Physicians.

71. Hakím Miçrí. Vide No. 254, p. 491.
72. Hakím ul Mulk.

His name is Shamsuddín and, like several other doctors of Akbar's court, he had come from Gílán on the Caspian to India. He was a very learned man. When the learned were driven from court and the innovations commenced, he asked for permission to go to Makkah (988), where he died.

73. Mullá Mír.

The Ṭabaqát calls him Mullá Mír Ṭabíb of Harát, grandson of Mullá 'Abdul Hai Yazdí.

74. Hakím Abul Fath. Vide No. 112, p. 424.
75. Hakím Zanbíl Beg. Vide No. 150, p. 442.
76. Hakím 'Alí of Gílán. Vide No. 192, p. 466.
77. Hakím Hasan.

He also came from Gílán. His knowledge, says Badáoní (III., 167), was not extensive, but he was an excellent man.

78. Hakím Aristú.
79. Hakím Fathullah.

He also came from Gílán, knew a great deal of medical literature, and also of astronomy. He wrote a Persian Commentary to the Qánún. In the first year of Jahángír's reign, he was a Commander of 1000, 300 horse (Tuzuk, p. 34). The Pádisháhnámah (I, b., 350) says that he afterwards returned to his country, where he committed suicide. His grandson, Fathullah, was a doctor at Sháhjahán's court.

---

[1] The title carried with it none of the privileges attached to it; vide p. 364. The Maásir has some verses made by Núrí on his empty title.

80. Hakím Masíh ul Mulk.

He came from the Dak'hin, where he had gone from Shíráz. He was a simple, pious man, and was physician to Sulṭán Murád. He died in Málwah.

81. Hakím Jaláluddín Muzaffar. Vide No. 348, p. 516.

82. Hakím Luṭfullah. Vide No. 354, p. 518,

83. Hakím Saiful Mulk Lang.

Badáoní and the Ṭabaqát call him Saiful Mulúk. Because he killed his patients, he got the nickname of Saif ul Hukamá, 'the sword of the doctors.' He came from Damáwand, and was in Ágrah during Bairám's regency. Later he went back to his country. He was also a poet and wrote under the takhalluç of 'Shujá'í'. He is not to be confounded with No. 201, p. 473.

84. Hakím Humám. Vide No. 205, p. 474.

85. Hakím 'Ain ul Mulk. Vide No. 234, p. 480.

86. Hakím Shifáí.

The Mir-át mentions a Hakím Shifáí, who in his poetical writings calls himself 'Muzaffar ibn i Muhammad Al-husainí Al-shifáí.' He was born at Içfahán, and was a friend of Sháh'Abbás i Çafawí. He died in 1037. There is a copy of his Masnawí in the Library of the Asiatic Socy. of Bengal (No. 795).

87. Hakím Ni'matullah.

88. Hakím Dawáí.

Dawáí was also the takhalluç of No. 85.

89. Hakím Ṭalab 'Alí.

90. Hakím 'Abdurrahím.

91. Hakím Rúhullah.

92. Hakím Fakhruddín 'Alí.

93. Hakím Is-háq.

94. Shaikh Hasan and 95. Shaikh Bíná.

Shaikh Hasan of Pánípat, and his son Shaikh Bíná were renowned surgeons. Instead of 'Bíná', the MSS. have various readings. The Maásir has Phaniyá, the Ṭabaqát Bhaniyá.

Shaikh Bíná's son is the well known Shaikh Hasan, or Hassú, who under Jahángír rose to great honours, and received the title of Muqarrab Khán. Father and son, in the 41st year, succeeded in curing a bad wound which Akbar had received from a buck at a deer-fight. Hassú was physician to Prince Salím, who was much attached to him. After his accession, he was made a commander of 5000 and governor of Gujrát, in which capacity he came in contact with the English at Súrat. He gave no satisfaction, and was recalled. In the 13th year (1027), he was made governor of Bihár, and in the 16th, governor of Ágrah. In the beginning of Sháhjahán's reign, he was pensioned off, and received Parganah Kairánah, his birthplace, as jágír. He constructed a mausoleum near the tomb of the renowned Saint Sharafuddín of Pánípat, and died at the age of ninety.

In Kairánah he built many edifices, and laid out a beautiful garden with an immense tank. He obtained excellent fruit trees from all parts of India, and the Kairánah mangoes, according to the Maásir, have since been famous in Dihlí.

Muqarrab's son, Rizqullah, was a doctor under Sháhjahán, and a commander of 800. Aurangzeb made him a Khán. He died in the 10th year of Aurangzeb.

Muqarrab's adopted son is Masíhá i Kairánawí. His real name was Sa'dullah. He was a poet, and composed an epic on the story of Sítá, Rámchandra's wife.

96. Mahádev.
97. Bhím Nát'h.[1]
98. Náráin.
99. Síwají.[1]

Fifth Class.—Such as understand sciences resting on testimony (naql).[2]

100. Miyán Hátim.

He lived at Sambhal. The Historian Badáoní, when twelve years old, learned under him in 960. Hátim died in 969.

101. Miyán Jamál Khán.

He was Muftí of Dihlí, and died more than ninety years old in 984. He was a Kambú.

102. Maulánà 'Abdul Qádir.

He was the pupil of Shaikh Hámid Qádirí (buried at Hámidpúr, near Multán), and was at enmity with his own younger brother Shaikh Músá regarding the right of succession. 'Abdul Qádir used to say the nafl-prayers[3] in the audience-hall of Fathpúr Síkrí, and when asked by Akbar to say them at home, he said, "My king, this is not your kingdom, that you should pass orders." Akbar called him a fool, and cancelled his grant of land, whereupon 'Abdul Qádir went back to Uchh. Shaikh Músá did better; he joined the army, and became a commander of 500. Vide below Nos. 109, 131.

The Mir-át mentions a Maulánà 'Abdul Qádir of Sirhind as one of the most learned of Akbar's age.

103. Shaikh Ahmad.

The Ṭabaqát mentions a Shaikh Hájí Ahmad of Láhor, and a Shaikh Ahmad Hájí Púládí Majzúb of Sind. Vide also pp. 106, 206.

104. Makhdúm ul Mulk. Vide p. 172.

This is the title of Maulánà 'Abdullah of Sulṭánpúr, author of the 'Açmat i Anbiyá, and a commentary to the Shamáil unnabí. Humáyún gave him the titles of Makhdúm ul Mulk and Shaikh ul Islám. He was a bigoted Sunní, and looked upon Abulfazl from the beginning as a dangerous man. He died in 990 in Gujrát after his return from Makkah.

---

[1] The Ṭabaqát mentions a few other Hindú doctors of distinction who lived during Akbar's reign, viz. Bhíraun, Durgá Mall, Chandr Sen ("an excellent surgeon"), and Illí (one MS. has Abí).

[2] As religious law, Hadís, history, &c.

[3] Voluntary prayers.

105. Maulánà 'Abdussalám.

The Ṭabaqát says, he lived at Láhor and was a learned man.

The Mir-át mentions another Maulánà 'Abdussalám of Láhor, who was a great lawyer (faqíh) and wrote a commentary to Baizáwí. He died more than ninety years old in the first year of Sháhjahán's reign.

106. Qází Çadruddín.

Qází Çadruddín Quraishí 'Abbásí of Jálindhar was the pupil of Makhdúm ul Mulk (No. 104). He was proverbial for his memory. He was attached to dervishes and held so broad views, that he was looked upon by common people as a heretic. When the learned were driven from court, he was sent as Qází to Bhroṇch, where he died. His son, Shaikh Muhammad, succeeded him. His family remained in Gujrát.

107. Maulánà Sa'dullah.

He lived at Biánah, and was looked upon as the best grammarian of the age. He was simple in his mode of life, but liberal to others. Towards the end of his life, he got silent and shut himself out from all intercourse with men, even his own children. He died in 989.

108. Maulánà Is-háq.

He was the son of Shaikh Káká, and lived at Láhor. Shaikh Sa'dullah, Shaikh Munawwar, and many others, were his pupils. He died more than a hundred years old in 996.

109. Mír 'Abdullaṭíf. Vide No. 161, p. 447.

110. Mír Núrullah.

He came from Shustar and was introduced to Akbar by Hakím Abul Fath. He was a Shí'ah, but practised taqiyah among Sunnís, and was even well acquainted with the law of Abú Hanífah. When Shaikh Mu'ín, Qází of Láhor, retired, he was appointed his successor, and gave every satisfaction. After Jahángír's accession, he was recalled. Once he offended the emperor by a hasty word, and was executed.

111. Maulánà 'Abdul Qádir.

He was Akbar's teacher (ákhúnd). Vide No. 242, p. 485.

112. Qází 'Abdussamí.'

He was a Miyánkálí,[1] and according to Badáoní (II., 314) played chess for money, and drank wine. Akbar made him, in 990, Qází-lquzát, in place of Qází Jaláluddín Multání (No. 122). Vide Akbarnámah, III., 593.

113. Maulánà Qásim.

The Ṭabaqát mentions a Mullá Qásim of Qandahár.

114. Qází Hasan. Vide No. 281, p. 498.

[1] Miyánkál is the name of the hilly tract between Samarqand and Bukhárá.

115. Mullá Kamál.

The Ṭabaqát mentions a Shaikh Kamál of Alwar, the successor and relative of Shaikh Salím.

116. Shaikh Ya'qúb (of Kashmír). Vide below among the poets.

117. Mullá 'Álam. Vide p. 159, note.

He died in 991, and wrote a book, entitled Fawátih ulwiláyat. Bad. II., 337.

118. Shaikh 'Abbunnabí. Vide pp. 173, 177, 185, 187, 272, 490, 547, note.

He was the son of Shaikh Ahmad, son of Shaikh 'Abdul Quddús of Gango, and was several times in Makkah, where he studied the Hadís. When he held the office of Çadr, he is said to have been arbitrary, but liberal. The execution of a Bráhman, the details of which are related in Badáoní (III., 80), led to the Shaikh's deposal.

Badáoní (III., 83) places his death in 991, the Mir-át in 992. 'Abdunnabí's family traced their descent from Abú Hanífah.

119. Shaikh Bhík.

The Ṭabaqát has also 'Bhík', Badáoní (III., 24) has 'Bhíkan.' Shaikh Bhík lived in Kákor near Lak'hnau. He was as learned as he was pious. He died in 981.

120. Shaikh Abul Fath.

Shaikh Abul Fath of Gujrát was the son-in-law of Mír Sayyid Muhammad of Jaunpúr, the great Mahdawí. He was in Ágrah at the time of Bairám Khán.

121. Shaikh Baháuddín Muftí.

He lived at Ágrah, and was a learned and pious man.

122. Qází Jaláluddín Multání. Vide pp. 175, 185.

He comes from near Bhakkar and was at first a merchant. He then took to law. In 990, he was banished and sent to the Dak'hin, from where he went to Makkah. He died there.

123. Shaikh Ziáuddín.

It looks as if Shaikh Ziáullah was intended; vide No. 173, p. 457.

124. Shaikh 'Abdul Wahháb.

125. Shaikh 'Umar.

126. Mír Sayyid Muhammad Mír 'Adl. Vide No. 140, p. 438, and No. 251, p. 490.

127. Maláná Jamál.

The Ṭabaqát has a Mullá Jamál, a learned man of Multán. Badáoní (III, 108) mentions a Maulánà Jamál of دلّی, which is said to be a Mahallah of Láhor.

128. Shaikh Ahmadí.

Shaikh Ahmadí Fayyáz of Amet'hí, a learned man, contemporary of the saint Nizámuddín of Amethí (p. 537).

129. Shaikh 'Abdul Ghaní.[1]

He was born at Badáon and lived afterwards in Dihlí a retired life. The KhánKhánán visited him in 1003.

130. Shaikh 'Abdul Wáhid.

He was born in Bilgrám, and is the author of a commentary to the Nuzhat-ul Arwáh, and several treatises on the technical terms (içtiláhát) of the Çúfís, one of which goes by the name of Sanábil.

131. Çadr i Jahán. Vide No. 194, p. 468.

132. Mauláná Ismá'íl. Vide above No. 12.

The Ṭabaqát mentions a Mullá Ismá'íl Muftí of Láhor, and a Mullá Ismá'íl of Awadh.

133. Mullá 'Abdul Qádir.

This is the historian Badáoní. Abulfazl also calls him Mullá in the Akbarnámah.

134. Mauláná Çadr Jahán.

This seems a repetition of No. 131.

135. Shaikh Jauhar.

136. Shaikh Munawwar.

Vide p. 106. He was born at Láhor, and was noted for his memory and learning. He is the author of commentaries to the Mashábiqul-anwár (Hadís), the Badí 'ul bayán, the Irshád i Qází, &c. When the learned were banished from Court, he was imprisoned in Gwáliár, where he died in 1011.

His son, Shaikh Kabír, was also renowned for his learning. He died in 1026, in Ahmadábád, and was buried in the mausoleum of the great Ahmadábádí saint Sháh 'Alam. Mir-át.

137. Qází Ibráhím.

Vide pp. 172, 174, 189. Badáoní and the Ṭabaqát mention a Hájí Ibráhím of Agrah, a teacher of the Hadís.

138. Mauláná Jamál. Vide above No. 127.

139. Bijai Sen Súr.

140. Bhán Chand.

---

[1] Sayyid Ahmad's edition of the Tuzuk, (p. 91, l. 11 from below) mentions that Jahángír when a child read the Hadís under "Shaikh 'Abdulghaní, whose fate is related in the Akbarnámah." This as a mistake for 'Abdunnabí (No. 118).

ÁÍN 30 (continued).

THE POETS OF THE AGE.

I have now come to this distinguished class of men and think it right to say a few words about them. Poets strike out a road to the inaccessible realm of thought, and divine grace beams forth in their genius. But many of them do not recognize the high value of their talent, and barter it away from a wish to possess inferior store: they pass their time in praising the mean-minded, or soil their language with invectives against the wise. If it were not so, the joining of words were wonderful indeed; for by this means lofty ideas are understood.

He who joins words to words, gives away a drop from the blood of his heart.[1]

Every one who strings words to words, performs, if no miracle, yet a wonderful action.[2]

I do not mean a mere external union. Truth and falsehood, wisdom and foolishness, pearls and common shells, though far distant from each other, have a superficial similarity. I mean a spiritual union; and this is only possible in the harmonious, and to recognize it is difficult, and to weigh it still more so.

For this reason his Majesty does not care for poets; he attaches no weight to a handful of imagination. Fools think that he does not care for poetry, and that for this reason he turns his heart from the poets. Notwithstanding this circumstance, thousands of poets are continually at court, and many among them have completed a díwán, or have written a masnawí. I shall now enumerate the best among them.

1. 'Shaikh Abul Faiz i Faizi'.

(Vide p. 490.)

He was a man of cheerful disposition, liberal, active, an early riser. He was a disciple of the emperor, and was thus at peace with the whole world. His Majesty understood the value of his genius and conferred upon him the title of Malikush-shu'ará, or king of the poets.[3] He wrote for nearly forty years under the name of Faizí, which he afterwards, under divine inspiration, changed to Fayyází, as he himself says in his 'Nal Daman'—

---

[1] I. e., gives men something valuable.

[2] Saints perform wonderful actions (karámát), prophets perform miracles (mu'jizát). Both are miracles, but the karámát are less in degree than the mu'jizát. Whenever the emperor spoke, the courtiers used to lift up their hands, and cry "karámat, karámat," "a miracle, a miracle, he has spoken!" De Laët.

[3] Ghazálí of Mashhad (vide below, the fifth poet) was the first that obtained this title. After his death, Faizí got it. Under Jahángír, Ṭálib of Ámul was malik ushshu'ará, and under Sháhjahán, Muhammad Ján Qudsí and, after him, Abú Ṭálib Kalím. Aurangzíb hated poetry as much as history and music.

Before this, whenever I issued anything,
The writing on my signet was 'Faizí.'
But as I am now chastened by spiritual love,
I am the 'Fayyází' of the Ocean of Superabundance (God's love).[1]

His excellent manners and habits cast a lustre on his genius. He was eminently distinguished in several branches. He composed many works in Persian and Arabic. Among others he wrote the Sawáṭi' ul-ilhám[2] ('rays of inspiration'), which is a commentary to the Qorán in Arabic, in which he only employed such letters as have no dots. The words of the Çúrat ul Ikhlaç[3] contain the date of its completion.

He looked upon wealth as the means of engendering poverty,[4] and adversity of fortune was in his eyes an ornament to cheerfulness. The door of his house was open to relations and strangers, friends and foes; and the poor were comforted in his dwelling. As he was difficult to please, he gave no publicity to his works, and never put the hand of request to the forehead[5] of loftiness. He cast no admiring glance on himself. Genius as he was, he did not care much for poetry, and did not frequent the society of wits. He was profound in philosophy; what he had read with his eyes was nourishment for the heart. He deeply studied medicine, and gave poor people advice gratis.

The gems of thought in his poems will never be forgotten. Should leisure permit, and my heart turn to worldly occupations, I would collect some of the excellent writings of this unrivalled author of the age, and gather, with the eye of a jealous critic, yet with the hand of a friend, some of his verses.[6]

---

[1] Faiz is an Arabic word meaning 'abundance;' Faizí would be a man who has abundance or gives abundantly. Fayyáz is the intensive form of Faizí, giving superabundantly. Fayyází, originally, is the abstract noun, 'the act of giving superabundantly,' and then becomes a title.

The form of fayyází agrees with the form of 'Allámí, Abulfazl's takhalluç, and some historians, as Badáoní, have maintained that the mere form suggested the change of Faizí to Fayyází.

[2] I have not seen a copy of this work. It is often confounded with the Mawárid ulkilam, because the latter also is written be nuqaṭ, without the use of dotted letters. The Mawárid was printed at Calcutta in A. H. 1241, by the professors of the Madrasah and Maulawí Muhammad 'Alí of Rámpúr. It contains sentences, often pithy, on the words Islám, salám, 'ilm ulkalám, Ádam, Muhammad, kalámullah, ahlullah, &c., and possesses little interest. Faizí displays in it his lexicographical abilities.

[3] This is the 112th chapter of the Qorán, which commences with the words Qul hua-lláhu ahad. The letters added give 1002; Faizí, therefore, wrote the book two years before his death. This clever tárikh was found out by Mír Haidar Mu'ammáí of Káshán, poetically styled Rafí'í. Vide below, the 31st poet.

[4] I. e., the more he had, the more he gave away, and thus he became poor, or, he considered that riches make a man poor in a spiritual sense.

[5] Tárak, properly the crown of the head. Putting the hand upon the crown of the head is an old form of the salám. Abulfazl wishes to say that Faizí was never mean enough to ask for favours or presents.

[6] Abulfazl kept his promise, and collected, two years after Faizí's death, the stray leaves of the Markiz uladwár (p. 491), regarding which the curious will find a notice by Abulfazl in the 3rd

But now it is brotherly love—a love which does not travel along the road of critical nicety—, that commands me to write down some of his verses.

Extracts from Faizí's Qaçídahs (Odes).

1. O Thou who existest from eternity and abidest for ever, sight cannot bear Thy light, praise cannot express Thy perfection.

2. Thy light melts the understanding, and Thy glory baffles wisdom; to think of Thee destroys reason, Thy essence confounds thought.

3. Thy holiness pronounces that the blood drops of human meditation are shed in vain in search of Thy knowledge: human understanding is but an atom of dust.[1]

4. Thy jealousy, the guard of Thy door, stuns human thought by a blow in the face, and gives human ignorance a slap on the nape of the neck.

5. Science is like blinding desert sand on the road to Thy perfection; the town of literature is a mere hamlet compared with the world of Thy knowledge.

6. My foot has no power to travel on this path which misleads sages; I have no power to bear the odour of this wine, it confounds my knowledge.

7. The tablet of Thy holiness is too pure for the (black) tricklings of the human pen; the dross of human understanding is unfit to be used as the philosopher's stone.

8. Man's so called foresight and guiding reason wander about bewildered in the streets of the city of Thy glory.

9. Human knowledge and thought combined can only spell the first letter of the alphabet of Thy love.

10. Whatever our tongue can say, and our pen can write, of Thy Being, is all empty sound and deceiving scribble.

---

book of his Maktúbát. The same book contains an elegy on Faizí's death.

MSS. of Faizí's Nal Daman are very numerous. His Díwán, exclusive of the Qaçáid, was lithographed at Dihlí, in A.H. 1261, but has been long out of print. It ends with a Rubá'í (by Faizí), which shews that the words Díwán i Faizí contain the tárikh, i. e., A. H. 971, much too early a date, as he was only born in 954. The Mir-át ul 'Alam says that Faizí composed 101 books, Badáoní estimates his verses at 20,000, and Abulfazl at 50,000. The Akbarnámah (40th year) contains numerous extracts from Faizí's works. Dághistání says in his Riyáz ushshu'ará that Faizí was a pupil of Khwájah Husain Sanáí of Mashhad, and it seems that Abulfazl has for this reason placed Sanáí immediately after Faizí. The same writer remarks that Faizí is in Persia often wrongly called Faizí i Dakhiní.

Many of the extracts given below are neither found in printed editions nor in MSS. of Faizí's works.

[1] The same realistic idea will be found in an Alfiyah Qaçídah by the old poet Imámí.

11. Mere beginners and such as are far advanced in knowledge are both eager for union with Thee; but the beginners are tattlers, and those that are advanced are triflers.

12. Each brain is full of the thought of grasping Thee; the brow of Plato even burned with the fever heat of this hopeless thought.

13. How shall a thoughtless man like me succeed when Thy jealousy strikes down with a fatal blow the thoughts[1] of saints?

14. O that Thy grace would cleanse my brain; for if not, my restlessness (quṭrub)[2] will end in madness.

15. For him who travels barefooted on the path towards Thy glory, even the mouths of dragons would be as it were a protection for his feet (lit. greaves).[3]

16. Compared with Thy favour, the nine metals of earth are but as half a handful of dust; compared with the table of Thy mercies, the seven oceans are a bowl of broth.

17. To bow down the head upon the dust of Thy threshold and then to look up, is neither correct in faith, nor permitted by truth.

18. Alás, the stomach of my worldliness takes in impure food like a hungry dog, although Love, the doctor,[4] bade me abstain from it.

---

1. O man, thou coin bearing the double stamp of body and spirit, I do not know what thy nature is; for thou art higher than heaven and lower than earth.

2. Do not be cast down, because thou art a mixture of the four elements; do not be self-complacent, because thou art the mirror of the seven realms (the earth).

3. Thy frame contains the image of the heavenly and the lower regions, be either heavenly or earthly, thou art at liberty to choose.

4. Those that veil their faces in Heaven [the angels] love thee; thou, misguiding the wise, art the fondly petted one of the solar system (lit. the seven planets).

5. Be attentive, weigh thy coin, for thou art a correct balance [i. e., thou hast the power of correctly knowing thyself], sift thy atoms well; for thou art the philosopher's stone (اکسیر اکبری).

---

[1] Literally, strikes a dagger into the livers of thy saints.

[2] My text has fiṭrat; but several MSS. of Faizí's Qaçídahs have quṭrub, which signifies incipient madness, restlessness of thought.

[3] I. e. the terror of the mouths of dragons is even a protection compared with the difficulties on the road to the understanding of God's glory.

[4] Literally, Hippocrates.

6. Learn to understand thy value; for the heaven buys (mushtarí) thy light, in order to bestow it upon the planets.

7. Do not act against thy reason, for it is a trustworthy counsellor; put not thy heart on illusions, for it (the heart) is a lying fool.

8. Why art thou an enemy to thyself, that from want of perfection thou shouldst weary thy better nature and cherish thy senses (or tongue)?

9. The heart of time sheds its blood on thy account [i. e., the world is dissatisfied with thee]; for in thy hyprocrisy thou art in speech like balm, but in deeds like a lancet.

10. Be ashamed of thy appearance; for thou pridest thyself on the title of 'sum total,' and art yet but a marginal note.

11. If such be the charm of thy being, thou hadst better die; for the eye of the world regards thee as an optical illusion (mukarrar).

12. O careless man, why art thou so inattentive to thy loss and thy gain; thou sellest thy good luck and bargainest for misfortunes.

13. If on this hunting-ground thou wouldst but unfold the wing of resolution, thou wouldst be able to catch even the phœnix with sparrow feathers.[2]

14. Do not be proud (farbih) because thou art the centre of the body of the world. Dost thou not know that people praise a waist (miyán) when it is thin?[3]

15. Thou oughtest to be ashamed of thyself, when thou seest the doings of such as from zeal wander barefooted on the field of love; since thou ridest upon a swift camel [i. e., as thou hast not yet reached the higher degree of zeal, that is, of walking barefooted], thou shouldst not count thy steps [i. e., thou shouldst not be proud].

16. If thou wishest to understand the secret meaning of the phrase 'to prefer the welfare of others to thy own,' treat thyself with poison and others with sugar.

17. Accept misfortune with a joyful look, if thou art in the service of Him whom people serve.

18. Place thy face, with the humble mien of a beggar, upon the threshold of truth, looking with a smile of contempt upon worldly riches;—

19. Not with the (self-complacent) smirk which thou assumest[4] in private, whilst thy worldliness flies to the east and the west.

20. Guard thine eye well; for like a nimble-handed thief it takes by force the jewel out of the hand of the jeweller.

---

[1] This is a pun. Mushtarí also means Jupiter, one of the planets.

[2] I. e., thou wouldst perform great deeds.

[3] Proud, in Persian farbih, pr. fat. In the East the idea of pride is suggested by stoutness and portliness. The pun on farbih and miyán cannot be translated.

[4] As a hypocrite does.

21. Those who hold in their hand the lamp of guidance often plunder caravans on the high road.

22. My dear son, consider how short the time is that the star of good fortune revolves according to thy wish; fate shews no friendship.

23. [1]There is no one that understands me; for were I understood, I would continually cleave my heart and draw from it the wonderful mirrors of Alexander.

24. My heart is the world, and its Hindústán is initiated in the rites of idolatry and the rules of idol-making [i. e., my heart contains wonderful things].

25. This [poem] is the master-piece of the Greece of my mind; read it again and again; its strain is not easy.

26. Plunged into the wisdom of Greece, it [my mind] rose again from the deep in the land of Hind; be thou as if thou hadst fallen into this deep abyss [of my knowledge, i. e., learn from me].

---

1. The companion of my loneliness is my comprehensive genius; the scratching of my pen is harmony for my ear.

2. If people would withdraw the veil from the face of my knowledge, they would find that what those who are far advanced in knowledge call certainty, is with me (as it were) the faintest dawn of thought.

3. If people would take the screen from the eye of my knowledge, they would find that what is revelation (ecstatic knowledge) for the wise is but drunken madness for me.

4. If I were to bring forth what is in my mind, I wonder whether the spirit of the age could bear it.

5. On account of the regulated condition of my mind, I look upon myself as the system of the universe, and heaven and earth are the result of my motion and my rest.

6. My vessel does not require the wine of the friendship of time; my own blood is the basis of the wine of my enthusiasm [i. e., I require no one's assistance].

7. Why should I wish for the adulation of mean people? My pen bows down its head and performs the sijdah in adoration of my knowledge.

Extracts from Faizi's Ghazals.

1. Rise and ask, in this auspicious moment, a favour at my throne; in noble aspirations I excel any army.

---

[1] The next verses are fakhriyah (boastful). All Persian poets write encomiums on themselves.

Wonderful stories are told about the mirror of Alexander the Great. He ordered his friend, the philosopher Balinás, to erect in Alexandria a tower 360 yards high. A mirror was then placed on the top of it, 7 yards in diameter and above 21 in circumference. The mirror reflected everything that happened in the world, even as far as Constantinople.

2. Expect in my arena the victory of both worlds; the banner of royalty weighs down the shoulder of my love.

3. When I cast a favourable glance upon those that sit in the dust, even the ant from my good fortune becomes possessed of the brain of Sulaimán.[1]

4. The keepers of my door have their swords drawn; where is the desire that dares intrude on my seclusion?

5. Although I have buried my head in my hood, yet I can see both worlds; it may be that Love has woven my garment from the threads of my contemplation.

6. My eye is open and waits for the manifestation of truth; the spirit of the Universe flees before the insignia of my ecstatic bewilderment.

7. I am the simple Faizí; if you do not believe it, look into my heart through the glass of my external form.

---

1. The flame from my broken heart rises upwards; to-day a fiery surge rages in my breast.

2. In the beginning of things, each being received the slate of learning [i. e., it is the appointed duty of each to learn something]; but Love has learned something from looking at me, the duties of a handmaid.

3. May the eye of him who betrays a word regarding my broken heart be filled with the blood of his own heart!

4. O Faizí, thou dost not possess what people call gold; but yet the alchemist knows how to extract gold from thy pale cheek.

It were better if I melted my heart, and laid the foundation for a new one: I have too often patiently patched up my torn heart.

---

1. From the time that love stepped into my heart, nothing has oozed from my veins and my wounds but the beloved.[2]

---

[1] The insignificance of the ant is often opposed to the greatness of Solomon. Once when all animals brought Solomon their presents, the ant offered him the leg of a locust as her only treasure.

[2] The beloved has taken entire possession of the poet. He has no blood left in him; for blood is the seat of life, and he only lives in the beloved who has taken the place of his blood. The close union of the lover and the beloved is well described in the following couplet by Khusrau—

من تو شدم تو من شدي
من تن شدم تو جان شدي
تا کس نگويد بعد ازين
من ديگرم تو ديگري

I have become thou, and thou hast become I,
I am the body and thou art the soul.
Let no one henceforth say
That I am distinct from thee and thou from me.

2. The wings of angels have melted in the heat of my wine. Woe to the world, if a flash of lightning should some day leap from my jar [i. e., the world would come to an end, if the secret of my love were disclosed]!

---

1. Two difficulties have befallen me on the path of love: I am accused of bloodshed, but it is the beloved who is the murderer.

2. O travellers on the right road, do not leave me behind! I see far, and my eye espies the resting place.

I walk on a path [the path of love], where every foot step is concealed; I speak in a place where every sigh is concealed.[1]

Although life far from thee is an approach to death, yet to stand at a distance is a sign of politeness.

---

1. In this world there are sweethearts who mix salt with wine, and yet they are intoxicated.

2. The nightingale vainly pretends to be a true lover; the birds on the meadow melt away in love and are yet silent.[2]

---

1. My travelling companions say, "O friend, be watchful; for caravans are attacked suddenly."

2. I answer, "I am not careless, but alas! what help is there against robbers that attack a watchful heart?"

3. A serene countenance and a vacant mind are required, when thou art stricken by fate with stripes from God's hand.[3]

---

1. The cupbearers have laid hold of the goblet of clear wine; they made Khizr thirst for this fiery fountain.

---

[1] A sigh indicates that a man is in love; hence if the sigh is a stranger [i. e., does not appear), the love will remain a secret. Eastern poets frequently say that love loses its purity and value, if it becomes known. The true lover bears the pangs of love, and is silent; the weak lover alone betrays his secret. Hence the nightingale is often found fault with: it pours forth its plaintive songs to the rose, it babbles the whole night, instead of silently fixing its eye on the beauty of the rose, and dying without a murmur.

[2] Salt is an antidote against drunkenness. 'Wine' stands for beauty, 'salt' for 'wit.' The nightingale is in love with the rose, but sings in order to lighten its heart; the birds of the meadows, however, which are in love with the nightingale, shew a deeper love, as they remain silent and hide their love-grief.

[3] Love is compared to robbers. The woe of love ought to be endured as a visitation of providence.

2. What wine could it have been that the cupbearer poured into the goblet? Even Masíh and Khizr are envious (of me), and struggle with each other to possess it.[1]

Ask not to know the components of the antidote against love: they put fragments of diamonds into a deadly poison.[2]

For me there is no difference between the ocean (of love) and the shore (of safety); the water of life (love) is for me the same as a dreadful poison.

I, Faizí, have not quite left the caravan of the pilgrims who go to the Ka'bah; indeed, I am a step in advance of them.[3]

---

1. How can I complain that my travelling companions have left me behind, since they travel along with Love, the caravan chief?

2. O, that a thousand deserts were full of such unkind friends! They have cleared the howdah of my heart of its burden.[4]

---

1. I am the man in whose ear melodies attain their perfection, in whose mouth wine obtains its proper temper.

2. I shew no inclination to be beside myself; but what shall I do, I feel annoyed to be myself.

---

1. Do not ask how lovers have reached the heavens; for they place the foot on the battlement of the heart and leap upwards.

2. Call together all in the universe that are anxious to see a sight: they have erected triumphal arches with my heart-blood in the town of Beauty.

---

1. Those who have not closed the door on existence and non-existence reap no advantage from the calm of this world and the world to come.

---

[1] Masíh (the 'Messiah') and Khizr (Elias) tasted the water of life (áb i hayát). Wine also is a water of life, and the wine given to the poet by the pretty boy who acts as cupbearer, is so reviving, that even Messiah and Khizr would fight for it.

[2] Vide p. 510, note 1. Fragments of diamonds when swallowed tear the liver and thus cause death. Hence poison mixed with diamond dust is sure to kill. This is the case with every antidote against love: it does not heal, it kills.

[3] Faizí is ahead of his co-religionists.

[4] The beloved boy of the poet has been carried off. Faizí tries to console himself with the thought that his heart will now be free. But his jealousy is ill-concealed; for he calls the people unkind that have carried off his beloved.

2. Break the spell which guards thy treasures; for men who really know what good luck is have never tied their good fortune with golden chains.[1]

The bright sun knows the black drops of my pen, for I have carried my book (bayáz) to the white dawn of morn.[2]

O Faizí, is there any one in this world that possesses more patience and strength than he who can twice walk down his street?[3]

Desires are not to be found within my dwelling place: when thou comest, come with a content heart.

Renounce love; for love is an affair which cannot be satisfactorily terminated. Neither fate nor the beloved will ever submit to thy wishes.

---

1. Come, let us turn towards a pulpit of light, let us lay the foundation of a new Ka'bah with stones from Mount Sinai!

2. The wall (hatím) of the Ka'bah is broken, and the basis of the qiblah is gone, let us build a faultless fortress on a new foundation![4]

---

1. Where is Love, that we might melt the chain of the door of the Ka'bah, in order to make a few idols for the sake of worship.

2. We might throw down this Ka'bah which Hajjáj has erected, in order to raise a foundation for a (Christian) monastery.[5]

---

1. How long shall I fetter my heart with the coquettishness of beautiful boys? I will burn this heart and make a new, another heart.

2. O Faizí, thy hand is empty, and the way of love lies before thee, then pawn the only thing that is left thee, thy poems, for the sake of obtaining the two worlds.

---

[1] To the true Çúfí existence and non-existence are indifferent: he finds rest in Him. But none can find this rest unless he gives away his riches.

[2] Observe the pun in the text on sawád, bayáz, and musawwadah.

[3] The street where the lovely boy lives. Can any one walk in the street of love without losing his patience?

[4] If the ka'bah (the temple of Makkah) were pulled down, Islám would be pulled down; for Muhammadans would have no qiblah left, i. e., no place where to turn the face in prayer.

[5] When a man is in love, he loses his faith, and becomes a káfir. Thus Khusrau says—Káfir i 'ishqam, maxá musalmání darkár níst, &c., 'I am in love and have become an infidel—what do I want with Islám?' So Faizí is in love, and has turned such an infidel, that he would make holy furniture into idols, or build a cloister on the ground of the holy temple.

How can I approve of the blame which certain people attach to Zalíkhá? It would have been well if the backbiting tongues of her slanderers had been cut instead of their hands.[1]

I cannot shew ungratefulness to Love. Has he not overwhelmed me with —sadness and sadness?

I cannot understand the juggler trick which love performed: it introduced Thy form through so small an aperture as the pupil of my eye is into the large space of my heart, and yet my heart cannot contain it.

Flee, fate is the raiser of battle-fields; the behaviour of thy companions is in the spirit of (the proverb) 'hold it (the jug) oblique, but do not spill (the contents).'[2]

My intention is not to leave my comrades behind. What shall I do with those whose feet are wounded, whilst the caravan travels fast onwards?

This night thou tookst no notice of me, and didst pass by;
Thou receivedst no blessing from my eyes, and didst pass by.
The tears, which would have caused thy hyacinths to bloom,
Thou didst not accept from my moistened eye, but didst pass by.

---

1. On the field of desire, a man need not fear animals wild or tame: in this path thy misfortunes arise from thyself.

2. O Love, am I permitted to take the banner of thy grandeur from off the shoulder of heaven, and put it on my own?

---

1. O Faizí, I am so high-minded, that fate finds the arm of my thought leaning against the thigh of the seventh heaven.

---

[1] When Zalíkhá, wife of Potiphar, had fallen in love with Yúsuf (Joseph), she became the talk of the whole town. To take revenge, she invited the women who had spoken ill of her, to a feast, and laid a sharp knife at the side of each plate. While the women were eating, she called Yúsuf. They saw his beauty and exclaimed, 'Má hua basharan,' 'He is no man (but an angel)!', and they suddenly grew so incontinent, that from lust they made cuts into their hands with the knives which Zalíkhá had placed before them.

[2] Fate leads you into danger (love); avoid it, you cannot expect help from your friends, they merely give you useless advice.

'You may hold (the jug) crooked, but do not spill (the contents)' is a proverb, and expresses that A allows B to do what he wishes to do, but adds a condition which B cannot fulfil. The friends tell Faizí that he may fall in love, but they will not let him have the boy.

2. If other poets [as the ancient Arabians] hung their poems on the door of the temple of Makkah, I will hang my love story on the vault of heaven.

---

1. O cupbearer Time, cease doing battle! Akbar's glorious reign rolls along, bring me a cup of wine:

2. Not such wine as drives away wisdom, and makes fools of those who command respect, as is done by fate;

3. Nor the harsh wine which fans in the conceited brain the fire of foolhardiness on the field of battle;

4. Nor that shameless wine which cruelly and haughtily delivers reason over to the Turk of passion;

5. Nor that fiery wine the heat of which, as love-drunken eyes well know, melts the bottles [the hearts of men];—

6. But that unmixed wine the hidden power of which makes Fate repent her juggling tricks [i. e., which makes man so strong, that he vanquishes fate];

7. That clear wine with which those who constantly worship in cloisters sanctify the garb of the heart;

8. That illuminating wine which shews lovers of the world the true path;

9. That pearling wine which cleanses the contemplative mind of fanciful thoughts.

In the assembly of the day of resurrection, when past things shall be forgiven, the sins of the Ka'bah will be forgiven for the sake of the dust of Christian churches.[1]

---

1. Behold the garb of Faizí's magnanimity! Angels have mended its hem with pieces of the heaven.

2. The most wonderful thing I have seen is Faizí's heart: it is at once the pearl, the ocean, and the diver.

The look of the beloved has done to Faizí what no mortal enemy would have done.

---

1. The travellers who go in search of love are on reaching it no longer alive in their howdahs; unless they die, they never reach the shore of this ocean [love].

---

[1] The sins of Islám are as worthless as the dust of Christianity. On the day of resurrection, both Muhammadans and Christians will see the vanity of their religious doctrines. Men fight about religion on earth; in heaven they shall find out that there is only one true religion, the worship of God's Spirit.

2. Walk on, Faizí, urge on through this desert the camel of zeal; for those who yearn for their homes [earthly goods] never reach the sacred enclosure, the heart.

The dusty travellers on the road to poverty seem to have attained nothing; is it perhaps because they have found there [in their poverty] a precious jewel?

---

1. In the beginning of eternity some love-glances formed mirrors, which reduced my heart and my eye to a molten state [i. e., my heart and eye are pure like mirrors].

2. What attractions lie in the curls of idols, that the inhabitants of the two worlds [i. e., many people] have turned their face [from ideal] to terrestrial love?

3. If a heart goes astray from the company of lovers, do not enquire after it; for whatever is taken away from this caravan, has always been brought back, [i. e., the heart for a time did without love, but sooner or later it will come back and love].

It is not patience that keeps back my hand from my collar; but the collar is already so much torn, that you could not tear it more.[1]

---

1. If Laili[2] had had no desire to be with Majnún, why did she uselessly ride about on a camel?

2. If any one prevents me from worshipping idols, why does he circumambulate the gates and walls in the Haram [the temple in Makkah]?[2]

3. Love has robbed Faizí of his patience, his understanding, and his sense; behold, what this highway robber has done to me, the caravan chief!

When Love reaches the emporium of madness, he builds in the desert triumphal arches with the shifting sands.

---

1. Take the news to the old man of the tavern on the eve of the 'Id,[3] and tell him that I shall settle to-night the wrongs[4] of the last thirty days.

2. Take Faizí's Díwán to bear witness to the wonderful speeches of a free-thinker who belongs to a thousand sects.

---

[1] A lover has no patience; hence he tears the collar of his coat.

[2] Each man shews in his own peculiar way that he is in love. Laili rode about in a restless way; some people shew their love in undergoing the fatigues of a pilgrimage to Makkah; I worship idols.

[3] The 'id ulfitr, or feast after the thirty days of fasting in the month Ramazán. Faizí, like a bad Muhammadan, has not fasted, and now intends to drink wine (which is forbidden), and thus make up for his neglect.

[4] Done by me by not having fasted.

1. I have become dust, but from the odour of my grave, people shall know that man rises from such dust.

2. They may know Faizí's[1] end from his beginning: without an equal he goes from the world, and without an equal he rises.

O Love, do not destroy the Ka'bah; for there the weary travellers of the road sometimes rest for a moment.

Extracts from the Rubá'ís.

He [Akbar] is a king whom, on account of his wisdom, we call zúfunún [possessor of the sciences], and our guide on the path of religion.

Although kings are the shadow of God on earth, he is the emanation of God's light. How then can we call him a shadow?[2]

He is a king who opens at night the door of bliss, who shows the road at night to those who are in darkness.

Who even once by day beholds his face, sees at night the sun rising in his dream.

If you wish to see the path of guidance as I have done, you will never see it without having seen the king.

Thy old fashioned prostration is of no advantage to thee—see Akbar, and you see God.[3]

O king, give me at night the lamp of hope, bestow upon my taper the everlasting ray!

Of the light which illuminates the eye of Thy heart,[4] give me an atom, by the light of the sun!

---

[1] Faizí means the heart.

[2] A similar verse is ascribed by the author of the Mir-át ul 'Alam to the poet Yahyá of Káshán, who, during the reign of Sháhjahán, was occupied with a poetical paraphrase of the Pádisháh-námah.

گرے شریک خوانمت ایشاہ دین رواست
زین گفتہ حاجتم بدلیل و بآیہ نیست
تو سایۂ خدائی و این ہمچو آفتاب
روشن بود کہ ہیچ یکے را دو سایہ نیست

If I call thee, o king of Islám 'one without equal,' it is but right.
I require neither proof nor verse for this statement.
Thou art the shadow of God, and like daylight;
It is clear that no one has two shadows.

[3] This is a strong apotheosis, and reminds one of similar expressions used by the poets of imperial Rome.

[4] Kings receive a light immediately from God; vide p. III. of Abulfazl's Preface.

No friend has ever come from the unseen world; from the caravan of non-existence no voice has ever come.

The heaven is the bell from which the seven metals come, and yet no sound has ever come from it notwithstanding its hammers.[1]

In polite society they are silent; in secret conversation they are screened from the public view.

When you come to the thoroughfare of Love, do not raise dust, for there they are all surmahsellers.[2]

Those are full of the divine who speak joyfully and draw clear wine without goblet and jar.

Do not ask them for the ornaments of science and learning; for they are people who have thrown fire on the book.[3]

O Faizí, go a few steps beyond thyself, go from thyself to the door, and place thy furniture before the door.[4]

Shut upon thyself the folding door of the eye, and then put on it two hundred locks of eyelashes.

O Faizí, the time of old age has come, look where thou settest thy feet. If thou puttest thy foot away from thy eyelashes, put it carefully.

A pair of glass spectacles avails nothing, nothing. Cut off a piece from thy heart,[5] and put it on thine eye.

A sigh is a zephyr from the hyacinthbed of speech, and this zephyr has spread a throne for the lord of speech.

I sit upon this throne as the Sulaimán of speech; hear me speaking the language of birds.[6]

O Lover, whose desolate heart grief will not leave, the fever heat will not leave thy body, as long as the heart remains!

---

[1] Muhrahá, pl. of muhrah, according to the Bahár i 'Ajam, the metal ball which was dropped, at the end of every hour, into a large metal cup made of haft josh (a mixture of seven metals), to indicate the time. The metal cups are said to have been in use at the courts of the ancient kings of Persia.

[2] Lovers are silent in polite society. Surmah is the well known preparation of lead or antimony, which is applied to eyes to give them lustre.

[3] The disciples of Akbár's divine faith have burnt the Qorán. They are different from the 'ulamá and fuzalá, the learned of the age.

[4] Things are placed before the door immediately before the inmates travel away. Faizí wishes to leave the house of his old nature.

[5] For thy heart is pure and transparent.

[6] Solomon understood the language of the birds.

A lover possesses the property of quicksilver, which does not lose its restlessness till it is kushtah.[1]

O Faizí, open the ear of the heart and the eye of sense; remove thy eye and ear from worldly affairs.

Behold the wonderful change of time, and close your lip; listen to the enchanter Time and shut thy eye.

What harm can befall me, even if the ranks of my enemies attack me? They only strike a blow to the ocean with a handful of dust.

I am like a naked sword in the hand of fate: he is killed who throws himself on me.

To-day I am at once both clear wine and dreg; I am hell, paradise, and purgatory.

Any thing more wonderful than myself does not exist; for I am at once the ocean, the jewel, and the merchant.

Before I and thou were thought of, our free will was taken from our hands.

Be without cares, for the maker of both worlds settled our affairs long before I and thou were made.

2. Khwa'jah Husain Sana'í of Mashhad.[2]

He held the office of a magistrate[3] and turned to poetry. He made himself widely known. His manners were simple and pure.

---

[1] Kushtah, pr. killed, is prepared quicksilver, as used for looking-glasses. The lover must die before he can find rest.

[2] The author of the Átashkadah i A'zar says that Khwájah Husain was the son of 'Ináyat Mírzá, and was in the service of Sulṭán Ibráhím Mírzá Çafawí. But in his own Díwán he is said to describe himself as the son of Ghiásuddín Muhammad of Mashhad, and the عنايت of the Átashkadah is a bad reading for غياث.

Regarding his poems the same author says, "either no one understands the meaning of his verses, or his verses have no meaning"—a critical remark which Abulfazl's extracts confirm. Neither does Badáoní (III, 208) think much of his verses, though he does not deny him poetical genius. The Tabaqát again praises his poems. The Mir-át ul 'A'lam says that 'he was in the service of Ibráhím Mírzá, son of Sháh Ṭahmásp. On the accession of Sháh Ismá'íl II, Sanáí presented an ode, but Ismá'íl was offended, as the poem did not mention his name, and accused the poet of having originally written it in honor of Ibráhím Mírzá. Sanáí fled to Hindústán, and was well received at court. He died at Láhor in A. H. 1000. His Díwán, Sikandarnámah, and Sáqínámah are well known.' Sprenger (Catalogue, pp. 120, 578) says that he died in 996. The Maásir i Rahímí states that his bones were taken to Mashhad by his relation Mírzá Báqir, son of Mír 'Arabsháh. It was mentioned on p. 549, note 6, that Faizí looked upon him as his teacher.

[3] My text has arbábí. Arbáb is the plural of rabb, and is used in Persian as a singular in the sense of kalántar, or ríshsafíd, the head man of a place, Germ. Amtmann; hence arbábí, the office of a magistrate.

1. My speech is the morning of sincere men; my tongue is the sword of the morning of words.

2. It is clear from my words that the Rúhulquds is the nurse of the Maryam of my hand [composition].[1]

3. It is sufficient that my pen has made my meanings fine, a single dot of my pen is my world.

4. In short, words exist in this world of brief duration, and my words are taken from them.

5. No one on the day of resurrection will get hold of my garment except passion, which numbers among those whom I have slain.

When thou goest out to mingle in society at evening, the last ray of the sun lingers on thy door and thy walls, in order to see thee.

---

1. In the manner of beauty and coquetry, many fine things are to be seen, (as for example) cruel ogling and tyrannical flirting.

2. If I hold up a mirror to this strange idol, his own figure does not appear to his eye as something known to him.[2]

3. If, for example, thou sittest behind a looking glass, a person standing before it would see his own face with the head turned backwards.[3]

4. If, for example, an ear of corn was to receive its water according to an agreement made with thee [O miser], no more grain would ever be crushed in the hole of a mill.

---

1. A sorrow which reminds lovers of the conversation of the beloved, is for them the same as sweet medicine.

2. I exposed the prey of my heart to death, but the huntsman has given me quarter on account of my leanness and let me run away.[4]

3. If lovers slept with the beloved till the morning of resurrection, the morning breeze would cause them to feel the pain of an arrow.[5]

---

[1] Rúhulquds, pr. the spirit of holiness. Maryam, the Virgin Mary.

[2] So strange is the boy whom I love.

[3] This verse is unintelligible to me.

[4] Or we may read kurezam instead of girízam, when the meaning would be, 'the huntsman has given me quarter on account of the leanness arising from my moulting.'

[5] There are four verses after this in my text edition, which are unintelligible to me.

O sober friends, now is the time to tear the collar; but who will raise my hand to my collar?[1]

The messenger Desire comes again running, saying[2] ....

It is incumbent upon lovers to hand over to their hearts those (cruel) words which the beloved (boy) took from his heart and put upon his tongue.

When my foot takes me to the Ka'bah, expect to find me in an idol temple; for my foot goes backwards, and my goal is an illusion.

---

1. The spheres of the nine heavens cannot contain an atom of the love grief which Sanáí's dust scatters to the winds.

2. Like the sun of the heaven thou livest for all ages; every eye knows thee as well as it knows what sleep is.

3. Huzni' of Ispaha'n.

He was an enquiring man of a philosophical turn of mind, and well acquainted with ancient poetry and chronology. He was free and easy and goodhearted; friendliness was stamped upon his forehead.[3]

1. I search my heart all round to look for a quiet place—and, gracious God! if I do not find sorrow, I find desires.

2. Zalíkhá stood on the flowerbed, and yet she said in her grief that it reminded her of the prison in which a certain ornament of society [Yúsuf] dwelled.

3. I am in despair on thy account, and yet what shall I do with love? for between me and it (love) stands (unfulfilled) desire.

Gabriel's wing would droop, if he had to fly along the road of love; this message (love) does not travel as if on a zephyr.

Whether a man be an Ayáz or a Mahmúd, here (in love) he is a slave; for love ties with the same string the foot of the slave and the freeman.[4]

---

[1] The poet has no strength left in him to raise his hand to his collar. Vide p. 560, note 1.

[2] The remaining hemistich is unclear.

[3] The Ṭabaqát calls him Mír Huzní, and says he left Persia with the intention to pay his respects at court, but died on his way to India. His verses are pretty. The Átashkadah (p. 101, of the Calcutta edition) says he was born in Junábud, and was a merchant. The Haft Iqlím says he was pupil of Qásim i Káhí, (the next poet).

[4] Ayáz was a slave of Mahmúd of Ghazní, and is proverbial in the East for faithfulness. There are several Masnawís entitled Mahmúd o Ayáz.

1. Last night my moist eye caught fire from the warmth of my heart; the lamp of my heart was burning until morning, to shew you the way to me.

2. The power of thy beauty became perfectly known to me, when its fire fell on my heart and consumed me unknown to myself.

O Huzní, I sometimes smile at thy simplicity: thou hast become a lover, and yet expectest faithfulness from the beloved.

Don't cast loving eyes at me; for I am a withered feeble plant, which cannot bear the full radiance of the life-consuming sun [of thy beauty].

Alas! when I throw myself on the fire, the obstinate beloved has nothing else to say but "Huzní, what is smoke like?"

I hear, Huzní, that thou art anxious to be freed from love's fetters. Heartless wretch, be off; what dost thou know of the value of such a captivity!

To-day, like every other day, the simple minded Huzní was content with thy false promises, and had to go.

---

4. Qa'sim i Ka'hi'.[1]

He is known as Miyán Kálí. He knew something of the ordinary sciences, and lived quiet and content. He rarely mixed with people

---

[1] Káhí, 'grassy,' is his takhallúç. Badáoní (III, 172) says that his verses are crude and the ideas stolen from others; but yet his poems are not without merit. He was well read in the exegesis of the Qorán, in astronomy, mysticism, and the sciences which go by the name of kalám; he wrote on music, and was clever in táríkhs and riddles. He had visited several Shaikhs of renown, among them the great poet Jámí (died 899, A. H.). But he was a free-thinker, and was fond of the company of wandering faqírs, prostitutes, and sodomites. "He also loved dogs, a habit which he may have contracted from Faizí." Káhí wrote a Masnawí, entitled gul-afshán, a reply, or jawáb, to the Bostán, and completed a díwán. An ode of his is mentioned in praise of Humáyún and the Astrolabe.

He is said to have died at the advanced age of 120 years.

The A'tashkadah i A'zar (Calcutta edition, p. 250) calls him 'Mírzá Abul Qásim of Kábul,' and says that he was born in Turkistán and brought up in Kábul. One of his ancestors paid his respects to Timur, accompanied the army of that conqueror, and settled at last in Turkistán. Káhí was well received by Humáyún.

The same work calls him a Gulistánah Sayyid—a term not known to me. Hence, instead of 'Mírzá,' we should read 'Mír.'

The Haft Iqlím has a lengthy note on Káhí. Amín of Rai (p. 512) says that Káhí's name is Sayyid Najmuddín Muhammad, his kunyah being Abul Qásim. When fifteen years old, he visited Jámí, and afterwards Háshimí in high position. On account of his generous disposition, a few low men had gathered round him, for which reason well meaning people who did not know the circumstances, often upbraided him. Partly from his own love of independence, partly from the indulgence of his Majesty, he counted himself among the disciples, and often foretold future events.

A low minded man must be he who can lift up his hand in prayer to God's throne for terrestrial goods.

If lovers counted the hours spent in silent grief, their lives would appear to them longer than that of Khizr.[1]

Wherever thou goest, I follow thee like a shadow; perhaps, in course of time, thou wilt by degrees cast a kind glance at me.[2]

---

1. When I saw even elephants attached to my beloved, I spent the coin of my life on the road of the elephant.

2. Wherever I go, I throw like the elephant dust on my head, unless I see my guide above my head.

3. The elephant taming king is Jaláluddín Muhammad Akbar, he who bestows golden elephants upon his poets.

---

of Kirmán, who was called Sháh Jahángír. He went over Bhakkar to Hindústán. Whatever he did, appeared awkward to others. Though well read, he was a pugilist, and would not mind to fight ten or even twenty at a time, and yet be victorious. No one excelled him in running. He followed no creed or doctrine, but did as the Khwájahs do, whose formula is 'hosh dar dam, nazar bar qadam, khalwat dar anjuman, safar dar waṭan, 'Be careful in your speech; look where you set the foot; withdraw from society; travel when you are at home.' He was liberal to a fault, and squandered what he got. For an ode in praise of Akbar, in every verse of which the word fíl, or elephant, was to occur,—Abulfazl has given three verses of it—Akbar gave him one lac of tankahs, and gave orders that he should get a present of one thousand rupees as often as he should come to court. He did not like this, and never went to court again. He lived long at Banáras, as he was fond of Bahádur Sháh (No. 22, p. 328). Subsequently, he lived at Ágrah, where he died. His grave was near the gate—my MS. calls it مدارجاي با (?). He died on the 2nd Rabí' II, 988. Faizí's táríkh (Rubá'í metre)

تاريخ وفات سال و ماهش جستم
گفتا دوم از ماه ربيع الثاني gives 2nd Rabí' II, 978, unless we read دويم for دوم. Mauláná Qásim of Bukhárá, a pupil of Káhí, expressed the táríkh by the words

رفت ملا قاسم كاهي

'Mullá Qásim i Káhí died,' which gives 988. Vide also Iqbálnámah i Jahángírí, p. 5; and above p. 209.

Abulfazl calls him Miyán Kálí. Miyánkál (vide p. 545) is the name of the hills between Samarqand and Bukhárá.

[1] Khizr (p. 556, note 1) is the 'Wandering Jew' of the East.

[2] A verse often quoted to this day in India.

1. O friend, whose tongue speaks of knowledge divine, and whose heart ever withdraws the veil from the light of truth,

2. Never cherish a thought of which thou oughtest to be ashamed, never utter a word, for which thou wouldst have to ask God's pardon!

5. Ghaza'li' of Mashhad.[1]

He was unrivalled in depth of understanding and sweetness of language, and was well acquainted with the noble thoughts of the Çúfís.

I heard a noise and started from a deep sleep, and stared—the awful night had not yet passed away—I fell again asleep.[2]

Beauty leads to fame, and love to wretchedness. Why then do you speak of the cruelties of the sweetheart and the faults of the miserable lover?

Since either acceptance or exclusion awaits all in the world to come, take care not to blame any one; for this is blameworthy.

---

1. O Ghazálí, I shun a friend who pronounces my actions to be good, though they are bad.

2. I like a simple friend, who holds my faults like a looking-glass before my face.

---

[1] Badáoní (III, 170) says that Ghazálí fled from Irán to the Dak'hin, because people wished to kill him for his heretical opinions. He was called by Khán Zamán (No. 13, p. 319) to Jaunpúr, where he lived for a long time. He afterwards went to court, and was much liked by Akbar, who conferred upon him the title of Malikushshu'ará (p. 548, note 3). He accompanied the emperor in the Gujrát war, and died suddenly on the 27th Rajab, 980. At Akbar's orders, he was buried at Sarkach, near Ahmadábád. Faizí's clever táríkh on his death is سنهٔ نهصد و هشتاد, 'the year 980.' At his death, he left a fortune of 20 lacs of rupees.

The Mir-át ul 'A'lam mentions two books written by him, entitled Asrár i Maktúm and Rashahát ul hayát, to which the Haft Iqlím adds a third, the Mir-át ul Káinát. Badáoní and the Mir-át estimate his verses at 40 to 50000; the Haft Iqlím, at 70000; the Ṭabaqát Akbarí, at 100000. The A'tash-kadah i A'zar (p. 122) says that he wrote sixteen books containing 40000 verses, and that he fled from Persia during the reign of Ṭahmásp i Çafawí. Vide Sprenger's Catalogue, pp. 61, 411, where particulars will be found regarding Ghazálí's works. Sprenger calls him Ghazzálí, an unusual form, even if the metre of some of his ghazals should prove the double z.

Badáoní relates a story that Khán Zamán sent him one thousand rupees to the Dak'hin with a couplet, for which vide Bad. III, 170, where the sar i khud refers to the غ in Ghazálí's name, because غ stands for 1000.

The Haft Iqlím mentions another Gházalí.

[2] This is to be understood in a mystic sense. Badáoní (III, 171) says that he had not found this verse in Ghazálí's Díwán.

1. In love no rank, no reputation, no science, no wisdom, no genealogical tree is required.

2. For such a thing as love is a man must possess something peculiar: the sweetheart is jealous,—he must possess decorum.

---

1. The king says, "My cash is my treasure." The Çúfí says, "My tattered garment is my woollen stuff."

2. The lover says, "My grief is my old friend." I and my heart alone know what is within my breast.

---

1. If thy heart, whilst in the Ka'bah, wanders after something else, thy worship is wicked, and the Ka'bah is lowered to a cloister.

2. And if thy heart rests in God, whilst thou art in a tavern, thou mayest drink wine, and yet be blessed in the life to come.

6. 'Urfí' of Shi'ra'z.[1]

The forehead of his diction shines with decorum, and possesses a peculiar grace. Self-admiration led him to vanity, and made him speak

[1] The Maásir i Rahímí (MS., As. Soc., Bengal, p. 537) says that Urfí's name was Khwájah Sayyidí (سیدی) Muhammad. The takhalluç 'Urfí' has a reference to the occupation of his father, who as Dárogah to the Magistrate of Shíráz had to look after Shar'í and 'Urfí matters. He went by sea to the Dak'hin, where, according to the Haft Iqlím, his talent was not recognized; he therefore went to Fathpúr Síkrí, where Hakím Abul Fath of Gílán (No. 112, p. 424) took an interest in him. When the Hakím died, 'Urfí became an attendant on 'Abdurrahím KhánKhánán, and was also introduced at court. He died at Láhor, in Shawwál 999, A. H., according to the Haft Iqlím and several MSS. of the Ṭabaqát, of dysentry (is-hál). He bequeathed his papers to his patron, in all about 14000 verses, which at the KhánKhánán's order were arranged by Sirájá of Isfahán. He was at his death only thirty-six years old. The body was nearly thirty years later taken away by the poet Çábir of Içfahán and buried in holy ground at Najaf (Sarkhush). His early death, in accordance with an idea still current in the East, was ascribed to the abuse he had heaped on the ancients; hence also the táríkh of his death—

عرفی جوانه‌مرگ شدی

'Urfí, thou didst die young.' The first edition of his poetical works contained 26 Qaçídahs, 270 Ghazals, 700 Qaṭ'ahs and Rubá'ís; vide also Sprenger's Catalogue, p. 529.

The Tazkirah by 'Alí Qulí Khán i Dághistání calls 'Urfí Jamáluddín, and says that he was much liked by Prince Salím, towards whom 'Urfí's attachment was of a criminal nature, and that he had been poisoned by people that envied him.

'Urfí was a man of high talent; but he was disliked for his vanity. Badáoní says (III, 285), "His poems sell in all bazars, unlike those of Faizí, who spent the revenue of his jágír in getting copies made of his verses; but yet no one had a copy of them, unless it was a present made by Faizí." Hakím Háziq (p. 474) preferred 'Urfí's ghazals to his odes. His Masnawí, Majma' ul Abkár, is often wrongly called Majma 'ul Afkár.

One day, 'Urfí called on Faizí, whom he found surrounded by his dogs, and asked him to tell him the names of "the well-bred children of his family." Faizí replied, "Their names are 'urfí" (i. e., well-known). "Mubárak" (God bless us), rejoined 'Urfí, to the intense disgust of Faizí whose father's name was Mubárak.

Sprenger (Catalogue, p. 126) states on lightly of the older classics. The bud of his merits withered away before it could develop itself.

Cling to the hem of a heart which saddens at the plaintive voice of the nightingale; for that heart knows something.

If some one cast a doubt on the loftiness of the cypress, I melt away from envy; for loftiness is so desirable that even a doubtful mention of it creates envy.

He who is intimate with the morning zephyr, knows that the scent of the Jasmin remains notwithstanding the appearance of chill autumn.

My wounded heart cannot endure a healing balm; my turban's fold cannot endure the shadow of a blooming rose.

---

1. It is incumbent on me, when in society, to talk low; for the sensible people in society are stupid, and I speak but Arabic.

2. Remain within the boundary of thy ignorance, unless you be a Plato; an intermediate position is mirage and raving thirst.

Do not say that those who sing of love are silent: their song is too fine, and the audience have cotton in their ears.

The more I exert myself, the more I come into trouble; if I am calm, the ocean's centre is at the shore.

There is some hope that people will pardon the strange ways of 'Urfí for the homeliness of his well known poems.

No one has yet come into the world that can bear the grief of love; for every one has through love lost the colour of his face and turned pale.

---

the authority of the Tazkirah Hameshah-Bahár that 'Urfí's name was Khwájah Çaidí (صیدی), a mistake for Sayyidí. The Átashkadah also gives the name only half correctly, Sayyid Muhammad. Taqí's note (loc. cit., p. 37) is wrong in the dates.

There exist several lithographs of 'Urfí's Odes. The Calcutta printed edition of 1254, A. H., contains a Commentary by Ahmad ibn i 'Abdurrahím (author of the Arabic Dictionary Muntahal Arab) of Çafípúr.

O 'Urfí, live with good and wicked men in such a manner, that Muhammadans may wash thee (after thy death) in Zamzam water, and Hindús may burn thee.

If thou wishest to see thy faults clearly, lie for a moment in ambush for thyself, as if thou didst not know thee.

'Urfí has done well to stand quietly before a closed door, which no one would open. He did not knock at another door.

To pine for the arrival of young spring shews narrowness of mind in me; for there are hundreds of pleasures on the heap of rubbish in the backyard, which are not met with in a rose garden.

My heart is sinking as the colour on Zalíkhá's cheek when she saw herself alone; and my grief has become the talk of the market like the suspicion cast on Yúsuf.

---

1. On the day when all shall give an account of their deeds, and when the virtues of both Shaikh and Bráhman shall be scrutinized,

2. Not a grain shall be taken of that which thou hast reaped, but a harvest shall be demanded of that which thou hast not sown.

---

1. O thou who hast experienced happiness and trouble from good and bad events, and who art in consequence full of thanks and sometimes full of complaints,

2. Do not take high ground, so that thy efforts may not be in vain; be rather (yielding) like grass that stands in the way of the wind, or like a bundle of grass which others carry off on their shoulders.

---

1. O 'Urfí, for what reason is thy heart so joyful? Is it for the few verses which thou hast left behind?

2. Alas! thou losest even that which thou leavest behind as something once belonging to thee. Thou oughtest to have taken it with thee; but hast thou taken it with thee?

7. Mailí' of Hara't.

His name was Mírzá Qulí.[1] He was of Turkish extraction, and lived in the society of gay people.

---

[1] The Nafáis mentions 979, and Taqí 983, as the year in which Mailí came to India (Sprenger, Catalogue, pp. 43, 54). The A'tashkadah says, he was brought

Since I have become famous through thy love, I shun all whom I see; for I am afraid lest my going to any one might put thee into his thoughts.

I die and feel pity for such as remain alive; for thou art accustomed to commit such cruelties as thou hast done to me.

---

1. My heart derived so much pleasure from seeing thee, that fate—God forbid, that it should think of revenge.

2. Thou art neither a friend nor a stranger to me; what name is man to give to such a relation?

Thou knowest that love to thee does not pass away with the lives of thy lovers; for thou passest by the tombs of those whom thy love slew, and yet thou behavest coquettishly.

When thou biddest me go, cast one glance upon me; for from carefulness people tie a string round the foot of a bird, even if it were so tame as to eat from the hand.

My last breath is at hand! O enemy, let me have him [the lovely boy] but for a moment, so that with thousands of pangs I may restore him to thee.

---

1. I promised myself that I would be patient, and did not go to him [the boy]; I had hopes to be content with loneliness.

2. But the woe of separation kills me, and whispers every moment to me, "This is the punishment of him who puts confidence in his patience."

---

1. Thy clients have no cause to ask thee for anything; for every one of them has from a beggar become a Crœsus in wealth.

2. But thou findest such a pleasure in granting the prayers of beggars, that they make requests to thee by way of flattery.

8. Ja'far Beg of Qazwi'n.

He is a man of profound thought, has learnt a good deal, and describes very well the events of past ages. As accountant he is unrivalled.

---

up in Mashhad. According to Dághistáni, he belonged to the Jaláir clan, lived under Ṭahmásp, and was in the service of Sulṭán Ibráhím Mírzá, after whose death he went to India. The Ṭabaqát i Akbarí says that he was in the service of Naurang Khán (pp. 334, 528); and Badáoní adds that his patron for some suspicion ordered him to be poisoned. He was in Málwá when he was killed.

He is much praised for his poetry; the author of the A'tashkadah says that he was one of his favorite poets.

From his knowledge of human nature he leans to mirth and is fond of jokes. He was so fortunate as to obtain the title of Áçaf Khán, and was admitted as a disciple of his Majesty.[1]

I am jealous of the zephyr, but I gladden my heart with the thought that this is a rose garden, and no one can close the door in the face of the wind.

When the town could not contain the sorrows of my heart, I thought that the open country was created for my heart.

I am prepared for another interview to-night; for I have patched up my torn, torn heart.

It is the fault of my love that he [the lovely boy] is my enemy. What is love worth, if it makes no impression?

I admire the insight of my heart for its familiarity with beauties whose ways are so strange.

He came and made me confused; but he did not remain long enough for me to introduce my heart to consolation.

As I am entirely at fault, do not threaten me with revenge; for the pleasure of taking revenge on thee makes me bid my fault defiance.

---

1. Dost thou shew me thy face so boldly, Happiness? Wait a moment, that I may announce my love-grief.

2. Ja'far came to-day so broken-hearted to thy house, that the hearts of the stones burnt on seeing his extraordinary condition.

---

1. Whoever has been in thy company is for a night, is the companion of my sad fate.

2. Ja'far has found the road to the street of the sweetheart so difficult, that he can no more rise to his feet.

---

[1] His biography was given above on p. 411, No. 98. Vide also Iqbálnámah i Jahángírí, p. 5; Dabistán, p. 387. His takhalluç was Ja'far, as may be seen from Abulfazl's extracts.

The Masnawí by Ja'far mentioned by Sprenger (Catalogue, p. 444) may belong to Mírzá Zainul 'Ábidín, regarding whom vide above p. 412, and Sprenger, loc. cit., p. 120, where for 1212 read 1021, A. H.

The morning zephyr, I think, wafts to me the scent of a certain sweetheart, because Jacob keeps his closed eye turned towards a caravan.[1]

A new rose must have opened out in the garden; for last night the nightingale did not go asleep till the morning.

9. Khwa'jah Husain of Marw.[2]

He possessed many excellent qualities, and sold his encomiums at a high price. He lived at the Court of Humáyún, and was also during this reign highly favoured.

1. The realms of speech are in my possession, the banker of speech is the jeweller of my pearl strings.

2. Creation's preface is a sheet of my book, the secrets of both worlds are in the nib of my pen.

10. Haya'ti' of Gi'la'n.[3]

A stream from the ocean of thought passes by his house; correctness and equity are visible on his forehead. Serenity and truth are in him united; he is free from the bad qualities of poets.

1. Whenever you speak, watch yourself; repentance follows every word which gladdens no heart.

2. You do not require the swift wing of a bird; but since fortune is so, borrow the foot of the ant and flee.

---

[1] Jacob had become blind from weeping over the loss of Joseph. One day he smelled the scent of Joseph's coat, which a messenger was bringing from Egypt. When the coat was applied to his eyes, he recovered his sight.

[2] Khwájah Husain was a pupil of Mauláná 'Içámuddín Ibráhím and the renowned Ibn Hajar of Makkah (Haft Iqlím). Abulfazl's remark that he sold his encomiums at a high price seems to refer to Husain's Odes on the birth of Jahángír and Prince Murád, given in full by Badáoní (II, pp. 120, 132), for which the Khwájah got two lacs of tankahs. The odes are peculiar, as each hemistich is a chronogram.

[3] The Maásir i Rahímí says that Mullá Hayátí was born at Rasht in Gílán, and belonged to the ádmizádagán, i. e. common people, of the place. To better his circumstances, he went to India, was introduced by Hakím Abul Fath i Gílání (No. 112, p. 424) at Court, got a jágír, and was liked by Akbar. He joined the KhánKhánán in the Dak'hin wars and remained in his service, living chiefly at Burhánpúr, where he built a villa and a mosque, which, according to the Mir-át ul 'Alam, was called Masjid i Mullá Hayáti. He was still alive in 1024, when the Maásir i Rahímí was composed.

The Ṭabaqát and Badáoní praise his poems, and say that he belonged to the ahl i yárán i dardmandán, i. e., he was a man of feeling and sympathy. Sprenger, (Catalogue, p. 58) translates this, "He was a friend of Dardmand."

A love sick man is so entangled in his grief, that even the wish of getting rid of it does him harm.

Whatever you see is, in some way or other, a highway robber. I know no man that has not been way-laid.

---

1. This is the thoroughfare of love, it is no open market; keep your lips closed, no talk is required.

2. I, too, have been among the heathens, but have seen no waist worthy of the sacred thread.

3. Covetous people are, from covetousness, each other's enemies; in friendship alone there are no rivals.

---

1. Let every thorn which people sow in thy road, bloom in the lustre of thy smiles.

2. Say nothing, and heal the wound of the heart with poisoned arrows.

---

1. My love makes me delay over everything, even if it were a scent in the house, or a colour in the bazar.

2. Thou knowest what people call me—'mad from shame, and dejected from baseness.'

Since everything which I mended has broken again, my heart has gone altogether from trying to patch it.

---

1. I suffer thy cruelties and die; perhaps I thus complete my faithfulness.

2. Thou canst not deprive me of the means of union with thee, unless thou shuttest the zephyr in a box.[1]

This turf and this field have a tinge of madness; insanity and drunkenness have to-day a good omen.

---

1. Love-grief is followed by an increase of sorrow, the desire to meet him is followed by bloody tears.

2. Neither the one nor the other, however, is the means of attaining love's perfection; be sound in mind, or else, completely mad.

---

[1] Because the zephyr wafts the breath of the beloved boy to the poet.

1. I am neither as high as the Pleiades, nor as low as the abyss; I neither cherish the old grief, nor do I possess a new thought.

2. If I am not the wailing nightingale, there is yet this excellence left, I am the moth and am pledged to the flame.[1]

---

1. I am the heart-grief of my dark nights, I am the misfortune of the day of my fate.

2. Perhaps I may go a step back to myself; it is a long time that I have been waiting for myself.

11. Shikebi' of Ispaha'n.

He possesses taste and writes well. He is acquainted with chronology and the ordinary sciences; and the purity of his nature led him to philosophical independence.[2]

I have lived through nights of lonely sorrow, and am still alive; I had no idea of the tenaciousness of my life.

Grief, not mirth, is my ware. Why dost thou wish to know its price? I know that thou wilt not buy it, and that I shall not sell it.

---

[1] The love of the moth for the candle seems to be a very ancient idea. Psalm xxxix, 11, Thou rebukest man and causest his delight to vanish as the moth vanishes in its delight, viz. the fire, where the word Khamod seems to have been purposely chosen to allude to the love of the moth. The passage in Sa'dí's preface to the Gulistán

عاشقان کشتگان معشوقند

برنیاید ز کشتگان آواز

'The lovers are killed by the beloved, no voice rises from the killed ones'—is also an allusion to the love of the moth.

[2] The Maásir i Rahímí says that Mullá Shikebí was the son of Zahíruddín 'Abdullah Imámí of Içfahán. He studied under Amír Taqíuddín Muhammad of Shíráz, but left when young his native town for Harát, and became acquainted with the poets Sanáí, Mailí, and Walí Dasht Bayází. When he was well known as a poet, he returned for a short time to Shíráz, after which he went to India, and became the constant attendant of the KhánKhánán.

The Mir-át ul 'Álam says that later he fell out with his patron, and went from the Dak'hin to Ágrah, where Mahábat Khán introduced him at court. He asked for permission to return to Irán; but Jahángír would not let him go, and appointed him Çadr of Dihlí. He died there at the age of sixty-seven in 1023, the tárikh of his death being صدر دهلي رفت. Another Chronogram شکیبی رفت gives only 1022. For his Sáqínámah, 'Abdurrahím gave him 18000, or, according to the Haft Iqlím, 10000 Rupees as a present. He wrote several other poems in praise of his patron. The Maásir ul-Umará mentions a Masnawí on the conquest of T'hat'hah (A. H. 999-1000), for which Jání Beg and 'Abdurrahím gave him one thousand Ashrafís. I do not know whether this Masnáwí is the same as the Masnawí written by Shikebí in the Khusrau Shírín metre.

On account of the jealousy of the watcher I had resolved to stay away from thy feast. I was deceived by my bad luck and called it jealousy, and stayed away.

O God, bestow upon my wares a market from the unseen world! I would sell my heart for a single interview; vouchsafe a buyer!

Thou art warm with my love; and in order to keep off bad omens, I sit over the fire, and burn myself as wild rue.[1]

I uprooted my heart from my being, but the burden of my heart did not leave my being. I severed my head from my body, but my shoulders did not leave my collar.

---

1. To-day, when the cup of union with thee is full to the brim, I see Neglect sharpen the sword, in order to kill me.

2. Thou dost not dwell in my heart and hast girded thy loins with hatred towards me,—ruin upon the house which raises enemies!

---

1. The plaintive song of my bird [heart] turns the cage to a rosebed; the sigh of the heart in which thou art, turns to a rosebed.

2. When thy beauty shines forth, covetousness also is love; straw, when going up in flames, turns to a rosebed.

---

1. Happy are we if we come to thee, through thee; like blind men we search for thee, through thee.

2. Increase thy cruelties till the tenaciousness of my life takes revenge on me, and thy cold heart on thee.

---

1. The world is a game, the winning of which is a loss; playing cleverly consists in being satisfied with a low throw.

2. This earthly life is like a couple of dice—you take them up, in order to throw them down again.

---

[1] Sipand. People even now-a-days put the seeds of wild rue on heated iron plates. The smoke is said to drive away evil spirits. Vide p. 139, note 1.

12. Ani'si' Sha'mlu'.[1]

His real name is Yol Qulí. He is a man of a happy heart and of pure manners; he is brave and sincere.

In seeking after thee, a condition is put upon us miserable lovers, viz. that our feet remain unacquainted with the hems of our garments.[2]

It is possible to travel along this road, even when one lightning only flashes. We blind lovers are looking for the ray of thy lamp.

If I remain restless even after my death, it is no wonder; for toil undergone during the day makes the sleep of the night restless.

---

1. How can the thought of thy love end with my death? for love is not like wine, which flows from the vessel when it is broken.

2. The lover would not snatch his life from the hand of death, though he could. Why should the owner of the harvest take the grain from the ant?

---

1. The rosebed of time does not contain a songster like me, and yet it is from the corner of my cage that I have continually to sing.

2. In order satisfactorily to settle my fortune, I spent a life in hard work; but with all my mastership I have not been able to draw silk from reeds.

The nature of love resembles that of the magnet; for love first attracts the shaft, in order to wound the heart when it wishes to get rid of the point.

---

[1] The Maásir i Rahímí says that Yol Qulí Beg belonged to the distinguished clan of the Shámlú Turkmáns. He was a good soldier, and served as librarian to 'Alí Qulí Khán Shámlú, the Persian governor of Harát, where he made the acquaintance of Shikebí and Mahwí. He wrote at first under the takhalluç of Jáhí; but the Persian prince Sulṭán Ibráhím Mírzá gave him the name of Anísí, under which he is known in literature. When Harát was conquered by 'Abdullah Khán, king of Turkistán and Máwará-lnahr, Anísí was captured by an Uzbak soldier and carried off to Máwará-lnahr. He then went to India, and entered the service of Mírzá 'Abdurrahím Khán-Khánán, who made him his Mír 'Arz, and later his Mír Bakhshí. He distinguished himself by his intrepidity in the war with Suhail i Habshí (p. 335). His military duties allowed him little leisure for poetry. He died at Burhánpúr in 1014. There exists a Masnawí by him in the Khusrau-Shírín metre, also a Díwán, and several Qaçídahs in praise of the Khán Khánán.

The Calcutta edition of the Átash-kadah i Azar (p. 19) calls him wrongly 'Alí Qulí Beg, and his Harát patron 'Alí Naqí Khán, after whose death he is said to have gone to India.

[2] I. e., our garments are always tucked up (Arab. tashmír), as Orientals do when walking quickly. A lover finds no rest.

May God preserve all men from falling into my circumstances! for my sufferings keep the rose from smiling and the nightingale from singing.

Love has disposed of me, but I do not yet know who the buyer is, and what the price is.

Anísí drinks the blood of his heart, and yet the vessel is never empty; it seems as if, at the banquet of love's grief, the red wine rises from the bottom of the goblet.

---

1. I am intoxicated with love, do not bring me wine; throw me into the fire, do not bring me water.

2. Whether I complain or utter reproaches, I address him alone, do not answer me.

---

1. I went away, in order to walk a few steps on the path of destruction, and to tear a few ties that bind me to existence.

2. I will spend a few days without companions, and will pass a few nights without a lamp till morning make its appearance.

---

1. O heart, beware! O heart, beware! Thus should it be: the hand of asking ought to be within the sleeve.[1]

2. O that I could but once catch a certain object! the hunter is for ever in the ambush.

---

13. Nazi'rí' of Ni'sha'pu'r.[2]

He possesses poetical talent, and the garden of thought has a door open for him. Outwardly he is a good man; but he also devises plans for the architecture of the heart.

---

[1] The heart should not ask, but patiently love.

[2] Muhammad Husain Názirí of Nísháṕúr left his home for Káshán, where he engaged in poetical contests (mushá'arah) with several poets, as Fahmí, Hátim, &c. He then went to India, where he found a patron in Mírzá 'Abdurrahím Khán-Khánán. In 1012, he went to Makkah on a pilgrimage, after which he is said to have become very pious. On his return to India, he lived at Ahmadábád in Gujrát, where he died in 1022. The Tuzuk (p. 91) says:—"I [Jahángír] had called Nazírí of Nísháṕúr to court. He is well known for his poems and poetical genius, and lives [end of 1019] in Gujrát where he is merchant. He now came and presented me with an encomium in imitation of a Qaçídah by Anwarí. I gave him one thousand Rupees, a horse, and a dress of honor." The Maásir i Rahímí says

Every place, whether nice or not, appears pleasant to me: I either rejoice in my sweetheart, and grieve for him.

If thou destroyest the ware of my heart, thy loss is for once; whilst to me it would be the loss of world and faith.

If thou wilt not put my cage below the rose tree, put it in a place where the meadow hears my plaint.

It is from kindness that he [the beautiful boy] favours me, not from love; I can distinguish between friendship and politeness.

It is a generation that I have been girding my waist in thy service, and what am I worth? I must have become a Brahman, so often have I put on the badge (the thread).

Thy blood is worth nothing, Nazírí, be silent! Suffice it that he who slew thee, has no claim against thee.

I am costly and there are no buyers; I am a loss to myself, and am yet the ornament of the bazar.

The impression which my sorrow makes upon him, consists in depriving his heart of all sympathy; and the peculiar consequence of my reminding him of my love is that he forgets it.

---

that Nazírí was a skilful goldsmith; and that he died, after having seen his patron in Ágrah, in 1022 at Ahmadábád, where he lies buried in a mosque which he had built near his house. According to the Mir-át ul 'Álam, he gave what he had to his friends and the poor. How esteemed he was as a poet may be seen from a couplet by the great Persian poet Çáib, quoted by Dághistání—

صایب چه خیالست شوي همچو نظیري
عرفي بنظیري نرسانید سخن را

O Çáib, what dost thou think? Canst thou become like Nazírí?
'Urfí even does not approach Nazírí in genius.

The Táríkh of Nazírí's death lies in the hemistich 'Az dunyá raft Hassán-ul'ajam, áh!,' 'the Hassán of Persia has gone from this world, alas!'—in allusion to the famous Arabian poet Hassán. This gives 1022 A. H.; the other táríkh, given by Dághistání, markiz i dáirah i bazm kujá ast, 'where is the centre of the circle of conviviality,' only gives 1021, unless we count the hamzah in دایرهٔ as one, which is occasionally done in táríkhs. Dághistání also mentions a poet Sawádí of Gujrát, a pious man, who was in Nazírí's service. On the death of his master, he guarded his tomb, and died in A. H. 1031.

Like a watch-dog I lie at his threshold; but I gnaw the whole night at my collar, and think of chasing him, not of watching him.

---

1. From carelessness of thought I transformed a heart, by the purity of which the Ka'bah swore, into a Firingí church.

2. The simoom of the field of love possesses so inebriating a power, that the lame wanderer thinks it sublime transport to travel on such a road.

3. The ship of love alone is a true resting place; step out of it, and thou art surrounded by the stormy sea and its monsters.

4. Tell me which song makes the greatest impression on thy heart, so that I may utter my plaint in the same melody.

14. Darwí'sh Bahra'm.[1]

He is of Turkish extraction and belongs to the Bayát tribe. The prophet Khizr appeared to him, and a divine light filled him. He renounced the world and became a water-carrier.

---

1. I have broken the foundation of austerity, to see what would come of it; I have been sitting in the bazar of ignominy [love], to see what would come of it.

2. I have wickedly spent a lifetime in the street of the hermits; now I am a profligate, a wine-bibber, a drunkard, to see what will come of it.

3. People have sometimes counted me among the pious, sometimes among the licentious; whatever they call me I am, to see what will come of it.

15. Sairafí' [Sarfí'] of Kashmí'r.[2]

His name is Shaikh Ya'qúb. He is well acquainted with all branches of poetry and with various sciences. He knows well the excellent writings of Ibn 'Arab, has travelled a good deal, and has thus become acquainted with many saints. He obtained higher knowledge under Shaikh Husain of Khwárazm, and received from him permission to guide others.

---

[1] Bahrám's *takhallu*ç is Saqqá, i. e. water-carrier. This occupation is often chosen by those who are favored with a sight of the Prophet Khizr (Elias). Khizr generally appears as an old man dressed in green (in allusion to the meaning of the name in Arabic or to his functions as spring-deity).

The Bayát tribe is a Turkish tribe scattered over Ázarbáiján, Erivan, Ṭahrán, Fárs, and Níshápúr.

Bahrám is worshipped as a saint. His mausoleum is in Bardwán near Calcutta. Regarding the poet himself and the legends connected with him, vide my 'Arabic and Persian Inscriptions,' Journal, Asiatic Society of Bengal, 1871, Pt. I, pp. 251 to 255.

[2] Shaikh Husain of Khwárazm, Ya'qúb's teacher, was a pupil of Muhammad A'zam Háji, and died in Syria in 956 or 958.

Shaikh Ya'qúb also studied in Makkah for a long time under the renowned Ibn Hajar, the great teacher of the Hadís, and then came to India, where he was held in high esteem as a learned man

He stole from my heart all patience, and then took the whole mad heart itself; my thief stole the house with its whole furniture.

The weakness of the body has brought the love-sick man into a strange position: from weakness he can no longer bear the weight of recovery.

16. Sabu'hi', the Chaghta'i.[1]

He was born in Kábul. Once he slept in the bedroom of Amír Khusrau, when the shining figure of an old man with a staff in his hand awoke him and ordered him to compose a poem. As he had no power of doing so, he took the whole for a vision, and lay down in another place; but the same figure woke him up, and repeated the order. The first verse that he uttered is the following—

When I am far from thee, my tears turn gradually into an ocean. Come and see, enter the ship of my eye and make a trip on the ocean.[2]

My sweetheart saw the scroll of my faith, and burnt my sad heart, so that no one afterwards might read its contents.[3]

---

1. I have no need to explain him my condition; for my heart, if really burning, will leave a trace behind.

2. Weakness has overpowered me, and my heart has sunk under its sorrow. Who shall now inform him of my wretched state?

---

and a poet. He was liked by Humáyún and by Akbar, and was an intimate friend of the historian Badáoní. His death took place on the 12th Zí Qa'dah, 1003, and Badáoní found as tárikh the words Shaikh i umam búd, 'he was the Shaikh of nations.' A complete Khamsah, a treatise on the Mu'ammá, or riddle, and numerous Çúfistic Rubá'ís with a commentary, are said to have been written by him. A short time before his death, he had nearly finished a large commentary to the Qorán, and had just received permission from Akbar to return to Kashmír, when he died. Vide above, pp. 182, 546.

His takhalluç is variously given as çairafí and çarfí. The latter seems the correct form, to judge from the metre of one of his verses preserved by Badáoní (III, 148). Both words occur as takhalluç; thus there was a Qází Çairafí, encomiast of Fírúz Sháh. Vide also poet No. 21.

[1] Çabúhí means 'a man that drinks wine in the morning.' The real name of the poet is not given in the Tazkirahs to which I have access. Badáoní says that he lived an easy, unrestrained life; and the Mir-át ul 'Alam calls him a rind (profligate). He died at Agrah in 973, and Faizí found as tárikh the words صبوحي ميخوار 'Çabúhí, the wine-bibber.' Dághistání says, he was from Samarqand, and the A'tashkadah calls him 'Badakhsháni,' but says that he is known as Harawí, or from Harát.

[2] The verse, notwithstanding the vision, is stolen; vide Badáoní, III, 180, under 'Atashí.'

[3] If this verse, too, was uttered at the time he had the vision, he stole thought and words from Áçafí, Jámí's pupil, who has a verse—

دل که طومار وفا بود من محزون را
پاره کردند ندانسته بنان مضمون را

17. Mushfiqí' of Bukhará'.[1]

I went to his street, and whilst I was there, a thorn entered deep into the foot of my heart. Thanks be to God that I have now a reason for staying in it!

---

1. Hindústán is a field of sugar-cane, its parrots are sugar-sellers.

2. Its flies are like the darlings of the country, wearing the chírah and the ṭakauchiah.[2]

18. Sa'lihí'.[3]

His name is Muhammad Mírak. He traces his descent from Nizám ul-mulk of Ṭús.

Men without feeling tell me to use my hand and catch hold of his garment. If I had a hand [i. e. if I had the opportunity], I would tear my collar to pieces.

There are many reasons why I should be dead, and yet I am alive. O grief! thy forbearance has made me quite ashamed of myself.

---

[1] Badáoní (III, 328) says that he was originally from Marw, and came twice to India. For his Qaçídahs some called him 'the Salmán of the age;' and Dághistání says that under 'Abdullah Khán he was Malik ushshu'ará. According to the Haft Iqlím, he was born and died at Bukhárá. Sprenger (Catalogue, p. 508) says, he was born in 945, and his second Díwán was collected in 983. From the Akbarnámah (Lucknow Edition, III, p. 203) we see that Mushfiqí was presented to Akbar at Pák Patan in the end of 985. He died in 994 (Vámbéry's Bokhara, p. 301).

[2] This verse is a parody on the well-known Ghazal, which Háfiz sent from Shíráz to Sulṭán Ghiás of Bengal (Metre Muzári')

شکر شکن شوند همه طوطیان هند
زین قند پارسي که به بنگاله میرود

The parrots of Ind will learn to enjoy sweets,
When this Persian sugar (the poem) reaches Bengal.

Abulfazl has meddled with Mushfiqí's verse; for the Haft Iqlím gives instead of nekuán i diyár the words hinduán i siyáh; hence the verse is 'India's flies are (black) like the black Indians, wearing like them a big turban (chírah) and a ṭakauchiah.' This means, of course, that the Indians are like flies. The ṭakauchiah was described above on p. 88; the big head of a fly looks like a turban, and its straight wings like the straight Indian coat (chapkan). It may be that Abulfazl substituted the words nekuán i diyár, the 'dear ones of the country,' with a satirical reference to the "learned," whom he always calls خالي دروں عمیمه پوش 'turban-wearing empty-headed,' in which case we would have to translate 'the simpletons of the country.'

The verse is better given by Badáoní (III, 329).

[3] Badáoní calls him 'Harawí' (from Harát), and says that he was employed at court as a Munshí. He was a good penman. After his return to his country, he died. The Átashkadah says that he was a descendant of Khwájah 'Abdullah Marwárid Kirmání, and that his family had always been employed by kings.

Sprenger (Catalogue, p. 50) calls him wrongly Muhammad Mír Beg. The A'tashkadah and the MSS. have Muhammad Mírak; and thus also his name occurs in the Maásir i Rahímí.

I told him [the beautiful boy] my grief, he paid no heed. Oh, did you ever see such misery! I wept, he laughed—Oh, did you ever see such contempt!

My life is in his hand. It is quite clear, Çálih, that even the falcon Death sits tame on his hand.

19. Mazhari' of Kashmi'r.[1]

He made poems from his early youth, and lived long in 'Iráq. From living together with good people, he acquired excellent habits.

---

1. I cannot understand the secret of Salmá's beauty; for the more you behold it, the greater becomes your desire.

2. What friendly look lay in Laili's eyes, that Majnún shut his eyes to friends and strangers?

I admire the looking-glass which reflects my sweetheart standing on a flower-bed,[2] although he is inside his house.

The good fortune of thy beauty has caused thy affairs to prosper; else thou wouldst not have known how to manage matters successfully.

---

1. Like a tail I follow my own selfish heart. Though the road is not bad, I make myself footsore.

2. Though I break through a hundred screens, I cannot step out of myself; I wander over a hundred stages, and am still at the old place.

I am a tulip of Sinai, and not like the stem-born flower. I cast flames over the slit of my collar instead of hemming it.[3]

He of whom my eye makes light, appears to heaven dull and heavy.

---

[1] Dághistání says that in 'Iráq he was in company with Muhtashim and Wahshí. After his return to India, Mazharí was employed by Akbar as Mír Bahrí of Kashmír, which employment he held in 1004 (Badáoní). He had turned Shí'ah, and as his father was a Sunní, both used to abuse each other. His poems are said to contain several satires on his father. Mazharí died in 1018. All Tazkirahs praise his poems.

[2] The eyes of the beautiful boy are crocus-like or almond-shaped; the chin is like an apple; the black hair, like sumbuls—in fact, his whole face resembles a garden.

[3] The hot tears of the poet fall like flames on his collar; hence he is surrounded by flames like a flower on Mount Sinai; for Mount Sinai is surrounded by God's glory.

20. Mahwí' of Hamada'n.[1]

His name is Mughís. He tries to change the four mud walls of this worldly life into stone walls, and is intoxicated with the scent of freedom.

---

1. Once I did not know burning sorrow, I did not know the sighs of a sad heart.

2. Love has now left neither name nor trace of me—I never thought, Love, that thou art so.

---

1. You said that my condition was low from love-grief. A cup! bring me a cup! for my heart is stagnant.

2. Be ashamed of thyself, be ashamed! Which is the cup and which is the wine that has inebriated the nightingale?

---

1. O Mahwí, beckon to a friend, and ring the bell of the carawan.

2. The stage is yet far and the night is near. O thou who hast fettered thy own foot, lift up thy foot and proceed!

---

1. A single lover requires hundreds of experiences, hundreds of wisdoms, and hundreds of understandings.

2. Thy luck is excellent, go away: love is a place where misery is required.

---

1. O Mahwí, do not sing a song of the passion of thy heart, do not knock at the door of a single house in the street.

2. Thou hast seen this strange world, beware of speaking of a friend.

---

[1] Mír Mughís, according to the Maásir i Rahímí, was born in Asadábád (Hamadán), and went, when twelve years old, to Ardabíl, where he studied for four years at the "Astánah i Çafawiah." From youth, he was remarkable for his contentment and piety. He spent twenty years at holy places, chiefly at Najaf, Mashhad, Karbalá, and Harát. Maulánú Shikebí and Anísí (pp. 576,578) looked upon him as their teacher and guide. He held poetical contests (mushá'arah) with Maulánú Sahábí (صاحبی). He embarked at Bandar Jarún for India, and was patronized by the Khán Khánán. After receiving from him much money, he went back to 'Iráq, where the author of the Maásir saw him at Káshán. He visited Najaf and Karbalá, and returned to Hamadán, where he died in 1016. He lies buried in the Maqbarah of the Sayyids at Asadábád. The author of the Maásir edited Mahwí's Rubá'ís during his lifetime, and wrote a preface to the collection. Mahwí is best known as a Rubá'í writer: Abulfazl's extracts also are all Rubá'ís.

The Átashkadah says that he is often called Níshápúrí, because he was long in that town.

The Mir-át mentions a Mahwí whose name was Mír Mahmúd, and says that he was for twenty-five years Akbar's Munshí.

21. Sarfí' of Sa'wah.[1]

He is poor and has few wants, and lives content with his indigence.

My dealer in roses wishes to take his roses to the bazar, but he ought first to learn to bear the noisy crowd of the buyers.

I am shut out from the road that leads to the Ka'bah, else I would gladly wound the sole of my feet with the thorns of its acacias.[2]

I have no eye for the world, should it even lie before my feet; he who takes care of the end, looks behind himself.

That which I desire[3] is too high to be obtained by stooping down. O that I could find myself lying before my own feet!

---

22. Qara'rí' of Gí'la'n.[4]

His name is Núruddín. He is a man of keen understanding and of lofty thoughts. A curious monomania seized him: he looked upon his elder brother, the doctor Abulfath, as the personification of the world, and the

---

[1] The MSS. of the A'ín call him 'Çairafí,' but the metre of several verses given in the Maásir i Rahímí shews that his takhalluç is 'Çarfí.'

According to the Átashkadah, his name is Saláhuddín, and he was a relation of Salmán of Sáwah. He was a pupil of Muhtashim of Káshán. The author of Haft Iqlím says that he was a most amiable man, and marvellously quick in composing táríkhs. He lived in the Dak'hin, and went to Láhor, to present Akbar with a Qaçídah; but finding no suitable opportunity, he returned to the Dak'hin, and went to Makkah, where he died. The Maásir i Rahímí states that he lived chiefly at Ahmadábád, made Faizí's acquaintance in the Dak'hin, and went with the Khán i A'zam (p. 327) to Makkah. According to Badáoní, he came with the Historian Nizámuddín Ahmad from Gujrát to Láhor, and accompanied Faizí to the Dak'hin, where he died. Sprenger (Catalogue, p. 382) gives his name Çaláhuddín: but the Átashkadah (the only work in which I have found his full name) has Saláhuddín.

[2] The road of love (the ideal Ka'bah) is as difficult as the road to the Ka'bah in Makkah. Muhammadans do not lie down with their feet towards Makkah, which is against the law; hence the poet says that he is prevented from stepping forward on the road of love.

[3] Self-knowledge.

[4] Núruddín Muhammad came in 983 with his brothers Abul Fath (p. 424) and Humám (p. 474) to India. Akbar appointed him to a command in the army; but Núruddín was awkward, and had no idea how to handle a sword. Once, at a muster, he came without arms, and when some young fellows quizzed him about it, he said that military duties did not suit people of his class (literary men); it had been Timur's custom to place camels, cattle, and the baggage between the ranks, and the women behind the army, and when Timur had been asked where the learned were to go, he had said, "In the rear of the women." (This resembles the doctor Humám as the man who represents the life to come, for which reason he kept aloof from them.

The longer the grief of separation lasts, the gladder I am; for like a stranger I can again and again make his acquaintance.

I doubt Death's power; but an arrow from thy eye has pierced mè, and it is this arrow alone that will kill me, even if I were to live another hundred years.

He [the beautiful boy] must have been last night away from home; for I looked at his door and the walls of his house, but had no pleasure from looking.

If in that hour, when I tear the hood of my life, I should get hold, what God forbid, of Thy collar, I would tear it to pieces.

I envy the fate of those who, on the last day, enter hell; for they sit patiently within the fire.[1]

My madness and ecstacy do not arise from nightly wine; the burning of divine love is to be found in no house.

---

1. O heart! when I am in love, do not vex me with the jealousy of the watchman; thou hast made me lose my faith [Islám], do not speak ill of my Brahmanical thread.[2]

2. To be far from the bliss of non-existence seems death to him who has experienced the troubles of existence. O Lord! do not wake me up on the day of resurrection from the sleep of non-existence.

---

story of Napoleon I., who in Egypt had often to form squares against the hostile cavalry, and then invariably gave orders to place the donkeys and the savans in the middle). Akbar, to punish him, sent him on active service to Bengal, where he perished in the disturbances, in which Muzaffar Khán (p. 348) lost his life. Badáoní II, 211; III, 312.

Abulfazl is sarcastic in referring to Núruddín's monomania. Núruddín wished to say that Abulfath was a man of intense worldliness (tálib uddunyá) and Humám longed for the pleasures of paradise as the reward of virtue (tálib-ulákhirat), whilst he himself was a 'true lover' (tálib ulmaulá, one who feels after God).

The Átashkadah adds that Núruddín had been in Gílán in the service of Khán Ahmad Khán, and that he went, after the overthrow of Gílán, to Qazwín.

[1] Whilst the fire of love deprives me of patience.

[2] Love has made the poet a heathen.

1. If the love of my heart should meet with a buyer, I would do something openly.

2. I have spread the carpet of abstinence in such a manner that every thread of the texture ends in a thousand Brahmanical threads.

---

1. The drinking of my heart-blood has surfeited me; like my sweetheart, I have become an enemy to myself.

2. I have killed myself and, from excessive love to him, have cast the crime on my own shoulders.[1]

23. 'Ita'bi' of Najaf.[2]

He possesses harmony of thought; but his mind is unsettled, and he lives a disorderly life.

I am the nightingale of thy flower-bed. I swear by the pleasure of thy society that the rose has passed away, and I do not know where the garden is.

---

1. May all hearts rest peacefully in the black night of thy curls, when I, the miserable, wander restless from thy street!

2. I have knocked at the door of the seventy-two sects of Islám, and have come to the door of despair, hopeless of getting help from heathen and Musulmán.

3. I had come from the land of faithfulness: what wonder, if I vanish from the dear memory of the [faithless] fair?

---

1. I have consumed my sober heart on the rubbish-heap of passion; I have burnt the Ka'bah's candle at the idol temple's gate.

---

[1] Though in reality the beautiful boy murdered me.

[2] Sayyid Muhammad of Najaf had lived for some time in the Dak'hin, honoured as a poet, when he went to Hindústán, and paid his respects to Akbar at Allahábád. He looked bold and slovenly (bebák u nákamwár). When asked whether he had in the Dak'hin made satires on Sháh Fathullah (p. 540), he said, "In the Dak'hin I would not have looked at a fellow like him." Akbar, who made much of Fathullah, was annoyed, imprisoned 'Itábí, and had his papers searched, to see whether he wrote satires on other people. A few compromising verses were found, and 'Itábí was sent for ten years (or according to the Tabaqát, for two years) to Fort Gwáliár. At the request of Prince Salím and several courtiers, he was at last released, and ordered to come to Láhor. But he was as bad as before. The emperor gave him 1000 rupees, and ordered Qulij Khán (p. 354) to send him from Súrat to Hijáz; but 'Itábí escaped, went to the Dak'hin, and lived there as before. His Arabic and Persian poems are excellent; he also was a clever kátib and letter-writer. Badáoní III, 275.

The Átashkadah says that he came from Gulpáigán (or جرباقان). Dághistání calls him 'Mír 'Itábí.' 'Itábí means 'worthy of reproach;' compare ruswái.

2. The flower-bed of a certain beloved has not wafted to me the fragrance of fulfilled desires, and hopelessly do I consume myself in my dismal corner.

3. No one has ever said the word 'friend' to me, not even by mistake, though I consume myself before acquaintances and strangers.[1]

---

1. O heart, what portion of his wine-coloured lip dost thou keep in thy flagon, that thy inside is full of sighs and thy neck full of sobs.[2]

2. Love has thrown me into oceans of bloody tears; go, go away, that for once thou mayest reach the banks of the stream.

I have given thee permission to shed my blood without retaliation. I have said so, and give it thee black on white, and stamped with my seal.

Sometimes I am drowned in floods, sometimes burning in flames. Let no one build a house in my street!

In the name of God, let us go, if you belong to my travelling companions. This caravan[3] has no bell to sound the hour of starting.

In a realm where the word 'faithfulness' produces tears, the messenger and the letter he brings[4] produce each separately tears.

---

1. Is the killing of a man like me worth a single sign of anger and hatred? Is shedding my blood worth the bending of thy arm [pr. thy sleeve]?

2. If thou art resolved to break my heart, is it worth thy while to illtreat thy lovers?

---

[1] The Ṭabaqát ascribes this verse to a poet called Ruknuddín, whose takhalluṣ is not given in my MS.

[2] In allusion to the gurgling noise in the neck of the bottle.

[3] The caravan of love.

[4] The messenger, because he comes from the beloved boy, and the letter, because it declines the request of a rendezvous.

24. Mulla' Muhammad Su'fí', of Mázandarán.[1]

He is in affluent circumstances, but from virtuous motives he mixes little with the world. He seeks retirement by travelling about.

Look upon me, when standing below the revolving roof of the heavens, as a lamp concealed under a cover.

---

1. O heart, thy road is not without thorns and caltrops, nor dost thou walk on the wheel of good fortune.

2. If it be possible, pull the skin from the body, and see whether thy burden will be a little lighter.

---

1. You asked me, "How are you, Muhammad, after falling in love with him?—long may you live!" "I stand," said I, "below the heaven as a murderer under the gibbet."

25. Juda'i'.[2]

His name is Sayyid 'Alí, and he is the son of Mír Mançúr. He was born and educated in Tabríz, and attained, under the care of his Majesty, the greatest perfection in the art of painting.

The beauty of idols is the Ka'bah to which I travel; love is the desert, and the obstinacy of the worthless watchers[3] the acacia thorns.

I am a prey half-killed and stretched on the ground, far from the street of my beloved. I stagger along, tumbling down and rising up again, till I come near enough to catch a glimpse of him.

In the morning, the thorn boasts of having been together with the rose, and drives a nail through the broken heart of the nightingale.

---

[1] According to the Mir-át ul 'Álam, Mullá Muhammad was called 'Çúfí' from his gentle and mild character. Even at the present day, simple people are often addressed 'Çúfí-çáhib,' so much so that the word is often used as the equivalent of 'a simpleton.' Mullá Muhammad early left his home, and lived chiefly at Ahmadábád, where he was the friend and teacher of Sayyid Jalál i Bukhárí. The Mir-át and the Haft Iqlím praise his verses, and the former quotes from a Sáqí-námah of his.

The Átashkadah wrongly puts him under Içfahán, and mentions that some call him the maternal uncle of Mullá Jámí—which is impossible.

[2] Judái had been mentioned above on p. 107. He had the title of 'Nádir ul Mulk,' and had already served under Humáyún. He left a Díwán; but he has also been accused of having stolen Ashkí's Díwán (vide below, the 37th poet).

[3] The Átashkadah and Taqí's Tazkirah mention another Judái of Sáwah.

26. Wuqu"i' of Nisháṕúr.[1]

His name is Sharíf.

Love and the lover have in reality the same object in view. Do not believe that I lose by giving thee my life.

---

1. I do not care for health.[2] O Lord, let sorrow be my lot, a sorrow which deprives my heart of every hope of recovery!

2. I am smitten by the eye which looks so coquettishly at me, that it raises, openly and secretly, a hundred wishes in my heart.

27. Khusrawi' of Qáin.[3]

He is a relation of [the poet] Mírzá Qásim of Gúnábád, [or Junábád, or Junábíd, in Khurásán]. He writes Shikastah well, and is a good hand at shooting with the bow and the matchlock.

If the dust of my body were mixed with that of others, you would recognize my ashes by their odour of love.

Thy coming has shed a lustre on the ground, and its dust atoms serve as surmah for my eyes.

---

[1] Muhammad Sharíf Wuqú'í belonged, according to the Maásir i Rahímí, to a distinguished family of Sayyids in Nisháṕúr. His mother was the sister of Amír Sháhmír, who had been for a long time assay-master under Sháh Ṭahmásp. He died in 1002.

Badáoní (III, p. 378) says that Sharíf was a relation of Shihább Khán (p. 332). "His name was Muhammad Sharíf. Alas, that so impure a man should have so excellent a name! His heretical opinions are worse than the heresies of those who, in this age, bear the same name [Sharífi Amulí, pp. 176, 452; and the poet Sharíf i Sarmadí, mentioned below No. 53,—two archheretics in the eyes of Badáoní]. Though he belongs neither exclusively to the Basakhwánís [p. 452, note 2], nor to the Çabáhís, he holds an intermediate place between these accursed and damned sects; for he strenuously fights for the doctrine of the transmigration of souls (tanásukh). One day, he came to me at Bhimbar on the Kashmír frontier, asking me whether he could accompany me to Kashmír. Seeing large blocks of rocks of several thousand mans lying about near my house, he exclaimed with a sigh, "All these helpless things are only waiting to assume human form." Notwithstanding his wicked belief, he composed poems in praise of the Imáms; but he may have done so, when he was young. He was an excellent kátib and letter-writer, and was well acquainted with history. He died in 1002 A. H.

[2] Health is the equivalent of 'indifference to love.'

[3] Qáin lies between Yazd and Harát. Dághistání calls him Sayyid Amír Khusrawí, and says that he excelled in music. According to Badáoní, his mother was Mírzá Qásim's sister, and he came to India after having visited Makkah. He was in the service of Prince Salím (Jahángír).

The lions of the Haram should not stain their paws with my blood. O friend, give the dogs of the Christian monastery this food as a treat.

What do I care for comfort! I think myself happy in my misery; for the word 'rest' is not used in the language of this realm [love].

28. Shaikh Raha'í'.[1]

He traces his descent from Zainuddín Khâfí. He pretended to be a Çúfí.

No one has, in thy love, been more brought up to sorrow than I; and that thou knowest not my sorrow is a new sorrow.

I took to travelling in order to allay my grief, not knowing that my road would pass over hundred mountains of grief.

29. Wafa'í' of Içfahán.[2]

He possesses sparks of taste. He had been for some time wandering in the desert of retirement, but has now put the mantle of worldliness on his shoulders.[3]

I do not call him a buyer who only wishes to buy a Yúsuf. Let a man buy what he does not require![4]

Knock at night at the door of the heart; for when it dawns, the doors are opened, and the door of the heart is closed.

---

[1] His name is Maulánâ Sa'duddín, of Khâf, or Khawâf (p. 445). The A'tashkadah quotes the same verse as Abulfazl. Badáoní says, he left a well-known díwán. In Dághistání, two Rahâís are mentioned, one Maulánâ Rahâí, "known in literary circles;" and another Rahâí from Ardistán. Sprenger (Catalogue, p. 58) calls him Rihâí; and says that, according to the Nafâis, he died in 980.

Zainuddín Khâfí, from whom Rahâí traced his descent, is a famous saint, who died in the beginning of Shawwál, 838, A. H. He was first buried at Málín (or Bálín), then at Darwíshábád, then at Harát. His biography is given in Jámí's Nafhát ul Uns, and he is not to be confounded with the saint Zainuddín Táibádí, mentioned above on p. 366, note 2.

[2] Badáoní says (III, p. 385), that Wafâí was for some time in Kashmír, went to Láhor, and entered the service of Zain Khán (p. 344). According to the Atashkadah, he belonged to the 'Imádiyah Kurds, and was brought up at Içfahán; his Rubá'ís are good. Dághistání calls him a Turk, and states that Wafâí at first was an uttúkash (a man who irons clothes). From a fault in his eye, he was called Wafâí i kor, 'the blind Wafâí.'

[3] "His impudent flattery was proverbial." Dághistání.

[4] As, for example, love grief.

I am secure from the dangers of life: no one deprives the street-beggar of his bareness.

---

1. The dart of fate comes from the other side of the armour;[1] why should I uselessly put on an armour?

2. Flash of death, strike first at me! I am no grain that brings an ear to the harvest.

Joy and youth are like the fragrance of the rose that chooses the zephyr as a companion.

30. Shaikh Sa'qi'.[2]

He belongs to the Arabians of the Jazáir. He has acquired some knowledge.

---

1. I became a cloak to ruin, Sáqi, and like the Ka'bah, a place of belief and heresy.

2. I have found no trace of love, much as I have travelled among the hearts of the infidels and the faithful.

My heart is still ardent with love, and thou art still indifferent. O sweetheart, speak, before I openly express myself.

31. Rafi''i' of Káshán.[3]

His name is Haidar. He is well acquainted with the ars poetica, and is distinguished as a writer of riddles and tárikhs.

---

[1] I. e., a place where man is not protected, because he does not expect an arrow from that side.

[2] Badáoní also calls him Jazáirí, i. e. from the islands. His father, Shaikh Ibráhím, was a distinguished lawyer, and was looked upon by the Shí'ahs as a Mujtahid. He lived in Mashhad, where Sáqí was born. Sáqí received some education, and is an agreeable poet. He came from the Dak'hin to Hindústán, and is at present [in 1004] in Bengal.

[3] His full name, according to Taqí i Auhadí, is Amír Rafi'uddín Haidar. He was a Ṭabáṭibá Sayyid of Káshán. The Maásir i Rahímí states that he left Persia in 999, on account of some wrong which he had suffered at the hand of the king of Persia, went from Gujrát in company with Khwájah Habíbullah to Láhor, and was well received by Akbar. For the tárikh, mentioned above on p. 549, note 3, Faizí gave him 10,000 Rupees. After a stay of a few years in India, he returned to his country, but suffered shipwreck near the Mukrán coast, in which he not only lost property to the amount of two lákhs of Rupees, but also (as Badáoní spitefully remarks) the copies of Faizí's poetical works which he was to have distributed in Persia. Sprenger (Catalogue, p. 58) says that Haidar was drowned; but the fact is, that he was saved, and returned to India. His losses created much sympathy, and he received, at Akbar's wish, valuable presents from the Amírs. From the KhánKhánán alone, he got, at various times, about a lákh. After some time, he again returned, his two sojourns in India having lasted about eight lunar

My heart is sensitive, you cruel one; what remedy is there for me? Although a lover, I have the temper of the beloved—what can I do?

---

1. A recluse does not sin [love] and calls thee a tyrant; I am plunged into crime [love], and think that thou art forgiving.

2. He calls thee a tyrant, I call thee forgiving; choose whatever name pleases thee most.

32. Ghairatí of Shíráz.[1]

His diction is good, and he knows the history of the past.

I am smitten by the eyelash of my murderer, who has shed my blood without letting a drop fall to the ground.[2]

The present age asks God for a mischief-maker like thee, who makes the days of the wretched bitterer.[3]

I am free from worldliness; for my aspirations do no longer lean against the wall of confidence.

I am smitten by the fearless glance of a Christian youth, for whose sake God will pardon, on the day of resurrection, the slaughter of a hundred Musalmáns.

Even death mourns for those who are killed by the grief of separation from thee.

The street of the sweet boy is a beautiful land; for there even heaven's envy is changed to love.

---

years. He went to Makkah and Madínah, where he stayed four years. In 1013, he returned to Káshán, found favor with Sháh 'Abbás, and received some rent-free lands in his native town. According to the Átashkadah, he died in 1032 A. H., the tárikh of his death being the Arabic words, 'wa kána zalika fí sanah.' His son, Mír Háshim i Sanjar is mentioned on the next page; and Táhir i Naçrábádí mentions in his Tazkirah another son of the name of Mír Ma'çúm, a friend of Mullá Aují. MSS. often give his name wrongly رفيقي, Rafíqí.

[1] The Átashkadah says that Ghairatí travelled about in 'Iráq, went to Hindústán, and lived after his return in Káshán, where he fell in love with a boy of a respectable family. From fear of the boy's relations he went to Shíráz, where he died.

[2] Because the heart only was broken.

[3] That is, my beloved boy causes the greatest mischief among the hearts of men.

I saw the heart of another full of grief, and I became jealous; for there is but one cruel tyrant in these regions.[1]

33. Ha lati' of Túrán.[2]

His name is Yádgar. He is a selfish man.

Leave me to my grief! I find rest in my grief for him. I die, if the thought of the possibility of a cure enters my heart.

When my eye caught a glimpse of him, my lips quivered and closed. Oh that life remained but a moment within me!

To whatever side I turn in the night of separation, my heart feels pierced by the thought of the arrow of his eyelash.

34. Sanjar of Káshán.[3]

He is the son of Mír Haidar, the riddle-writer. He has a taste for poetry, and lives in good circumstances.

---

[1] No boy is lovelier than the beloved of the poet. If the poet, therefore, sees another man love-sick, he gets jealous: his beloved boy must have bestowed favours on the other man.

[2] Badáoní says that his father was a poet, and wrote under the name of Wálihí. Yádgár traced his descent from Sulṭán Sanjar; but the Ṭabaqát calls him a Chaghtái. He served in Akbar's army.

"His son, Jalál Khán, had the takhalluç of Baqáí, though from his unprofitableness he styled himself Ruswái, 'the blackguard.' He gave his father poison from his mother on account of a fault," and Akbar ordered him from Kashmír to Láhor, where he was executed by the Kotwál.

The Akbarnámah (Lucknow Edition, III, p. 486) says that Yádgár served in 993 in Kábul.

He is not to be confounded with Mír Hálatí of Gílán.

[3] Sanjar came in 1000 A. H. from Persia to India, and met his father (p. 593). For some crime, "to mention which is not proper," Akbar imprisoned him. When again set free, he went to Ahmadábád; but not thinking it wise to remain there, he went to Ibráhím 'Ádil Sháh of Bíjápúr. Some time after, he received, through the influence of his father, a call from Sháh 'Abbás of Persia to return. But before he could leave, he died at Bíjápúr, in 1021 A. H. Regarding the value of his poems people hold opposite opinions. Maásir i Rahímí.

The Khizánah i 'Ámirah and Mr. T. W. Beale of Agrah, the learned author of the Miftáh uttawáríkh, give the following verse as táríkh of Sanjar's death (metre Muzárí)—

اوکند پادشاه سخن چتر سنجری

The king of literature has thrown away the royal umbrella, of which the words pádisháh i sakhun give 1023; but as the pádisháh throws away the umbrella, we have to subtract a پ, or 2; for the figure of the Arabic پ if inverted, looks like an umbrella.

I came from the monastery of the Guebres, and wear, from shame on account of improprieties, a sacred thread twisted round my waist, and a wailing gong under my arm.[1]

I am jealous, and I shall die from the aggressions of fickle lovers. I am a fresh plant, but shall die from the heap of rubbish about me.

I, too, have at last perished in the century of thy love. Alas! none is now left of Majnún's tribe.[2]

Sorrows rush from every side on my heart without first knocking at the door. I cannot help it: my house lies on the highway.

35. Jazbí'.[3]

His name is Pádisháh Qulí, and he is the son of Sháh Qulí Khán Náranjí of Kurdistán, near Baghdád.

See how extremely jealous I am. My bewilderment leaves me, if any one alludes to him [the beautiful boy] whose memory causes my bewilderment.

---

1. Sometimes I break my vow of repentance and sometimes the wine-bottle; once, twice, incessantly, I break my plaintive flute [my heart].

2. O Lord, deliver my heart from these bad practices! How often shall I repent and again break my vow of repentance!

36. Tashbí'hí' of Káshán.[4]

His mind, from his youth, was unsettled. He belongs to the sect of the Mahmúdís; but I know nothing of his origin, nor of his present condi-

---

[1] I. e., love has made the poet forget his faith, and he has become a heathen or a Christian. The Christians in many eastern countries used gongs, because they were not allowed bells.

[2] The poet only is a true lover. He alone resembled Majnún.

[3] The Tazkirahs give no details regarding Jazbí. His father has been mentioned above on p. 480; and from the Akbarnámah (III, p. 512) we know that Pádisháh Qulí served in Kashmír under Qásim Khán (p. 380). 'Jazbí' means 'attractive'; a similar takhalluç is 'Majzúb,' 'one who is attracted by God's love.' Badáoní (III, 213) ascribes the last verses given by Abulfazl to Pádisháh Qulí's father.

[4] The Átashkadah calls him "Mír 'Alí Akbar Tashbíhí. Though a decent man, he was singular in his manners, and was not widely known. Whilst in Hindústán he tried to improve the morals of the people, dressed as a Faqír, and did not visit kings." Dághistání says that he was a heretic, and lived for forty years in Hindústán a retired life. He generally lived in graveyards. Badáoní (III, 204) has the following notice of him. "He came twice or three times to Hindústán, tion. The Masnawí entitled 'Żarrah o Khurshíd,' 'the Atom and the Sun,' is written by him.

Dust of the grave-yard, rise for once to joy! Thou enclosest a corpse like mine, slain by his hand and his dagger.

Dress in whatever colour thou wilt: I recognize thee when thy figure shines forth.

Pass some day by the bazar of the victims of thy love, and behold the retribution that awaits thee; for there they buy up every one of thy crimes at the price of a hundred meritorious actions.[1] and returned home. Just now (A. H. 1004) he has come back again, and calls the people to heresies, advising them to follow the fate of the Basákhwánís (vide above, p. 453). He told Shaikh Abulfazl that he was a Mujtahid, or infallible authority on religious matters, and asked him to introduce him to the emperor, to whose praise he had composed an ode, the end point of which was the question why the emperor did not direct his policy to the overthrow of the so-called orthodox, in order that truth might assume its central position, and pure monotheism might remain. He also wrote a pamphlet in honor of Abulfazl, according to the manner of the Nuqṭawí sect and their manner of writing the letters [singly, not joined, as it appears from the following], all which is hypocrisy, dissimulation, (tazríq) and agreement of the numerical value of the letters. Hakím 'Ain ul Mulk (vide above p. 480) discovered that 'Tashbíhí' has the same numerical value [727] as 'Tazríqí,' 'the hypocrite.' Tashbíhí has composed a Diwán. When I wrote my history, he once gave me, in Abulfazl's presence, a pamphlet on Mahmúd of Basákhwán, and I looked at it. The preface was as follows—'O God! who art praiseworthy (Mahmúd) in all Thy doings, I call upon Thee. There is no other God but Allah. Praise be to God, whose mercies are visible in all his works, who has shewn the existence of all his works,..... [the text is unintelligible]. He knows Himself; but we do not know ourselves, nor Him. He is an existence not existing except through Himself, and a place of existence independent of others; and He is the most merciful. Question,—What is meant by 'nature?' Answer;—what people call creation or nature, is God, &c., &c. Dirt upon his mouth, for daring to write such stuff! The grand point of all this lying is, of course 'the four nuqṭahs.' At the end of the pamphlet, I saw the following—'This has several times been written on the part of the Persian Mujtahid M, í, r, 'A, l, í, A, k, b, a, r, T, a, sh, b, í, h, í, the Amíní, the last, the representative.' And the rest was like this—may God preserve us from such unbelief!"

---

'The Atom and the Sun' is a mystical subject. The atoms of dust dance in the sunray and love it, and are emblematical of man's love to God. But as Akbar worshipped the sun, the poem, no doubt, referred to the peculiar views of the emperor.

[1] This verse is an example of a well-known rhetorical figure. The word 'retribution' leads the reader to expect the opposite of what Tashbíhí says. The lovely boy has, of course, broken many hearts and shed the blood of believers; nevertheless, all are ready to transfer the rewards of their meritorious actions to him, and thus buy up his crimes.

O thou that takest the loaf of the sun from this warm oven, thou hast not given Tashbíhí a breakfast, and he asks thee for an evening meal.[1]

---

1. I am that Tashbíhí who, from foresight, chooses to dwell in a grave-yard.

2. I like to dwell in a grave-yard, because dwelling in a grave-yard lies before our sight.

The hands of this world and of the world to come are empty. With me is the ring!—all other hands are empty.[2]

37. Ashkí' of Qum.[3]

He is a Ṭabáṭibá Sayyid, and is a poet of some talent.

Those who are slain by thee lie everywhere inebriated on the ground: perhaps the water of thy steel was wine.

My body melts in the fire of my madness, when he [the lovely boy] is away; and if you should hang an iron chain to my neck, it would flow (molten) to my feet.

Whenever I have to bear the pang of separation from my beloved, no one bears with me but death.

---

[1] The sun looks round like a loaf; the warm oven is the heat of the day.

[2] In allusion to a game, in which the players secretly pass a ring from one to another, and another party has to find where the ring is. 'The ring is with Tashbíhí', i. e., he has chosen truth, he is the elect.

[3] We know from the Haft Iqlím that Mír Ashkí was the son of Mír Sayyid 'Alí, Muhtasib (public censor) of Qum in Persia. Ashkí's elder brother Mír Huzúrí also is known as a poet. Ghazálí's fame and success (vide p. 568) attracted Ashkí to India, but he did not meet Ghazálí. The number of his verses exceeded ten thousand; but when on his death-bed, he gave his several Díwáns to Mír Judáí (vidè p. 590) to arrange. Mír Judáí, however, published whatever he thought good in his own name, and threw the remainder into water. Ṭaríqí of Sáwah alludes to this in the following epigram—

اشکـــیِ نامراد را کشتـــي
عقل حیران خون خفیهٔ اوست
بتـــو واماند چـــار دیوانـــش
شعر واماندهٔ تو گفتهٔ اوست

Thou hast killed poor Ashkí,
And I wonder at thy crime being hidden.
With thee four Díwáns of his remained,
And what remains of thy poems, is his.

Dághistání says that Ashkí died in Mír Judáí's house, and he ascribes the epigram to Ghazálí; but as he only quotes a hemistich, the statement of the contemporary Haft Iqlím is preferable.

Badáoní says that Ashkí's poems are full of thought, and that he imitated (tatabbu') the poet Áçafí. He died at Ágrah.

Ashkí, I think, my tears have turned watchers; for whenever I think of him, they rush into my face.[1]

38. Asi'ri' of Rai.[2]

His name is Amír Qází. He is a man of education.

The messenger was a watcher in disguise, and I did not see his cunning. The cruel wretch succeeded in putting his contrivance between us.

I have pardoned my murderer, because he did not take his hand away from me; for as long as life was left within me, his murderous hands were properly employed.

His love has so completely filled my breast, that you can hear him breathe in my breath.

39. Fahmi' of Rai [Ṭahrán].[3]

Give him no wine who feels no higher pleasure in the juice of grapes; do not even give him water when he lies as dust before the door of the tavern.

I have no patience when in love, and have lost in reputation. Tell reputation to go, I cannot be patient.

40. Qaidi' of Shíráz.[4]

He spent some time in the acquisition of such sciences as are usually studied; but he thinks much of himself.

---

[1] So do the watchers of the beloved boy rush up against Ashkí, when he declares his love.

[2] Asírí was, according to Badáoní, an educated man, and the best pupil of Hakím ul-Mulk (p. 542). But the climate of India did not agree with him, and he did not find much favor with the emperor. He, therefore, returned to Rai, his home, where he died (i. e., before 1004, A. H).

[3] Badáoní gives three poets of the name of Fahmí—1, Fahmí of Ṭahrán, who travelled much, and was for some time in India; 2, Fahmí of Samarqand, son of Nádirí, an able riddle-writer, who was also for some time in India; 3, Fahmí of Astrábád, who died at Dihlí. The Maásir i Rahímí mentions a Fahmí of Hurmuz (Ormuz), well known in Lár and Hurmuz, who came to India, presented an ode to the KhánKhanán, got a present, and returned. Dághistání mentions a fifth Fahmí from Káshán, and a sixth, of whom he gives no particulars.

As the Ṭabaqát and Dághistání ascribe the same verse to Fahmí i Ṭahrání, which Abulfazl gives to Fahmí of Rai, the identity of both is apparent. In fact, it looks as if Abulfazl had made a mistake in calling him 'of Rai,' because no Tazkirah follows him.

[4] Qaidí came from Makkah to India, and was well received by Akbar. Once, at a court assembly, he spoke of the injus-

As thou hast never gone from my heart, I wonder how thou couldst have found a place in the hearts of all others.

---

1. Thou drovest me away, and I came back, not from jealousy, but because I wish to confess that I feel ashamed of my love having had jealousy as a companion.

2. My tears derive a lustre from the laughter of cruel wretches; else a wound inflicted by thee could never produce such bloody tears.

A lover may have many reasons to complain; but it is better not to unburden the heart before the day of judgment.

If I desire to accuse thee of shedding, in every look, hundred torrents of lover's blood, my lot, though hostile enough, would be ready to be my witness.

I am gone, my reason is gone! I want a flash of madness to strike my soul, so as to keep it burning [with love] till the day of judgment.

---

1. Last night union [with the sweet boy] raised her lovely form before me, and the gloomy desert of my heart shone forth in raptures.

2. But the bat had no power to gaze at the sun; else the sun would have revealed what is now behind the screen.

41. Pairawí[1] of Sáwah.

His name is Amír Beg. He was a good painter.

Where is the wine of love given to wretches without feeling? Loving idols is a drunkenness; let men be careful whom to give it!

O God! I cannot reach the world of the ideal; forgive me if I worship form.[2] tice of the Dágh o Mahalli-Law, on which Akbar had set his heart (vide p. 242), and fell into disgrace. He wandered about for some time as Faqír in Biánah District, and returned to Fathpúr Síkrí, suffering from piles. A quack, whom he consulted, cut open the veins of the anus, and Qaidí died. He was an excellent poet. Badáoní.

---

Dághistání says that he was a friend of 'Urfí, and died in A. H. 992.

[1] Pairawí imitated the poet Áçafí. He wrote a poem on 'Form and Ideal,' of which Abulfazl has given the first verse, and completed a Díwán of Ghazals.

[2] This verse, the beginning of Pairawí's 'Form and Ideal,' contains the rhetorical figure istihlál, because it gives the title of the poem.

42. Ka'mi', of Sabzwár.[1]

His mind is somewhat unsettled.

If I knew that tears could make an impression, I would altogether turn to blood and trickle from the eye.

Whether I see him [the beautiful boy] or not, my heart is in raptures. Have you ever seen such a sight?

I wished I could like a breeze pass away from this base world. This is not the street of the sweetheart, from which one cannot pass away.

My blood dances from mirth in my vein like a flame: the look he gave me commences to work, and my heart is effectually wounded.

43. Paya'mi'.[2]

His name is 'Abdussalám. He is of Arabian extraction, and has acquired some knowledge; but he is not clear to himself.

Fortune cheats in play, loses, and takes back what she paid. One cannot play with a companion that is up to such tricks.

---

1. How long do you file down your words and polish them; how long do you shoot random arrows at the target?

2. If you would take one lesson in the science of silence, you would laugh loud at your silly conversation.

---

1. I keep a thousand thunderbolts concealed below my lip. Go away, go away, take care not to put your finger on my lip.

---

[1] Kámí's father, Khwájah Yahyá, was a grocer (baqqál), and lived in the Maidán Mahallah of Sabzwár, in Khurásán. Occasionally he wrote poems. When the Uzbaks took Sabzwár, Mír Yahyá went to India, and left Kámí, then twelve years old, with one of his relations in Sabzwár. At the request of his father, Kámí came to India, and was frequently with the KhánKhánán. He went afterwards back to Khurásán, and the author of the Maásir i Rahímí saw him, in 1014, in Harát. In travelling from Harát to his house, he was killed by robbers, who carried off the property which he had acquired in the KhánKhánán's service.

The Haft Iqlím says that his poems are good, but that he was irascible and narrow-minded.

Badáoní also mentions him; but he wrongly calls Qumí, 'from the town of Qum.' He says, Kámí is a young man and has just come to India (1004); his thoughts are bold.

[2] Payámí, according to Dághistání, was a pupil of the renowned 'Allámí Dawwání. He was for a long time Vazír to Sháh 'Alá ul-Mulk ibn i Núrul-dahr of Lár. His services were afterwards dispensed with, and a Jew of the name of Ya'qúb was appointed instead. But this change was not wise; for soon after, Sháh 'Abbás sent an army under Iláh Virdí Khán to Lár, who conquered the country.

2. I have come to the public square of the world, but I think it were better if my Yúsuf were yet in the pit than in the bazar.[1]

Patience, in order to console me, has again put me off with new subterfuges, and has stitched up the book of my happiness the wrong way.

---

1. My heart has overcome the grief of separation, and has gone from this land; it has tucked the hem up to the waist and has gone.

2. My heart saw among the companions no trace of faithfulness; hence it smiled hundred times by way of friendship and went away.

44. Sayyid Muhammad [Fikrí].[2]

He is a cloth-weaver from Harát. He generally composes Rubá'ís.

---

1. On the day when the lover kindled the fire of love, he learnt from his beloved what burning grief is.

2. This burning and melting has its origin in the beloved; for the moth does not burn till it reaches the candle.

---

1. On the day of judgment, when nothing remains of the world but the tale, the first sign of Eternity's spring will appear:

2. The beloved will raise like plants their heads from the dust, and I, too, shall raise my head in courtship.[3]

45. Qudsí of Karbalá, Mír Husain.[4]

I am utterly ashamed of the dogs of thy street; for they have made friendship with a man like me.

I am in misery; and you would know the sadness of my lot, if you were in stead of me to suffer for one night the grief of being separated from him [the beautiful boy].

---

[1] Yúsuf means here 'life'; pit, 'non-existence'; bazar, 'existence.'

[2] Sayyid Muhammad's poetical name is Fikrí, the 'pensive.' He came, according to the Haft Iqlím, in 969 to India; and his excellent rubá'ís induced people to call him the 'Khayyám of the age,' or 'Mír Rubá'í.' He died on his way to Jaunpúr, in 973, the tárikh of his death being Mír Rubá'í safar namúd.

[3] This verse reminds me of a verse by Kalím, I think, (metre Rajaz)—

روز قیامت هر کسے بدست گیرد نامهٔ
من نیز حاضر میشوم تصویر جانا در بغل

Each man, on the day of resurrection, will seize a book [the book of deeds]. I, too, shall be present, with my sweetheart's picture under my arm.

[4] Dághistání says that Mír Husain's father left Karbalá for Sabzwár. Qudsí was a great friend of Muhammad Khán, governor of Harát. Badáoní (III, 376) says that Mír Muhammad Sharíf Nawáí, Qudsí's brother, also came to India, and "died a short time ago," i. e. before 1004, A. H.

Who am I that thou shouldst be my enemy, and shouldst care for my being or not being?

46. Ḥaidarí, of Tabríz.[1]

He is a merchant and a poet; he works hard and spends his gains liberally.

Shew no one my black book of sorrows; let no one know my crimes [love].

O Haidarí, try, like the virtuous, to attain some perfection in this world of sorrow; for to leave this world deficient in anything, is like leaving the bath in a dirty state.

---

[1] Haidarí was three times in India. The first time he came, he was young, and found a patron in Muhammad Qásim Khán of Níshápúr (vide above, p. 353). His company, says the Haft Iqlím, was more agreeable than his poems. The Masnawí which he wrote in imitation of Sa'dí's Bostán, is insipid, and remained unknown. Though he made money in India, he said—

در کشور هند شادي و غم معلوم
انجا دل شاد و جان خرم معلوم
جائے که بیک روپیه دو آدم بخرند
آدم معلوم و قدر آدم معلوم

On his second return to India, he found a patron in the Khán i A'zam (p. 325), who gave him one thousand rupees for an ode. Muhammad Khán Atgah (p. 321) introduced him at court. For an ode on the elephant, Akbar presented him with two thousand rupees and a horse. The third time he came to India, he attached himself to the KhánKhánán, whom he accompanied on his expedition to Gujrát (p. 335), and received liberal presents for an ode on the victory of Sarkich. He returned to Káshán, the governor of which town, Aghá Khizr Nahawandí (brother of the author of the Maásir i Rahímí) befriended him. As Tabríz had just been destroyed by the Turks of Rúm, he settled in 'Iráq, at a place called in the MSS. نظر, which for its excellent climate and fruits had no equal in 'Iráq or Khurásán. About that time Sháh 'Abbás came to the place to hunt pheasants (kabg). It happened that the king's own falcon flew away, and sat down on the house of a darwish, who, notwithstanding that the king had gone personally to his house, refused to open the door. "The foaming ocean of the king's wrath rose in high waves," and he ordered a general massacre of the people of the place, which was happily prevented through Haidarí's influence. The same falcon was killed on the same day by an eagle on a steep hill, about a farsang from نظر; and the king, out of love for the animal, had a large house built on the top of the hill, which has now become a place of resort for the surrounding country. But as the hill is inaccessible for beasts of burden, the building must have cost a great deal of money and labour. Haidarí died there, beloved by all, in A. H. 1002.

He had also written a book entitled Lisán-ul-ghaib in praise of his teacher, the poet Lisání, who had been attacked in a pamphlet entitled Sahw-ul-Lisán, 'the Slip of the Tongue,' which was written by his base pupil Mír Sharíf i Tabrízí. The Maásir i Rahímí gives a few passages from the book.

Dághistání says that the poet Darwísh Haidar of Yazd, mentioned in Tazkirahs, is very likely the same as Maulánà Haidarí of Tabríz, who is sometimes called 'Yazdí' from his friendship with Wahshí of Yazd.

Sámrí, Haidarí's son, came to India after his father's death, and was made by the KhánKhánán Mír Sámán of his household. He was also a good officer, and was killed during the Dak'hin wars, when with Shahnawáz Khán, the son of his patron.

47. Sa'mri'.

He is the son of the preceding. His versification is good.

My disgrace has made me famous, and my shame [love] has rendered me well-known; perplexed I ask myself why I remain concealed.

The farmers have committed their seeds to the field, and now hope to receive aid from the flood of my tears.

48. Farebí', of Rai (?).[1]

His name is Shápúr. He is a good man, but is in bad circumstances. If he is diligent, he may become a good poet.

---

1. I go and heat my brain with the love of a certain sweetheart; I sit in the midst of the flame, and breathe a hot sigh.

2. It is not my intention to be in ardours for myself, Shápúr; my object is to bring a certain sweetheart before the world.

I am the thorny shrub without leaves in the desert; no bird takes shelter with me from fear of accidents.

---

1. If the martyr of thy love-grief is to have a tomb, let it be the gullets of crows and kites, or the stomachs of wild animals.

2. Until I pass along the torrent of restlessness [love], I cannot plunge into the shoreless ocean.

49. Fusu'ní', of Shíráz.[2]

His name is Mahmúd Beg. He is an excellent accountant, and knows also astronomy well.

---

[1] The second verse shews that the takhalluç of the poet is Shápúr. Farebí is scarcely known. With the exception of Dághistání's work, which merely mentions that Farebí lived during the reign of Akbar, I have not found his name in the Tazkirahs. Sprenger (Catalogue, p. 52) mentions a Farebí of Bukhárá; but as he is said to have died in 944 A. H., he must be another poet. The name of his birthplace is doubtful; the MSS. of the Aín have Raí, Rahí, and Díhí, or leave out the word, as Dághistání has done. 'Rází' is the usual form of the adjective derived from 'Rai,' the well-known town in Khurásán.

[2] Abulfazl says that Fusúní was from Shíráz; Badáoní and Taqí call him Yazdí; and Dághistání and the A'tashkadah say that he came from Tabríz. Badáoní says that Fusúní came over Tattah and entered the service of the emperor, and Dághistání adds that he also served under Jahángír and Sháhjahán as Mustaufí. The Mir-át ul 'Álam mentions a Fusúní, who was an Amír under Jahángír and had the title of Afzal Khán.

When the eye has once learned to see [to love], it loses its peaceful sleep ; when the heart has once learned to throb, it loses its rest.

The passion which I feel for other lovely ones, has made my heart like a bud which has been forced open by blowing upon it.

When I wish to kiss his foot, I first wipe it with my wet eye ; for the eye feels, more than lip, the sweet sorrow of kissing his foot.

Woe me, if my blood is not shed for the crime of my love! To pardon my faults were worse than to take revenge on me.

Sole friend of my chamber! I feel jealous of those who stand outside disappointed. Sweet companion of my feast! I feel jealous of the spectators.

---

1. If I flee from thy cruelties, tell me what dust I am to scatter on my head when far from thee.

2. If I sit in the dust of the earth on which I wander, whose victim shall I be when I arise?[1]

50. Na'dirí', of Turshíz.[2]

I am as if blind and err about seeking for something. I pant after this mirage [love], though I hold a cooling drink in my hand.

Nádirí, I complain of no one: I have myself set fire to this heap of thorns.

---

[1] The original contains a pun on khák gird, and gard, which I cannot imitate.

[2] The author of the Haft Iqlím says that Nádirí went two years before the completion of the Haft Iqlím, i. e. in 1000, to India ; but he does not know what became of him.

Dághistání mentions three poets of the name of Nádirí—(1) Nádirí of Samarqand, who came to Humáyún in India, (2) a Nádirí from Shustar; and (3) a Nádirí from Siálkot.

Turshíz, or Turshísh, lies near Níshápúr.

51. Nau'í', of Mashhad.[1]

He is a poet of talent; if sharply spoken to, he writes very well.

I am dead, and yet the blisters of my wandering foot do not dry up: neither death nor the life to come can bring the journey towards this stage [love] to a close.

No eye is fit to behold my glory; my figure in the looking-glass even appears veiled.

If that be Mançúr's love, do not grieve, O heart. Not every weak-minded man is fit to love.[2]

Intrinsic beauty cannot be seen; and he who looks into the looking-glass sees, indeed, his figure, but forms no part of the glass itself.[3]

Make thyself a heart as large as the orb of heavens, and then ask for an atom. Do not be satisfied, Nau'í, with a ray of the sun; cherish the lofty aspirations of the little mote.[4]

---

[1] Mullá Muhammad Rizá comes from Khabúshán near Mashhad. On his arrival in India, says the Maásir i Rahímí, he found a patron in Mírzá Yúsuf Khán of Mashhad (p. 346); but soon after, he entered the service of the Khán-Khánán (p. 334), and stayed with him and Prince Dányál at Burhánpúr. For his Sáqínámah, the KhánKhánán gave him an elephant and a present of 10,000 Rupees. He also composed several odes in praise of the prince. Some people say that his poems are like the shutur o gurbah, i. e. you find chaff and grains together; but most people praise his poems. The Khizánah i 'Ámirah says that his Masnawí entitled Soz o Gudáz is quite sufficient to establish his fame as a great poet. This poem, of which the Asiatic Society of Bengal has a copy, contains the story of a Suttee. Nau'í had not yet arranged his Qaçídahs and Ghazals in form of a díwán, when he died in 1019, at Burhánpúr.

Badáoní says that he claims descent from Hazrat Shaikh Hájí Muhammad of Khabúshán; but his doings belie his claim. He is very bold, and is now (in 1004) with the youngest prince.

[2] Mançúr attained a high degree of pantheistic love; he saw God in everything, and at last proclaimed 'Aná alhaq,' 'I am God,'—for which he was killed. The poet here accuses Mançúr of weakness, because he proclaimed his love; he should have kept it to himself, as is proper for true lovers (vide p. 555, note 1).

[3] The poet means by the looking-glass the beautiful face of the beloved boy. He sees in it his woful figure; but does not become one with him.

[4] Properly, half a mote. The dust atoms that play in the sunray are in love with the sun.

52. Ba'ba' Ta'lib, of Içfahán.[1]

He is a thoughtful poet, and is experienced in political matters.

I would not exchange my lonely corner for a whole world, and I am glad that my intercourse with the people of the world has left me this impression.

It is no wonder that my little heart expands into a wide plain, when it is filled with thy love.

I cannot raise, from weakness, my hands to my collar, and I am sorry that the rent in my collar reaches so late the hem of my garment.[2]

---

1. In being separated from me thou givest me poison to taste and yet askest 'what does it matter?' Thou sheddest my blood, thou drivest me away, and yet askest 'What does it matter?'

2. Thou dost not care for the havoc which the sword of separation has made; sift the dust of my grave and thou wilt know what it matters.[3]

53. Sarmadí, of Isfahán.[4]

His name is Sharíf. He possesses some knowledge, is upright, and zealous in the performance of his duties. His rhyme is excellent. He understands arithmetic.

---

[1] According to the Haft Iqlím, Bábá Tálib had been for nearly thirty years in Kashmír, patronized by the rulers of that country. When Akbar annexed the province, he came to Hindústán, where he was much liked. The Maásir i Rahímí says that he was often in the company of Hakím Abulfath (p. 424), Zain Khán Kokah (344), Abulfazl, and Shaikh Faizí; at present, i. e. in 1025, he is Çadr of Gujrát. Badáoní says that he was nearly eight (twenty?) years in Kashmír, was at first a dervish, but took afterwards an employment, and entered Akbar's service. The emperor once sent him as ambassador to 'Alí Rái, ruler of Little Tibbat. On his return, he gave Abulfazl a treatise on the wonders of that land, which was inserted into the Akbarnámah. His poems are good, and breathe fine feeling. The Iqbálnámah (Bibl. Indica Edition, p. 133) confirms these remarks, and adds that Bábá Tálib died in the end of Jahángír's reign, more than a hundred years old.

[2] Vide p. 560, note 1.

[3] This Rubá'í pleased Jahángír so much, that he entered it with his own hand in the Court album. Iqbálnámah, loc. cit.

[4] Muhammad Sharíf was mentioned above on p. 516, No. 344, as a commander of Two Hundred. Badáoní says that he was at first Chaukínawís, and is at present (i. e., 1004) with Sharíf i A'mulí (p. 452) in Bengal. He used at first to write under the takhalluç of 'Faizí;' but in order to avoid opposition to Faizí, Abulfazl's brother, he chose that of Sarmadí. Badáoní looked upon him as a heretic, and often abuses him (Bad. II, 335). From the Akbarnámah we see that Sharíf served in the 31st year in Kashmír, and in the end of the 32nd in Gujrát. In 1000, he was sent to Bengal with Sharíf i A'mulí, and in the beginning of 1001, we find him fighting in Oṛisá against Rám Chandr, Rájah of Khurdah. Dághistání says, he died in the Dak'hin.

Fortune has been faithful in my time; I am the memorial tablet of Fate's faithfulfulness.

I was at home, and thou camest to me with drunken eyes and with roses under the arm; the very dust of this house of grief budded forth to see the sight of thy arrival.

---

1. What have I not done to myself in the heat of transgression! What crimes have I not committed whilst trusting to Providence!

2. I and my heart have soared up to a rose bed, and we are jealous of the zephyr's going and coming.

3. A lover has hundreds of wishes besides union with him [the beautiful boy]; I still want thee, Fortune, for many things.

I have in contempt set my foot upon both worlds; neither joy nor sorrow have overpowered my heart.

---

1. I cherish a love which will be talked of on the day of resurrection; I cherish a grief which no tale can relate.

2. A grief which can coquet with the grief of others, which no thought can comprehend and no pen can describe.

54. Dakhlí', of Içfahán.[1]

He is a man without selfishness, and of reserved character. Though he says but little, he is a man of worth.

---

[1] The Maásir i Rahímí is the only work in which I have found a notice of this poet. His name is Malik Ahmad, and he was the son of Malik ul Mulúk Maqçúd 'Alí, proprietor of Werkopái, twelve farsakhs from Içfahán. (The MS. belonging to the Society had originally Derkopái; but the author appears to have corrected the d to a w). His mother's father was the great Shaikh Abul Qásim, who had such influence with Ṭahmásp that several legacies (auqáf) in Persia belonging to Makkah were transferred to him, and of other foundations he was appointed Mutawallí. His circumstances thus became affluent, and so many dervishes, pupils, learned men, travellers, poets, &c., collected around him, that people persuaded Ṭahmásp that Abul Qásim was bent on rebellion or heresy. He was, therefore, blinded, and lived a retired life in the village. Some time after, he presented a poem to Ṭahmásp, which procured him a pension. In this poem, which the Maásir has partly preserved, the village is called Kuhpáyah. In his retirement, he used to write under the nom de plume of Amrí, and employed Dakhlí to arrange his poems. This occupation gave Dakhlí a taste for poetry, and he received from Abul Qásim the takhalluç of 'Dakhlí.' After having attended on his maternal uncle for some time, Malik Ahmad went to Içfahán, where he gained a reputation as a poet.

In 997, he came to India, and was for five years in Akbar's service. In 1003, he went to the Dak'hin, and found a patron in the KhánKhánán, in whose service he was in 1025, when the Maásir i Rahímí was written. He also was a good soldier.

1. I have burnt the furniture of my strong and wise heart; I have set fire to the house of my aspirations and burnt it.

2. I have given up heresy and faith, and, half way between the Ka'bah and the idol temple, I have burnt the sacred thread and the rosary.

---

1. I know of no plaint that has made impression; I know of no evening that was followed by a cheerful morn.

2. They say that grief is followed by joy, but this is an error: I know but of sorrows being followed by sorrows.

55. Qa'sim Arsla'n, of Mashhad.[1]

He possesses some talent. He works hard in order to collect wealth, and spends it in a genial way.

I am intoxicated with the pleasures of the society of wits: for there the subtleties of expression vanish at a hint.

Word and thought weep over my circumstances, when without thee I look into the book (of my poems).

My life is half gone—what am I worth now when a single look from thee is valued a hundred lives?

Thou hast the brilliancy of the rose and the colour of wine. How wonderful, what a freshness!

56. Ghayu'ri', of Hiçár.[2]

Manliness shines on his forehead, and simplicity is the ornament of his life.

---

[1] Arslán is Qásim's nom-de-plume. He chose this name, because his father claimed descent from Arslán Jázib, an Amír of Mahmúd of Ghazní. The family came from Ṭús, and Qásim was brought up in Transoxania. He was a good poet, and excelled in táríkhs. Badáoní quotes an ode written by Arslán on the Mountain of Ajmír. He died in 995, probably in Láhor. Dághistání says, he died at Ahmadábád. Vide p. 103.

[2] Ghayúrí is called in the Akbarnámah Mullá Ghayúrí, and Dághistání calls him Ghayúrí of Kábul. This shews that he came from Hiçár in Kábul, and not from Hiçár Fírúzah. The Haft Iqlím tells us that Ghayúrí was at first in the service of Mírzá Muhammad Hakím, Akbar's brother and king of Kábul. On the death of his patron, he entered Akbar's service, and was a Yúzbáshí, or Commander of One Hundred. He was killed, in 994, with Bír Bar in the Khaibar Pass catastrophe (p. 345).

When longing directs its way to that door [love], it overthrows all possibility of returning.

---

1. The door of Sháh Akbar, the victorious, is a paradise of rest;
2. And if I shave my beard, I do so not to beautify myself,
3. But because beards, like crimes, are of a deep black dye, and can therefore, have no place in a paradise.[1]

57. Qa'simi', of Mázandarán.[2]

He lives as a Faqír and wanders bare-footed and bare-headed through the world.

I do not compare thee in beauty with Yúsuf; Yusuf was not so, I do not flatter.

---

1. My sickness has increased to-night in consequence of the pain of separation, and my wretched condition arises from the hundred excesses of yesterday.
2. The wine of desire flows every night freer. What shall I to-night do with my unsteady heart?

58. Sheri'.[3]

He belongs to a Panjábí family of Shaikhs. Under the patronage of his Majesty he has become a good poet.

The beloved [boy] came, and blotted out my name; nay, he made me quite beside myself.

The beloved has so closely surrounded himself with an array of coquetry, that even Desire found access impossible in this dense crowd.

O Zephyr, the beloved has entirely filled the mould of my desire. I am thy devoted servant, but thou art rather too devoted to his street.

---

[1] Akbar, in 1000, forced his courtiers to shave off their beards; vide p. 207.

[2] Dághistání mentions a Qásim of Mázandarán. Qásimí seems to be an unknown poet.

[3] Mullá Sherí has been mentioned above, pp. 106, 197, 202, 204. He was born in Kokúwál in the Panjáb (Bárí Duáb). His father's name was Maulánà Yahyá. He belonged to a tribe called in Badáoní 'Máji.'

Sherí was killed with Bír Bar, in 994, in the Khaibar Pass.

1. My heart has polluted itself with revealing its condition. Though I am silent, the language of my looks has betrayed me.

2. A little thing [love] offers thousands of difficulties; an object apparently within reach offers hundreds of impossibilities.

59. Rahí', of Nishápúr.

His name is Khwájah Ján. He is a good man.

---

1. O Rahí, do no longer cunningly twist this thread [thy religious belief]; give up ideas of future life, beginning, and the purgatory.

2. Put the thread into the fire of love, so that the offensive smell of the water of the corpse may not go to hell (?).

* * * * * *

The above (59) poets were presented at Court. "There are, however, many others who were not presented, but who sent from distant places to his Majesty encomiums composed by them, as for example, Qásim of Gúnábád; Zamír of Içfahán; Wahshí of Báfah; Muhtashim of Káshán; Malik of Qum; Zuhúrí of Shíráz; Walí Dasht Bayází; Nekí; Çabrí; Figárí; Huzúrí; Qází Núrí of Içfahán; Çáfí of Bam; Ṭaufí of Tabríz; and Rashkí of Hamadán.

ÁÍN 30 (concluded).

THE IMPERIAL MUSICIANS.[1]

I cannot sufficiently describe the wonderful power of this talisman of knowledge [music]. It sometimes causes the beautiful creatures of the harem of the heart to shine forth on the tongue, and sometimes appears in solemn strains by means of the hand and the chord. The melodies then enter through the window of the ear and return to their former seat, the heart, bringing with them thousands of presents. The hearers, according to their insight, are moved to sorrow or to joy. Music is thus of use to those who have renounced the world and to such as still cling to it.

---

[1] We have to distinguish goyandah, singers, from khwánandahs, chanters, and sázandahs, players. The principal singers and musicians come from Gwáliár, Mashhad, Tabríz, and Kashmír. A few come from Transoxania. The schools in Kashmír had been founded by Irání and Túrání musicians patronized by Zain ul 'Ábidín, king of Kashmír. The fame of Gwáliár for its schools of music dates from the time of Rájah Mán Tunwar. During his reign lived the famous Náik Bakhshú, whose melodies are only second to those of Tánsen. Bakhshú also lived at the court of Rájah Bikramájít, Mán's son; but when his patron lost his throne, he went to Rájah Kírat of Kálinjar. Not long afterwards, he accepted a call to Gujrát, where he remained at the court of Sultán Bahádur (1526 to 1536, A. D). Islem Sháh also was a patron of music. His two great singers were Rám Dás and Mahápáter. Both entered subsequently Akbar's service. Mahápáter was once sent as ambassador to Mukund Deo of Oríssá.

His Majesty pays much attention to music, and is the patron of all who practise this enchanting art. There are numerous musicians at court, Hindús, Iránís, Túránís, Kashmírís, both men and women. The court musicians are arranged in seven divisions, one for each day in the week. When his Majesty gives the order, they let the wine of harmony flow, and thus increase intoxication in some, and sobriety in others.

A detailed description of this class of people would be too difficult; but I shall mention the principal musicians.

1. Miyán Tánsen,[1] of Gwáliár. A singer like him has not been in India for the last thousand years.
2. Bábá Rámdás,[2] of Gwáliár, a singer.
3. Subhán Khán, of Gwáliár, a singer.
4. Srigyán Khán, of Gwáliár, a singer.
5. Miyán Chand, of Gwáliár, a singer.
6. Bichitr Khán, brother of Subhán Khán, a singer.
7. Muhammad Khán Ḍhárí, sings.[3]
8. Bír Mandal Khán, of Gwáliár, plays on the sarmandal.
9. Báz Bahádur, ruler of Málwah, a singer without rival [p. 428].
10. Shihább Khán, of Gwáliár, performs on the bín.
11. Dáúd Ḍhárí, sings.
12. Sarod Khán, of Gwáliár, sings.
13. Miyán Lál,[4] of Gwáliár, sings.
14. Tántarang Khán, son of Miyán Tánsen, sings.
15. Mullá Is-háq Ḍhárí, sings.
16. Ustá Dost, of Mashhad, plays on the flute (nai).
17. Nának Jarjú, of Gwáliár, a singer.
18. Purbín Khán, his son, plays on the bín.
19. Súr Dás, son of Bábú Rám Dás, a singer.
20. Chánd Khán, of Gwáliár, sings.
21. Rangsen, of Ágrah, sings.

---

[1] Regarding Tánsen, or Tánsain, or Tánsín, vide p. 406. Rám Chand is said to have once given him one kror of tánkahs as a present. Ibráhím Súr in vain persuaded Tánsen to come to Ágrah. Abúlfazl mentions below his son Tántarang Khán; and the Pádisháhnámah (II, 5—an interesting passage) mentions another son of the name of Bilás.

[2] Badáoní (II, 42) says, Rám Dás came from Lak'hnau. He appears to have been with Bairám Khán during his rebellion, and he received once from him one lákh of tánkahs, empty as Bairám's treasure chest was. He was first at the court of Islem Sháh, and he is looked upon as second only to Tánsen. His son Súr Dás is mentioned below.

[3] Ḍhárí means 'a singer,' 'a musician.'

[4] Jahángír says in the Tuzuk that Lál Kaláwant (or Kalánwat, i. e. the singer) died in the 3rd year of his reign, "sixty or rather seventy years old. He had been from his youth in my father's service. One of his concubines, on his death, poisoned herself with opium. I have rarely seen such an attachment among Muhammadan women."

22. Shaikh Dáwan Ḍhárí, performs on the karaná.
23. Rahmat ullah, brother of Mullá Is-háq (No. 15), a singer.
24. Mír Sayyid 'Alí, of Mashhad, plays on the ghichak.
25. Ustá Yúsuf, of Harát, plays on the ṭambúrah.
26. Qásim, surnamed Koh-bar.[1] He has invented an instrument, intermediate between the qúbúz and the rubáb.
27. Tásh Beg, of Qipcháq, plays on the qúbúz.
28. Sulṭán Háfiz Husain, of Mashhad, chants.
29. Bahrám Qulí, of Harát, plays on the ghichak.
30. Sulṭán Háshim, of Mashhad, plays on the ṭambúrah.
31. Ustá Sháh Muhammad, plays on the surná.
32. Ustá Muhammad Amín, plays on the ṭambúrah.
33. Háfiz Khwájah 'Alí, of Mashhad, chants.
34. Mír 'Abdullah, brother of Mír 'Abdul Hai, plays the Qánún.
35. Pírzádah,[2] nephew of Mír Dawám, of Khurásán, sings and chants.
36. Ustá Muhammad Husain, plays the ṭambúrah.[3]

---

[1] Koh-bar, as we know from the Pádisháhnámah (I, b., p. 335) is the name of a Chaghtái tribe. The Nafáis ul Maásir mentions a poet of the name of Muhammad Qásim Kohbar, whose nom-de-plume was Çabrí. Vide Sprenger's Catalogue, p. 50 (where we have to read Koh-bar, for Gúh-paz).

[2] Pírzádah, according to Badáoní (III, 318) was from Sabzwár. He wrote poems under the takhalluç of Liwáí. He was killed in 995 at Láhor, by a wall falling on him.

[3] The Maásir i Rahímí mentions the following musicians in the service of the KhánKhánán—Aghá Muhammad Náí, son of Hájí Ismá'íl, of Tabríz; Mauláná Açwátí, of Tabríz; Ustád Mírzá 'Alí Fathagí; Mauláná Sharaf of Nísháپúr, a brother of the poet Nazírí (p. 579), Muhammad Múmin, alias Háfizak, a ṭambúrah-player; and Háfiz Nazr, from Transoxania, a good singer.

The Tuzuk and the Iqbálnámah mention the following singers of Jahángír's reign—Jahángírdád; Chatr Khán; Parwízdád; Khurramdád; Mák'hú; Hamzah.

During Sháhjahán's reign we find Jagnát'h, who received from Sháhjahán the title of Kabrái; Dirang Khán; and Lál Khán, who got the title of Gunsamundar (ocean of excellence). Lál Khán was son-in-law to Bilás, son of Tánsen. Jagnát'h and Dirang Khán were both weighed in silver, and received each 4500 Rupees.

Aurangzíb abolished the singers and musicians, just as he abolished the court-historians. Music is against the Muhammadan law. Kháfí Khán (II, 213) tells a curious incident which took place after the order had been given. The court-musicians brought a bier in front of the Jharok'hah (the window where the emperors used to shew themselves daily to the people), and wailed so loud as to attract Aurangzíb's attention. He came to the window, and asked whom they had on the bier. They said, "Melody is dead, and we are going to the graveyard." "Very well," said the emperor, "make the grave deep, so that neither voice nor echo may issue from it." A short time after, the Jharok'hah also was abolished.

ADDITIONAL NOTES.

Page 32, note 1.

TODAR MALL. For correcter and fuller biographical notes, vide p. 351.

Page 34, note 2.

QULIJ KHA'N. The correct year of his death is given on p. 354.

Page 35, line 24.

BA'BÁ GHU'RÍ'. This word is not in the Dictionaries; but there is no doubt that it means 'White Agate.' The word is also mentioned in the 4th Book (my Text Edition, II, 60), where it is said that all the weights used at court for weighing jewels were made of 'transparent Bábághúrí.' Ṭáhir Naçrábádí, in his Tazkirah, under Jalál, has the following. "When the case came on, he said to Mírzá Taqí, "I have often counted with the point of my penknife the Bábághúrí threads (the veins) of your eye—there are seventeen."

در روز دیوان با میرزا تقي میگفت که مکرر بنوک قلمتراش زنار باباغوري چشم شما را شمرده ام هفده زنار دارد ۱۱

Page 44, last line.

SALARIES OF THE BEGUMS. Under Sháhjahán and Aurangzíb, the queens and princesses drew much higher salaries. Thus Mumtáz Mahall had 10 lák'hs per annum, and her eldest daughters 6 lákhs, half in cash and half in lands. Aurangzíb gave the "Begum Çáhib" 12 lákhs per annum.

Regarding Núr Jahán's pension, vide p. 510, note 4.

Page 48, note 1.

GULBADAN BEGUM. From Badáoní II, 14, we see that she was Akbar's paternal aunt, i. e. she was Humáyúṇ's sister. She was married to Khizr Khwájah; vide pp. 198, 365.

Page 55, line 9, from below.

SORON. Soroṇ is the correct name of a town and Parganah in Sirkár Kol. It lies east of the town of Kol ('Alígaṛh), near the Ganges.

Page 56, line 10.

PANHA'N. This I believe to be a mistake for 'Pathán,' or 'Patháukoṭ.' The MSS. have پنهان or سنهان, but as the initial sín in MSS. is often written with three dots below it, it is often interchanged with پ, and reversely. The spelling پیتهان, Paithán, for Pathán, is common in Muhammadan historians. My conjecture is confirmed by the distance mentioned in the text.

Page 65, note 1.

KI'LA'S. Mr. F. S. Growse, C. S., informs me that gilás is to the present day the Kashmírí term for cherries.

Page 70, line 28.

MAHUWA'. This partly confirms Elliot's note under Gulú (Beames' Edition, 'Races of the N. W. Provinces,' II, p. 335) and corrects Shakespeare's Dictionary.

Page 73, line 1.

PA'N LEAVES. In the 3rd Book of the Áín (Text, p. 416, l. 20) Abulfazl mentions another kind of pán, called Mak'hí or Mukhí, grown in Bihár.

Page 78, last line.

QAIÇU'RI'. Col. Yule tells me that the correct name is FANÇU'RI'. According to Marco Polo, Fançúr was a state in Sumátra, probably the modern Barús.

Page 81, note.

ZI'RBA'D. This should be ZERBA'D, for zer i bád, i. e. 'under the wind,' leeward, the Persian translation as Col. Yule informs me, of the Malay Báwah angín, 'below the wind,' by which the Malays designate the countries and islands to the east of Sumátra.

Kháfí Khán (I, p. 11) couples Zerbád with Khatá, over both of which Túlí Khán, son of Chingiz Khán, ruled.

Page 87, note 2.

کرکراق. I have since seen the spelling کرکیراق which brings us a step nearer to etymology. Yaráq means 'supellex;' and kürk means 'fur.'

Page 88, line 1.

AHMADA'BA'D. The comma after Ahmadábád may be wrong. Ahmadábád is often called Ahmadábád i Gujrát.

Page 88, line 19.

GHIA'S I NAQSHBAND. We know from the Tazkirah of Ṭáhir Naçrábádí that Ghiás was born in Yazd. "The world has not since seen a weaver like him. Besides, he was a good poet. Once he bought a piece of mushajjar brocade, on which there was among other figures that of a bear between some trees, to Sháh 'Abbás (1585 to 1629), when a courtier after praising the stuff admired the bear. Ghiás said on the spur of the moment.

خواجه در خرش بیش مینیند هرکسے نقش خویش مینیند

"The gentleman looks chiefly at the bear. Each looks at his own likeness."

Bears in the East are looked upon as stupid animals. A proverb says, خرس در کوه ابوسینا

'A beat on the hill is an Avicenna,' i. e. a fool among bigger fools is a philosopher. Naçrábádí quotes some of Ghiás's verses.

Page 94, middle.

COTTON CLOTHS. Of the various cotton cloths mentioned by Abulfazl—

Chautár was woven in Haweli Saháranpúr.
Síri Çáf and Bhíraun, in Dharangáon, Khándesh. " Gangájal, in Sirkár G'horág'hát, Bengal.
Mihrkul, in Alláhábád, and Panchhtoliah was mentioned on p. 510, in connexion with NúrJahán.

Page 99, note 2.

ÁDAM I HAFTHAZA'RI'. I find that this expression is much older than Abulfazl's time. Thus Ziáuddín Baraní in his preface to the Táríkh i Fírúzsháhí (p. 5, l. 6), states that the Khalífah 'Umar lived seven thousand years after Ádam.

Page 101, note 6.

ASHRAF KHAN. A correcter and fuller biography of this grandee was given on p. 389. He died in 983, not 973.

Page 102, note 1.

KHANDA'N. The collection of Delhi MSS. belonging to the Government of India has a copy of the Tazkirat ul Auliá written by Khandán in 920 A. H., and yet the Mir-át ul 'Alam gives 915 as the year of his death.

Page 104, note 2, line 7.

BECHU'. Though Bechú is a common Hindústání name, there is little doubt that the correct name of the saint is Panchú, or Panjú, vide p. 538. Badáoní (II, 54) gives as táríkh of his death the words شیخ پنجو and tells the reader to subtract the middle letter (پ), i. e. 971—2=969. Vide also my Essay on 'Badáoní and his Works,' Journal, Asiatic Society of Bengal, 1869, p. 118.

Page 116, line 24.

SANGRA'M, Akbar's favourite gun. We know from the Tuzuk (p. 20) that Akbar killed with it Jatmall, the champion of Chítor.

Page 122, lines 22 to 29.

The reader is requested to substitute the following—

Elephants are found in the following places. In the Çúbah of Ágrah, in the jungles of Bayáwán and Narwar, as far as Barár; in the Çúbah of Iláhábád, in the confines of Pannah, (Bhat'h) Ghorá, Ratanpúr, Nandanpúr, Sirguja, and Bastar; in the Çúbah of Málwah, in Handiah, Uchhod, Chanderí, Santwás, Bíjágarh, Ráisín, Hoshangábád, Garha, and Hatiágarh; in the Çúbah of Bihár, about Rohtás and in Jhárk'hand; and in the Çúbah of Bengal, in Orísá and in Sátgáon. The elephants from Pannah are the best.

Page 171, note 1.

Sulaimán Kararání reigned in Bengal from 971 to 980.

Page 182, note 6.

Prince Murád was born on the 3rd Muharram, 978. Badáoní II, 132. Vide below.

Page 193, line 2 from below, and note 3.

In the Proceedings of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, for May, 1870, (p. 146) I have shewn that the unclear words in Badáoní's text are,— کناپلان که خوشگاه ایشان است

'the cunabula which is their time of mirth.'

By 'cunabula' the Jesuits meant the representations of the birth of Christ, in wax, &c., which they used to exhibit in Ágrah and Láhor.

Page 270, line 5 from below.

The Çadr read the khuṭbah in the name of the new king, and thus the julús became a fact. Kháfí Khán, I, p. 52, l. 2, from below.

Page 272, line 13.

Maula'na' 'Abdul Ba'qí'. Vide p. 528, note 4.

Page 309.

Akbar's wives. For Raqiyah the diminutive form Ruqayyah is to be substituted.

Regarding Jodh Bái vide next note.

Sulṭán Salímah Begum. She is the daughter of Gulrukh Begum, a daughter of Bábar. Mírzá Núruddín Muhammad, Gulrukh's husband, was a Naqshbandí Khwájah.

Gulrukh Begum must not be confounded with another Gulrukh Begum, who was the daughter of Mírzá Kámrán and wife of Ibrábím Husain Mírzá (vide p. 464).

Of other women in Akbar's harem, I may mention, (1) the daughter of Qází 'Isá (p. 449); (2) an Armenian woman, Tuzuk, p. 324. Vide also Keane's Agra Guide, p. 38. (3) Qismiyah Bánú, married by Akbar in the 19th year (Akbarn. III, 94); 4) a daughter of Shamsuddín Chak (Akbarn. III, 659).

Sulṭa'n Mura'd. He was married to a daughter of Mírzá 'Azíz Kokah (p. 325). Their child, Sulṭán Rustam, did not live long (Akbarn. III, 539, 552).

SULṬA'N DA'NYA'L. The correct date of his birth seems to be the 2nd Jumáda I, 979, not the 10th; but the MSS. continually confound دوم and دهم. His first wife was a daughter of Sulṭán Khwájah (p. 423), by whom he had a daughter of the name of Sa'ádat Bánú Begum, who was born in 1000 (Akbarn. III, 643).

Page 310.

JAHA'NGI'R'S WIVES. An additional list was given on p. 477, note 2. Besides them, I may mention, (1) a daughter of Mubárak Chak of Kashmír; (2) a daughter of Husain Chak of Kashmír (Akbarn. III, 659); (3) another Kashmírí lady, mentioned in Akbarn. III, 639.

I stated on p. 309, that Jahángír's mother was called Jodh Bái. This is wrong. Jodh Bái was the wife of Jahángír and daughter of Mot'h Rájah of Jodhpúr. There is little doubt that Jahángír's mother (the Maryam uzzamání) is the daughter of Rájah Bihárí Mall and sister to Rájah Bhagwán Dás.

Page 314, last line.

DEATH OF MI'RZA' RUSTAM. Thus the date is given in the Maásir ul Umará; but from the Pádisháhnámah (II, 302) we see that Mírzá Rustam died on, or a few days before, the 1st Rabí' I., 1052. The author adds a remarks that "the manners (auzá') of the Mírzá did not correspond to his noble birth, which was perhaps due to the absence of nobility in his mother."

Page 315, line 11.

QARA'QU'ILU TURKS. The correct name is Qaráqoinlü. The Calcutta Chaghtái Dictionary gives Qaráqúnílü. Vambéry (History of Bokhárá, p. 265, note) mentions the Ustajlü, Shámlí, Nikallü, Bahárlü, Zulqadr, Kájar, and Afshár, as the principal Turkish tribes that were living in Transcaucasia, on the southern shore of the Caspian and in the west of Khurásán. Qaráqoinlü means 'the black sheep tribe.'

Page 317, note 1.

The correct name of the place where Bairam was defeated is Gúnáchúr, گوناچور, which lies S. E. of Jálindhar. The word کنور پهلور, which the Bibl. Indica Edition of Badáoní gives, contains 'Phillaur,' which lies S. W. of Gúnáchúr.

Page 324, note 1.

I do not think that Pír Muhammad came from the Sharwán mentioned in this note. It is more likely that he was a Shirwání Afghán.

Page 325, note.

This note has been corrected on p. 406, line 10, and p. 416, note 1.

Page 329, line 8 from below.

ZULQADR, is the name of a Turkmán tribe; vide above.

Page 339, last line.

GOGANDAH. Regarding the correct date of the battle vide p. 418, note 2.

Page 351.

TODAR MALL. The Maásir ul Umará says that Todar Mall was born at Láhor. But it is now certain that Todar Mall was born at Láharpúr, in Audh; vide Proceedings, Asiatic Society, Bengal, September 1871, p. 178.

Page 372, note.

MIYA'N KA'L. The note is to be cancelled. Miyán Kál has been explained on p. 545, note.

Page 373, line 22.

YU'SUF KHA'N. Regarding his death vide Tuzuk, p. 328. His son 'Izzat Khán is wrongly called in the Bibl. Indica Edition of the Pádisháhnámah (I, b., p. 302) غیرت خان. His name was 'Azíz ullah; hence his title 'Izzat.

Page 379, last line.

QA'SIM KHA'N. I dare say, the phrase 'Chamanárái Khurásán' merely means that he was Governor of Kábul.

Page 381, line 14.

BA'QI' KHA'N. He is often called 'Khán Báqí Khán.'

Page 389, line 1.

MI'R BA'BU'S. The spelling 'Uigur' is now common; but in India the word is pronounced 'Ighur.' The query may be cancelled; vide p. 441, note.

Page 398, line 10.

DASTAM KHA'N. Vambéry spells 'Dostum.'

Page 413.

SHAIKH FARI'D I BUKHA'RI'. That the name of Farid's father was Sayyid Ahmad i Bukhárí, may be seen from the short inscription on the 'Bukhárí Mosque' in the town of Bihár, which was built by Shaikh Láḍ, at the cost of Farid i Bukhárí, and bears the date 16th Rajab, 1017.

Mr. J. G. Delmerick has sent me the following inscription from Farid's Jámi' Masjid in Farídábád,— بعهد شاه نور الدین جهانگیر — شهنشاهی بدین و داد و احسان

اساس این بنای خیر بنهاد — فرید عصر و ملت مرتضی خان
بعز و شوکت و جود و سخاوت — خلف ابن الخلف تا شاه مردان
رقم خیر البقاع از خامهٔ سرزد — پی تاریخ این جاوید بنیان

1. In the reign of Sháh Núruddín, a king who is pious, just, and liberal,

2. Murtazá Khán, the unique one (farid) of the age and faith, erected this religious building.

3. He is honored, powerful, generous, and liberal, a worthy descendant of the king of men ['Alí].

4. As Tárikh of this lasting structure, the words Khair ul Biqá' issued from the pen.

This gives 1014, A. H.

Page 424, line 24.

KHWA'JAH ṬA'HIR MUHAMMAD. He is mentioned as a Sijistání on p. 528, among the Bakhshís.

Page 431, note 1.

MA'ÇU'M KHA'N KA'BULÍ'. This rebel, who gave Akbar no end of trouble, had the audacity to assume royal prerogatives in Bengal. The following inscription I received, through Bábu Rájendrála Mitra, from Rájah Pramatha Náth, Rájah of Dighaputi, Rájsháhí. It was found in a ruined mosque at a village, called Chatmohor, not very far from Dighaputi.

این مسجد رفیع در زمان سلطان الاعظم عمدة السادات ابو الفتح محمد معصوم خان
خلد الله ملکه ابدا یا رب و یا باقي بناکرد خان رفیع مکان عالیشان خان محمد بن توي
محمد خان قاقشال في سنه تسع و ثمانین و تسعمایة ||

This lofty mosque was built during the time of the great Sulṭán, the chief of Sayyids, Abul Fath Muhammad Ma'çúm Khán—May God perpetuate his kingdom for ever, O Lord, O Thou who remainest! by the high and exalted Khán, Khán Muhammad, son of Túí Muhammad Khán Qáqshál, in the year 989.

This was, therefore, nearly two years after the outbreak of the Bengal Military Revolt (9th Zí Hajjah, 987); vide p. 439.

Page 438, line 13.

SAYYID MUHAMMAD. Regarding the correct date of his death, vide p. 490.

Page 450, line 14.

SU'RAT. There is every probability that Sorat'h, and not Súrat, is intended.

Page 456.

THE GAKK'HARS. Vide pp. 486, 487.

The places Pharwálah and Dángalí (دانگلی, not Dangálí) mentioned in the note as the principal places in the Gakk'har District, are noticed in E. Terry's 'Voyage to East India' (London, 1655, p. 88). "Kakares, the principal Cities are called Dekalee "and Púrhola; it is a large Province, but exceeding mountainous; divided it is from "Tartaria by the Mountain Caucasus; it is the extremest part North under the Mogol's "subjection."

De Laët also gives the same passage.

Page 460, line 2.

YARA'Q KHA'N. The correct name is, I believe, Boráq Khán. Vide Vambéry's 'Bokhara', p. 153.

Page 493, line 10.

KU'CH HA'JO. Regarding Kúch Hájo and Kúch Bihár and Mukarram Khán, vide my article on these countries in Journal, Asiatic Society, Bengal, for 1872, p. 54.

Page 493, line 21.

GHAZNI'N KHA'N, of Jálor.

"The Pahlunpúr family is of Afghán origin, belonging to the Lohání tribe, and, it is said, occupied Bihár in the reign of Humáyún. They subsequently took service with the king of Dihlí; and from Akbar Sháh, in A. D. 1597, Ghaznín Khán, the chief, obtained the title of Díwán, for having successfully repulsed an invasion of Afghán tribes; for his services on this occasion, he was also rewarded with the government of Láhor. In A. D. 1682, Fath Khán Díwán received the province of Jálor, Sánchor, Pahlunpúr, and Dísah from Aurangzíb. Fath Khán died in 1688, leaving an only son, Pír Khán, who was supplanted in his rights by his uncle Kamál Khán, who, subsequently, being unable to withstand the increasing power of the Rát'hors of Márwár; was compelled, in A. D. 1698, to quit the country [Jálor], and retire with his family and dependants to Pahlunpúr, where the family has remained ever since.—Selections, Bombay Government Records, No. XXV.—New Series, p. 15.

Page 508, line 13 from below.

WAÇLI'. This is wrong, and should be Hijrí. Khwájah Muhammad Sharíf, as correctly stated in the genealogical tree on p. 512, had two sons. The eldest is A'ghá Muhammad Ṭáhir, whose nom-de-plume is Waçlí, and Ghiás Beg.

Page 524, line 20.

ALI' QULI' BEG ISTAJLU'. Vambéry spells Ustajlú, which is the name of a Turkish tribe; vide p. 619.

INDEX TO THE FIRST VOLUME

OF THE

ÁÍN I AKBARÍ.

[The numbers refer to the pages; n. means 'footnote.' When names occur twice or several times on a page, they have been entered only once in the Index.

The geographical names form a separate Index.]

ABÁ Bakr, son of Bahádur Khán Qushbegí, 495.
'Abbás Çafawí, Sháh, converts people to Shí'ism, 445; 453, 603*n.*
Abdáls, the forty, 197, 197*n.*
Abdál Chak, 478.
Abdárkhánah, 55.
'Abdí, of Níshápúr, a kátib, 102.
'Abdí Kor, 482.
'Abdul 'Alí Tarkhán, Mírzá, 361.
'Abdul 'Azím, vide Sultán Khwájah.
'Abdul 'Azíz, of Dihlí, 538.
'Abdul 'Azíz, a kátib, 103.
'Abdul Báqí, Çadr, 275, 528, 541.
'Abdul Bárí, Khwájah, 507, 512.
'Abduççamad, Khwájah, Shírínqalam, of Shíráz, 107, 495 (No. 266).
'Abduççamad, Khwájah, of Káshán, 518, (No. 353).
'Abduççamad, a kátib, 102.
'Abdul Ghaffár, of Dihlí, 413.
Abdul Ghafúr, Mírzá, 327.
'Abdul Ghafúr, Shaikh, 538.
'Abdul Ghaní, Shaikh, 547.
'Abdul Hai, name of several kátibs, 100, 101, 103.
'Abdul Hai, Mír 'Adl, 468, 471, 480 (No. 230).
'Abdul Haq, of Sabzwár, a kátib, 101.
'Abdul Karím, a kátib, 102.
'Abdul Karím Sindhí Amír Khán, 472.
'Abdul Kháliq Khawáfí, 447.
'Abdullah Ashpaz, 100.
'Abdullah Çairafí, Khwájah, 100.
'Abdullah Khán Bárha, 392.
'Abdullah Khán Firúzjang, 492, 496, 503, 505, 513*n.*, 514.
'Abdullah Khán Mughul, 309, 396 (No. 76).
'Abdullah Khán, Sayyid, 297*n.* 465 (No. 189).
'Abdullah Khán Uzbak, 320 (No. 14), 371.
'Abdullah Khán Uzbak, king of Bukhárá, 411, 468.
'Abdullah, Khwájah, son of Khwájah 'Abdullatíf, 423 (No. 109).
'Abdullah, Khwájah, Khwájagán Khwájah, 423.
'Abdullah Marwáríd, Khwájah, 528, 583*n.*
'Abdullah, Mír, a kátib, 103; a singer,
'Abdullah, Mírzá, vide Sardár Khán.

Abdullah Sarfaráz Khán, 492 (No. 257).
Abdullah, son of Nizám Murtazá Khán, 469.
'Abdullah, Shaikh, son of Muhammad Ghaus, 457.
'Abdullah, son of Sa'íd Khán, 466.
Abdullah, Sultán of Káshghar, 322, 459.
'Abdullah Súltánpúrí, 544; vide Makhdúmul Mulk.
'Abdullaṭíf, Mír, of Qazwín, 447, 545.
'Abdullaṭíf, Mírzá, 327.
'Abdullaṭíf, son of Naqíb Khán, 449.
'Abdul Majíd, vide Açaf Khán.
'Abdul Malik ibn Marwán, 36.
'Abdul Maṭlab Khán, 403 (No. 83).
'Abdul Múmin, Mír, 522 (No. 374).
'Abdul Muqtadir, 469.
'Abdunnabí, Çadr, 169, 173, 177, 185, 187, 268, 272, 273, 490, 491, 546, 547.
'Abdul Qádir Akhúnd, 485, 545.
'Abdul Qádir Badáoní, vide Badáoní.
'Abdul Qádir Jílání, 402.
'Abdul Qádir, Maulánú, 544.
'Abdul Qádir Sarhindí, 544.
'Abdul Quddús, of Gango, 538, 546.
'Abdurrahím Khalúlí, a kátib, 100.
'Abdurrahím Khar, 414, 454, 455*n*.
'Abdurrahím, of Khwárazm, a kátib, 102.
'Abdurrahím, of Lak'hnau, Shaikh, 338, 470 (No. 197).
'Abdurrahím, Maulánú, a kátib, 103.
'Abdurrahím Mírzá KhánKhánán, vide KhánKhánán.
'Abdurrahím, son of Qáim Khán, 371.
'Abdurrahmán Duldai, 465 (No. 186).
'Abdurrahmán, Mírzá, 464 (No. 183).
'Abdurrahmán Súr, 366 n., 383*n*.
'Abdurrashíd, king of Káshghar, 460, 460*n*.
'Abdurrazzáq Çimçámuddaulah, 445*n*.
'Abdurrazzáq, Mír, of Gílán, 424, 472.
'Abdussalám, son of Mu'azzam Khán, 521*n*.
'Abdussalám, Maulánú, 545.
'Abdussalám Payámí, 601.
'Abdussamí', Qází, 545.
'Abdushshahíd, Khwájah, 423, 539.
'Abdushshukúr, Mullá, 189.
'Abdussubhán Duldai, 517 (No. 349).
'Abdussubhán, Mírzá, 514.
'Abdul Wahháb Bukhárí, Sayyid, 397.
'Abdul Wahháb, Shaikh, 546.
'Abdul Wáhid, Sayyid, 519 (No. 364).
'Abdul Wáhid, Shaikh, 547.
'Abdul Wási', 309.
Abhang Khán, 336*n*.
Aboriginal races, 231, 252; vide Tribes.
Abú Is-háq Firang, Shaikh, 539.
Abú Is-háq, Sayyid, 439, 523 (No. 384).
Abul Baqá, 466.
Abul Baqá, Amír Khán, 472.
Abul Faiz Faizí, 490; vide Faizí.
Abul Farah, Sayyid, of Wásiṭ, 390, 393.
Abul Fath Beg, 318, 492.
Abul Fath Gujrátí, Shaikh, 546.
Abul Fath, Hakím, 175, 205, 206, 344, 402, 424 (No. 112), 542, 569, 574*n*., 586.
Abul Fath Khán, son of Sháistah Khán, 511, 512.
Abul Fath, son of Fazíl Beg, 318, 445, 485, 485*n*.
Abul Fath, son of Muzaffar Mughul, 512 (No. 323).
Abul Fatṭáh Aṭáliq, 501 (No. 294).
Abul Fazl, author of the A'ín, 168, 174, 187, 194, 203, 209, 210, 338, 388, 441, 442, 493*n*.
Abul Fazl of Kázarún, Khaṭíb, 490.
Abul Fazl, son of the Mír 'Adl, 490.
Abul Hasan, Khwájah, 327; vide Açaf Khán.
Abul Hasan, Sayyid, son of the Mír 'Adl, 519 (No. 363).
Abul Husain, 376.
Abul Khair Khán, 472, 473.
Abul Ma'álí, son of the Mír 'Adl, 501, (No. 297); vide Sháh Abul Ma'álí.
Abul Muhammad, 506.

Abul Muzaffar, Mír, 389.
Abul Muzaffar, son of Ashraf Khán, 484 (No. 240).
Abul Qásim Namakín, 414 n., 470 (No. 199).
Abul Qásim, brother of Abdul Qádir Akhúnd, 485 (No. 242).
Abul Qásim, Sayyid, son of the Mír 'Adl, 489 (No. 251).
Abul Qásim, Mír, of Níshápúr, 525 (No. 398).
Abul Qásim, Governor of Gwáliár, 315.
Abul Qásim, of Werkopái, 608*n.*
Abul Wafá, Mír, 472.
Abú Naçr, of Faráh, 41*n.*
Abú Raihán, quoted, 42.
Abú Sa'íd Çawafí Mírzá, son of Sulṭán Husain Mírzá, 313, 314, 496 (No. 271).
'Abú Sa'íd Mírzá, Sulṭán, 316, 322.
Abú Sa'íd, Sulṭán of Kúshghar, 460, 461.
Abú Ṭálib, son of Múnis Khán, 417.
Abú Ṭálib Sháistah Khán, 511.
Abú Ṭálib, son of Sháistah Khán, 511, 512.
Abú Turáb, Mír, Gujrátí, 406, 506.
abwáb ulmál, revenue accounts, 260.
A'çafí, a poet, 582*n.*, 598 n., 600*n.*
A'çafjáh, 510.
A'çaf Khán, A'çafuddaulah, A'çaf Jáh, titles, 368.
A'çaf Khán, (I.), Abdul Majíd, 241, 330, 348, 366 (No. 49).
A'çaf Khán (II.), Ghiásuddín 'Alí, 411, 433 (No. 126), 511.
A'çaf Khán (III.), Ja'far Beg, 209, 411 (No. 98), 310, 311, 465, 518, 572.
A'çaf Khán (IV.), Yamínuddaulah, Mírzá Abul Hasan, 510, 512.
Açálat Khán Lodí, 505.
Achhe, Shaikh, 521*n.*
accounts, how kept, 14; how divided, 260.
açl i jama' ṭúmár, 352.
'açma' i anbiyá, title of a book, 544.
Açwátí, Maulaná, 613*n.*
Ádam, the first man, called 'hafthazárí', 99*n.*, 617.
A'dam Bárha, Sayyid, 392, 521*n.* [486.
A'dam, Sulṭán, Gakk'har, 322, 455, 457,
Adham Khán, son of Mahum Anagah, 263, 323 (No. 19).
Adham, Mír, 439.
Adhan, Shaikh, 538.
adhelah, a coin, 31.
'A'dil Khán, son of Sháh Muhammad Qalátí, 432 (No. 125).
'A'dil Sháh, 466*n.*
'adl gutkah, a coin, 30.
admiralty, 279.
admission to court, 156.
advances to officers, 265.
Adwand, of Oríssá, 526 (No. 413).
Afgháns, their last stand under 'Usmán Lohání, 520, 521; their character, 399; 517.
Aflátún Mírzá, 347. Afkím, 377.
Afrásiáb, son of Mírzá Muhammad Ha-
Afrídís, 514.
Afshár, a tribe, 619.
áftábí, a coin, 29, 30.
áftábgír, a royal ensign, 50.
Afzal Khán, Khwájah Sulṭán 'Alí, 376 (No. 56).
Afzal Khán, 604*n.*
agar, vide Aloes.
agate, vide bábághúrí.
A'ghá Khizr Naháwandí, 603*n.*
A'ghá Muhammad Náí, 613*n.*
A'ghá Muhammad Ṭáhir Waçlí, 512, 622.
A'ghá Mullá, 369, 497, 508, 508*n.*
A'ghá Mullá Dawátdár, 369, 411.
A'ghá Mullá Qazwíní, 523 (No. 376).
agingir, or firepot, 49.
Ahadís, 20, 161, 231, 246, 248; under Jahángír, 535.
áhanchíní, a metal, 40.
Ahdád, 508.
ahl i jamá'at, 182*n.* [91).
Ahmad Bárha, Sayyid, 289, 407 (No.

Ahmad Beg Khán, brother of Núr Jahán, 511, 512.
Ahmad Beg Kábulí, 451, 465 (No. 191), 522.
Ahmad Beg, Mírzá, 369.
Ahmad Bukhárí, Sayyid, 415, 620.
Ahmad Çúfí, 208, 209.
Ahmadí Fayyáz, Shaikh, 546.
Ahmad Khán Niyází, 484.
Ahmad, Khaṭṭú, Shaikh, 507.
Ahmad Lodí, 506.
Ahmad, Mír, Munshí, 439.
Ahmad, Mullá, of Tattah, 106, 206.
Ahmad Qásim Kokah, 502 (No. 307).
Ahmad, Sayyid, 505.
Ahmad Sháh, Razí ul Mulk, of Gujrát, 385.
Ahmad, Shaikh, a kátib, 100.
Ahmad, Shaikh, 544.
Ahmad, Shaikh, son of Salím Chistí Síkríwál, 475 (No. 210).
Ahmad, Shaikh, son of 'Abdul Quddús, 546.
Ahmad, Sulṭán of Gujrát, 506.
Ahrár Khwájah, 423, 539.
aimah tenures, 272, 274.
aimáq, vide uymáq.
'Ain Khán Dak'hiní, 482.
'A'ishah, Muhammad's wife, 196, 203*n*.
'Aishí, Mauláná, 102.
'ajáibí, a tent, 54.
ákásdiah, 47, 50.
Akbar, Emperor, when born, 62*n*., his miraculous birth, 210, 382; his full name, 186; his mother, 332, 333, 334; his nurses, vide Mahum Anagah, Píchah Ján Anagah, Jí Jí Anagah; his attachment to relatives, 324, 325; his children, 308; his wives, 173, 309, 618; his brothers, vide Muhammad Hakím Mírzá, and Mírzá Ibráhím, 526; his character, 154, 155; how he spends his time, 154; abhors cruelty, 133*n*.; regards the performance of his duty an act of worship, 11; enters into details, 243; is a good physiognomist, 238; believes in lucky days, 91*n*.; is 'lucky,' 243; is musical, 51; is witty, 427; shews himself to the people, 156; how he dines, 58; invents new names, 45, 59, 65, 90, 104, 127, 129, 139*n*.; is fond of fruit, 64; dislikes meat, 61; abstains from it, 155; wears woollen stuffs like Çúfís, 90; likes only certain books, 103; is fond of painting, 107, 108; of elephants and trained leopards, 131, 288; likes to see spiders fight, 296; does not hunt on Fridays, 290; invents a carriage, 275; and a wheel for cleaning guns, 115; his favorite gun Sangrám, 116, 617; invents elephant gear, 127; improves his army, 232; introduces the brand, or the dágh o mahallí law, 232, 233, 326, 600*n*.; improves guns, 113; his forced march from A'grah to Gujrát, 434 n., 325, 416, 416*n*.; his religion, 49; is the spiritual guide of his people, 162; performs miracles, 164, 284, 286, 287; is the representative of God, 188; is king by Divine Right, Preface, iii.; abolishes the jazyah, 189; interdicts beef, 193; orders the courtiers to shave off their beards, 193, 610*n*.; looks upon dogs and pigs as clean, 194; abolishes the Hijrah, 195; hates every thing Arabic, 195, 198, 206; dislikes the names 'Muhammad' and 'Ahmad,' 355*n*.; makes the Mullás drink wine, 197, 468; calls a Zoroastrian priest from Persia, 210; keeps Parsí feasts, 276; discourages circumcision and the rite of Suttee, 207; saves a Suttee, 428; hates the learned and drives them from court, 173, 190, 191; resumes their grants of land, 268, 269, 270; his views on marriage, 277, and on education, 278; fixes the age for marriage, 195; worships fire and the sun, 49, 200, 202; founds a new sect, 165; admits pupils to it by ceremony, 203 (vide Divine Faith); is opposed for his religious opinions, 401, especially by 'Abdullah of Túrán, 468; is called a God, 561; forces courtiers to prostrate themselves before him, vide sijdah; his last illness, 467; day of his death, 212*n.*; is buried at Sikandrah, 211.

Akbarnámah, Lucknow Edition of, 435*n.*
Akbar Qulí Sultán, 486, 487.
ákhtah, meaning of, 432*n.*
Akhtachí, an officer over horses, 138.
Al i Muzaffar, a dynasty, 445.
aláchah, a stuff, vide alchah.
A'lá Hazrat, a title, 337*n.*
A'lá Kháqán, a title, 337*n.*
'alam, a royal standard, 50.
'Alam Bárha, Sayyid, 392, 395*n.*
'Alam Kábulí, Mullá, 159*n.*, 546.
'Alam Lodí, 506.
'Aláuddaullah Kámí, 447, 447*n.*
'Aláuddaulah, Mírzá, 508.
'Aláuddín Harátí, a kátib, 102.
'Aláuddín Islám Khán, 493, 519, 520.
'Aláuddín Khawáfí, Khwájah, 446.
'Aláuddín Khiljí, his coins, 18; his army reforms, 242; interferes with grants of land, 271, 367*n.*, 460*n.*, 491*n.*
'Aláuddín Lárí, 540.
'Aláuddín Majzúb, 539.
'Aláuddín Mírzá, 522.
'Alá ul Mulk, of Lár, 601*n.*
'Alá ul Mulk, Mír, of Tirmiz, 322.
alchah, a melon, 65; a stuff, 91, 91*n.*
Alexander the Great (Sikandar), 343, 553.
'Alí, the Khalífah, 99.
'Alí Aqghar, Mírzá, 413.
'Alí Ahmad, the engraver, 22, 27, 52, 53.
'Alí Akbar, Mír, 382 (No. 62).
'Alí Akbar Tashbíhí, Mír, 596*n.*
'Alí Beg Akbarsháhí, Mírzá, 482.
'Alí Beg 'Alamsháhí, 482 (No. 237).
'Alí Chaman, a kátib, 103.
'Alí Dost Khán, 533.
Alí ibn Hilál, a calligraphist, 100.
'Alí Khán, Rájah, of Khándesh, 327, 335.
'Alí Khán Chak, 478.
'Alí Mardán Bahádur, 496 (No. 273).
'Alí, Mír, a kátib, 101, 102, 103.
'Alí, Mír, Sayyid Judáí, of Tabríz, a painter and poet, 107, 590; ——, a musician, 613; ——, of Qum, 598.
'Alí Muhammad Asp, 492 (No. 258).
'Alí, Qází, 346.
'Alí Qulí, vide Khán Zamán.
'Alí Qulí Beg Istajlú, Sher Afkan Khán, 524 (No. 394), 622.
'Alí Qulí Khán Indarábí, 432 (No. 124).
'Alí Rái, of Little Tibbat, 310, 474, 607*n.*
'Alí Sher, Mír, 101, 338.
'Alí Shukr Beg, 315.
'Alí Yár, 408.
Alif Khán Gujrátí, 386.
'alísherí, a melon, 65.
Allah Bakhsh Qadr, 436.
Allah Qulí, 486, 487.
Allah Yár Khán, 499.
alms, paid at court, 14, 266, 267.
aloes, wood of aloes, 80.
aloní, 26.
alphabets, 98.
Alqás Mírzá Safawí, 314.
Altún Qulij, 500 (No. 290).
Amánullah, son of Saif Kokah, 518, (No. 356).
Ambah Khán Chak Kashmírí, 474, 474*n.* 497.
'ambar, 77.
'Ambar, Malik, 337, 338, 339, 412.
Amín Khán Ghorí 516.
Amín Rází, Khwájah, 508, 512.
Amínuddín Injú, Mír, 451.

Amír Beg Pairawí, 600
Amír Chaubán, 316.
Amír Haidar, of Bilgrám, 316*n*.
Amír Khán, 472.
Amír Khán Mughul Beg, 373.
Amír Khán, Sayyid, 445*n*.
Amír Khusrau Sháh, 311, 315.
Amír Khusrawí, Sayyid, 591*n*.
Amír Mançúr, a kátib, 101.
Amír Qází Asírí, 599.
amír ul umará, a title, 240, 333.
Amr Singh Baghelah, 407.
Amr Singh, or Amrá, Ráná, 342, 447, 519.
Amr Singh, of I'dar, 333.
Amr Singh Sísodiah, 418.
Amrí, a poet, 608*n*.
Amrullah, Mírzá, 339.
amulets, 507.
amusements at court, 297, 303.
anagah, or nurse, 323.
Anand Singh Kachhwáhah, 418.
anín, 219.
Anísí, a poet, 578.
Anísuddín, vide Mihtar Khán.
Anúp Singh Baghelah, 407.
Anwar Mírzá, 327.
'aqáid i nasafí, title of a book, 362*n*.
'Aqil, Mírzá, son of Mírzá 'Isá Tarkhán, 364*n*.
'Aqil Husain Mírzá, 461, 462.
aqtá', or jágír, 256.
'Arab Bahádur, 189, 351, 400, 410, 427, 446, 481.
'Arabsháh, Mír, 563*n*.
'Arafát o 'Araçát, a Tazkirah, 518.
Árám Bánú Begum, Akbar's daughter, 309.
arbáb, meaning, 563*n*.
arbáb uttaháwíl, household expenses 260.
archers, 254.
Ardsher, a Zoroastrian priest, 210.
Ardsher Kábulí, 466.
Arghún, a clan, 361, 363.
Arghún of Kábul, a kátib, 100.
Arghún, Khán, 361.
'Árif Beg Shaikh 'Umarí, 455.
Arjun Singh, 485 (No. 244).
Arlát, a tribe, 476, 508.
armourers, 113.
armours, kinds of, 111, 112.
arms, list of, 110.
army, strength of Akbar's army, 231, 243, 245, 246; of Sháhjahán, 244.
Arqún 'Abdullah, a kátib, 100. arrack, 70.
arsenal, the imperial, 109.
Arsláu, a poet, 609.
Arzání Begum, 311.
'arznámchah, 263.
Asad Reg, son of Khán Daurán Sháh Beg, 378.
Asad Khán, son of Qutlugh Qadam Khán, 432.
Asad Khán, Shujá''i Kábulí, 431*n*.
Asad Khán Turkmán, 382.
Asadullah Khán, of Tabríz, 427 (No. 116).
Asadullah, Mírzá, 522.
Asadullah, son of Sher Khwájah, 459.
Asadullah Turkmán, 382, 427.
ashkhár, 24.
Ashkí, a poet, 590 n., 598.
Ashraf, a poet, 389.
Ashraf Khán Mír Munshí, Muhammad Açghar, 389 (No. 73), 101.
Ashraf Khwájah, 512 (No. 320).
asht, a coin, 31.
ashtdhát, a metallic composition, 41.
ashtsiddh, a coin, 30.
Asírí, of Rai, a poet, 599.
Askaran Kachhwáhah, 430, 458, 531.
'Askarí Mírzá, brother of Humáyún, 319, 348, 441.
'Askárí Mírzá, son of Ja'far Beg, 413.
asrár i maktúm, title of a book, 568*n*.
assaying, mode of, 21.
assessment, under Bairám Khán, 349; under Muzaffar Khán, 349; under Todar Mall, 352; 430; of Kashmír, 346, 411; of Afghánistán, 377.

atálíq, an office, 315, 317, 327, 331, 333, 334, 336, 347, 356, 357 n., 361, 383, 400, 412.
átbegí, master of the horse, 137, 432*n.*
Atgah Khán, Shamsuddín Muhammad, 263, 321 (No. 15).
at'harban, a Sanskrit work, 105.
at'hkhambah, a tent, 54.
'Atíq, 526.
aṭkal, 219.
Atkú Tímúr, 361.
átmah, a coin, 29.
'aṭr, rose water, 510.
Aují, Mullá, 594*n.*
Aulád Husain, 479.
aurang, or throne, 50.
Aurungzíb, 337*n.*, abolishes music, 613*n.*; 615.
aviary, the imperial, 295.
Awáns, a tribe, 456*n.*
awárahnawís, 251.
'Awáriful Ma'árif, title of a book, 433*n.*
'Ayár Dánish, a book by Abulfazl, 106.
A'yat ul Kursí, name of a verse in the Qorán, 168.
Ayáz, slave of Mahmúd of Ghazní, 565*n.*
Azaduddaulah, Mír Jamáluddín Husain, 451.
A'zam Khán, vide Khán i A'zam.
azfár uṭṭíb, a perfume, 82.
Azhar, Maulánú, a kátib, 101, 102.
Azhdar Khán Dak'hiní, 482.
'Azíz Kokah, vide Khán i A'zam.
'Azíz Kábulí, Mírzá, 431*n.*
'Azíz, son of Khán Jahán Lodí, 505.
'Azízullah, Mír, 373.
'Azízullah Turbatí, 527.
'Azmat Lodí, 505.

BA'BA' Balás, 539.
Bábá Beg, 410.
bábághúrí, or agate, 35, 615.
Bábá Hasan Abdál, a saint, 515.
Bábá Khán Qáqshál, 350, 369*n.*, 370; dies, 351.
Bábá Kipúr, 539.
Bábá Qúchín, 445.
bábá shaikhí, a kind of melon, 65, 523.
Bábá Sher Qalandar, a saint, 514.
Bábá Ṭálib, a poet, 607.
Bábá Zambúr, 334, 360.
Bábar, Emperor, introduces gardening, 87; his Memoirs, 105, 335; 311, 362, 420, 460, 618.
Bábú Manklí, 370, 473 (No. 202). babúl wood, 22, 25, 69.
Bábús, Mír, 389, (No. 73), 441*n.*, 620.
Badakhshís, their character, 454.
Badan Singh Bhadauriah, 489.
Badáoní, the historian, 104 n., 168, 261, 372, 435, 438, 476, 547, 582*n.*
bádiyán, 59.
badí 'ul bayán, title of a book, 547.
Badí' uzzamán, son of Mírzá Sháhrukh Badakhshí, 313.
Badí' uzzamán Mírzá, son of Sulṭán Husain Mírzá, 362. [472 n.
Badí 'uzzamán, Mírzá, Shahnawáz Khán,
Badí 'uzzamán, Mírzá, son of Aghá Mullá, 369.
Badí 'uzzamán, Qazwíní, 411.
bádlah (brocade), 510.
Badr, Sayyid, 416.
Badr i 'Álam, Mír, 469.
Bad Singh Bhadauriah, 489*n.*
baghlí, a dirham, 36.
Bahádur, conferred as title, 339.
Bahádur Gohlot, 502 (No. 308).
Bahádur Khán, Muhammad Sa'íd Shaibání, 328, 329, 366, 368, 381, 382.
Bahádur Khán Qurdár, 495 (No. 269).
Bahádur Dantúrí, 524.
Bahádur Khán Gílání, 496.
Bahádur, Sulṭán, of Gujrát, 348, 611*n.*
Bahár Begum, daughter of Jahángír, 130.
Bahár Khán, (No. 87); vide Muhammad Açghar, and Pahár Khán.

Babárlü tribe 315, 359, 619.
Baháuddín Kambú, 497.
Baháuddín Majzúb, of Badáon, 409.
Baháuddín Muftí, 546.
Baháuddín Zakariyá, of Multán, 399.
bahlak, 15.
Bahmanyár, 511, 512.
Bahrám, son of Shamsí, 450.
Bahrám Mírzá Çafawí, 314.
Bahrám Qulí, a musician, 613.
Bahrám Saqqá, a poet, 581, 581*n*.
Bairám Beg, father of Mun'im Khán, 317.
Bairám Khán, Khán Khánán, 309, 315, (No. 10), 332, 348; his assessment, 349; 353, 355, 374, 375, 436, 437, 612*n*., 619.
Bairám Oghlán, 464.
Bairám Qulij, 501.
Bairí Sál, brother of Gajpatí, of Bihár, 498*n*.
baitár, or horse doctor, 138.
Baizáwí, a Qorán commentator, 545.
Bakhshís, of Akbar's reign, 528.
Bakhshí Bánú Begum, 322.
Bakhshú, a singer, 611*n*.
Bakhtyár, a clan of Jalesar, 425.
Bakhtyár Beg Gurd, 474 (No. 204).
Bakhyah Anagah, 398.
Baland Akhtar, 310.
Balbhadr, Rájah of Lak'hinpúr, 345.
Balbhadr Rát'hor, 501 (No. 296).
Balínás, the philosopher, 553*n*.
Báljú Qulij, 501.
Balochís, 338, 360, 397.
Baltú Khán, 475 (No. 207).
bamboo, price of, 224.
bán, 19.
banáits, 253.
Bandah 'Alí Maidání, 499 (No. 284).
Bandah 'Alí Qurbegí, 499.
bandúqchí, vide match-lock-bearers.
Bánká Kachhwáhah, 495 (No. 270).
bankúlís, 253.
Bánú Aghá, 333.
banwárí, 18.
Baqáí, a poet, 595*n*.
Báqí Be Uzbak, 519 (No. 368).
Báqí Billah, 441.
Báqí Khán, 381 (No. 60), 620.
Báqí Khán, son of Ṭáhir Khán, 408.
Báqí Safarchí, 534.
Báqí Sulṭán Uzbak, 313.
Báqí Tarkhán, Mírzá, 420.
Báqir Ançárí, 501 (No. 298).
Báqir Bukhárí, Sayyid, 398.
Báqir, Maulaná, a kátib, 103.
bárah, or a community of twelve villages, 393.
barát, or cheque, 262.
Barawardí soldiers, 231.
barg i nai, a kind of melon, 65.
bárgáh, audience tent, 53.
bárgír, a kind of horse, 133, 135, 139, 215, 263.
Bárha Sayyids, 390 to 395.
Bárí of Harát, a kátib, 101.
Barkhurdár Mírzá, Khán 'Alam, 512 (No. 328).
Barkhurdár, Khwájah, 514.
Barlás, a clan, 341, 365.
Basákhwánís, a sect, 597*n*.
Basáwan, the painter, 108.
Bású, Rájah of Mau, 345, 447, 457.
Batanís, an Afghán tribe, 476*n*.
Báyasanghur, son of Prince Dányál, 310.
Báyasanghur Mírzá, 311.
Bayát, a Turkish tribe, 581.
Báyazíd Bárha, 392, 501 (No. 295).
Báyazíd Beg Turkmán, 501 (No. 299).
Báyazíd Mu'azzam Khán, 492 (No. 260).
Báyazíd, son of Sulaimán of Bengal, 366.
Báz Bahádur of Málwah, 321, 324, 428 (No. 120), 612.
Báz Bahádur, son of Sharíf Khán, 383, 465 (No. 188).
bdellium, 82.
Be, a title, for Beg, 455.
bear, a stupid animal, 617.

Bechú, Shaikh, 538.
Bedár Bakht, Prince, 472*n*.
beef interdicted by Akbar, 193.
beer, manufacture of, 502.
Beg Bábá Kolábí, 441.
Beg Muhammad Toqbáí, 512 (No. 324).
Beg Muhammad Uighur, 518 (No. 360).
Beg Núrín Khán Qúchín, 475 (No. 212).
Beg Oghlú, 421.
Beglar Begí, a title, 333.
Beglar Khán, 450.
Begums, their salaries, 615.
Begum Çáhib, 615.
Bengal Military Revolt, 621.
Benî Dás Bundelá, 488.
betel leaf, cultivation of, 72.
betel nut, 71.
betting, at court, 218, 289.
Bhadauriah clan, 324, 488.
Bhagwán Dás Kachhwáhah, (Bhagwant Dás), 198, 310, 333 (No. 27), 619.
Bhagwán Dás Bundelá, 488.
Bhakkar, Sayyid, 416.
bhangár, a metallic composition, 41.
Bháo Singh Kachhwáhah, 341, 485, 486.
Bhárat Chand Bundelá, 488.
bhelá, a nut, 52*n*.
Bhík, or Bhíkan, Shaikh, 546.
Bhíl Khán Salímsháhí, 343.
Bhím Singh Kachhwáhah, 418, 486.
Bhím, Ráwul of Jaisalmír, 477 (No. 225).
Bhím, Rájah, Daulatsháhí, 337.
bhírán, a stuff, 94, 617.
Bhoj Bhadauriah, 489.
Bhoj Háḍá, 409.
Bhoj Ráj, Shaikháwat, 419.
bholsirí, a fruit, 70.
Bhúgiáls, a Gakk'har tribe, 487.
Bíbí Çafiyah, 441.
Bíbí Sarw i Sahí, 441.
Bichitr Khán, a singer, 612.
Bígarah, meaning of, 506*n*.
Bihárí Mall Kachhwáhah, 309, 328 (No. 23), 619.
Bihrúz, Rájah, 446*n*.
Bihzád, the painter, 107.
Bijlí Khán Afghán, 369.
Bikramájít 469; vide Patr Dás.
Bikramájít, of Gwáliár, 611*n*.
Bikramájít Baghelah, 407.
Bikramájít Bhadauriah, 489.
Bikramájít Bundelá, 488.
Bilás, son of Tánsen, 613*n*.
bín, a musical instrument, 612.
Bínà, Shaikh, 543.
binsat, a coin, 29.
bír, meaning of, 494*n*.
Bír Bar, Rájah, 175, 183, 188, 192, 198, 199, 204, 205, 209, 330, 344, 404 (No. 85), 425.
Bír Bhadr Baghelah, 406.
Bir Mandal Khán, a musician, 612.
Bír Sáh, of Gondwánah, 367.
Bir Singh Deo Bundelá, 458, 469, 487, 488. biryán, a dish, 60.
Biswás Ráo, 449.
Bízan (Bízhan), 508.
blood of enemies drunk, 427.
Boráq Khán, 621.
borax, 26.
boy's love, 319, 349, 360, 556*n*., 557*n*., 569*n*.; vide immorality.
branding-horses, 139, 140*n*.; introduced by Akbar, 233, 255.
brass, how made, 41.
bread, how prepared, 61.
bricks, price of, 223.
Bud Singh Bhadauriah, 489*n*.
Budí (Badhí) Chand of Nagarkoṭ, 330, 345, 404.
buffalo hunts, 293.
bughrá, a dish, 60.
bugráwatí, 25.
Buhlúl Khán Miánah, 506.
buhlúlí, a coin, 31.
buildings, 222; estimates of, 226.
bukhár (gas), 39, 41.
Buláqí (Dáwar Bakhsh), 310.
Buláqí Begum, 310.

Bundelá Rájpúts, of Uṇḍchah, genealogy, 488.
burd, or drawn (a game), 298.
Burhán, Shaikh, 539.
Burhání, Mír, 389.
Burj 'Alí, 319.
Buzurg, Mír, of Bhakkar, 515.

ÇABUHÍ, a poet, 582.
Çabrí, a poet, 613.
Çádiq, Maulánd, 541.
Çádiq Muhammad Khán, 355 (No. 43).
Çadrs, of Akbar's reign, 268, 270, 271, 528, 618; Çadr of women, 510.
Çadr i 'Iráqí, a kátib, 100.
Çadr Jahán Muftí, 270, 272, 468 (No. 194), 185, 208, 209, 212*n*.
Çadruddín, Qází, 545.
Çafáí, Sayyid, 514, 515.
Çafar 'Agbá Khudáwand Khán Gujrátí, 354.
Çafdar Beg, son of Haidar Muhammad Khán, 512 (No. 326).
Çafdar Khán, 512.
Çafdar Khán Khwájah Khail, 552.
Çafshikan Mírzá Çafawí, 315.
Çafshikan Khán, Mírzá Lashkarí, 347, (formerly Çafdar Khán).
Çáhib i Zamán, 189; vide Imám Mahdí.
Çáhib Qirán, a title, 337*n*.
Çáib, a poet, 580*n*.
Çairafí, a mint officer, 18.
Çairafí, a poet, 582*n*.; vide Çarfí.
Çalábat Khán, 445*n*.
Çalábat Khán Bárha, 392, 407.
Çalábat Khán Chirgis, 442.
Çalábat Khán Lodí, 503.
Çalábat Khán Nizámsháhí, 499. caligraphists of fame, 100.
caligraphy, 99.
Çálih Díwánah, 479.
Çálihah Bánú, 371.
Çálihí, a poet, 583.
camels, the imperial, 143; different kinds of, 143; their food, 144; harness, 145; are shorn, 146; have oil injected into the nose, 146; how trained, 147; how mustered, 216.
camphor, 78, 79; causes impotence, 385. camps, 45.
canals, 333, 491.
çandalí, 306, 337*n*. cannons, 112, 113, 115.
cards, 303, 304.
Çarfí (Çairafí), a poet, 581*n*.; of Sáwah, [586.
carpets, 55.
carriages, or bahals, 275; English carriages, 275*n*.; for trained leopards, 288; kinds of, 150.
cash-payments, 134*n*.
cattle, 148; good in Bengal and the Dak'hin, bad in Dihlí, 149; their food, 149; how mustered, 216.
cereals, prices of, 62.
chábuk-suwár, an officer over horses, 138.
chahárgoshah, a coin, 29*n*., 30.
Chahár nahrí, a canal, 491*n*.
Chaks, a Kashmír family, 478.
Chalmah Beg, vide Khán 'Alam.
Chaman, title of a historical work, 347.
Champat Bundelá, 488.
Chánd Bíbí, 336*n*.
Chand Khán and Chand Miyán, two singers, 612.
Chandá Ráo, Sísodiah, 418.
chandal mandal, a play, 303.
Chandr Man Bundelá, 488.
Chandr Sen, son of Máldeo, of Jodhpúr (Márwár), 330, 357, 419, 476.
Chandráwat, 417.
chandrkránt, a stone.
character, of Kashmírís, 399; of the Gakk'hars, 487; of Gujrátís, 387; of Badakhshís, 454; of the women of Persia, Túrán, Khurásán, and India, 327; of Afgháns, 399; of Kambús, 399; of Dak'hinís, 443; of Turks, 540.

charkh, 300.
charn, a coin, 31.
Cháshnígír, a mint officer, 23.
Chatbanúrís, a clan, 391, 394.
chatr, or umbrella, 50.
Chatr Bhoj, 332.
Chatr Khán, a musician, 613*n*.
Chatr Sál Kachhwáhah, 418.
Chátraurís, a clan, 391, 394.
chatrmandal, a method of hunting, invented by Akbar, 289.
chatrtoq, a royal standard, 50.
chaubín, a kind of tent, 46.
chaubín ráotí, a kind of tent, 46, 53.
chaugán, or hockey, 297.
chaukí, or guard, 257.
chaupar, a game, 303, 349.
chautár, a stuff, 94, 617.
chelahs, or slaves, 253, 253*n*., 254; definition of the term 'slave,' 254.
cheque, or barát, 262.
cherry tree, 228.
chhách hiyá, 25.
Chhajhú Bárha, 477 (No. 221).
Chibbs, a tribe, 456*n*.
chik'hí, a dish, 59.
Chín Qulij, 500 (No. 293), 501, 34*n*. (where wrong Husain Qulij).
Chingiz Khán, his descendants, 361, 459; his law (torah), 454.
Chingiz Khán Gujrátí, 321, 323, 386, 462.
Chingiz Khán Nizámsháhí, 442.
Chirkis Rúmí, 383.
chirwah, 252.
Christians exhibit crosses and representations in wax of the birth of Christ, 193, 193*n*.; vide cunabula.
Christianity, taught the Imperial princes, 182.
chugal, a coin, 29.
chúwah, a scent, 81.
Çimçámuddaulah, son of Mír Husám Injú, 451.
Çimçámuddaulah, 445*n*.
civet, vide zabád.
cocoanut, 71.
coins, list of Akbar's coins, 27; vide currency.
collectors of revenue, their salary, 251.
colours, nature of, 96.
contingents of the Mançabdárs, 241, 244, 248.
conversions, to Christianity, 499; to Islám, 237*n*., 407, 418, 446*n*., 458, 460, 461*n*., 513*n*.; to Shí'ism, 445, 584*n*.
copper, 40.
cornelian, its exhilarating properties, 510*n*.
cotton stuffs, 94, 617.
court ceremonies, 45, 156, 157, 158, 160, 266, 267; vide Chingiz Khán's law.
cows, the imperial, 148; cowdung, how used, 21.
crews, of ships, 280.
çúbahs, two officers appointed to each, 423.
Çúfí Çáhib, meaning of, 590*n*.
çúfiánah, fast days at court, 59, 61.
çulh i kul, or toleration, 448*n*.
cunabula, 618; vide Christians.
Çúrat o Ma'ní, title of a Masnawí, 600*n*.
currency, changes in, 32.

DABISTA'N Ul Mazáhib, a work on religious sects, 209, 213, 452, 453.
Daftar, of the empire, 260.
dágh o mahallí system, 242, 242, 255, 256, 370, 402, 411, 600*n*.; vide branding.
dágú, a warm mantle, 333.
dahserí tax, 275.
Dái Dilárám, 510.
Dairám, of Chaurágarh, 407.
dákhilí soldiers, 231, 254, 255.
Dak'hinís, noted for stupidity, 443.
Dak hiní, Mirzá, 472*n*.
dakhl, a kind of poetry, 102*n*., 364.

Dakhlí, a poet, 608.
Dák-Mewṛahs, 252*n.*
Dalap Dás Kachhwáhah, 483.
Dalpat, son of Rái Rái Singh, 359, 465, 490 (No. 252).
Dalpat Ujjainiah, 513, 513*n.*
dám, a coin, 31.
damámah, a musical instrument, 50.
damának, a kind of gun, 113.
dampukht, a dish, 61.
damrí, a coin, 31.
dáng, a weight, 36.
Dányál, Sulṭán, Akbar's son, born and died, 309, 434*n.*; his children, 310, 34*n.*, 48, 336, 423, 450, 619.
Dányál i Chishtí, Shaikh, 309.
Dárá Shikoh, Prince, 314, 478.
Dáráb Khán, Mírzá Dáráb, 337, 338, 339.
darb, a coin, 31.
darbán, or porters, 252.
Darbár Khán, 464 (No. 185).
darsan, 157; darsaniyah, 207.
Darwísh, Mauláná, 101.
Darwísh, Sayyid, son of Shams Bukhárí, 523 (No. 382).
Darwísh Bahrám Saqqá, 581.
Darwísh Khusrau Qazwíní, 453.
Darwísh Muhammad, of Mashhad, 528.
Darwísh Muhammad Uzbak, 402 (No. 81).
Daryá Khán Rohílah, 504, 505.
dasá, a coin, 31.
Dastam Khán, 398 (No. 79), 620.
Daswant'h, a painter, 108.
Dáúd, king of Bengal, 318, 330, 331, 374, 375, 379.
Dáúd, a singer, 612.
Dáúd Jhanníwál, Shaikh, 539.
Daudá Háḍá, 400, 409, 410.
Daudá Sísodiah, 418.
Daulat, Sayyid, 445.
Daulat Bakhtyár, Shaikh, 501 (No. 300).
Daulat Khán Lodí, 512 (No. 309), 335, 336.
Daulat Khán, son of Amín Khán Ghorí 326.
Daulat Nisá Begum, 477*n.*
Daulat Shád Bibí, 309.
Daurí, a kátib and poet, 103.
Dawá Khán, 460*n.*
Dawáí, 481, 543.
Dawám, Mír, of Khurásán, 613.
Dáwan, Shaikh, a musician, 613.
dawáir, a class of letters, 103*n.*
Dáwar Bakhsh, Prince, 310, 327.
Dawwání, 481, 601*n.*
days of fast, at court, 61.
Deb Chand Rájah Manjholah, 475.
Debí Singh, 488.
deer, 291; deer fights, 218.
De Laët, 521, 535, 621.
Deví Dás, of Mairtha, 322, 476.
dhán, a coin, 30.
ḍhárí, 'a singer,' 612*n.*
Dharnídhar Ujjainiah, 513*n.*
Dhárú, son of Todar Mall, 352, 465 (No. 190).
Dholá Rái, founder of Amber, 329.
Dhúnds, a tribe, 456*n.*
dialect, of Qandahár, 408.
diamonds, 480*n.*;—powder, a poison, 510*n.*
diary, kept at court, 258, 259.
Dilahzaks, a tribe, 487*n.*, 522, 522*n.*
Dilír Khán Bárha, 392.
Dilras Bánú Begum, 472*n.*
dínár, 35.
Dín Muhammad Sulṭán, 313.
Dirang Khán, a singer, 613*n.*
dirham, 35.
distilling, mode of, 69.
Divine Era, established, 195.
Divine Faith, Akbar's religion, 165; admission of novices, 165, 166; ordinances of, 166, 167ff.; vide Akbar.
Díwálí, a Hindú festival, kept at court, 216.
díwán i sa'ádat, an officer, 262, 263, 268.
Díwáns, their insignia, 412*n.*

Doctors, of Akbar's reign, 542.
dogs, esteemed at court, 194; imported, 290; Akbar's, 464; 569*n*.
donations, 265.
dongar, meaning of, 494*n*.
Dost, Mír, of Kábul, an engraver, 53.
Dost Khán, 534.
Dost Mírzá, 380.
Dost Muhammad, 385.
Dost Muhammad, son of Bábá Dost, 524 (No. 391).
Dost Muhammad, son of Çádiq Khán, 499 (No. 287).
Dost Muhammad Kábulí, 424, 477*n*.
dress, different articles of, 88, 89.
drinking, excessive, at court and among the grandees, 323, 339, 345, 363, 364, 378, 407, 412, 426, 447, 464, 468, 470, 485, 492, 518, 545.
duáshyánah manzil, a tent, 54.
duaspah sihaspah, 241.
duátishah, or brandy, 70.
dúd i chirágh, a melon, 65.
dudámí, a stuff, 510.
duhul, a drum, 51.
dukhán (vapour), 39, 41.
Duldai, name of a Barlás tribe, 388.
dunyádár, a title, 412*n*.
dúpiázah, a dish, 60.
Durgáwatí, queen of Gondwánah, 367, 429.
Durjan Sál, of Kokrah, 480*n*.
Durjodhan, of Bándhú, 407.
duzd biryán, a dish, 60.
Dwárká Dás Bakhshí, 416.

EATING HOUSES, for the poor, 200, 201, 275.
education, Akbar's rules, 278.
elephants, where numerous in India, 618; imperial, 117; prices of, 118; kinds of, 118; gestation, 118; white elephant, 118*n*.; marks of, 120; when mast, 120; classification made by Hindús, 122; their cunning, 123; Akbar's classification, 124; food of, 124; servants in charge of, 125; harness, 126; fights, 131, 467; how mustered, 213; divided into seven classes, 235; how hunted, 284, 379; elephant stables, 506.
emigration, forcible, 522.
encampments, 45.
engravers, 22, 27.
epidemic, 376.
Era of the Hijrah, abolished, 195; vide Divine Era.
eunuchs, 332, 332*n*.
expenses of the Imperial Household, 12.
export of horses, forbidden, 234.
eyes, blue, are hostile to the Prophet, 176.

FAHIM, Miyán, 338.
Fahmí, name of several poets, 599, 599*n*.
Faizí, Shaikh Abul Faiz, 28, 29, 33*n*., 105, 106, 209, 490 (No. 253), 548, Faizí, of Sarhind, 316*n*.
fakhriyah, a term applied to poems, 553*n*.
Fakhr Jahán Begum, 322.
Fakhrunnisá Begum, 322.
fal, a weight, 36.
falcons, 293, 294.
famine, 207.
Fanáí, a poet, 426.
fançúrí (wrongly called qaiçúrí), a kind of camphor, 78.
fancy bazars, 204, 276.
Farághat, Mír, vide Ṭáhir Khán.
Farebí, a poet, 604.
fargul, a kind of coat from Europe, 89.
Farhang i Jahángírí, a Persian dictionary, 451, 451*n*.
Farhang Khán, 400, 441, 516.
Farhat Khán Mihtar Sakáí, 400, 441 (No. 145), 516.
Faríd i Bukhárí, Murtazá Khán, 396, 413 (No. 99), 436, 620.

Farid Lodí, 506.
Farid Qaráwul, 519.
Farid i Shakkarganj, the saint, 325, 539.
Farídún Barlás, Mírzá, 342.
Farídún Khán, 431.
Farídún Mírzá, 478 (No. 227).
Fárisí, a poet, 518.
farmán, 260;—bayázi, 264;—sabtí, 260.
farmánchah, 250.
Farráshkhánah, 53.
Farrukh Husain Khán, 434 (No. 127).
Farrukh Khán, 480 (No. 232), 322.
farsh i chandaní, 510.
farzand, or son, a title, 313, 339, 363.
Fath Daulat, 403.
Fath Khán, son of Malik 'Ambar, 504.
Fath Khán, of Jálor, 622.
Fath Khán Afghán, 502.
Fath Khán, son of Amír Khán Ghorí, 516.
Fath Khán Bahádur, 523.
Fath Khán Batní, 422.
Fath Khán Chítahbán, 523 (No. 385).
Fath Khán Fílbán, 523, 531.
Fath Khán Tughluq, 465.
Fathullah, son of Hakím Abulfath, 425.
Fathullah, Khwájagí, of Káshán, 359, 499 (No. 285).
Fathullah Khwájah, 464.
Fathullah, Mír, (Sháh), of Shíráz, 33, 104, 199, 269, 272, 274, 350, 540.
Fathullah, Mírzá, 364.
Fathullah, son of Muhammad Wafá, 494 (No. 264).
Fathullah, son of Naçrullah, 497.
Fathullah, son of Sa'íd Khán, 466.
Fath Ziá, 425.
fatíl, a weight, 36.
Fattú Kháçah Khail, 396.
Fattú Khán Afghán, 367, 502, 531.
fauṭah, worn by repenting Amírs, 359.
Fawátih ulwiláyat, title of a book, 546.
Fayyází, vide Faizí.
Fazáil Beg, vide Fazíl Beg.
Fázil, of Khujand, 36.
Fazíl Beg, brother of Mun'in Khán, 317, 318, 445, 485*n*.
Fázil Khán, 322, 443 (No. 156).
Fázil Khán Díwán, 504.
Fazlulhaq, of Qázwín, a kátib, 101.
feasts, kept at court, 276.
fees, customary at court, 142, 143.
Felis caracal, 290.
ferries, 281.
fever, at Gaur, 376.
Fidáí, a poet, 315.
fights of animals, at court, 218, 467.
Fikrí, a poet, 602.
fire ordeal, between Christians and Muhammadans, 191.
fire-worship, 49, 184.
Firingís, 326, 354.
Firishtah, the historian, 450.
Fírúz, of Jálor, 494.
Fírúz Khán, servant of the KhánKhánán, 338.
Fírúz Sháh Khiljí, 291, 333, 507, 582*n*.
Fírúzah, 526 (No. 403).
flavours, nature of, 73.
fleet, the imperial, 279.
flowers, of India, 76, 82.
frauds in the army, 242, 256; in grants of land, 268.
frogs, trained to catch sparrows, 296.
fruits, 64.
Fúlád Beg Barlás, 206.
Fusúní, a poet, 604, 604*n*.

GADAÍ Kambú, Shaikh, a çadr, 272, 325, 528.
Gadáí, Mír, 506.
gáini, a kind of oxen, 149.
gajnáls, a kind of gun, 113.
Gajpatí, of Bihár, 399, 400, 422, 498, 516.
Gakk'hars, a tribe, 318, 322, 455, 456, 486, 621.
Gakk'har Sháh, 456*n*.
games, 297, 303.

Gangádhar, a Sanskrit work, 104.
gangájal, a kind of cloth, 94, 617.
gaurah, a perfume, 80.
Genealogies, of the Ráos of Rámpúr (Islámpúr-Chítor), 418; of the Gakk'hars, 486; of the UndchahBundelás, 488; of Núr Jahán's family, 512; of Abul Qásim Namakín of Bhakkar, 472; of the kings of Káshghar, 459; of the rebellious Mírzás, 461; of the Sayyids of Bárha, 392.
Gesú, Mír, Bakáwal Begí, 421.
Ghairat Khán, 481.
Ghairat Khán Bárha, 392.
Ghairatí, of Shíráz, a poet, 594.
Ghaní Khán, son of Mun'im Khán, 318, 444, 485.
Gharbah Khail tribes, 397.
Gharjahs, a Badakhshí tribe, 381*n*.
Ghayúrí, Mullá, a poet, 609.
Ghazáli, a poet, 568.
Ghazanfar Kokah, 348.
Ghází Beg Tarkhán, Mírzá, 363, 364.
Ghází Khán, of Badakhshán, 185, 440 (No. 144), 450, 526, 540.
Ghází Khán Chak, 84, 461.
Ghází Khán Súr, 384.
Ghází Khán Tannúrí, 367.
Ghází Khán Wajhiyah, 360.
Ghaznawí, a poet, 322.
Ghaznawí Khán, vide Ghaznín Khán.
Ghaznín [Ghaznú] Khán, of Jálor, 493, 622.
Ghaznín Khán, Mírzá Sháh Muhammad, 378.
Ghiás, Sulṭán of Bengal, 583*n*.
Ghiás i Naqshband, the weaver, 88, 616, 617.
Ghiásá, 496.
Ghiás Beg, I'timád uddaulah, 508 (No. 319), 512.
Ghiásuddín, the gilder, 102.
Ghiásuddín 'Alí Khán Açaf Khán (II.), 433 (No. 126).
Ghiásuddín 'Alí, Mír, Naqíb Khán, 447.
Ghiásuddín Jámí, Qází, 382.
Ghiásuddín, Malik, 366.
Ghiásuddín Mançúr, of Shíráz, 199.
Ghiásuddín Tarkhán, Mír, 465.
ghichak, a musical instrument, 71, 613.
Ghorís, an Afghán tribe, 345.
ghubár, a kind of writing, 99.
ghungchí, 16*n*.
gílás, vide kílás.
gird, a coin, 29, 30.
Girdhar, Rájah, son of Kesú Dás, 502.
Girdhar, son of Rái Sál Shaikháwat, 419. gladiators, 252, 253.
glass, price of, 224.
gold, fineness of, 18, 19, 40; importation of, 37; gold washings, 37.
Gopál, Rájah, 436, 532.
Gopál Jádon, Rájah, 502, 525.
Gopál Singh Kachhwáhah, 388.
Gopál Singh Sísodiah, 418.
Gosálah, Shaikhzádah, of Banáras, 208, 209.
Grandees, 239, 308; their contingents, 378; their wealth, 511; their flatteries, 548*n*.; their duplicity, 338, 503; have Hindú Vakíls, 332; oppose Akbar for his religious innovations, 401; their property lapses to the state, 360, 410; hatred among them, 377, 382, 384; Chaghtái grandees hated at court, 319, 320, 332; how punished, 382, 383, 407, 438, 454, 483, 485; when repenting, 359; their wickedness, 500; vide immorality.
grants, vide sanads.
grapes, 65.
guards, mounting, 257.
Gújar Khán, 334.
Gújar Khán, son of Quṭbuddín Atgah, 468 (No. 193).
Gújar Khán Afghán, 379.
Gujnár A'ghá, a wife of Bábar, 441.
Gujrátís, their character, 387.
Gul, Mírzá, 518.

gul-afshán, title of a poem, 566*n*.
gulálbár, a wooden screen, 45, 54.
Gul'azár Begum, 441.
Gulbadan Begum, 48, 198, 365*n*., 441, 615.
Gulrukh Begum (name of two princesses), 309, 463, 464, 618.
gumbhí, a fruit, 71.
guns, 112, 113, 115.
gun-samundar, a title, 613*n*.
gurgán, meaning of, 460*n*.
Gurjís (Georgians), favored by same Persian kings, 211.
gút, or gúṇt, a kind of pony, 133.

HABBAH, a weight, 36.
Habí Bihzádí, Mauláná, 528.
Habí Yasáwul, 523 (No. 389).
Habíb 'Alí Khán, 436 (No. 133).
Habíb 'Alí Khán, 422.
Háḍá Rájpúts, 138, 409.
Háfiz Kumakí, 540.
Háfiz of Táshkand, 540.
Háfiz Khwájah 'Alí, 613.
Háfizak, a musician, 613*n*.
Háfiz Nazr, a musician, 613*n*.
Haft Iqlím, a work, 508, 512.
haft josh, a metallic composition, 41.
Haidar, son of Shaikh Yáqút, 479.
Haidar 'Alí 'Arab, 497, (No. 279).
Haidar Dost, 524 (No. 390).
Haidar Gandahnawís, a kátib, 100.
Haidar Gurgání, Mírzá, 460, 460*n*.
Haidar Mírzá Çafawí, 314.
Haidar Mu'ammáí, 549*n*.
Haidar Muhammad Khán Akhtah Begí, 384 (No. 66), 485.
Haidar Qásim Kohbar, 318.
Haidar Sulṭán Uzbak, 319.
Haidar, of Káshán, 593.
Haidarí, of Tabríz, a poet, 603.
Hairatí, a poet, 187.
Háji Begum, 420, 441, 465.
Hájí Húr Parwar Begum, 511.
Hájí Khán SherSháhí, 319, 328, 353, 359*n*.
Hájí Muhammad Khán, of Sístán, 366*n*., 368, 374 (No. 55).
Hájí Yúsuf Khán, 477 (No. 224).
Hajjáj, 36.
Hájo, the Koch leader, 493*n*.
Hakím 'Abdul Wahháb, 468.
Hakím 'Abdurrahím, 543.
Hakím Abulfath, of Gílán, vide Abul Fath.
Hakím 'Ain ul Mulk, 321, 406, 480 (No. 234), 543.
Hakím 'Alí, of Gílán, 402, 466 (No. 192), 542.
Hakím Aristú, 542.
Hákim Beg Jahángírí, 511.
Hakím Dawúí, 543.
Hakím Fakhruddín 'Alí, 543.
Hakím Fathullah, 542.
Hakím Shaikh Hasan, 542, 543.
Hakím Háziq, 474.
Hakím Humám, 474 (No. 205), 474, 543, 586*n*., 587.
Hakím Is-háq, 543.
Hakím Khush-hál, 475.
Hakím Luṭfullah, 518 (No. 354), 543.
Hakím Masíh ul Mulk, 543.
Hakím Miçrí, 491 (No. 254), 540, 542.
Hakím Muzaffar Ardistání, 516 (No. 348), 543.
Hakím ul Mulk, Shamsuddín, of Gílán, 408, 467*n*., 542, 599*n*.
Hakím Ni'matullah, 543.
Hakím Rizqullah, 544.
Hakím Rúhullah, 543.
Hakím Saif ul Mulk Lang, 543.
Hakím Shifáí, 543.
Hakím Ṭalab 'Alí, 543.
Hakím Zambíl Beg, 442 (No. 150), 542.
Hakím Ziáuddín, of Káshán, 497.
halálkhur, or sweeper, 139.
Hálatí, of Túrán, a poet, 595.
halím, a dish, 60.
Halímí, a poet, 363.

halwá, 59.
Halwáí, 541.
Hamdam Kokah, 378.
Hamdamí, a poet, 379.
Hámid Bukhárí, Sayyid, 397 (No. 78), 418.
Hamíd Khán Habshí, 504.
Hámid Qádirí, Shaikh, 544.
hamzah, 98, 98*n*.
Hamzah, a musician, 613*n*.
Hamzah Beg Zul Qadr, 313, 314.
Hamzah Beg Ghatrághalí, 497 (No. 277), 474.
Haqíqat i Hindústán, title a work, 491*n*.
Háṛá, or Háḍá, Rájpúts, train horses, 138; 409.
Harem, the Imperial, 44; private do., [361.
Haribans, a Sanskrit work, 106.
Haridí Rám Kachhwáhah, 495.
harísah, a dish, 33*n*., 60.
harness, of elephants, 126; of horses, 136; of camels, 145; of mules, 153.
Hasan, son of Mírzá Rustam Çafawí, 314.
Hasan, Mírzá, 420.
Hasan, son of Mírzá Sháhrukh Badakhshí, 313.
Hasan, Qází, 174, 498, 545.
Hasan, Shaikh, a doctor, 543.
Hasan 'Alí Khán Bárha, 392.
Hasan 'Alí Koṭwál, 436.
Hasan 'Alí, of Mashhad, a kátib, 102.
Hasan 'Alí Turkmán, 493.
Hasan 'Arab, 411.
Hasan Beg Shaikh 'Umarí, 346, 454 (No. 167).
Hasan Khán Bárha, 392.
Hasan Khán Bataní, 204, 476 (No. 220).
Hasan Khán, son of Khán Jahán Lodí, 505.
Hasan Khán Khizánchí, 429.
Hasan Khán, of Mewát, 334*n*.
Hasan Khán Miánah, 506 (No. 311).
Hasan Khán Súr, father of Sher Sháh, 419.
Hassú, Shaikh, 543.
Háshim Bárha, Sayyid, 376, 392, 407, 419, 440 (No. 143).
Háshim Beg, son of Qásim Khán, 477 (No. 226).
Háshim Khán, son of Mír Murád, 498.
Háshim, Khwájah, 459.
Háshim, Mír, of Níshápúr, 425.
Háshim i Sanjar, Mír, 494*n*.
Háshimí, of Kirmán, a poet, 566*n*.
Hátim, son of Bábú Manklí, 473.
Hátim Sambhalí, 544.
Hattí Singh Sisodiah, 418.
hauz, or subterranean reservoir, of Hakím 'Alí, 466.
hawks, 293, 294.
Hayát Khán, 469.
Hayátí, of Gílán, a poet, 574.
Hazárahs, a tribe, 408, 462.
Háziq, a poet, 475.
Hemú, 319; his birth place, 359, 359*n*.; 365.
heresies, 176, 591*n*.
heretics, how treated, 453.
Hidáyatullah, 469.
Hijáz Khán, 340.
Hijrání, Maulánà, 102.
Hijrí, a poet, 622.
Hilál Khwájahsará, 334.
Himmat Khán Bárha, 392.
Himmat Singh, son of Mán Singh, 340, 485, 486, 420.
Hindál Mírzá, 309, 408; dies, 476.
Hindús, 88*n*.; are good painters, 107; their months, 205; are influential at court, 204, 205; their customs adopted by Akbar, 184; build mosques, 333; learn Persian, 352; are employed by Muhammadans as vakíls, 332; are often ill-treated, 372, 501 (vide jazyah); hold offices under Akbar, 528; also under Sháhjahán, 536, 537; list of learned Hindús, 538, 539, 542, 547; their doctors, 544, 544*n*.; their mythology, poetically treated by Muhammadan poets, 544.

History of Kashmír, by Sháh Muhammad, 106.
Hizabr Khán Bárha, 392, 395*n*.
hockey, 297.
Hoḍal Ráo Bundelá, 488.
hom, a sacrifice, 184.
Hoṛal Deo, 356.
horses, imperial, 132; imported into India, 132, 133; favorable laws for horse-dealers, 133; ranks, 134; fodder, 134, 135; get boiled grain, ghí, and sugar, 134, 135; harness, 136; shod twice a year, 137; officers and servants in charge of, 137; how branded, 139; how mustered, 215; are taxed when imported, 215; various classes of horses, 233; when dead, how replaced, 250; how branded, 233, 255.
horticulture, 87, 412; vide Bábar.
Hoshang, son of Prince Dányál, 310.
Hoshang, son of Islám Khán, 493*n*., 521.
Hoshmand Bánú Begum, 310.
Household, Imperial, expenses of, 12.
Humám, Hakím, 175; vide Hakím.
Humáyún, Emperor, his flight from India, 318, 319, 328; 334, 417, 420, 441, 441*n*.; his tomb, 465, 541; 615.
Humáyún Farmilí, 351.
Humáyún Qulí, 474.
hun, a Dak'hin coin, 18, 37.
hunting, 282, 292, 296.
Husámuddín, son of Abul Qásim Namakín, 472, 473.
Husámuddín Badakhshí, 440.
Husámuddín Injú, Mír, 451.
Husámuddín Sháh, 317.
Husámuddín Surkh, 538.
Husain, Shaikh, of Khwárazm, 440, 581.
Husain Khwájah, of Marw, 574.
Husain 'Alí Bárha, 392.
Husain Beg, 439, 476 (No. 219).
Husain Khán Bárha, 392.
Husain Khán Mírzá, 439, 442 (No. 149).
Husain Khán Qazwíní, 516 (No. 337).
Husain Kulankí, a kátib, 103.
Husain Lodí, 505.
Husain, Mír Sayyid, Khing-suwár, 448.
Husain Mírzá, Sulṭán, 362, 434, 462.
Husain Mírzá, son of Sháhrukh Mírzá Badakhshí, 313, 380*n*.
Husain Mírzá Çafawí, 313.
Husain Pak'hlíwál, 454, 501 (No. 301).
Husain Qudsí, Mír, 602.
Husain Qulí Beg (Khán); vide Khán Jahán.
Husain Khán Shámlü, of Harát, 363, 377.
Husain Khán Tukriyah, 372 (No. 53), 348.
Husain Sanáí, a poet, 563.
Husainí, Mír, 389.
Husn o náz, a Masnawí, 514.
Huzuní, of Içfahán, a poet, 565.
Huzúrí, a poet, 598*n*.
hydrostatic balance, 42.

IBACHKI, or closet, 46.
'Ibádatmand, 458.
Ibn Bawwáb, a kátib, 100.
Ibn Hajar, 540, 574*n*., 581*n*.
Ibn Muqlah, 99.
Ibráhím Afghán, 331.
Ibráhím of Astrábád, a kátib, 101.
Ibráhím Badakhshí, Khwájah, 435.
Ibráhím Beg Jábúq, 331.
Ibráhím, Hájí, of Sarhind, 105, 172, 174, 189, 547.
Ibráhím Husain Mírzá, 330, 333, 353, 373, 461, 462, 618.
Ibráhím Khán Balochí, 360.
Ibráhím Khán Fath-jang, son of I'timáduddaulah, 451, 480*n*., 511, 512.
Ibráhím Khán Shaibání, 383 (No. 64).
Ibráhím Khán Súr, 384.
Ibráhím Lohání, 520.

Ibráhím Mírzá, Akbar's brother, 526.
Ibráhím, Mírzá, 311 (No. 6).
Ibráhím, Mírzá, of Içfahán, 102.
Ibráhím, son of Mírzá Rustam Çafawí, 314.
Ibráhím Fathpúrí, Shaikh, 402.
Ibráhím, Qází, 547.
Ibráhím Qulí, son of Ismá'íl Qulí Khán, 512 (No. 322).
Ibráhím, Sulṭán, son of Mírzá Sháhrukh, 101.
Ibráhím of Yazd, an engraver, 53.
Içámuddín Ibráhím, Maulánà, 440, 574*n*. ice, used at court, 56.
içláh, a caligraphical term, 103*n*.
ideas peculiar to the East, 510*n*., 552*n*., 554*n*., 555*n*., 565*n*., 569*n*., 576*n*., 577*n*., 586*n*.; vide eyes (blue), Pharao, Adam, sipand, bear, moon.
Idrís, a kátib, 99, 101.
'Iffat Bánú Begum, 477*n*.
Iftikhár Beg, 516 (No. 335).
Iftikhár Khán, 466.
Iftikhár Khán, 521, 521*n*.
Ighur [Uigur], a Chaghtái tribe, 389, 620.
Ihtimám Khán, 521, 521*n*.
Ikhláç Khán I'tibár, the Eunuch, 405 (No. 86).
Ikhláç Khán, 506.
Ikhtiçáç Khán Bárha, 392 (twice).
Ikhtiyár, Khwájah, 101.
Ikhtiyárul Mulk Gujrátí, 325, 463, 507.
Iláhdád Faizí, of Sarhind, 316*n*.
Iláhdád, of Amrohah, 202.
Iláhdiah, son of Kishwar Khán, 497.
Iláhdiah, Shaikh, 538.
iláhí, a coin, 30.
Iláh Virdí Khán, 601*n*.
Ilhámullah Kambú, 402.
illuminations at court, 48.
Iltifát Khán, 315.
Ilyás Khán Langáh, 375.
'Imád, a kátib, 102*n*.
'Imád, of Láristán, 490.
'Imád ul Mulk, 516 (No. 343).
Imám Mahdí, 106*n*., 169, 189; vide Çáhib i Zamán.
Imám Qulí Shighálí, 512 (No. 325).
Imámí, a poet, 550*n*.
immorality, of the Grandees, 192, 319, 349, 364, 466*n*., 475, 594*n*. importation of horses, 215, 234.
in'ám grants, 271.
'Ináyat Khán, 445*n*.
Ináyatullah, Darbár Khán, 466.
'Ináyatullah Khán, 499.
'Ináyatullah, Mírzá, 364*n*.
Indarman Bundelá, 488. infantry, 251, 254.
inventions, 41; vide Akbar.
insignia, of Díwáns, 412*n*.
Iqbálnámah i Jahángírí, author of, 413.
'iráqí, a kind of horse, 140.
Irij [Irich], Shahnawáz Khán, 491, 511.
irmás-money, 250.
iron, 40, 113.
Irshád i Qází, title of a work, 547.
'Isá Khail Afgháns, 457.
'Isá Khán, of Orísá, 352, vide 'Isá Zamíndár, and Miyán 'Isá.
'Isá Khán Maín, 526.
'Isá, Qází, 449, 618.
'Isá Tarkhán, Mírzá, 363, 364*n*., 420, 422.
'Isá Zamíndár, 331, 340, 342, 342*n*., [400.
Isfandiár Khán, 455.
Is-háq Fárúqí, Shaikh, of Bhakkar, 514.
Is-háq Maghribí, Shaikh, 507*n*.
Is-háq, Maulánà, 545.
Is-háq, Mullá, a singer, 612.
'ishq-bází, vide pigeon flying.
Ishqí, Maulánà, 528.
Iskandar Beg Badakhshí, 475 (No. 211).
Iskandar Khán, Khán 'Alam, 365 (No. 48), 382.
Iskandar Khán Uzbak, 341.
Islám Khán Chishtí, 493, 519, 520.
Islem Sháh, 611*n*, 612*n*.; vide Salím Sháh.

Ismá'íl, Sháh of Persia, 178, 524.
Ismá'íl, Mullá and Maulánd, 538, 547.
Ismá'íl Kambú, Hájí, 399.
Ismá'íl Khán, [Qulí Beg] Duldai, 388* (No. 72).
Ismá'íl Khán Shaibání, 384.
Ismá'íl Mírzá Çafawí, 314.
Ismá'íl Qulí Khán, 360 (No. 46), 401, 407, 425.
Istajlü (Ustajlü), a tribe, 619.
'istihlál, a rhetorical figure, 600*n*.
Itábí, of Najaf, a poet, 588.
I'tibár-Khán, the Eunuch, 403.
I'tibár Khán, a eunuch of Jahángír, 433.
I'timád Khán, the Eunuch, 428 (No. 119).
I'timád Khán Gujrátí, 13, 198, 325, 385 (No. 67), 507.
I'timád uddaulah Ghiás Beg, 508 (No. 319), 512.
I'timád ul Mulk Gujrátí, 386.
'Iwaz Bahádur, 439.
'Iwaz Mírzá, 347.
'Izzat Khán, son of Yúsuf Khán, 373, 620.
'Izzat, Mírzá, 445*n*.
'Izzatullah, 500 (No. 289).

JABA'RÍ Qáqshál, 351, 370, 436.
Jabbár Qulí Gakk'har, 487.
jackfruit, 70.
Ja'far, a poet, 572, 573*n*.
Ja'far Bukhárí, Sayyid, 416.
Ja'far, of Tabríz, a kátib, 100, 101.
Ja'far Beg A'çaf Khán, 106; vide A'çaf Khán (III).
Ja'far Khán Taklú, 426 (No. 114).
Ja'far, Mírzá, a poet, 412.
Jagannáth, son of Bihárí Mall, 387 (No. 69).
Jagat Gosáiní, mother of Sháhjahán, 310.
Jagat Singh, Kachhwáhah, 310, 340, 447 (No. 160), 458. jágírs, 242, 261.
Jagmál, 322.
Jagmál Kachhwáhah, 436 (No. 134).
Jagmál Punwár, 476 (No. 218).
Jagnát'h, a singer, 613*n*.
Jagnerís, a clan, 395.
Jagráj Bikramájít, 505.
Jahánafroz, Prince, 492.
Jahánárá Begum, 350.
Jahándár, Sulṭán, 311.
Jahángír, Emperor, [Prince Salím], his birth and death, 309; his mother, 619; his wives and children, 310, 477*n*., 619; his weight, 267*n*.; day of accession, 213*n*.; makes vows, 290; his love to Núr Jahán, 509*n*., 510; 48, 333, 345, 358, 401, 457, 458, 492, 569*n*., 574*n*.
Jahángír Bárha, Sayyid, 392.
Jahángírdád, a musicían, 613*n*.
Jahángír Qulí Beg Humáyúní, 331.
Jahángír Qulí Khán Lálah Beg, 450, 501.
Jahángír Qulí Khán, Mírzá Shámsí, 327, 328, 450 (No. 163).
Jai Chand, of Nagarkoṭ, 330, 404.
Jai Mall, of Mairtha, 368; vide Jatmall.
Jai Mall, son of Rúpsí, 427, 428, 430.
Jaláir, a tribe, 410.
Jalál Bárha, 414.
Jalál i Bukhárí, Sayyid, a saint, 507.
Jalál Kashmírí, 437.
jaláluh, a rupee, 33; its meaning, 237*n*.
Jalálah Táríkí, or Raushání, 345, 361, 397, 403, 411. jaláli, a coin, 29.
Jalál Khán Baqáí, 595*n*.
Jalál Khán Gakk'har, 455, 457, 486.
Jalál Khán, vide Salím Sháh.
Jalál Khán Qurchí, 475 (No. 213).
Jaláluddín Mahmúd Bujúq, 384 (No. 65).
Jaláluddín Mas'úd, 384, 384*n*.
Jaláluddín Multání, Qází, 175, 185, 546.
Jaláluddín, of Sístán, 314.

Jaláluddín, Shaikh, 538.
Jaláluddín Súr, 370.
jalí, a kind of writing, 100.
Jám of Kachh, 326, 419.
Jám Nandá, 362.
jama' háçil i hál, vide assessment.
jama' raqmí, vide assessment.
Jamál Bakhtyár, Shaikh, of Jalesar, 191, 425 (No. 113), 470.
Jamál, Mullá and Maulánú, 546.
Jamál Kambú, Shaikh, 528.
Jamál Khán Afghán, 435.
Jamál Khán Kambú, 544.
Jamál Khán, of Mewát, 334.
Jamál Khán, son of Qutlú, 520.
Jamáluddín, a kátib, 101.
Jamáluddín Bárha, 408, 476 (No. 217).
Jamáluddín Husain Injú, Mír, 450 (No. 164).
Jamáluddín Husain, a kátib, 101.
Jámí, the poet, 566*n*.
Jamíl Beg, son of Táj Khán, 547.
Jamshed, Maulánú, 102.
Ján, Khwájah, 611.
Jánán Begum, 309.
Ján Bábá, Mírzá, 362, 363, 364*n*.
janglah, a kind of horse, 233.
Jání Beg, Mírzá, of Sindh, 194, 209, 335, 361, 576*n*.
Jánish Bahádur, 345, 481 (No. 235).
Ján Jahán Lodí, 506.
Janjú'ahs, a tribe, 456*n*.
Ján Nisár Khán, 504.
Ján Qulij, 500 (No. 291), 501.
Járullah Mírzá, 518.
jast, a metal, 40.
Jaswant Singh, 478.
Jaswant Singh Bundelá, 488.
Jat Mall, of Mairtha, 502; of Chítor, 617; vide Jaimall.
jau, a weight, 36.
Jauhar, Shaikh, 547.
Jazbí, a poet, 480, 596.
jazyah (properly jizyah) or tax on infidels, abolished by Akbar, 189; 237*n*.
jealousy, of the Grandees, 326.
jetal, a coin, 31.
jewels, 15.
jhandá, the Indian flag, 50.
Jháriah, a caste in Gujrát, 285*n*.
jharok'hah, or inspection window, 54, 337*n*., 613*n*.; vide darsan.
Jhujhár Khán Afghán, 436.
Jhujhár Singh Bundelá, 488, 489, 505.
Jhujhár Khán Gujrátí, 386, 462.
Jí Jí Anagah, Akbar's nurse, 321, 325; dies, 327.
jilaudárs, or runners, 138, 142*n*.
jilawánah, 142.
Jodh Bái, 309, 619.
Jodrahs, a tribe, 456*n*.
Jotik Rái, or court astrologer, 404*n*.
Judáí, a poet, 107, 590, 590*n*., 598*n*.
Újak Begum, 492.
Jumlat ul Mulk, a title, 349.
Junaid i Kararáni, 330, 396, 400, 422.
Junaid Murul, 523 (No. 383).

KAB Gakk'har, 456*n*.
Kab Rái, or Poet Laureate, 404, 613*n*.
kabáb, a dish, 60.
Kabír Chishtí, Shaikh, 519 (No. 370), 520, 521, 522.
Kabír, Shaikh, son of Shaikh Munawwar, 547.
Kabír, Shaikh, 519*n*.
Kachhwáhah Rájahs, madness in their family, 310, 333; 398, 458*n*., 459; vide Bahárí Mall, Bhagwán Dás, Mán Singh; Rájáwat and Shaikháwat, 419.
Káfiyah, title of an Arabic grammar, 362*n*.
Káhí, a poet, 566.
kail, 25.
Kai Qubád, son of Mírzá Muhammad Hakím, 377.
Kájar, a Turkish tribe, 619.
Kákars, a tribe, 377.
Kákar 'Alí Khán Chishtí, 408 (No. 92).

Kákú, Shaikh, 545.
kalá, a coin, 30, 31.
Kálá Pahár, 370.
Kalán Beg, Khwájah, 461.
kaláwant, or kalánwat, a singer, 612*n*.
Kalíluh Damnah, an Arabic work, 106.
Kalím, a poet, 602*n*.
Kalimátushshu'ará, a work on Persian literature, 253*n*.
Kallá, son of Rái Rám, of Jodhpúr, 399, 476.
Kallá Kachhwáhah, 523 (No. 381).
Kalyán, of Jaisalmír, 477.
Kalyán Mall Ráṭhor, of Bíkánír, 316, 357, 408 (No. 93).
Kalyán Singh, son of Mán Singh, 486.
Kamál, Mullá, 546.
Kamál Bukhárí, Sayyid, 397.
Kamál Khán Gakk'har, 322, 410, 455, 456, 486.
Kamál Khán, of Jálor, 622.
Kamáluddín Khawáfí, 445*n*.
Kamáluddín, father of Mír Abú Turáb, 506.
Kamáluddín Husain, Maulánà, 540.
Kambú, a tribe, 399, 402.
Kámí, author of the Nafáis ul Maásir, 448*n*.
Kámí, of Sabzwár, a poet, 601.
Kámil Khán 'Alamgírí, 489.
Kámil Khán, Mírzá Khurram, 327, 328, 459.
Kámrán, Mírzá, 311, 312, 378, 379, 380, 388, 463, 618.
Kangár Kachhwáhah, 436, 437, 531.
kánsí, a metallic composition, 41.
Karam 'Alí, 519.
Karam Beg, son of Sher Beg, 515.
Karam ullah, son of 'Alí Mardán Bahádur, 496.
Karam ullah Kambú, 402, 432.
Karan Ráṭhor, 359, 483.
karaná, a trumpet, 51.
Karím Dád Afghán, 331.
Karm Chand Kachhwáhah, 387*n*.
kashk, a dish, 60.
Kashmírí, Mírzá, 472, 473.
Kashmíris, their character, 380, 399.
Káthís, a tribe in Sorat'h, 334.
kátibs, or caligraphists, 100.
Kátís, a tribe, 417.
Kaukab Qazwíní, 485.
kaukabah, a royal ensign, 50.
kaulpatr, a metallic composition, 41.
Kesú Dás, son of Jai Mall, 502 (No. 302).
Kesú Dás Márú, 502.
Kesú Dás Ráṭhor, 310, 526 (No. 408).
Kewal Rám, 448*n*.
Khabítah, a rebel, 356, 356*n*., 437.
Khadíjah Begum, 511, 512.
khafí, a kind of writing, 100.
Khafí Khán, the historian, 343*n*., 445*n*.
khák i khaláç, 21, 23, 37.
khákshoe, 27.
Khálid ibn 'Abdullah Qasrí, 36.
Khalíl ibn Ahmad, 99.
Khalíl Qulí, 518 (No. 358).
Khalíl ullah, Shaikh (Sháh), 376, 525 (No. 397).
Khalíl ullah Yazdí, Mír, 525.
Khán 'Alam, Chalmah Beg, 378 (No. 58).
Khán 'Alam Iskandar Khán, 365.
Khán 'Alam, Mírzá Barkhurdár, 512 (No. 328).
Khán i A'zam, Mírzá 'Azíz Kokah, 169, 208, 209, 299, 310, 325 (No. 21), 397, 451, 603*n*.
Khán Bábá, a title, 316.
Khán Daurán, Sháhbeg Khán Arghún, 377 (No. 57).
Khán Daurán Sháhjahání, 413.
Khán Jahán, a title, 330.
Khán Jahán Bárha, 392, 394,
Khán Jahán, Husain Qulí, 172, 204, 329.
Khán Jahán Lodí, 336, 427; vide next name.
Khán Jahán Lodí, governor of Oríssá, 366*n*.
Khán Jahán Lodí, Pírú, son of Daulat Khán Lodí, 503.

Khán i Kalán, Mír Muhammad, 322 (No. 16).
Khán Khánán, a title, 316; insignia, 316; 312; vide Bairám Khán, Mun'im Khán, and next name.
Khán Khánán, Mírzá 'Abdurrahím, son of Bairám Khán, 206, 309, 315, 334 (No. 29), 362, 451, 503, 569*n*., 574*n*., 576*n*., 578*n*., 579*n*., 585*n*., 593*n*., 599*n*., 601*n*., 603*n*., 606*n*., 608*n*., 613*n*.
Khán Mírzá, 311, 311*n*.
Khán Muhammad Qáqshál, 621.
Khán Zamán 'Alí Quli Shaibání, 319 (No. 13), 366, 462, 489, 568.
Khánahzád Khán, 466, 472, 493.
Khandán, a kátib, 102, 617.
Khangár, of Kachh, 419.
Khanjar Beg Chaghtái, 533.
Khanjí, Malik, of Jálor, 493.
Kháuzádahs, of Mewát, 334, 391.
k'haral, 23, 25, 26.
khárchiní, a kind of gold, 40, 41.
khardal, a weight, 36.
khargáh, a tent, 54.
K'hatars, a tribe, 456*n*.; 487*n*., 522, 522*n*.
Kháwand Dost, 423.
k'hichrí, 59.
Khidmatiyah, a class of servants at court, 252, 282; their chief, Khidmat Rái, 252, 431.
Khing Suwár, 448.
Khizr, (Elias) the Prophet, 556*n*., 567*n*., 581.
Khizr Khwájah Khán, 365, 365*n*., 374, 388, 441, 443, 529, 615.
Khizr Sultán Gakk'har, 487.
K'hokars, a tribe, 456*n*.
Khúbú, Shaikh, 496 (No. 275).
Khudáwand Khán Dak'hiní, 442 (No. 151), 449.
Khudá Yár Khán Lalí, 363*n*.
Khurram Begum, 312.
Khurram Khán, 533.
Khurram, Prince, 337; vide Sháhjahán.
Khurram, Mírzá, vide Kámil Khán.
Khurramdád, a musician, 613*n*.
khushkah, a dish, 59.
khushrúz, 276.
Khusrau, Prince, son of Jahángír, 310, 327, 414, 414*n*., 433, 454, 455, 467.
Khusrau, of Dihlí, the poet, 102*n*., 540, 582.
Khusrau Khán Chirgis, 363, 364, 364*n*.
Khusrawí, of Qáin, a poet, 591.
khuṭbah, read by princes, 185.
Khwájagán Khwájah, 423, 539; vide Khwájah Kalán.
Khwájagí Khwájah Ṭahrání, 508, 512.
Khwájagí Muhammad Husain, 478.
Khwájah Ahrár, a saint, 322.
Khwájah 'Arab, 204.
Khwájah Báqí Khán, 459.
Khwájah Beg Mírzá, 519 (No 365).
Khwájah Hasan, uncle of Zain Khán Kokah, 310, 344.
Khwájah Hasan Naqshbandí, 322.
Khwájah Jahán, Amínú of Harát, 424 (No. 110).
Khwájah Jahán Dost Muhammad, 477*n*.
Khwájah Kalán (Khwájagán Khwájah), 322.
Khwájah Sulaimán Afghán, 340.
Khwájah 'Usmán Afghán, vide 'Usmán.
Khwánandah, Mír, 465.
Khwáwand Mahmúd, 322.
Kíjak Begum, 322.
Kíjak Khwájah, 494 (No. 262).
Kíká Ráná (Ráná Partáb), 339, 418, 443*n*.
kilás [gilás], cherries, 65*n*., 616.
killing of animals forbidden, 200, 258.
kinárí (lace), 510.
Kírat, Rájah of Kálinjar, 611*n*.
Kishn Dás Tunwar, 506 (No. 313).
Kishn Singh Bhadauriah, 489.
Kishnjoshí, a Sanskrit work, 104.
Kishwar Khán, 497.
kitchen, the imperial, 56,
Kohbar, a tribe, 613.

kokah, or kokultásh, or fosterbrother, 323.
koknár, 513.
Kor Hamzah, 313.
kornish, a kind of salutation, 158.
Krorís, 13.
Kúchak 'Alí Khán Kolábí, 438 (No. 138).
Kufic letters, 99.
kuhárs, or pálkí bearers, 254.
kuhnah, 23.
Kújak [Kúchak] Yasáwul, 482.
kukrah, 23, 24.
kumakí, a class of troops, 231.
Kundlíwáls, a clan, 391, 395.
kushtah, prepared quicksilver, 563*n*.
kuwargah, a musical instrument, 50.

LAC, 226.
Lachhmí Náráin, of Kúch Bihár, 340; vide Lakhmí.
Lachhmí Náráin Shafiq, a Persian writer, 491*n*.
Láḍ, Shaikh, 620.
Láḍ Bárha, Sayyid, 526 (No. 409).
ládan, a perfume.
Láḍlí Begum, 311, 510.
Láhaurí, Mírzá, 500.
Lailí, 560*n*.
Lakhmí Rái, of Kokrah, 480*n*.; vide Lachhmí. lakráit, 252.
la'l i Jaláli, a coin, 29.
Lál Kaláwant [Miyán Lál], 612, 612*n*.
Lál Khán, a singer, 613*n*.
Lál Khán Kolábí, 475 (No. 209).
Lálah, son of Bír Baṛ, 405, 523 (No. 387).
lallah, meaning of, 426*n*.
Lamas of Tibbat, 201.
Land revenue, 13.
Langáhs, a clan, 362.
Lárdlí Begum, vide Láḍlí.
lárí, a kind of silver, 23, 37.
Lashkar Khán Abul Hasan, 211.
Lashkar Khán Bárha, 392.
Lashkar Khán, Muhammad Husain, 407 (No. 90).
Lashkarí, Mírzá, son of Mírzá Yúsuf Khán, 374, 505, 518, 522 (No. 375); vide Çafshikan Khán.
Lashkarí Gakk'har, 457.
Lashkarshikan Khán, 339.
Laṭíf Khwájah, 196. lead, 40.
Learned men, exchanged for horses, 191; banished, 187, 189, 190, 191; list of them during Akbar's reign, 537; where placed in battle, 587*n*.
leopards, for hunting, 285, 287, 288, 523; leopard carriages, 150.
letters, 98.
Library, the imperial, 103.
Lílawatí, title of a Sanskrit work, 105.
lime, price of, 223.
Lisán ul Ghaib, title of a book, 603*n*.
Lisání, a poet, 603*n*.
Liwáí, a poet, 613*n*.
Lodí Khán, son of Qutlú, 520.
Lohání Afgháns, 622.
Lohar Chak, 479.
Loṇ Karan, Ráí, 404, 494, 531.
lubán, a perfume, 82.
Lubuttawáríkh, title of a historical work, 447*n*.
Luṭfullah, son of Khusrau Khán, 364.
Luṭfullah, son of Sa'íd Khán, 466.

MAÁSIR I ṚAHIMÍ, a historical work, 338, 603*n*.
Ma'çúm Beg Çafawí, 426.
Ma'çúm Khán Farankhúdí, 351, 400, 410, 443 (No. 157).
Ma'çúm Khán Kábulí, 189, 342, 343, 351, 400, 431*n*., 446, 448*n*., 621.
Ma'çúm, Mír, of Bhakkar, 514 (No. 514).
Ma'çúm, Mír, of Kábul, 323.
Ma'çúm, Mír, of Káshán, 594*n*.
madad i ma'ásh, vide sayurghál.

Ma'dan ul afkár, a Masnawi, 514.
maddát, a class of letters, 103*n*.
Mádhú Singh, of Kokrah, 401, 480*n*.
Mádhú Singh, 505.
Mádhú Singh Kachhwáhah, 418 (No. 104).
Mádhú Singh Shaikháwat, 419.
Madhukar Bundelá, of Undchah, 356, 389, 390, 430, 452, 458, 487, 488.
Madrasahs, 279; Humáyún's at Dihlí, 538.
maghribí, a dirham, 36.
Maghribiyah, a dass of saints, 507.
Máh Bánú Begum, 328, 334, 336.
Máh Júják Begum, 318, 322.
Mahá Singh, grandson of Mán Singh, Kachhwáhah, 340, 447.
Mahá Singh Bhadauriah, 489.
Mahábat Khán, 337, 338, 339, 347, 371, 414.
Mahábat Khán 'Alamgírí, 522.
Mahábhárat, 104, 105*n*., 210.
Mahápáter, the singer, 611*n*.
Mahdawí Sect, 490. [480.
Mahdí Qásim Khán, 348 (No. 36), 372,
Mahdí Khwájah, 420.
Mahes Dás Ráthor, 359.
Mahmands, an Afghán tribe, 345, 397.
Mahmúd, son of Bábú Mauklí, 473.
Mahmúd of Bárha, Sayyid, 389 (No. 75).
Mahmúd, of Basakhwán, 177, 452.
Mahmúd Bígarah, Sultán of Gujrát, 506.
Mahmúd, son of Daulat Khán Lodí, 503.
Mahmúd, of Ghazní, 456*n*.
Mahmúd Is-háq, a kátib, 102.
Mahmúd Khán, son of Khán Jahán Lodí, 505.
Mahmúd, Malik, of Sístán, 314.
Mahmúd, Mír, Mahwí, a poet, 585*n*.
Mahmúd, Mír Munshí, 449.
Mahmúd, Mírzá, Gurgání, 460.
Mahmúd Pak'hlíwál, 501.
Mahmúd Siyáúsh, a kátib, 101.
Mahmúd, Sultán of Bhakkar, 362, 420, 421, 422.
Mahmúd Sháh (II.), Sultán of Gujrát, 385.
Mahmúd Sultán Mírzá, 461, 462.
Mahmúdís, a sect, 452.
mahtábí, 46.
Máhum Anagah, 316, 323, 324, 328, 332, 381.
mahuwá tree, 70, 616.
Mahwí Hamadání, a poet, 585.
Maidání Afgháns, 499.
Mailí, of Harát, 571.
Main, or Munj, a Rájpút clan, 526.
Májí, a tribe, 610*n*.
Majma' ul Abkár, a work, 569*n*.
Majnún Khán Qáqshál, 326, 368, 369 No. 50).
Múk'han Bárha, 392.
Makhçúç Khán, 388 (No. 70).
Makhdúm ul Mulk, 'Abdullah of Sultánpúr, 169, 172, 173, 175, 177, 185, 187, 189, 374, 544.
Makhfí, the nom-de-plume of two Imperial princesses, 309, 510.
Mák'hú, a musician, 613*n*.
Makhzan i Afgháni, a history, 506.
mal, or Gujrát wrestlers, 219, 253.
malágír, a perfume, 82.
Malays, 616.
Máldeo, Rájah, of Jodhpúr, 315, 316, 429, 430.
malghúbah, a dish, 61.
malik, a title, 369*n*.
Malik Ahmad Dakhlí, a poet, 608.
Malik 'Alí, Khwájah, 515 (No. 330).
Malik 'Ambar, 491, 503, 504.
Malik Bír, 456.
Malik Kalán, 456.
Malik Kid, 456.
Malik Ma'súd, 509.
Malik, Maulánú, a kátib, 102.
Malik Pilú, 456*n*.
Malikushshua'rá, 491, 548*n*.
Malkú Sáin, of Kúch Bihár, 331.
Mallú (Qádir Khán), 428. [520.
Mamrez Khán, son of 'Usmán Lohání, man, a coin, 30.

Mán Tunwar, of Gwáliár, 611*n*.
Mançabdárs, 231, 236, 238; muster one-fourth, or one-fifth, of their contingents, 244; salaries, 240, 245, 248; below the rank of commanders of Two Hundred, 527; — under Jahángír and Sháhjahán, 535 vide grandees.
Mançúr, Mír, 590.
mandal, a tent, 54, 78.
Mangaráls, a tribe, 456*n*. mangoes, 67, 68, 544.
Manijah Begum 499, 511, 512, mankli, meaning of, 370, 370*n*., 473.
Manohar, son of Lonkaran, 494(No. 265).
Manrúp Kachhwáhah, 388.
Mán Singh Darbárí, 506.
Mán Singh Kachhwáhah, Rájah, 206, 339 (No. 30), 418, 418*n*.
Mán Singh Kachhwáhah, 506 (No. 314).
ma'qalí, a kind of writing, 99.
Maqçúd, Khwájah, of Harát, the engraver, 27, 52, 53.
Maqçúd, son of Makhçúç Khán, 388.
Maqçúd 'Alí, of Werkopái, 608*n*.
Maqçúd 'Alí Kor, 437 (No. 136).
markiz, a caligraphical term, 103*n*.
Markizuladwár, title of a work, 549*n*.
marriage, laws of different sects, 174; Akbar's laws regarding, 277; taxes on, 278; age fixed for, 195, 203.
Ma'rúf Maulaná, a katib, 100.
Ma'rúf Çadr, Shaikh, 471.
Maryam-makání, title of Akbar's mother, 309, 48, 62, 455.
Maryam-zamání, title of Jahángír's mother, 309, 619.
Mashárig ulanwár, a work, 547.
Masíh (Messiah), 556*n*.
Masíhá Kairánawí, a poet, 544.
Masnad i 'Alí, 502, 523.
Mas'úd Husain Mírzá, 330, 461, 462.
Maṭáli', an Arabic work, 362*n*.
match-locks, 113;—bearers, 116, 251, 254.
Mat'hurá Dás K'hatrí, 523 (No. 379).
Maulánázádah Shukr, 541.
Mawárid ul kilam, title of a book, 549*n*.
Máwís, an aboriginal race, employed by Akbar, 252.
Mazharí, of Kashmír, a poet, 584. measures, 88*n*., 225, 226, 229; of Kashmír, 346.
Mední Rái Chauhán, 470 (No. 198).
melons, different kinds of, 65, 523.
metals, origin of, 38; compositions, 41.
Mewrahs, runners, 252.
Miçrí Begum, 518,
mid, a perfume, 80.
Mihr 'Alí Barlás, 342.
Mihr 'Alí Khán Sildoz, 435 (No. 130).
Mihr 'Alí Kolábí, 351, 353, 354, 463.
mihrábí, a coin, 33.
mihrkul, a kind of cloth, 95, 617.
Mihrunnisá, vide Núr Jahán.
Mihtar Jauhar, 441*n*.
Mihtar Khán Anísuddín, 417 (No. 102).
Mihtar Sa'ádat, 497.
Mihtar Sakáí, 441.
milk, vide sayurghál.
millennium, 106*n*., 169*n*., 191, 198, 453.
minerals, 39.
Mint, Imperial, 16, 18, 495; Akbar's mint-towns, 31.
Mír 'Adl, 268.
Mír 'Arz, an officer, 257, 259, 334.
Mír Átash, a title, 470.
Mír Bakáwal, or master of the Kitchen, 57.
Mír Kalán, Maulaná, 540.
Mír Khalífah, 420.
Mír Khán, 416, 472.
Mír Khán Yasáwul, 518 (No. 361).
Mír Khawáfí, Khwájah, 445*n*.
Mír Khwájah, son of Sultán Khwájah, 423.
Mír Manzil, or quarter-master, 47.
Mír Rubá'í, a title, 602*n*.
Mír Sámán, a title, 384.
Mír Shab, 515.

miraculous events, 355; vide Akbar.
Mírak Bahádur Arghún, 475 (No. 208).
Mírak Jaláir, 521.
Mírak Khán, 439.
Mírak Khán Bahádur, 532.
Mírak Khwájah, 525.
Mírak Khwájah, Chingiz Khán, 442.
Mírak, Mírzá, Razawí Khán, 438.
Mírán Bukhárí, Sayyid, 397.
Mírán Çadr Jahán, 468.
Mírán Mubárak, of Khándesh, 309.
Mírán Muhammad Sháh, of Khándesh, 325.
Mir-át ul káinát, title of a book, 568*n*.
mírdahah, a non-commissioned officer, 116*n*., 252, 254.
Mírzás, the, their genealogy and revolt, 461; vide rebellion.
Mírzá Ahmad, Khwájah, 508, 512.
Mírzá Beg Shahrí, 424.
Mírzá Khán Níshápúrí, 502 (No. 303).
Mírzá Khán, or Mírzá KhánKhánán, vide KhánKhánán Mírzá 'Abdurrahím.
Mírzá Khwájah, son of Mírzá Asadullah, 522 (No. 371).
Mírzá Qulí Khán, 376, 385, 530.
Mírzá Qulí Mailí, 571.
Mírzá Rájah, vide Mán Singh.
Mírzá Sháhí, 413.
Mírzá Sulṭán, son of Mírzá Sháhrukh Badakhshí, 313.
Mírzádah 'Alí Khán, 443 (No. 152).
misqál, a weight, 36.
miṣtar, of copyists, 52*n*.
Miyán Chand, a singer, 612.
Miyán 'Isá Khán Lohání, father of 'Usmán, 520.
Miyán Joh, 371.
Miyán Khán Ghorí, 326.
Miyán Lál, vide Lál Kaláwant.
Miyán Tánsen, vide Tánsen.
Miyán Wajíhuddín, 538.
Miyánah Afgháns, 456, 506.
Mohan Dás, Rái, 470.
Mohan Kachhwáhah, 398. [104.
Mohesh Mahánand, a Sanskrit work, money, Persian, Hindústání, and Túrání equivalents, 486.
monopolies, imperial, 479.
moon, in dreams signifies luck, 321.
moth, its love to the candle, 576*n*.
Mot'h Rájah, vide Udai Singh.
mu'allaq, 300.
Muarrikh Khán, 518.
mu'átab, meaning of, 433.
Mu'azzam Khán, 492, 521*n*.
Mu'azzam Khwájah, 366*n*., 408, 524.
Mubárak i Bukhárí, of Gujrát, 385, 397.
Mubárak Kashmírí, Sayyid, 479.
Mubárak Khán Gakk'har, 455, 457, 486.
Mubárak Khán, wazír of Sulṭán Mahmúd of Bhakkar, 421.
Mubárak, Mullá, 195.
Mubárak Sháh, a kátib, 100,
Mubárak of Nágor, Shaikh, father of Abulfazl, 169, 185, 187, 198, 209, 490, 537, 569*n*.
Mubárak, Shaikh, of Alwar, 537.
Mubárak, Shaikh, of Gwáliár, 537.
Mubáriz Khán 'Adlí, 456.
Muç'ab ibn Zubair, 36.
Muçáhib Khán, 533*n*.
Muçṭafá Ghilzí, 486 (No. 246).
Muçṭafá Khán, 445*n*., 501.
Muçṭafá, Mullá, of Jaunpúr, 500.
Muflis, Mírzá, 541.
Mufridát i Ma'çúmí, title of a book, 514.
Mughís, Mír, Mahwí, 585, 585*n*.
Mughuls, look upon 'nine' as a sacred number, 364*n*.
Mughul Khán, son of Zain Khán, 346.
Mughul, Mírzá, Badakhshí, 313.
Muhammad, vide Prophet.
Muhammad, son of Daulat Khán Lodí, 503.
Muhammad Ardistání, Hájí, 525 (No. 399).

Muhammad Bukhárí, Shaikh, 396 (No. 77).
Muhammad, Hájí, of Khabúsháu, 606*n*.
Muhammad, Hájí, a kátib, 100.
Muhammad, Maulánú, 541.
Muhammad, Mullá, of Aubah, a kâtib, 101.
Muhammad, Mullá, of Kingrí, 514.
Muhammad, Mullá, of Tattah, 378, 500.
Muhammad, Mullá, of Yazd, 175, 182, 189.
Muhammad, Mírzá, 492 (No. 259).
Muhammad, of Qazwín, a kátib, 101.
Muhammad, Mír Sayyid, the Mahdawí, 546.
Muhammad, Sayyid, 422.
Muhammad, Sayyid, Mír'Adl, 438 (No. 140), 490.
Muhammad, Sayyid, of Rohtás (Bihár), 400.
Muhammad, Shaikh, of Bahroṇch, 545; —, a kátib, 102.
Muhammad Açghar, vide Ashraf Khán.
Muhammad Açghar, Bahár Khán, 405 (No. 87).
Muhammad Akbar, Prince, 487.
Muhammad 'Alí, of Jám, 523 (No. 377).
Muhammad Amín, a kátib, 103.
Muhammad Amín Díwánah, 334.
Muhammad Amín, Háfiz, 185.
Muhammad A'zam Hájí, 581*n*.
Muhammad Bakhtyár, of Jalesar, 425.
Muhammad Báqí Khán Kokah, vide Báqí Khán.
Muhammad Báqir Harawí, 355.
Muhammad Báqí Tarkhán, 362.
Muhammad Çálih, 413.
Muhammad Çálih, çadr, 272.
Muhammad Çálih, Khwájagí, 528.
Muhammad Çálih, Mírzá, 364*n*.
Muhammad Çúfí, of Mázandarán, 590.
Muhammad Fikrí, Sayyid, 602.
Muhammad Ghaus, Shaikh, of Gwáliár, 367, 457, 458, 539.
Muhammad Hakím Háfiz, a kátib, 101.
Muhammad Hakím Mírzá, Akbar's brother, king of Kábul, 312; his daughter, 312; his sister, 449; his mother, 318, 320, 322; 317, 344, 377, 465, 469, 470, 609*n*.
Muhammad Husain, of Kashmír, a kâtib, 102,
Muhammad Husain, of Tabríz, a kátib, 102.
Muhammad Husain, Khwájah, a kátib, 101.
Muhammad Husain, Khwájagí, 478, 485 (No. 241).
Muhammad Husain Lashkar Khán, 407 (No. 90).
Muhammad Husain Mírzá, 325, 461, 462.
Muhammad Husain Mírzá Çafawí, 313.
Muhammad Husain Ṇazírí, 579, 579*n*.
Muhammad 'Isá Tarkhán, 362.
Muhammad 'Itábí, 588, 588*n*.
Muhammad Khán, 525 (No. 400).
Muhammad Khán Ḍhárí, a singer, 612.
Muhammad Khán Gakk'har, 455, 486.
Muhammad Khán Jaláir, 411.
Muhammad Khán Niyází, 483 (No. 239).
Muhammad Khán Sharafuddín Oghlú Taklú, 426, 508.
Muhammad Khán Turkmán, 516 (No. 340).
Muhammad Mas'úd, son of Ahmad Beg Kábulí, 466.
Muhammad Mírak Çálihí, 583.
Muhammad Mírzá Çafawí, Sulṭán, 426.
Muhammad Múmin Hafizak, 613*n*.
Muhammad Páyandah, vide Páyandah Khán.
Muhammad Qáqshál, Mírzá, 370.
Muhammad Qásim Khán, of Nishápúr, 353 (No. 40), 603*n*.
Muhammad Qásim Khán Mír Átish, 478.
Muhammad Qásim Kohbar, 613*n*.
Muhammad Qásim Shádí Sháh, 102.

Muhammad Qulí Afshár, 411.
Muhammad Qulí Khán Barlás, 341, (No. 31); 366.
Muhammad Qulí Khán Turkmán, 474 (No. 203).
Muhammad Qulí Toqbái, 434 (No. 129).
Muhammad Rizá Nau'í, 606*n*.
Muhammad Sa'íd, 416, 481.
Muhammad Sháh, of Dihlí, 395.
Muhammad Sharíf, son of I'timádud-daulah, 433; 509, 511*n*, 512.
Muhammad Sharíf, Khwájah, 508, 512.
Muhammad Sharíf, Mír, 443.
Muhammad Sharíf Nawái, 602*n*.
Muhammad Sharíf Sarmadí 516, 607*n*.
Muhammad Sharíf Wuqú'í, 591.
Muhammad Sulṭán Mírzá, 461, 462.
Muhammad Ṭabíb, Mírzá, of Sabzwár, 442.
Muhammad Ṭálib, son of Sháistah Khán, 511.
Muhammad Waláí, 494.
Muhammad Yár Uzbak, 382.
Muhammad Záhid, of Balkh, 176.
Muhammad Zamán, 508, 533.
Muhammad Zamán, Mírzá, Badakhshí, 313.
Muhammadans, intermarry with Hindús, 469, 470.
muhaqqaq, a kind of writing, 99, 100.
Muhí, of Shíráz, a kátib, 100.
Muhibb 'Alí Khán, son of Mír Khalífah, 420 (No. 101).
Muhibb 'Alí Khán Rohṭásí, 422, 530.
Muhibb 'Alí Khawáfí, Khwájah, 516 (No. 347).
Muhibbullah, Mír, 507.
Muhkam Singh Sísodiah, 418.
Muhsin Khán, 376.
Muhtarim Beg, 443.
Muhtarim Begum, 312.
Muhtashim Khán, 493.
muhur, a coin, 30.
Mu'in, Qází, 545.
mu'íní, a coin, 30, 52.
Mu'inuddín, author of Tafsír i Ma'ání, 523.
Mu'inuddín, of Faráh, a kátib, 100.
Mu'inuddín Ahmad Khán Farankhúdí, 434 (No. 128), 541.
Mu'inuddín Chishtí Sigizí, of Ajmír, 401, 540.
Mu'inuddín Ṭahúrí, a kátib, 100.
Mu'izz, Mír, of Káshán, a kátib, 102.
Mu'izzul Mulk, Mír, 189, 381 (No. 61).
Mujáhid Khán, 383, 421, 494, 533.
Mu'jamul Buldán, a work on geography, 106.
mujannas, a kind of horse, 140, 233.
Mujtahid, 186.
Mukammal Khán, 105, 519*n*.
Mukarram Khán, 489, 493, 621.
Mukarram Mírzá Çafawí, 315.
Mukaṭman Bhadauriah, 488 (No. 249).
Mukhliç Khán, 505.
Mukhliçullah Khán, 466.
Mukhtár Beg, son of Aghá Mullá, 497 (No. 278).
mukhí, a pánleaf, 616.
Mukund, zamíndár of Fatháhád (Bengal), 374.
Mukund Deo, of Oṛísá, 611*n*.
Mullá Mír, 542.
mules, imperial, 152; where bred, 487; imported, 152; their food, 152; harness, 153; how mustered, 216.
Multafit Khán, 472.
Múmin Khawáfí, Khwájah, 447.
Múmin Marwárid, 101.
Mumtáz Mahall, 369, 501*n*., 512, 615.
Munawwar, Shaikh, an author, 106, 189, 547.
Mun'im Khán, Khán Khánán, 263, 317 (No. 11), 334, 371, 384, 427, 440.
Múnis Khán, 417.
Munj, a Rájpút clan, 526.
múnj, a kind of grass, 395.
Munkir and Nakír, two angels, 500.
munshiyát, or letters, of Abul Fath Gílání, 425*n*.

Munçif Khán, 477 (No. 222). muqásá, 263.
Muqarrab Khán (Akbarsháhí), 373.
Muqarrab Khán, 543.
Muqbil Khán, 408.
Muqím 'Arab, vide Shujá'at Khán.
Muqím i Harawí, 420, 421.
Muqím Khán, 371.
Muqím Khán, son of Shujá'at Khán, 523 (No. 386).
Muqím, Khwájah, son of Khwájah Mírak, 525 (No. 401). [420.
Muqím, Mírzá, son of Mírzá Zul-nún,
Muqím Naqshbandí, 433.
Muqím Shábjahání, 413.
muqṭi', or jágírdár, 256.
Murád, Prince, Akbar's son, born and died, 309, 618; his complexion, 309; 48, 141*n*.; called Paháṛí, 182*n*; is instructed in Christianity, 182, 183; 335, 383, 543, 574*n*., 618.
Murád Bakhsh, Prince, 472, 478.
Murád Çafawí, son of Mírzá Rustam, 314, 315.
Murád Khán, 373 (No. 54).
Murád, Mír, of Juwain, 498 (No. 282).
Murád, Mír, Kolábí, 523 (No. 380).
Murád Qulí Sulṭán, 486, 487.
Murtazá Khán, vide Farid i Bukhárí.
Murtazá Khán, Husámaddín Injú, 451 472.
Murtazá Khán, Mír, 449 (No. 162).
Murtazá, Mírzá, 327.
Murtazá Nizám Sháh, 336, 449.
Murtazá Sharíf, Mír, 449, 540.
Músá, Shaikh, Fathpúrí, 402, 403.
Músá, Shaikh, Láhorí, 539.
Músá, Shaikh, 544.
musá'adat, or advances to officers, 265.
musamman, a dish, 60.
Músawí Sayyids, 381, 482.
Mushfiqí of Bukhárá, a poet, 583.
music, at court, 51, 611; schools of, 611*n*.; abolished by Aurangzíb, 613*n*.
Mu'tamid Khán, 478, 521*n*.
Mu'tamid Khán Bakhshí, 413.
Mu'tamid Khán Muhammad Çálih, 445*n*.
mutanjah, a dish, 61.
Muzaffar, brother of Khán 'Álam, 502 (No. 304).
Muzaffar, king of Gujrát, 326, 332, 334, 335, 383, 386, 518; vide Nat'hú.
Muzaffar Husain Mírzá, 353, 461 (No. 180), 463.
Muzaffar Husain, Mírzá, Çafawí, 313 (No. 8), 314.
Muzaffar Khán Bárha, 392, 394, 505.
Muzaffar Khán Turbatí, Khwájah Muzaffar 'Alí, 332, 348 (No. 37), 368, 439.
Muzaffar Khán Ma'múrí, 504.
Muzaffar Lodí, 505.
Muzaffar, Mírzá, son of Sulṭán Husain Mírzá, 362.
Muzaffar Mughul, 512.

NAÇÍB Sháh, son of Qutlú, 520.
Naçír Main, 526 (No. 410).
Naçírá, 383.
Náçir Khusrau, a poet, 190, 198.
Naçíruddín Pak'hlíwál, Sulṭán, 454.
Náçirulmulk, vide Pír Muhammad Khán.
Naçrullah, son of Mukhtár Beg, 497.
Naçrullah, Çúfí, 100.
Nádi 'Alí Arlát, 508.
Nádi 'Alí, Háfiz, 508.
Nádi 'Alí Maidání, 507 (No. 317).
Nádir Sháh, 363.
Nádirí, name of several poets, 605, 605*n*.
Nádir ulmulk, 590*n*.
Nafáis ulmaásir, a work on literature, 448*n*.
nafír, a trumpet, 51.
Náhíd Begum, 420.
Náik Bakhshú, a singer, 611. [313.
Najábat Khán, Shujá' Mírzá Badakhshí,

Naját Khán, Mírzá, 374, 439 (No. 142).
Najíbah Anagah, 398.
Najmuddín 'Alí Khán Bárha, 392.
Najmuddín Muhammad Káhí, 566*n*.
nákhudá, or shipcaptain, 281.
NalDaman, a poem, 106, 548, 550.
Naman Dás Kachhwáhah, 483.
name of grandfather given to a child, 497.
namgírah, or awning, 46.
Námí, a poet, 514.
Nának Járjú, a singer, 612.
naphtha, 40.
Napoleon I., 587*n*.
Naqábat Khán, 406.
Naqíb Khán, 104, 105*n*, 106, 447 (No. 161).
naqír, a weight, 36.
naqqárah, a drum, 51;—khánah, 47.
naqshbandí, its meaning, 423*n*.
Náráin Dás Ráthor, of Idar, 433.
narnál, a kind of gun, 113.
náshpátí, a melon, 65.
naskh, a kind of writing, 99, 100.
nasta'líq, a kind of writing, 101, 102.
Nat'hú, of Gujrát, Muzaffar Sháh, 385, 386; vide Muzaffar Sháh.
Nau'í, a poet, 606.
Naurang Khán, 334, 463, 531, 572*n*.
naurúz, or New Year's day, 183, 276.
Nauruz Beg Qáqshál, 437.
Nawáí, 602*n*.
Nawázish Khán Sa'dullah, 363, 363*n*.
Nazar Bahádur, 374.
Nazar Be Uzbak, 455 (No. 169).
Nazar Khán Gakk'har, 486 (No. 247).
Nazar Muhammad Khán, of Balkh, 481.
Nazírí, the poet, 579, 579*n*., 613*n*.
newswriters, 258, 338.
New Year's day, 183, 276.
niáriyah, 23.
Niçábuççibyán, a Persian primer, 41*n*.
nichoíwálah, 26.
Nikallú, a Turkish tribe, 619.
Níl Kant'h, of Oríssá, 508 (No. 318).
nímah suwárán, 254.
Ni'matullah Bawwáb, a kátib, 101.
nine, a favorite number of the Mughuls, 364*n*.
Niyábat Khán, the rebel, 400, 403, 425, 437.
Niyází Afgháns, 484.
Nizám, of Jálor, 494.
Nizám, Qází, vide Ghází Khán Badakhshí.
Nizám, Shaikh, 538.
Nizámí, of Qazwín, 103.
Nizám Murtazá Khán, Sayyid, 469.
Nizámuddín Ahmad, the historian, 420*n*., 436, 514, 528.
Nizámuddín Ahmad, son of Sháh Muhammad Khán, 516 (No. 341).
Nizámuddín Auliá, 440.
Nizámuddín, Jám, 362.
Nizámulmulk, Khwájah, 495.
Nizámulmulk Túsí, 583.
Nuçrat Yár Khán Bárha, 392, 395.
nuqtahs, 453.
Nuqtawís, a sect, 452, 597*n*.
Núram, 526 (No. 415).
Núrí, a poet, 542.
Núr Jahán, [Núr Mahall] 309, 310, 311, 337, 338, 369, 509 to 511.
Núrnámah, title of a poem, 412.
Núr Qulíj, 480 (No. 229).
Núruddín Mírzá, son of A'çaf Khán II., 369, 433.
Núruddín Muhammad Naqshbandí, Mírzá, 309, 618.
Núruddín Qarárí, a poet, 586, 586*n*.
Núruddín Tarkhán, 424, 524, 541.
Núrullah, a kátib, 103.
Núrullah Injú, 451.
Núrullah, Mír, 545.
Núrullah, Qází, 346.
Núrunnisá Begum, a wife of Jahángír, 464, 477*n*.
Nuzhatularwáh, a çúfistic book, 181, 547.

ODAT Singh Bhadauriah, 489.
Officers of the Mint, 18, 19, 20, 22.
opium eating, excessive, 378, 384*n.*; vide drinking. oranges, 69.
Ordat Kachhwáhah, 483. ordeals, 205.

PACHWARIAH, a kind of horse, 133.
Pádisháh Khwájah, 459.
Pádisháh Qulí, 480, 596.
padre, a Portuguese priest, 182.
págosht, one of Akbar's regulations, 217.
Pahár, of Jálor, 494.
Pahár Khán Baloch, 351, 526 (No. 407).
Pahár Singh Bundelá, 407, 488.
Paháṛí, nickname of Prince Murád, 309.
pahit, 59.
pahluwán, or wrestler, 253.
páiks, or runners, 138; vide postrunners.
paikár, 26.
painting, art of, 96, 107; discouraged by Islám, 108; painters of Europe, 96; vide Akbar.
Pairawí, of Sáwah, a poet, 600.
paisah, a coin, 31.
palás, a wood, 298.
pálkí bearers, 254.
pán, 72, 73, 616.
pánchtoliah, a stuff, 510.
Panchú, Shaikh, 538, 617.
pandau, a coin, 30, 31.
paniálah, a fruit, 70.
paniwár, 26.
panj, a coin, 30.
Pápá, the Pope, 183.
paper, variegated, invention of, 101.
Parhez Bánú Begum, 314.
Parisrám, Rájah of Jammú, 345.
Parmánand K'hatrí, 476 (No. 214).
Pársí feasts, kept by Akbar, 276; vide Akbar, Zoroastrians.
páras stone, 402.
Parí-çúrat, a masnawí, 514.
Parichhat Zamíndár, 493.
Partáb Bundelá, 488.
Partáb, Rái of Mánkoṭ, 345.
Partáb Ráná (Ráná Kíká), 387, 400, 443*n.*, 519.
Partáb Singh Kachhwáhah, 516 (No. 336).
Partáb Ujjainiyah, 513*n.*
parwánchahs, 263,
Parwánchí, an officer, 259.
Parwíz, Prince, 310, 311, 314, 336, 337, 344, 477*n.*
Parwízdád, a musician, 613*n.*
Patr Dás, Rái Bikramájít, 439, 469 (No. 196).
páulah, a coin, 31.
pay, of soldiers, 247, 251, [illegible], 254, 504; of mançabdárs, 248; of Ahadís, 250.
Payámí, a poet, 601.
Páyandah Khán Mughul, 387 (No. 68), [518.
Páyandah Muhammad Tarkhán, 362.
payments, how made, 262, 263, 264.
pensions, 474, 510. perfumes, 73, 74, 75, 77.
Peshrau Khán, 497 (No. 280).
pharáit, 253.
Pharao, proverbial in the East, 160*n.*, 169, 170, 181.
Píchah Ján Anagah, 344.
pickles, 64.
pigeon flying, 298.
piles, prevent a man from joining in public worship, 177.
pineapples, 68.
pinjar, 25.
Pír 'Alí Beg, 315.
Pír Khán [Pírú], son of Daulat Khán Lodí, 503.
Pír Khán, of Jálor, 622.
Pír Muhammad, a kátib, 101.
Pír Muhammad Khán Shirwání (Mullá), 324 (No. 20), 359*n.*, 541, 619.

Pírzádah, Liwái, a poet and musician, 613, 613*n*.
pítal, vide brass.
piyár, a fruit, 71.
plantain tree, 70.
play, at court, 203, 297, 303, 349.
Poets, of Akbar's reign, 548ff; poets laureate of India, 491, 548*n*., 611; vide Kabi Rái, Malik ushshu'ará. Vide also the following Poets, mentioned in the Á'ín,—A'çafí, Amrí, Anísí, Arslán, Ashkí, Asírí, A'tishí; Bábá Ṭálib; Çabrí, Çarfí (Çairafí) Kashmírí, Çarfí Sáwají, Çabúhí, Çáib, Çálihí, Çúfí; Dakhlí, Daurí, Dawái; Faizí (Fayyází), Faizí Sarhindí, Fahmí, Fanái, Farebí, Fárisí, Fikrí, Fusúní; Ghairatí, Ghayúrí, Ghazálí, Ghaznawí, Haidar Mu'ammái, Haidarí, Hairatí, Hálatí, Halímí, Hamdamí, Háshimí, Hayátí, Háziq, Husain Marwí, Huzní, Huzúrí; Imámí, 'Itábí; Jámí, Jazbí, Judáí; Káhí, Kalím, Kámí, Kámí Sabzwárí, Khusrau, Khusrawí; Lisání, Liwái; Mahwí, Mailí, Makhfí, Masíhá, Mazharí, Mushfiqí; Náçir Khusrau, Nádirí, Námí, Nau'í, Nawái, Nazírí, Núrí; Pairawí, Payámí; Qaidí, Qarárí, Qásim Arslán, Qásim Júnábádí, Qásimí, Qudsí; Rafí'í, Rahái, Rahí, Razái, Ruswái; Sámrí, Sanái, Shaikh Sáqí, Saqqá, Sarkhush, Sarmadí, Sawádí, Shafíq, Shahrí, Shápúr, Sherí, Shifái, Shikebí, Shujá'í, Sirájá, Sulṭán; Taqiyá, Ṭaríqí, Tashbíhí; Ulfatí, 'Urfí; Waçlí, Wafái, Walí Dasht Bayází, Wálihí, Waqárí, Wuqú'í.
porters, vide Darbán.
Portuguese, their missionaries at Akbar's court, 168, 182, 191, 618; take pilgrims to Makkah, 172, 440, 499.
post, post-runners, 252*n*.
Prasuttam Singh Kachhwáhah, 458.
Pratáb, vide Partáb.
precious stones, 15, 451, 510*n*; vide diamond, yáqút.
prices of articles, 62; of ice, 56; of building materials, 223; vide wages.
Printing, art of, in India, 99*n*. prisoners, how treated, 330.
Prit'hí Chand Kachhwáhah, 495.
Prit'hí Singh Bundelá, 488.
Prophet, the, abused at court, 196.
prostitutes, segregated, 192.
prostration, or sijdah, 159, 159*n*., 181, 192.
Public Works, 222.
punhar, 24, 26.
Púran Mall, of Gídhor, 340, 480*n*.
Púran Mall Kachhwáhah, 329.
Purbín Khán, a musician, 612.
Puruk'hotam, Rái, a Bráhman, 180, 528.

QABIL son of 'Atíq, 526 (No. 412).
Qabúl Khán, 457 (No. 137), 516. qabúlí, a dish, 60.
Qadam Rasúl, or Qadam Mubárak, or foot print of the prophet, 198, 507.
Qádir Khán Mallú, 428.
Qádir Qulí, 525 (No. 402).
qaiçúrí, a kind of camphor; vide fançúrí, 78.
Qaidí, of Shíráz, a poet, 599.
Qáim Khán, 371.
qalandarí, a kind of tent, 46, 54.
qalyah, a dish, 61.
Qamar Khán, 448, 485 (No. 243).
qamarghah, a kind of hunting, 284.
Qandahárí Mahall, 314.
Qanbar Be, 455.
Qánún, a medical work, 467.
Qáqsbál, a clan, 369, 369*n*.
Qará Bahádur, 460 (No. 179).
Qará Bahrí, 516 (No. 345).

Qará Beg Farráshbegí, 313.
Qará Khán Turkmán, 355.
Qaráqoinlü Turks, 315, 619.
Qarátáq Khán, 400, 516.
Qará Turks, 371*n*.
Qará Yúsuf, 315.
Qaráchah Khán, 388.
qarárnámah, 263.
Qarárí, Núruddín of Gílán, a poet, 175, 586.
qaráwals, or hunters, 282, 289.
Qárlyghs, a tribe, 454, 501.
Qásim, Mullá and Maulaná, 545.
Qásim 'Alí Khán, 465 (No. 187).
Qásim Arslán, a poet, 103, 609.
Qásim Badakhshí, Mír, 499 (No. 283).
Qásim [Khán] Bárha, Sayyid, 336, 392, 407, 408 419, (No. 105).
Qásim Beg, 106, 517 (No. 350), 541.
Qásim Beg Khán, 378.
Qásim Júnábádí, Mírzá, 591.
Qásim Káhí, a poet, 209, 566.
Qásim Khán Kású, 443.
Qásim Khán Mír Bahr, 379 (No. 59), 620.
Qásim Khán, son of Mír Murád, 498.
Qásim Khán Sístání, 439.
Qásim Khwájah, 507 (No. 316).
Qásim Kohbar, a musician, 613.
Qásim Kokah, 420.
Qásim, Shaikh, Muhtashim Khán, 493.
Qásimí, of Mázandarán, a poet, 610.
Qawím Khán, 371.
Qazáq Khán Taklú, 426, 508.
Qází, 268; general character of Qázís, 269.
Qází 'Alí, 411, 528.
Qází Khán Badakhshí, 383.
Qází Khán Bakhshí, 477 (No. 223).
Qází Hasan, of Qazwín, 498 (No. 281).
qímah paláo, a dish, 60; qímah shúrbá, 60.
qírát, a weight, 36.
qírbak, a title, 393*n*.
Qismiyah Bánú, 618.
qisráq, a mare, 135.
qiṭmír, a weight, 36.
Qiyá Khán, 437.
Qiyá Khán, son of Çáhib Khán, 464 (No. 184).
Qiyám Khán, son of Sháh Muhammad Qalátí, 433.
qübüz, a musical instrument, 613.
Qúch Beg Humáyúní, 455.
Qudsí, of Karbalá, a poet, 602.
quicksilver, 39; habitually eaten, 401; when called kushtah, 563*n*.
qulij, meaning of, 355*n*., 500.
Qulij Khán, 34, 309, 354.
Qulijullah, 501.
qullatain, 202.
Qunduq Khán, 464 (No. 181).
Qundúz Khán, 376, 464.
qur, or collection of weapons, royal flags, &c., 50, 109, 110, 282.
Quraish Sulṭán, of Káshghar, 459.
qurçkúb, 23.
qutáb, a dish, 60.
Quṭbuddín, Sulṭán of Gujrát, 506.
Quṭbuddín, of Jalesar, 191.
Quṭbuddín Khán, 188, 241, 333 (No. 28).
Quṭbuddín Khán, Shaikh, 496 (No. 275).
Qutlú Khán Lohání, 326, 343, 354, 356, 366*n*., 440; his sons, 520.
Qutlugh, meaning of, 432.
Qutlugh Qadam Khán, 432 (No. 123).

RABI, a coin, 30.
Rafí'í, [Rafí'uddín Haidar] of Káshán, a poet, 593, 593*n*.
Rafíqí, 594*n*.
Rafí'uddín Çafawí, Mírzá, 523.
Rahái, a poet, 592*n*.
rahas, a coin, 28.
Rahí, a poet, 611.
Rahím Qulí, 515 (No. 333).
Rahmán Dád, Mírzá, 339.
Rahmat Khán, son Masnad 'Alí, 497, 502 (No. 306).

Rahmatullah, a singer, 613.
Rái Bhoj Háḍá, 458 (No. 174).
Rái Durgá Sísodiah, 417 (No. 103).
Rái Mall Shaikháwat, 419.
Rái Mán, 252*n*.
Rái Rái Singh, 310, 357 (No. 44, 463, 526.
Rái Sál Darbárí, 419 (No. 106).
Raibárí, a class of Hindús who train camels, 147.
raihání, a kind of writing, 99, 100.
Rájah 'Alí of Khándesh, 463; vide 'Alí Khán.
Rájáwat, 419.
Rájpúts, Janúhah, 334; Kachhwáhah, vide Bihárí Mall; Háḍás, 409; Ranghars, 526; Ráṭhors, 357, 459; vide Maín, Munj.
Rájsingh, Rájah, Kachhwáhah, 458 (No. 174).
Rájú Bárha, Sayyid, 452.
rák'hí, a Hindú custom, 184, 216*n*.
Rám Chand Baghelá, 358, 367, 369, 406, 612*n*.
Rám Chand Bundelá, 477*n*., 487 (No. 248).
Rám Chand Chauhán, 495.
Rám Chand Kachhwáhah, son of Jagannát'h, 387.
Rám Chand Kachhwáhah, 495 (No. 268).
Rám Chandr, Rájah of Khurdah, 489 (No. 250), 607*n*.
Rám Dás, son of Rájsingh, Kachhwáhah, 457.
Rám Dás Kachhwáhah, [Rájah Karan] 483.
Rám Dás Díwán, Rái, 515 (No. 331).
Rám Dás, the singer, 611*n*., 612, 612*n*.
Rámsáh, Rájah of Gwáliár, 339, 343.
Rám Sáh Bundelá, 356, 487.
Ránás of Maiwár, 387; vide Partáb Singh, Udai Singh.
Ranbáz Khán Kambú, 402.
Ranghar Rájpúts, 526.
Rangsen of Ágrah, a musician, 612.
Rashahát ulhayát, title of a book, 568*n*.
rasí, an acid, 24.
Ratan Ráṭhor, 359.
Ratan Singh Sísodiah, 418.
Ráṭhors, 357, 459, 522.
ratí, a weight, 16*n*.
Raushánís, 34*n*., 340, 345, 356.
Rázá Qulí, 496 (No. 274).
Razáí, a poet, 466.
Razawí, 482; — Sayyids, 381; — Khán, a title, 439; vide Músawí.
Razawí Khán Mírzá Mírak, 438 (No. 141).
Razíul Mulk, 385. rebellion of the Mírzás, 323, 330, 332, 333, 373, 375, 386, 396, 397, 404; dates, 434*n*.
refining of gold, 20; of silver, 22.
religious views of the Emperor Akbar; vide Akbar.
reporters, 258; vide wáqi'ahnawís.
revenue, how paid, 13.
revolt, military, in Bengal, 323, 350, 351, 431.
Ri'áyat, son of Peshrau Khán, 498.
riçáç, a metal, 40.
rice, best kinds, 57.
riqá', a kind of writing, 99, 100.
risálahdár, an officer, 259.
river tolls, 281.
Riyázussaláṭín, title of a historical work, 427.
Rizqullah Khán, vide Hakím Rizqullah.
Rozafzún, Rájah, 446*n*.
rubáb, a musical instrument, 613.
ruby, a large one, 414.
rúh i túṭiyá, a metal, 40.
rúháni, a kind of writing, 99.
Rúhullah (I), 511.
rúi, a metallic composition, 41.
ruined towns, 494.
Ruknuddín Mahmúd Kamángar, 539.
Ruknuddín, Shaikh, 538.
Ruknuddín, a poet, 589*n*.

Rúmí Khán, Ustád Jalabí, 441 (No. 146). runners, 138.
Rúp, a servant of Akbar, 425.
rupee, raised from 35 to 40 dáms, 233; counted 40 dáms in salaries, 31; — of Sher Sháh, 31; of Akbar, 31, 33.
Rúpmatí, the beautiful dancing girl, 429.
Rúp Mukund Sísodiah, 418.
Rúp Singh Sísodiah, 418.
Rúpsí Bairágí Kachhwáhah, 427.
Ruqayyah Begum, daughter of Mírzá Hindál, Akbar's wife, 309, 509.
Rustam Khán Dak'hiní, 478.
Rustam Çafawí, Mírzá, 314 (No. 9), 364*n.*, 513, 619.
Rustam, Prince, 618.
Rustam i Zamán, Shaikh Kabír, 519, 520.
Ruswáí, 595*n.*
rúyat, 196.

SA'ÁDAT Bánú Begum, 619.
Sa'ádat Khán, 478, 478*n.*
Sa'ádat Khán, son of Zafar Khán, 522.
Sa'ádat Khán Badakhshí, 427 (No. 117).
Sa'ádat Mírzá, son of Khizr Khwájah, 443 (No. 153).
Sabal Singh, 485 (No. 245).
sabbák, 22.
Sabdal Khán, 438 (No. 139).
Sa'duddín, of Kháf, 592*n.*
Sa'dullah Masihá, 544.
Sa'dullah, Maulaná, 545.
Sa'dullah Nawázish Khán, 363, 363*n.*
saffron (za'farán), 84, 411, 479.
safídrú, a metallic composition, 40.
ság, 59.
sahsah, a money bag, 14.
Sáhú Bhonslah, 489.
sahw ullisán, title of a book, 603*n.*
sáibán, a royal ensign, 50.
Sa'íd Badakhshí, 410.
Sa'íd Khán Bahádur Zafarjang, 466.
Sa'íd Khán Chaghtái, 331, 340*n.*, 363, 363*n.*, 463.
Sa'íd Khán Gakk'har, 456, 457, 477*n.*, 532.
Sa'íd, Maulaná, of Turkistán, 540.
Sa'íd Toqbái, 439.
Saif 'Alí Beg, 315.
Saif Khán Bárha, 392, 414.
Saif Khán Kokah, 350.
Saifuddín Çafawí, 315.
Saifuddín Husain 'Alí Khán Bárha, 392.
Saifullah, Mírzá, son of Qulij Khán, 500 (No. 292), 34*n.*
Saifulmulúk, 473.
sailors, 280.
Sajáwal Khán Súr, 428.
Sakat Singh, 485 (No. 256).
Sakat Singh, son of Udai Singh, 519.
Sakat Singh Kachhwáhah, 516 (No. 342).
Sakínah Bánú Begum, 435, 449.
Sakrá, of Maiwár, 519 (No. 366).
Saláhuddín Çarfí, 586*n.*
Salámullah, 211.
salaries, of women, 44, 45, 615; of pensioners, 451; of ship-captains, 281; how paid, 262, 263, 264; 240, 245, 248, 250, 251, 510, 511.
Salím Chishtí, of Fathpúr Síkrí, 169, 267*n.*, 309, 402, 475, 492, 496, 515, 539, 546.
Salím Khán Afghán, 415.
Salím Khán Kákar, 436, (No. 132).
Salím Khán Sirmúr Afghán, 436.
Salím, Prince, vide Jahángír.
Salím Qulí, 518 (No. 357).
Salím Sháh, 331, 317, 456; vide Islem Sháh.
Salímah Khánum, 441.
Salímah Sultán Begum, 198, 309, 316, 327, 441, 618.
salímí, a coin, 30.
Salmán of Sáwah, a poet, 100*n.*

saloní, 21, 26, 37.
salt, manufacture of, 470; an antidote against drunkenness, 555*n*.
saltpetre, 55, 56.
Saltán Deodah, of Sarohí, 357, 358*n*., 419.
salutations, at court, 158.
Samánjí Khán, 416 (No. 100).
Samánjí Khán Qurghújí, 441 (No. 147).
Samarqandí, Mír, 522.
Sámí'ah Begum, 421.
Sámrí, a poet, 603*n*., 604.
Sanábil, title of a book, 547.
sanads, or grants, 259; how sealed, 263.
Sanáí, a poet, 550*n*., 563.
sanbúsah, a dish, 60.
sand for strewing on paper, 101.
sandalwood, 81.
Sándahas, a family of Amarkoṭ, 339.
Sángah Puṇwar, 526 (No. 411).
Sángrám, of K'harakpúr, 340, 446,446*n*., 480*n*.
sangrám, Akbar's favorite gun, 116, 617.
Sání Khán Harawí, 476.
sanj, or cymbal, 51.
Sanjar, of Kashán, a poet, 595.
Sanjar Çafawí, Mírzá, son of Sulṭán Husain Mírzá, 313, 496 (No. 272).
Sanjar Mírzá, son of Khizr Khán Hazárah, 477*n*.
Sánká Ráná, 430.
Sanskrit, translations from, 104, 106, 199; names of the sun, 200, 202.
sanújí (satújí), a kind of horse, 133.
Saṇwal Dás Jádoṇ, 525 (No. 396).
Saṇwal Singh Bundelá, 488.
saqaṭnámah, 250.
Sáqí, Shaikh, a poet, 593.
sáqínámahs, a class of poems, by Sanáí, 563*n*.; by Shikebí, 576*n*.; by Muhammad Çúfí, 590*n*.
Saqqá, a poet, 581*n*.
sarápardah, 54.
Sarbaland Khán, 506.
Sardár Khán, Mírzá 'Abdullah, 327, 328.
Sardár Khán, 328, 469, 492.
Sarfaráz Khán, 492.
sarkhaṭ, 250, 261, 263.
Sarkhush, the poet, 253*n*.
Sarmadí Afghán, 341.
Sarmadí, of Içfahán, 607.
sarmandal, a musical instrument, 612.
Sarmast Khán, 519 (No. 362).
Sarod Khán, a singer, 612.
Satr Sál Bundelá, 488.
Satr Sál Kachhwáhah, 418.
Satr Sál Ráṭhór, 399.
Sattís, a tribe, 456*n*.
Saturn, or Zuhal, 201*n*.
Sawádí, a poet, 580*n*.
Sawánih, a historical work, 316*n*., 418*n*.
Sawáṭi' ul ilhám, title of a book, 549.
sayurghál, or rent-free land, 261, 268, 269, 270.
Sayyids, of Amrohah, 391; Arabsháhí, 389; of Bárha, 336, 390; of Bukhárá, 413, 415; of Gulistánah, 566*n*.; of Injú, 450; of Itáwah, 459; of Mánikpúr, 391; Músawí, 381; Razawí, 381, 482; Salámí, of Shíráz, 506, 507; Ṭabaṭibá, 593*n*.; of Tirmiz, 514.
sciences, how divided, 279*n*.
sealing-wax, how made, 264.
seals, Imperial, 45, 52, 263.
sects, vide Khwájahs; Maghribiyah; Mahdawís; Mahmúdís; Nuqṭawís; Raushánís; Sumanís; Umaná; Wáhidís.
Shád Khán, 481.
Shád Khán, Mírzá Shádmán, 327, 328, 480 (No. 233).
Shádí Be Uzbak, 519 (No. 367).
Shádí Beg, 455.
Shádí Beg Shujá'at Khán, 481.
Shádí Khán Afghán, 319.
Shádí Khán Shádí Be, 455.

Shádí Sháh, 102.
Shádmán, Mírzá, vide Shád Khán.
Shádmán Pak'hlíwál, 502.
Sháfí, Mírzá, 412.
Shafíq, name of a writer, 491*n*.
Sháh, a title, 337, 337*n*.
Sháh, Mauláná, of Mashhad, a kátib, 100.
Sháh Abul Fath, 588*n*.
Sháh Abul Ma'álí, Mír, 312, 322, 366*n*., 441.
Sháh Abú Turáb, 198.
Sháh 'Alam Ahmadábádí, 547.
Sháh 'Alí Nizám Sháh, 336.
Sháh Beg Arghún (under Bábar), 311.
Sháh Beg Arghún, son of Zul-nún Arghún, 362.
Sháh Beg Khán Arghún, 313.
Sháh Beg Khán, vide Khán Daurán.
Sháh Beg Khán Badakhshí, 442 (No. 148).
Sháh Budágh Khán, 371 (No. 52), 382.
Sháh Fanáí, son of Mír Najafí, 426 (No. 115).
Sháh Fakhruddín Músawí, Naqábat Khán, 406 (No. 88).
Sháh Ghází Khán, 443 (No. 155), 449.
Sháh Husain Arghún, Mírzá, 362, 422.
Sháh Jahángír, vide Háshimí.
Sháh Khalíl, 376.
Sháh Mahmúd, of Nishápúr, a kátib, 102.
Sháh Malik, Mír, 465.
Sháh Mançúr, Khwájah, 430 (No. 122), 34*n*., 334.
Sháh Mírzá, 325, 461, 462.
Sháh Muhammad Gakk'har, 515 (No. 332).
Sháh Muhammad, son of Masnad i 'Álí, 525 (No. 395).
Sháh Muhammad, Mauláná, 106, 540,
Sháh Muhammad, Mullá, 208.
Sháh Muhammad, Mírzá, vide Ghaznín Khán, 378.
Sháh Muhammad, son of Quraish Sulṭán, 506 (No. 310).
Sháh Muhammad, of Káshghar, 459.
Sháh Muhammad, of Sháhábád, 106.
Sháh Muhammad Khán Qalátí, 408 (No. 95).
Sháh Qulí Khán Náranjí, 480 (No. 231), 596.
Sháh Qulí Çalábat Khán, 449.
Sháh Qulí Mahram Bahárlü, 359 (No. 45).
Sháh Sulṭán, Mírzá, 441*n*.
sháh-álú (cherries), 65 ; vide gilás.
Sháham A'ghá, 441.
Sháham Beg, 319.
Sháham Khán Jaláir, 410 (No. 97).
Shahámat Khán Bárha, 392.
Shahbáz Khán Kambú, 188, 242, 326, 328, 342, 356, 399 (No. 80), 422.
Shahbáz Khán, son of Sharíf Amírul-Umará, 518.
sháhí, a kind of silver, 23, 37.
Sháhjahán [Prince Khurram], 310, 311, 314, 337, 337*n* ; abolishes the prostration, 213*n*.
Shahnawáz Khán Çafawí, 339, 472, 472*n*.
Shahnawáz Khán, Mírzá Irich, 339, 511.
Shahrí, a poet, 424.
Sháhrukh Dantúrí, 524 (No. 392).
Sháhrukh, Mírzá, son of Mírzá Ibráhím Badakhshí, 309 ; 312 (No. 7) ; his children, 313 ; 380, 380*n*. ; 525.
Sháhrukh, son of Mírzá Rustam Çafawí 314.
Shahryár, Prince, 311, 510.
Sháhú Khail Afgháns, 502.
Sháhzádah Khánum, Akbar's daughter, 308.
Shaibání, a tribe, 319, 328.
Shaibání Khán Uzbak, 361, 362.
Shaikh Husain, an engraver, 53.
Shaikh Husain, Mauláná, 540.
Shaikh Mír, 445*n*.

[541.

Shaikháwat Kachhwáhahs, 494.
Shaikhzádah i Suhrwardí, 100.
Sháistah Khán, Mírzá Abú Ṭálib, 511, 512.
Shajáwal Khán Súr, 428.
Shamáil unnabí, title of a work, 544.
Shámlü, a tribe of Turkmáns, 578*n.*, 619.
Shams Bukhárí, 523.
shamsah, an ensign, 50.
shamsherbáz, 252, 253.
Shamsí, Mírzá, vide Jahángír Qulí Khán.
Shamsuddín Báyasanghur, a kátib, 100.
Shamsuddín Chak, 618.
Shamsuddín Hakímul Mulk, 542.
Shamsuddín Kháfí, Khwájah, 445 (No. 159), 411, 425, 491.
Shamsuddín Khatái, a kátib, 100.
Shamsuddín Kirmání, a kátib, 102.
shámyánah, an awning, 54.
Shankal Beg, 361.
s'hansah, 27.
Shápúr Khwájah, 508, 512.
Sharaf, of Níshápúr, a musician, 613*n.*
Sharaf, of Yazd, an engraver, 53.
Sharaf Beg, of Shíráz, 512 (No. 321).
Sharafuddín, of Munair, a saint, 48.
Sharafuddín, Mír, 507.
Sharafuddín Husain, Mírzá, 322 (No. 17), 329, 350, 351.
Sharíf A'mulí, Mír, 452 (No. 166), 176, 209, 591*n.*
Sharíf, Amír ul Umará, son of Khwájah 'Abduççamad, 517 (No. 351).
Sharíf Khán, 383 (No. 63).
Sharíf, Mír, of Koláb, 526 (No. 406).
Sharíf, Mír, son of Sháh Fathullah, 540.
Sharíf, Mírzá, son of 'Aláuddín, 522 (No. 372).
Sharíf Sarmadí, 516 (No. 344), 591*n.*, 607, 607*n.*
Sharíf Wuqú'í, a poet, 591. shatal, 203.
shawls, 90. 91.
Sher Afkan Khán Istajlü, first husband of Núr Jahán, 496, 524.
Sher Afkan, son of Saif Kokah, 518 (No. 355).
Sher Afkan Khán Humáyúní, 455.
Sher 'Alí Kámráni, 388.
Sher Beg Yasáwulbáshí, 515 (No. 334).
Sher Khán, son of I'timád Khán Gujrátí, 387.
Sher Khán Fúládí, 325, 386, 396, 407, 463.
Sher Khán Mughul, 494 (No. 263).
Sher Khwájah, 459 (No. 176).
Sher Muhammad, 524 (No. 393).
Sher Muhammad Díwánah, 316, 317, 348, 402, 524.
Sher Sháh Súr, called by Mughul historians Sher Khán, 328*n.*; his army reforms, 242; confers lands, 256, 271; 340, 422, 428, 456, 503, 504.
Sher Sháh, son of 'Adlí Mubáriz Khán, 410.
Sherzád, 403.
Sherzád Khán Bahádur, 514.
Sher Zamán Bárha, 392, 394.
Sherí, a poet, 106, 197, 202, 204, 610.
Sheroyah Khán, 455 (No. 168).
Sherullah, 522.
Shí'ahs, 338; how treated by Sunnís, 401; may abuse their religion, vide taqiyah.
Shifái, a writer, 543.
Shiháb Badakhshí, 482.
Shiháb Khán, a singer, 612.
Shiháb Khán, Hájí, 371.
Shihábuddín Ahmad Khán, or Shiháb Khán, 332 (No. 26), 591*n.*
Shihábuddín Suhrawardí, 433.
Shikebí, Mullá, a poet, 335*n.*, 576.
Shimál Khán Chelah, 443 (No. 154), 476. ships, 280.

shírbiriny, 59.
Shirwání Afgháns, 619.
shoshah, a caligraphical term, 103*n*.
Shujá Beg Arghún, vide Sháh Beg.
Shujá' Kábulí Asad Khán, 431*n*.
Shujá', Mírzá, Najábat Khán Badakhshí, 313.
Shujá'at Khán, vide 'Abdullah Khán Uzbak.
Shujá'at Khán Muqím Arab, 371 (No. 51).
Shujá'at Khán Shádí Beg, 481.
Shujá'at Khán, Shaikh Kabír, 519, 520, 521, 522.
Shujá'at Khán Súr, 428, 428*n*.
Shujá'í, a poet, 543.
Shujáwal Khán Afghán, 447.
Shukrullah Zafar Khán, son of Zain Khán, 346, 522 (No. 373).
Shukrunnisá Begum, Akbar's daughter, 308.
shullah, a dish, 60.
sijdah, or prostration, 159, 181, 192, 440; continued by Jahángír, 212*n*.; abolished by Sháhjahán, 213*n*.
sijjí, 24.
sikkachí, 22.
Sikandar Dutání, 504.
Sikandar Khán Súr, 319, 365, 366*n*.
Sikandar Mírzá, 461, 462.
siláras (storax), 81.
Sildoz, a Chaghtái clan, 435.
Silhadí Kachhwáhah, 495 (No. 267).
silver, 22, 25, 31, 35, 38, 40.
sím i sukhtah, a metallic composition, 41.
sing, a brass horn, 51.
Singrám, vide Sangrám.
Sipahdár Khán, 504.
sipand, wild rue, 139*n*., 577*n*.
Sirújá, a poet, 569*n*.
Sirgyán Khán, a singer, 612.
Sirí Çáf, a kind of cloth, 94, 617.
Sirs tree, used in medicine, 421.
sitái, 21.
sitting, modes of, 160*n*.
Sívrát, a Hindú festival, 201.
Síwá Rám, 481.
siyáhgosh, 290.
Sojá Kachhwáhah, 329.
soldiers, their pay, 247, 251, 252, 349*n*.; fined, 265.
sounds, nature of, 98.
Soz o gudáz, a Masnawí, 606*n*.
specific gravity, 41; of woods, 227.
spices, 64. [422.
Srí Rám, son of Gajpatí of Bihár, 400,
Stewart's History of Bengal, 323, 368*n*., 370*n*., 399*n*. stitch, different kinds of, 89*n*.
storax, 81.
stuffs, different kinds of, 90, 91, 617.
Subhán Khán, a singer, 612.
Subhán Qulí Khán, of Bukhárá, 522.
Subhán Qulí Turk, 383.
Subhán Singh Bundelá, 488.
sugandh gúgalá (bdellium), 82.
sugarcane, cultivation of, 69.
Suhail Khán Habshí, 335.
Suhráb Khán, 413.
Suhráb Turkmán, 463.
Suk'h Deo Bundelá, 488.
súkí, a coin, 31.
Sulaimán (Solomon), king of the Jews, 306, 554, 554*n*., 562*n*.
Sulaimán Kararání, king of Bengal, 171, 318, 337, 366, 427, 502; his death, 427*n*., 618.
Sulaimán, Khwájah, 457.
Sulaimán Lohání, Khwájah, 520.
Sulaimán Manklí, 370.
Sulaimán, Mírzá, son of Khán Mírzá 311 (No. 5), 322.
Sulaimán Shírází, Khwájah, 356, 457, 512 (No. 327).
Sulaimán, Sulṭán, of Badakhshán, 440.
sulphur, 25, 39.
suls, a kind of writing, 99, 100.
Sulṭán, nom de plume of several poets, 320.

Sulṭán Shaikh, of Tháneswar, 104.
Sulṭán A'dam Gakk'har, vide A'dam.
Sulṭán 'Alí, of Qáyin, a kátib, 102.
Sulṭán 'Alí, Khwájah, vide Afzal Khán.
Sulṭán 'Alí, of Mashhad, a kátib, 101, 102.
Sulṭán Begum, 441.
Sulṭán Deorah, vide Saltán Deodah.
Sulṭán Háfiz Husain, a musician, 613.
Sulṭán Háshim, a musician, 613.
Sulṭán Husain, of Khujand, 102.
Sulṭán Husain Jaláir, 317, 384, 411.
Sulṭán Husain Mírzá, 299.
Sulṭán Ibráhím, of Aubah, 435, 533.
Sulṭán Khánum, Akbar's daughter, 464.
Sulṭán Khwájah, 'Abdul 'Azím, 204, 209, 210, 269, 272, 273, 423 (No. 108), 619.
Sulṭán Mahmúd Badakhshí, 528.
Sulṭán Mahmúd Mírzá, 311.
Sulṭán Muhammad Khandán, 102.
Sulṭán Muhammad Munsif Khán, 477.
Sulṭán Muhammad Núr, a kátib, 102.
Sulṭán Sárang Gakk'har; 456, 486.
Sulṭán Tatár Gakk'har, 456.
Sulṭánunnisá Begum, 310.
Sumanís, a sect in Sindh, 179*n*.
sumní, a coin, 30.
sun, worshipped by Akbar, 200, 202; honored by Jahangír, 212*n*.
Sundar, of Oṛísá, 526 (No. 414).
Súr Dás Kachhwáhah, 498.
Súr Dás, a singer, 612, 612*n*.
Súr Singh Ráṭhor, 359.
súrajkránt, a stone, 48.
Surjan Háḍá Rái, 409, 436.
surkh, a weight, 16*n*.
Surmah i Sulaimání, a Persian dictionary, 518.
surná, a trumpet, 51.
suttees, 341, 606*n*., 612*n*.
swelling, a disease peculiar to Bhakkar, 421.

TABANCHAH, a fighting elephant, 467.
Ṭabaqát i Akbarí, chronology of, 418*n*. tábínát, 242.
ṭabrí, a dirham, 36.
taçhíhah, 250.
Tafríhul 'Imárat, title of a work, 353.
Tafsír i Ma'ání, 523.
Ṭáhir Beg, son of Khán i Kalán, 506 (No. 312).
Ṭáhir Khán, Mír Farághat, 408 (No. 94), 534.
Ṭáhir Muhammad, Khwájah, 424, [621.
Ṭáhir Músawí, Mír, 482 (No. 236).
Ṭáhir, son of Saifulmulúk, 473 (No. 201), 525.
Ṭahmás Mírzá Çafawí, 314.
Ṭahmásp, Sháh, of Persia, 408, 409, 424, 456; dies 178.
Ṭahmúras, son of Prince Dányál, 310.
Tahwíldár, an officer, 45.
ta'íní, 242.
Táj Bíbí, vide Mumtáz Mahall.
Táj Khán, 457.
Táj Khán Ghorí, 326.
Táj Khán K'hatriah, 526 (No. 404).
Táj i Salmání, a kátib, 101.
Tájak, a work on Astronomy, 105.
Tájuddín, of Dihlí, 181.
Takaltú Khán, 464.
ṭakauchiah, a kind of coat, 88, 583*n*.
Takhtah Beg Kábulí, 469 (No. 195). taklíf, 196.
Taklú, a Qizilbásh tribe, 426.
takwín, 196.
takyahnamads, 55.
ta'líq, a kind of writing, 101.
ta'líqah, 249, 255, 259, 261.
tálíqún, a metallic composition, 41.
tamghá, 189.
Tamkín, an engraver, 52, 53; — a wrong reading for Namakín, vide Abul Qásim Namakín.

tangár, 26.
táng'han, a pony, 133.
ṭánk, a weight, 16*n*.
Tánsen, the singer, [Tansain, Tansín] 406, 475, 612, 613*n*.
Tántarang Khán, a singer, 612.
Taqí, or Taqiyá, Mullá, of Shustar, 208, 209, 518 (No. 352).
Taqí Muhammad, 518.
Taqí, Mír, son of Sháh Fathullah, 540.
Taqiyá, of Balbán, 518.
taqiyah, practised by Shí'ahs, 338.
ṭarafdár, 289.
Tarbiyat Khán, 371.
Tardí Beg Khán, 318 (No. 12), 371.
Tardí Khán, son of Qiyá Khán, 344, 416 (No. 101).
tárí, or toddy, 70.
Táríkh i Alfí, 106, 449.
Táríkh i Iláhí, or Akbar's Divine Era, 195.
Táríkh i Khán Jahán Lodí, 506.
Táríkh i Ma'çúmí, 421*n*., 490.
Táríkh i Rashídí, a historical work, 459, 460*n*., 461*n*.
Táríkh i Sindh (Máçúmí), 514.
Táríkís, a tribe, 469.
Ṭaríqí, a poet, 598*n*.
tarkhán, a title, 364; conferred by Akbar, 542.
Tarkhán Díwánah, 351.
tarkul tree, 70.
tarrí, a fruit, 71.
Tarson Khán, 342 (No. 32), 422.
Tarson, Mullá, of Badakhshán, 210.
Tásh Beg, of Qipchák, a musician, 613.
Tásh Beg Khán Mughul, 457 (No. 172).
Tashbíhí, of Káshán, a poet, 476, 596.
taslím, a kind of salutation, 158:
ṭassúj, a weight, 36.
Tátárs, worship the sun, 210.
Tatár Gakk'har, Sulṭán, 456.
Tátár Khán, 424 (No. 111).
Tátár Sulṭán, of Persia, 508.
Tauhíd i Iláhí, name of Akbar's religion, 201.
taujíh, army accounts, 260.
tauqí', a kind of writing, 99, 100.
taxes, 275, 430; on marriages, 278; on horses imported, 215.
tází, a kind of horse, 140, 233.
Tazkiratul Umará, a historical work, 448*n*.
ten ser tax, 275.
Terry's Voyage to East India, 621. t'hánah, meaning of, 345*n*.
thúlí, 59.
tiger hunting, 283.
Tihanpúrís, a clan, 391, 393.
Tiluksí Kachhwáhah, 398.
tilwah, 252.
timber, kinds of, 223, 227.
Timur, 361, 366, 460.
Timur and Napoleon I., 587*n*.
Timur Badakhshí, 476.
Timur Khán Yakkah, 476 (No. 215.)
Timurides, 461.
tin, 40.
titles, 240, 241, 252, 313, 330, 333, 337, 337*n*., 339, 364, 368, 369*n*., 388, 412*n*., 445*n*., 446*n*,. 503-542; of Afgháns, 502; vide Tarkhán, Sháh, Sulṭán, Farzand, Mír Sámán, Mír Shab, Mír Manzil, Mír Rubá'í.
Todar Mall K'hatrí, Rájah, 32, 333, 351, 341, 348, 375, 382, 382*n*., 432; his birth place, 620.
toddy, vide tárí.
Ṭolak Khán Qúchín, 441 (No. 158). toleration, 448*n*.
tolls, rivertolls, 281.
Toqbái, a Chaghtái clan, 434.
torah i Chingízí, 454.
translations from Sanskrit into Persian 104, 199.
transmigration of souls, 179.
Treasuries, 12, 14.

Tribes, vide Afrídí, Afshár, Arghún, Arlát, Awán, Bahárlü, Bakhtyár, Barlás, Bataní, Bhadauriahs, Bhúgiál Gakk'har, Chibh, Dhunds, Dilahzák, Duldai, Gakk'har, Gharbah Khail, Gharjah, Gurjí, Hazárah, Ighur (Uigur), Jaláir, Janjú'ah, Jhárish, Jodrah, Kájar, Kákar, Kât'hí, Khánzádah, K'hatars, K'hotars, Kohbar, Lohání, Mahmand, Májí, Maidání, Maín, Mangarál, Máwí, Miyánah, Nikallü, Niyází, Qaráqoinlü, Qarlygh, Sandaha, Sattí, Sháhú Khail, Shaibání, Shámlü, Shirwání, Sildoz, Taklú, Táríkí, Tátár, Toqbái, Turbatí, Turk, Ustajlü, Uzbak, Yúsufzaí, Zulqadr; vide Rájpúts.
Túi Muhammad Qáqshál, 621.
túibegí, an office, 278.
Tulsí Dás Jádon, 502 (No. 305).
tumantoq, a royal standard, 50.
tuquz, or nine, a favorite number of the Mughuls, 364*n*.
Turbatí, name of a tribe, 348.
turkí, a kind of horse, 233.
Turks, their character, 540.

UCHLA' Kachhwáhah, 398, 399.
'úd, vide Aloes.
U'dai Singh, son of Jaimall, 428.
U'dai Singh, Mot'h Rájah, of Jodhpúr, 310, 429 (No. 121), 619.
U'dai Singh, Ráná of Mewár, 330, 353, 368, 519.
Ugar Sen Kachhwáhah, 418.
Uigur, vide Ighur.
Ujjainiah Rájahs, of Bihár, 513*n*.
Ulfatí, a poet, 34*n*., 355*n*.
Ulugh Beg, son of Mírzá Sultán, 319.
Ulugh Khán Habshí, 437 (No. 135).
Ulugh Mírzá, 461, 462.
Umaná, a sect, 452, 452*n*.
'Umar, the Khalífah, 36.
'Umar ibn Hubairah, 36.
'Umar Shaikh Mírzá, son of Timur, 299, 461, 546.
umará i kibár, 239, 240.
Umm Kulsúm Begum, 441.
uplah, or cowdung, 21.
Urdú language, 352.
Urdúbegís, armed women, 46.
'Urfí of Shíráz, the poet, 425, 569; 580*n*.
'Usmán, son of Bahádur Khán Qurbegí, 495.
'Usmán Lohání, Khwájah, 340, 341, 477, 520, 521.
Ustá Dost, a singer, 612.
Ustá Muhammad Amín, 613.
Ustá Muhammad Husain, 613.
Ustá Sháh Muhammad, 613.
Ustá Yúsuf, 613.
Ustád Jalabí, vide Rúmí Khán.
Ustád Mírzá 'Alí Fathagí, a singer, 613*n*.
Ustajlü, a tribe, 619.
Uwais Sultán, 311.
Uymáq (aimáq), 371*n*, 381*n*.
Uzbaks, 313.
uzuk, an imperial seal, 52.

VAQARI, a poet, 364.
Vakíls, of Akbar's reign, 527.
Vazírs, of Akbar's reign, 527; vide Wazír.
Vazír Khán Harawí, 353 (No. 41), 366. vegetables, 63, 71.
voracity, 471.
vowel-signs of the Arabic language, 99.

WAÇLI, a poet, 622, 508, 512.
Wafáí of Içfahán, a poet, 592.
wages of laborers, 225; of sailors, 281.
Wahdat 'Alí Raushání, 411.
Wáhidís, a sect, 452.
Waisí Khwájah Díwán, 433, 464.

Wajíhuddín, Shaikh, of Gujrát, 415, 449, 457, 538.
Wakíl, vide Vakíl.
Wálá Jáh, Prince, 472*n*.
Walí Beg, 518 (No. 359).
Walí Beg Zulqadr, 329.
Walí Dasht Bayází, a poet, 576*n*.
Walí Khán Lohání, 520, 521.
Walí Mírzá, 310.
Wálihí, a poet, 595*n*.
Waqárí, vide Vaqárí.
wáqi'ahnawís, or news writer, 258.
Wáqi'át i Bábarí, History of Babar's reign, 335.
wardrobe, the imperial, 87, 91.
water, drunk at Court, 55; — of life, 556*n*.
waterfowl, 295, 296.
wax representations of the birth of Christ, 193, 618.
wazífah, or allowances, 268.
Wazír Beg Jamíl, 473 (No. 200); vide Vazír. weapons, list of, 110.
weavers, 55, 88.
weighing of the king, &c., 266; — of distinguished men, 613*n*.
weights, 16*n*., 36; vide bábághúrí; 87; — of Kashmír, 84, 346.
wine, drunk at court, 197; vide drinking.
wood, price of, 223.
wrestlers, 253.
writing, art of, 96.
women, how many a Muhammadan may marry, 173; 44; armed, 46 (vide Urdúbegís); perfect, 48; of Persia India and Transoxania, compared, 327; how treated in the harem, 361; — literary, vide Makhfí.
Wuqú'í, of Nishápúr, a poet, 591.

YA'BU, a horse, 233.
yáddásht, 249, 259.
Yádgár, Khwájah, 492.
Yádgár 'Alí Sultán Ṭálish, 513.
Yádgár Hálátí, a poet, 595.
Yádgár Husain, 437, 516 (No. 338).
Yádgár Razawí, 346.
Yahyá, of Káshán, a poet, 561*n*.
Yahyá, Khwájah, of Sabzwár, 601*n*.
Yahyá, Mír, a kátib, 100.
Yahyá Qazwíní, Mír, 447.
yak-hát'h, 252.
yakhní, a dish, 60.
yamaní, a dirham, 36.
Yamínuddaulah Açaf Jáh, 511; vide Açaf Khán (IV).
Ya'qúb Beg Chaghtái, 331.
Ya'qúb Beg, son of Sháh Beg Khán-Daurán, 378.
Ya'qúb Bukhárí, Sayyid, 398.
Ya'qúb Chak, 479.
Ya'qúb Çarfí, Shaikh, of Kashmír, 182, 479, 546, 581.
Ya'qúb, Qází, 174.
Yáqút, invents the naskh-writing, 99.
yáqút, a stone, 510*n*.
Yár Beg, 502.
Yaráq Khán [Boráq Khán?], 460, 621.
Yár Muhammad, son of Çádiq Khán, 499 (No. 288).
Yár Muhammad, Mír, of Ghazní, 321.
yasal, 160.
Yatím Bahádur, 470.
Yazíd, 36.
Yol Qulí Anísí, a poet, 478.
yulmah, a dish, 60.
Yúnán Beg, 519 (No. 369).
Yúsuf (Joseph), 558*n*., 574*n*.
Yúsuf, son of 'Umar, 36.
Yúsuf Beg Chaghtái, 331.
Yúsuf Harkun, Shaikh, 539.
Yúsuf Kashmírí, 523 (No. 388).
Yúsuf Khán, son of Husain Khán Tukriyah, 373, 620.
Yúsuf Khán Razawí, Mírzá, of Mashhad, 346 (No. 35), 449, 606*n*.

Yúsuf Khán Chak, of Kashmír, 478 (No. 228).
Yúsuf Mittí, 422.
Yúsuf Muhammad Khán, son of Atgah Khán, 323 (No. 18).
Yúsuf Sháh, of Mashhad, a kátib, 100.
Yúzufzaís, 204, 333, 344.

ZABA'D (civet), 79.
Zafar Khán, Shukrullah, 522.
Záhid, son of Çádiq Khán, 499 (No. 286), 500.
Záhid Khán Kokah, 412.
Zahíruddín 'Abdullah Imámí, 576*n*.
Zahíruddín, Khwájah, 525 (No. 397).
Zahíruddín Yazdí, Mír, 325.
Záidullah, Mír, 472, 473.
Zain Khán Kokah, 205, 328, 344 (No. 34), 410, 477*n*., 592*n*.
Zain Sháh Gakk'har, 456*n*.
Zainuddín, a kátib, 102.
Zainuddín Abú Bakr, of Táíbád, a saint, 366.
Zainuddín 'Alí, 526 (No. 405).
Zainuddín Kháfí, 592, 592*n*.
Zainuddín Mahmúd Kamángar, 539*n*.
Zainul 'Ábidín, Mírzá, son of A'çaf Khán (III.), 412, 573.
Zainul 'Ábidín, Sulṭán of Kashmír, 456, 611*n*.
Zakariyá, Shaikh, of Ajodhan, 181.
Zakí, Mír, 482.
Zalíkhá, wife of Potiphar, 558*n*.
Zamán, Shaikh, of Pánípat, 181.
zamíndoz, a tent, 54.
zarah [zarrah], a coin, 30; a weight, 36.
zard birinj, a dish, 59.
Zarráb, 21.
Zarrah o Khurshed, a Masnawí, 597.
Zarrín-qalam, title of kátibs, 100, 102, 103.
zát, 'brevet,' 241.
Zebunnisá Begum, daughter of Aurangzeb, 309.
Ziáuddín, Shaikh, 546.
Ziáuddín Yúsuf Khán, 472.
Ziáullah, son of Muhammad Ghaus, 457.
Ziául Mulk, of Káshán, 497 (No. 296).
Zoroastrians, 184, 210.
Zubair, 36.
Zuhal, or Saturn, 201*n*.
Zulf 'Alí Yazdí, 439.
Zulfaqár Khán Nuçratjang, 511.
Zul-nún Beg Arghún, 361, 362.
Zulqadr, a Turkish tribe, 619.

INDEX

OF

GEOGRAPHICAL NAMES

IN THE FIRST VOLUME

OF THE

ÁÍN I AKBARÍ.

AB i Ghorband, 445.
Abúgarh, 358.
Abú, Mount, vide Abúgarh.
Achín, 79, 81, 281.
Ágrah, 31, 34*n*., 55, 88, 289*n*., 297*n*., 298, 314, 318, 341, 343, 350, 360, 365, 403, 413, 414, 434, 447, 451, 458, 474, 481, 483, 490, 499, 500, 504, 505, 510, 511, 513, 514, 523, 540, 541, 567*n*., 576*n*., 582*n*., 598*n*., 612 (Fort of), 380, 514.
Ág Mahall, 330, 410, 465.
Ahmadábád, 31, 88, 322, 325, 327, 332, 334, 348, 351, 354, 385, 386, 415, 415*n*., 463, 506, 507, 507*n*., 538, 547, 568*n*., 579*n*., 580, 586*n*., 590*n*., 609*n*., 616.
Ahmadnagar, 335, 336, 337, 401, 449, 491, 504.
Ahroí, 522.
Ajmír, 31, 143, 187, 289*n*., 309, 322, 327, 329, 330, 340, 353, 357, 396, 398, 400, 401, 419, 448, 449, 452, 455, 464, 482, 540, 609*n*.
Ajodhan, vide Pák Paṭan.
Akbarnagar (Rájmahall), 340, 511.
'Alápúr, 286.
'Alí Masjid, 418, 455*n*.
Alláhábád, or Iláhbás, or Iláhábád, 31, 280, 310, 314, 368, 407, 412, 413, 514, 517 ; vide Piyág, 617.
Alwar, 31, 359*n*., 371, 537, 546.
Amarkoṭ, 318, 321, 339.
Amber, 328, 329*n*., 339.
Amet'hí, 511, 538, 546.
Amner, 484*n*.
Amrohah, 202, 438.
Amrsarnáyin, 286.
Ámul, 176, 452.
Andaján (Farghánah), 354, 380.
Aṇwlah, 395.
'Aqábín Mount, 380.
Árah (Bihár), 382, 400, 441, 442.
Arail, 425.
Arakan, 395*n*.
Arbadá Achal, 358*n*.
Ardistán, 516.
Arhang, in Badakhshán, 65.
Arwí, 484*n*.
Asadábád (Hamadán), 585*n*.
Áshtí, 335, 484.
Astrábád, 599*n*.
Aṭak, or Áṭak Banáras, 31, 374*n*. 446, 446*n*., 522.
At'hgarh, 324*n*.
Aubah (near Harát), 101, 435.
Audh, (province) 341, 354, 366, 389, 465 ;—(town), 31, 366, 400, 440, 444, 547.
Aurangábád (or K'harkí), 491*n*.
Awánkárí, 546*n*.
A'zampúr, 462, 538.
Ázarbáiján, 315.

BA'BÁ Khátún, 444.
Baçrah, 82, 99*n*.

Badakhshán, 132, 311, 312, 313, 315, 330, 380, 380*n.*, 381*n.*, 383, 438, 440, 512.
Badalgarh, 380*n.*
Badáon, 31, 409, 496, 497, 547.
Bágh i Çafá, 461*n.*
Bágh i Dahrah, 499.
Bágh i Mírzá Kámrán (Láhor), 348, 414*n.*, 454, 455.
Bágh i Núr-Manzil, 499.
Bágh i Sardár Khán, 469.
Baghdád, 100.
Baglánah, 323, 402, 500.
Bahat Duáb, 526.
Bahat River, 346.
Bahírah, 31, 223, 356, 470.
Bahráich, 57, 410, 444, 451.
Bahrain, 82.
Bahrámpúrah, 450.
Bahroṇch, 333, 334, 335, 383, 386, 462, 545.
Baihaq, 498.
Bajor, 344 (where wrong Waijúr), 356, 361, 404, 425, 471.
Bajwárah, 133.
Baksar, 476.
Baktarápúr, 343, 400.
Bálág'hát, 336, 337, 412, 503, 504.
Balandrí, or Girewah Balandrí, 344.
Balandshahr, 393.
Bálápúr, 339, 357, 506.
Baláwal, 326, 327.
Balbán, 518.
Bálín, 592*n.*
Balkh, 176, 311, 315, 384.
Balochistán, 360.
Bámiyán, 444.
Banáras, 31, 72, 500, 567*n.*
Banás River, 398*n.*
Bandel, 499*n.*
Bándhú, 358, 367, 407, 469.
Bangash, 313, 402, 466, 483, 522.
Banpúr (Pampúr), 483.
Bárahmúlah, 335, 479.
Barár, 337, 357, 442, 449, 484*n.*, 491.
Bardwán, 356, 496, 497, 525, 581*n.*
Barelí, 395, 481.
Bárha, 390.
Bárí, 283, 286, 519.
Barodah (Gujrát), 334, 386.
Basakhwán, 177, 452, 452*n.*
Basantpúr, Kamáon, 373.
Basáwar, 261.
Bastar, 122.
Baunlí, 398*n.*, 483.
Bayáṇwán, 122.
Bazúhá, 520*n.*
Bengal, 31, 68, 122, 149, 190, 254, 271, 279, 326, 330, 331, 332, 332*n.*, 339, 340, 341, 349, 350, 351, 354, 366, 356, 417, 424, 427, 430, 436, 439, 469, 481, 493, 493*n.*, 496, 498, 499, 504, 512, 520.
Bhadáwar, 488, 489.
Bhadrak, 341, 374, 375, 447.
Bhágalpúr, 330.
Bhainsí (Bhasi), 395.
Bhairoṇwál, on the Biáh, 394*n.*; 398, 413, 414, 414*n.*, 454; near the Chanáb, 454*n.*
Bhakkar, 31, 190, 191, 271, 332, 342, 362, 363, 363*n.*, 420, 421, 422, 428, 438, 471, 481, 490, 514, 515, 546.
Bhakrálah, 486.
Bhander, 505.
Bhasí, vide Bhainsí.
Bhat'h G'horá, 122, 355, 367, 406, 618.
Bháṭí, 331, 340, 342, 342*n.*, 356, 400, 401, 431*n.*, 436.
Bhaṭindah, 143, 286.
Bhaṭner, 143, 286.
Bhílsá, 335.
Bhimbar, 437, 591*n.*
Bhojpúr (Bihár), 513*n.*
Bhowál, 343.
Biánah, 325, 384, 462, 545.
Biáh River, 317.

Bidaulí, 391, 393, 395.
Bigrám, 397, 441*n.*
Bihár, 83, 314, 326, 327, 332, 333, 340, 349, 350, 351, 354, 356, 366*n.*, 400, 412, 422, 423, 443, 446, 446*n.*, 450, 451, 452, 466, 469, 496, 498, 511, 513, 513*n.*, 522, 543, 616, 620.
Bihárí (Muzaffarnagar), 394.
Bihishtábád, vide Sikandrah.
Bíjágarh, 112, 325, 429.
Bíjápúr, 306, 309, 466, 595*n.*
Bijnor, 395.
Bíkánír, 143, 310, 316, 357, 358, 408.
Biláspúr (Muzaffarnagar), 394.
Bilgrám, 316*n.*, 390, 547.
Bír, 347, 459, 472.
Bírbhúm, 395, 494*n.*
Broach, vide Bahronch.
Bukhárá, 361, 423*n.*, 583, 583*n.*, 604.
Búndí, 410, 427, 458.
Burhánábád, 401.
Burhánpúr, 315 (where wrong Barhámpúr), 325, 336, 337, 347, 363, 412, 429, 491, 492, 503, 504, 506, 513, 518, 574*n.*, 578*n.*, 606*n.*
Búshanj, 445.
Bust, 481.

CAMBAY, vide Kambháyat.
Chamárí, 423, 539.
Chámpánír (Gujrát), 80, 318, 386, 462, [506, 506*n.*
Chamyárí (Panjáb), 366*n.*
Chanár, Fort, 367, 396, 409, 435.
Chanáb River, 55, 414*n.*, 454.
Chandaurí Chandaurah, 395.
Chanderí, 112, 484.
Chándor Fort, 335.
Chándpúr, 395.
Cháríkán, 388.
Chatbanúrá, 393.
Chatorah, 394.
Chatmohor, 621.
Chaurágarh, 367, 407.
Chausá, 349, 355, 410, 427, 455.
Chhach Valley, 487*n.*
China, 81.
Chinese Tartary, 93.
Chios Island, 79.
Chítor, 330, 368, 408, 409, 435, 489, 519, 617.
Chittuá, 375.
Chotánah, 518.
Çibhatpúr, 331.
Çiffín, 197.
Cyprus, 78.

DAHNA'SARÍ (Tennasserim), 81, 281.
Daigúr Fort, 399.
Dainúr, 315.
Dak'hin, 82, 95, 149, 254, 336.
Dalamau, 469.
Dáman i Koh, 436.
Damáwand, 543.
Dándes, vide Khándesh.
Dandoqah, 397.
Dángalí, 456*n.*, 457*n.*, 621.
Dantúr, vide Dhantúr.
Darwíshábád, 592*n.*
Dasthárá, 356.
Daulatábád, or Dhárágarh, or Deogír, 482, 489, 491*n.*, 503, 506.
Dáwar, (Zamín Dáwar) 313, 314, 319, 328, 388, 408, 409.
Deogarh, vide Untgir.
Deogír, vide Daulatábád.
Deolí Sájárí, 359*n.*
Deosah, 329.
Dháká, 511, 520, 521.
Dhamerí, 487.
Dhamúní, 413.
Dhantúr (Dhantáwar), 501, 524.
Dhanúrí, 524.
Dharangáon, 617.
Dhárágarh, vide Daulatábád.
Dhárúr, 348.
Dhásrí, 393.

Dholpúr, 357, 472*n*.
Dholqah, 351, 397.
Díg'hapatí, 621.
Dih Qáziyán, 494.
Dihlí, 31, 149, 181, 306, 319, 324, 330, 332, 338, 339, 365, 367, 397, 404, 413, 415, 415*n*., 422, 424, 465, 493, 538, 540, 541, 544, 576*n*., 599*n*.
Dik'hdár, 317*n*.
Dípálpúr (Málwah), 176, 453; (Panjáb), 325.
Dísah, 622.
Díú, 326, 348.
Dongarpúr, 386, 404, 428, 494, 494*n*.
Dor River, 524*n*.
Dúnárah, 399, 399*n*.
Dwárká, 326.

EDAR, vide Idar.
Europe, 89, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 279, 290*n*.

FADAK, 197.
Faiz Nahr Canal, 333.
Fançúr (in Sumátra), 78, 616.
Faráh, in Sijistán, 41*n*., 314.
Farankad, near Samarqand, 434.
Farídábád, near Dihlí, 415, 620.
Fathábád Sirkár (Bengal), 374.
Fathábád (Panjáb), 414; (K'harkí), 491*n*.
Fathpúr, a village near Karah, 320.
Fathpúr Hanswah, 354, 390*n*., 456.
Fathpúr Jhinjhon, 286.
Fathpúr Síkrí, 55, 88, 223, 309, 373, 402, 403, 423, 448, 492, 493, 495, 496, 497, 514, 515, 600*n*.
Fírúzábád, 319.

GAKK'HAR District, 487, 621.
Ganges, 37, 55.
Gango, 538, 546.
Ganjábah Fort (Ganjáwah), 421.
Garha, (Gadha) or Garha-Katangah (Jabalpúr), 122, 326, 348, 356, 367, 368, 372, 381, 408, 409, 410, 428, 450, 480, 497, 533*n*.
Garhí (Bengal), 326, 330, 335, 339, 349, 370*n*.
Garmsír, 313, 384.
Gaur, 175, 318, 375, 376, 410.
Gáwíl Fort, 449.
Gayá, 448*n*.
Ghandak River, 379.
G'haríwalí, 297*n*.
Gharjistán, 342, 381*n*., 473.
Ghatrághal, 497.
Gházípúr, 208, 313, 410, 443, 465, 526.
Ghaznín (Ghazní), 321, 333, 377, 383, 384, 431*n*., 456.
G'horág'hát, 340, 342, 370, 370*n*., 387, 400, 436, 473, 525, 617.
Ghujduwán, 500.
Gidhor, 480*n*.
Gílán, 175, 177, 424, 542, 574.
Goás, 331.
Gogandah, 339, 400; battle of, when fought, 418, 418*n*.
Golah, vide Kánt o Golah.
Gondwánah, 367, 506.
Gorák'hpúr, 32, 366, 369, 370.
Goshkán, or Joshaqán, 55, 287*n*.
Gújan, 498.
Gújar Khán, 456*n*.
Gujrát, town in the Panjáb, 88, 414*n*., 471.
Gujrát (province), 34*n*., 68, 75, 82, 92, 93, 143, 253, 285*n*., 315, 325, 326, 327, 332, 333, 334, 347, 351, 353, 354, 361, 383, 385, 386, 387, 412, 414, 415, 416*n*., 419, 433, 434*n*., 450, 463, 470, 478, 504, 506, 507, 514, 543, 607*n*., 611*n*.
Gulpáigán, 588*n*.
Gúnáchúr, near Jálindhar, 317*n*., 619.
Gúnábád (Junábid), 591.
Gúrá, or Kurar, 487*n*.

Gwáliár, 32, 57, 224, 315, 327, 340, 343, 380*n.*, 390, 437, 456, 457, 458, 537, 539, 547, 588*n.*, 611*n.*, 612.

HAḌAUTÍ, 409.
Haibatpúr, vide Patí Haibatpúr.
Hájípúr, 208, 318, 326, 332, 349, 356, 410, 424, 460.
Hailán (Panjáb), 360, 457*n.*; vide Hílán.
Haldípúr, 499*n.*
Hamadán, 315, 585, 585*n.*
Hamídpúr, 544.
Handiah, 122, 481, 519.
Harát, 92, 94, 101, 102, 355, 363, 366, 426, 571, 592*n.*, 602, 613.
Hardwár, or Haridwár, 31, 55, 352.
Hariágarh, 122.
Haripúr, 375.
Hasan Abdál, 425, 515.
Háshimpúr, 395.
Hatiá, 486.
Hatiápul, 505, 505*n.*
Hatkánt'h, 323, 389, 488.
Hazárah, 290.
Hiçár (Kábul), 359, 435, 609.
Hiçár Fírúzah, 31, 57, 321.
Hilálábád, 332.
Hílán, or Hil, (vide Hailán) on the Jhelam, 457, 457*n.*
Hindúkush, 312.
Hírápúr, 346.
Hírmand River, 313.
Hoshangábád, 112.
Húglí, 375*n.*, 440, 449*n.*, 499.
Hurmuz (Ormuz), 599*n.*

IDAR (Edar), 325, 333, 407, 433, 480.
Içfahán, 102, 543, 565, 569, 576, 592, 592*n.*, 607, 608.
Iláhbás, or Iláhábád, vide Alláhábád.
Ilichpúr, 326, 449, 503.
Inch (Kashmír), 483.
Indaráb, 432.
Indus, 37.
Irán, 64, 132, 456*n.*
'Iráq, 23, 36, 132, 152, 315.
Irich, 469.
Ishtaghar, 344.
Islámpúr (Rámpúr), 417, 418.
Istálif, 388*n.*
Itáwah, 328, 382, 459.
I'timádpúr, near Ágrah, 428, 428*n.*

JAGDESPUR, 400, 498.
Jahánábád, 375*n.*
Jaipúr, 329*n.*, 419, 419*n.*
Jáis, 511.
Jaisalmír, 143, 286, 477.
Jaitáran, 389, 389*n.*
Jakdarah, 344.
Jalálábád, 318.
Jalálábás, 425.
Jalálpúr, vide K'harwah.
Jaldpúr, 410.
Jalesar (Oṛisá) 374, 376; near Dihlí, 425.
Jálindhar, 31, 317, 317*n.*, 545.
Jalnápúr, in Barár, 309, 347.
Jálor, 40, 357, 493, 494, 622.
Jám, 319, 366*n.*, 523, 541.
Jamnah River (Jamuná), 55.
Jammú, 345, 456., 466.
Jánsath, 391, 394.
Jarún Bandar, 585*n.*,
Jasar (Jessore), 315, 341.
Jaunpúr, 31, 189, 318, 319, 320, 321, 335, 342, 347, 355, 368, 383, 400, 410, 411, 424, 438, 444, 450, 500, 501, 538, 546, 568*n.*, 602*n.*
Jazáir, 593, 593*n.*
Jhanní, 539.
Jhárkand, 122, 340, 366.
Jhinjhon, vide Fathpúr.

Jhosí, 314, 425.
Jhujhar, 316, 393.
Jodhpúr, 143, 286, 330, 357, 399, 429.
Jolí Jánsaṭh, 394, 395.
Joṇ (Sindh), 315.
Joshagán, vide Goshkán.
Junábid, 565*n*, 591; vide Gúnábád.
Júnágaṛh, 326, 328, 334, 351, 397, 450, 463, 506*n*.
Juner, 504.
Jurbáqán, 588*n*.
Juwain, 498.

KABUL, 31, 34*n*., 65, 93, 312, 317, 318, 333, 340, 376, 377, 378, 380, 432, 440, 444, 446, 452, 457, 469, 477, 481, 522.
Kachh, 133, 143, 326, 419, 431, 431*n*.
Káhan River, 486.
Kahármátrí River, 471.
Kailáodah, 395.
Kairánah, 543, 544.
Kákápúr, 483.
Kákor, 546.
Kakraulí, 394.
Kalálí, 329.
Kalánúr, 32, 315, 416, 513.
Kálápání, 487.
Kálinjar, 369, 405, 406, 505, 611*n*.
Kálpí, 32, 321, 336, 361, 403, 404, 465, 487, 539.
Kalyánpúr, 410.
Kamáon, 373, 436, 533*n*.
Kambbáyat (Cambay), 281, 323, 325, 445, 463.
Kamráj, in Kashmír, 85, 346.
Kángrah, 339, 414, 416, 509.
Kantit, 425.
Kánt o Golah, 373.
Kaṛah (Kaṛah-Mánikpúr), 193, 320, 367, 367*n*., 456.
Karanja, 484*n*.
Karbalá, 602, 602*n*.
Karharé Fort, 356.
Karí, in Gujrát, 386.
Káshán, 92*n*., 93, 102, 187, 593*n*., 594*n*., 595, 596.
Káshghar, 322, 365*n*., 459, 460.
Kashmír, 31, 58, 65, 74, 75, 84, 93, 102, 106, 132, 279, 280, 294, 295, 297*n*., 309, 346, 347, 352; conquest of, 380; 437, 443, 454, 456, 461, 465, 466, 474, 478, 479, 482, 483, 485, 581, 607*n*., 611*n*.
Kaṭak, 374*n*., 375, 376.
Katangí, 367*n*.; vide Gaṛha.
Kát'híwár, 386.
Kázarún, 490.
Khabúshán, 606*n*.
K'bachrod, 478.
Kháf, or Khawáf, 445, 445*n*., 592.
Khaibar Pass, 204, 404*n*., 609*n*., 610*n*.
Khairábád (Panjáb) 333 (Audh), 366, 381, 382, 390*n*., 465, 469, 538.
K'halgáon, 331*n*., 370*n*.
Khallukh, 92*n*.
K'handár (?), 419*n*.
Khándesh (Dándesh), 68, 325, 327, 335, 336, 336*n*., 337, 463.
Khánpúr, 440; (Panjáb) 456*n*.
K'harakpúr (Bihár), 446, 480*n*.
Kharbuzah, 487.
K'harí, 395.
Kharjard, 445.
K'harkí, vide Aurangábád.
K'harwah Jalálpúr, 394.
K'hataulí, 394, 395.
K'hatorah, 394.
K'haṭṭú, 507*n*.
Khawáf, vide Kháf.
Khizrábád, 333.
Khizrpúr, 343.
Khurásán, 23, 313, 314, 327, 355, 361, 362.
Khurdah (Oṛisá), 489, 493, 607*n*.
Khusháb, 321, 377, 378, 470.
Khúzistán, 55.
Khwájah Awásh, 444.
Khwájah Sayyárán, 444.

Khwárazm, its music, 51; 102, 581.
Kingrí, 514 (where wrong Kingú).
Kirmán, 55, 583*n*.
Koch, vide Kúch.
Koh i Sulaimán, 423.
Kokrah, 401, 479, 479*n*., 480*n*.
Koláb, 438.
Kol Jalálí, 343, 512.
Komalnair, or Koṇbhalmír, 400, 533*n*.
Korrah, 441.
Kot'ha, 409.
Koṭ K'hachwah, 431, 431*n*.
Kúch Bihár, 133, 315, 331, 340, 343, 370, 436, 493*n*.
Kúch Hájo, 493, 493*n*., 621.
Kuhpáyah, 608*n*.
Kuhúta, 456*n*.
Kundlí, 393.
Kuraṛ, 487.
Kurdistán, 315.

LADLAI, 403.
Láharí Bandar, 281, 363; vide Loharí.
Láharpúr (Audh), 620.
Láhor, 31, 55, 88, 92, 93, 95, 280, 311, 312, 316, 333, 334, 347, 348, 352, 365, 366*n*., 372, 414, 414*n*., 415, 441, 441*n*., 446, 454, 462, 490, 498, 501, 510, 511, 522, 533*n*., 538, 539, 541, 544, 545, 546, 547, 569*n*., 609*n*., 613*n*., 620.
Lak'hí Fort, 335, 484.
Lak'hinpúr, 345.
Lak'hnau, 32, 348, 366, 373, 395, 424, 469, 470, 518, 612*n*.
Lak'hnor (Sambhal), 315.
Lalang Fort, 464.
Lamghánát, 344.
Láristán, 490, 540, 599*n*., 601*n*.
Loharí, 421, 422, 471; vide Láharí.
Lohgaṛh, 482.
Lúdhiánah, 318, 426.
Luháwar, 323*n*.
Lúní (Bauṇlí?), 398, 483.

MA'CHIWA'RAH, 315.
Madáran, 375.
Mahindra River, 325, 462.
Mahkar, 449.
Mahmúdábád (Chámpánír), 507, 508.
Maiman, 395.
Mairt'ha (Mírt'ha), 286, 322, 368, 427, 436, 476, 493*n*.
Maisánah, 486.
Maiwár (Mewár), 353, 387, 417.
Majhaṛah (Majherah), 391, 395, 477.
Makkah (Mecca), 93, 172, 273, 586*n*., 608*n*.
Malacca, 281.
Máler, 524.
Malíbár (Malabar), 280.
Málígaṛh, 498.
Málín, 592*n*.
Málwah, 68, 83, 312, 321, 324, 325, 332, 333, 334, 341, 361, 371, 372, 373, 383, 402*n*., 428, 461, 462, 478, 505.
Mançúrah, 422.
Mançúrpúr, 394.
Mandalgaṛh, 452.
Mandlá, 367*n*.
Mandláír, 380*n*.
Mandú, or Mándú, 32, 337, 371, 372, 373, 375, 494, 504, 515.
Mangalkoṭ, 440.
Mánikpúr, 320, 369, 382.
Manípúr (Asám), 297.
Mánkoṭ, 316, 319, 323, 345, 366*n*., 390.
Manoharpúr, 494*n*.
Mararáj, 84, 346.
Márgalah, 486, 487, 487*n*.
Marw, 574.
Máṛwáṛ, 476.
Mashhad, 100, 101, 102, 317, 346, 347, 381, 382*n*., 540, 563, 568, 593*n*., 606, 609, 611*n*., 612, 613.
Mát'hílah Fort, 421.
Mat'hurá, 254, 284, 478, 488.
Mau (Núrpúr State), 345, 519.

Máwaralnahr, 187, 327.
Mázandarán, 590, 610.
Medinípúr, 342, 375, 375*n.*, 376.
Mewár, vide Maiwár.
Mewát, 133, 252, 319, 334, 334*n.*, 391, 493.
Mihsí (Champáran), 444.
Míránpúr, 394, 395.
Miyánkál (Samarqand), 372*n.*, 545, 545*n.*, 566, 567*n.*
Mohán (Audh), 452.
Mohaní, 372, 383.
Mol Manoharnagar, 494.
Mornah, 395.
Mughulmárí, 376, 376*n.*
Muhammadábád, 410, 444.
Muhibb 'Alípúr, 423.
Mulher, 500.
Mulkápúr, 503.
Multán, 31, 185, 314, 327, 331, 332, 335, 341, 353, 356, 362, 363, 399, 422, 472, 495, 503, 511, 515, 544.
Munair, in Bihár, 48.
Mungarwál (?), 320.
Munger, 351.
Murádábád, 478.
Muzaffarnagar, 390, 391; built, 394.

NADINAH (Sambhal), 382*n.*; vide Nadínah.
Nádot, 335, 357.
Nagarchín, 298*n.*
Nagarkoṭ, 330, 345, 404, 463.
Nagínah, 395; vide Nadínah.
Nágor, 32, 95, 143, 286, 322, 330, 341, 353, 357, 359, 375, 387, 463, 490, 493*n.*
Nahr i Shiháb Canal, 333.
Nahrwálah, vide Paṭan (Gujrát).
Najaf, 569.
Namaksár, 470.
Nandanpúr, 122.
Narbadah River, 325.
Narhan, 410.
Nárnaul, 319, 329, 360, 369, 538.
Narwar, 122, 484.
Násik, 358.
Nausárí, in Gujrát, 184.
Naushád, in Turkistán, 92*n.*
Naushahrah (Kashmír), 437.
Nawábganj (Singror), 320.
Nazar, 603*n.*
Nazrbár, 334, 463.
Neḳ Ujyál (?), 520.
Níshápúr, 102, 332, 353, 591, 611.
Nímlah, 57.
Nizámábád, 267*n.*

ODGIR, in the Dak'hin, 346, 496.
Oorcha, vide U'ndchah.
Orísá, 122, 306, 326, 340, 342, 343, 351, 354, 356, 366, 366*n.*, 370*n.*, 374, 374*n.*, 375, 451, 478, 489, 493, 508, 520, 526.
Ormuz, vide Hurmuz.

PAJKORAH River, 345.
Pahlunpúr, 622.
Pak'hlí, 152, 454, 479, 501, 502.
Pakkah, 487.
Pák Paṭan (or Paṭan i Panjáb, or Ajodhan), 31, 181, 286, 325, 583*n.*
Pampúr (Kashmír), 483; vide Bampúr, and Panpúr.
Panhán (?) 56, 616.
Pánípat, 181, 319, 543.
Panjáb, 34*n.*, 55, 68, 133, 150, 321, 322, 330, 331, 333, 358, 360, 365, 372, 410, 414, 446, 456*n.*, 457, 466.
Pannah, 122, 425, 618.
Panpúr (Pampúr), in Kashmír, 84; vide Pampúr.
Paraspúr, in Kashmír, 85.
Parendah, 413.
Parsaror, 348.
Pasháwar, 345, 354, 377, 397, 466, 469.
Paṭan or Paṭau i Panjáb, vide Pák Paṭan.

Paṭan (Gujrát), 313, 317, 322, 325, 329, 334, 342, 372, 386, 387; battle of, 397; 406, 407, 416, 416*n.*, 419, 442, 450, 463.
Paṭan (on the Godáwárí), 459, 482.
Pat'hán (Pait'hán), 314, 414, 457, 616.
Pát'hrí, 335, 496.
Patiálá (Panjáb), 393.
Patiálí, 372.
Patí Haibatpúr, 133.
Paṭnah, 31, 318, 351, 356, 379, 408, 427, 465.
Paunár, 484*n.*
Páwangaṛh, 318.
Pegú, 281.
Persia, 178.
Pharwálah, 456*n.*, 621.
Phillaur, 317*n.*, 619.
Pihání, 468, 469.
Pind Dádan Khán, 456*n.*
Pindí Gheb, 456*n.*
Pinjar, 479.
Piyág (vide Alláhábád), 368.
Portugal, 95, 281.
Pot'hwár, 486, 487*n.*
Púr Mandal, 400.
Púrí, 340, 366*n.*, 370*n.*
Púrniah, or Púranniah, 395, 436.

QAIN (Persia), 591.
Qalát, 314, 408, 455.
Qandahár, 65, 313, 314, 315, 337, 344, 362, 365*n.*, 377, 378, 408, 409, 461, 503, 509, 514; 515, 545.
Qannauj, 32, 321, 336, 464, 468, 477.
Qarábágh, 344.
Qazwín, 101, 102, 447, 572.
Qibrus, vide Cyprus.
Qipchák, 613.
Qirghiz, 132.
Qiryát Khudáwand Khán, 442*n.*
Qísús, or Qistús, vide Chios.
Qum, 598.
Qunduz, 315.

RAHUTARAH, 482.
Rai (Khurásán), 599.
Rái Barelí, 320.
Ráísín, 112, 314, 326, 450.
Rájáwat, 328.
Rájmahall, vide Akbarnagar.
Rájor, in Kashmír, 309, 461.
Rájorí, 57.
Rájpíplá, 335.
Rájsháhí, 621.
Rámpúr (Islámpúr), 417, 418.
Rámsír, 510.
Rankaṭṭah, 332.
Rantanbhúr, 32, 189, 330, 348, 387, 398, 398*n.*, 399, 409; 417, 436, 466, 483.
Rasht, 574*n.*
Rasúlpúr, on the Jhelam, 360.
Ratanpúr, 122, 407.
Ráwal Pindí, 456*n.*, 487.
Red Sea, 82.
Rewá, 407.
Rohank'herah, 442.
Rohṭás (in Bihár), 122, 341, 349, 400, 422, 427, 427*n.*, 497, 502; (in the Panjáb) 454, 456, 486.
Rúdkhánah i Nasheb, 322.

SABZWAR, 55, 389, 498, 601, 601*n.*, 602*n.*, 613*n.*
Safídún, 333, 542.
Saháranpúr, 32.
Sahrind, vide Sarhind.
Sahwán, 335, 335*n.*; vide Siwistán.
Sajáwalpúr, 428.
Sakít, 320, 324*n.*, 435.
Sakráwal (?), 320.
Salímábád, 440.
Salímgaṛh, 415.
Salímnagar, 340.
Salt Range, 456*n.*, 470.
Samánah, 524.
Samarqand, 65, 187, 423, 539, 541, 605*n.*

Sambhal, 32, 34*n.*, 313, 315, 319, 322, 331, 375, 462, 478, 481, 482, 540, 544.
Sambhalharah, 391, 394, 395.
Símbhar, 309, 329, 364*n.*
Sunogar, 478.
Sinchor, 493*n.*, 622.
Sandelah, 384.
Sandhaolí, 395.
Sangánír, 329, 434*n.*
Sanján, 445.
Sántúr, 478.
Sántwás, 112, 372, 373.
Saráí Jájú, 472*n.*
Sárangpúr, 32, 324, 349, 353, 371, 372, 409, 429, 429*n.*
Sarharpúr, 383, 383*n.*
Sarhind, or Sirhind, or Sahrind, 32, 105, 816*n.*, 319, 332, 365, 441*n.*, 526, 544.
Sarkich, near Ahmadábád, 335, 419, 507*n.*, 568*n.*, 603*n.*
Sarnál, 333, 357, 463.
Sarohí, 322, 357, 358, 419.
Saronj, 32, 390, 402, 456, 505.
Saror, 318.
Sarw River, 381*n.*
Sarwár, 381.
Satgáon, 122, 280, 331, 331*n.*, 341, 374, 520.
Satwás (Sántwás), 112, 372, 373.
Sawád and Bijor, 425, 457, 471.
Sáwah, 580, 598*n.*, 600.
Sehondá, 505.
Sewo Fort, 362.
Shábábád, 106, 208, 406.
Shábpúr 335, 357; on the Chanáb, 414*n.*
Shahr i Nau, 401.
Shaikhawat, 328, 360, 419.
Shajá'atpúr, vide Shujá'atpúr.
Shajáwalpúr, 428.
Shamsábád, 372.
Sharífábád, 341.
Shergarh (Qannauj), 320, 398*n.*, 400.
Sherpúr, 399;—'Atáí, 341, 447;—Murcha, 340, 437.
Shihábuddínpúr, 460.
Shíráz, 100, 315, 450, 569, 594, 599, 604.
Shirwán, 132.
Shor, 377*n.*
Shujá'atpúr (Shajá'atpúr), 428.
Shustar, 545, 605*n.*
Siálkoṭ, 32, 365, 605*n.*
Sijistán, 41*n.*
Sikandrábád, 332.
Sikandrah (Bihishtábád), 211, 332*n.*, 347.
Síkrí, vide Fathpúr Síkrí.
Silhaṭ, 332*n.*
Símávali, 286.
Sind Ságar Duáb, 456*n.*
Sindh, 143, 179*n.*, 335, 335*n.*, 362, 363, 364*n.*, 471, 544.
Singror (Nawábganj), 320.
Síráwand, 445.
Sirdhanah (Mírat'h), 394.
Sirdhaolí, 394.
Sirgúja, 122, 618.
Sirhind, vide Sarhind.
Sístán, 314.
Sítpúr, 539.
Siwánah Fort, 357, 399, 399*n.*, 476.
Siwistán, or Sahwán, 335*n.*, 363, 363*n.*, 472, 474, 490, 511, 514.
Siyáh River, 384.
Sodharah, 414*n.*
Sohán River, 487.
Somuát, 326.
Sorat'h, 621.
Soron, 55, 615.
Srínagar (Garhwál) 478; (Kashmír), 346, 380.
Sukk'har, 471, 515.
Sulṭánpúr, 172, 347, 541;—Bilahrí, 400; — in Gakk'har District, 456*n.*
Sulṭánpúr River, 414.
Sumátra, 79, 616.
Sumnám, 286.
Sunárgáon, 313, 400.
Súpá, 336.

Súrat, 31, 34*n.*, 350, 351, 368, 386, 462, 465, 543.
Surkháb River, 384.

TABARHINDAH, 316.
Tabríz, 100, 101, 253, 497, 590, 603, 611*n.*
Ṭahrán (Teheran), 508, 599.
Táibád, 366, 366*n.*
Ṭáiqán, 312.
Tájpúr (Bengal), 342, 436.
Takaroi, vide Tukaroí.
Takht i Sulaimán, 33*n.*
Talambah, 330.
Tálígáon, 484*n.*
Talingánah, 442*n.*
Ṭánḍah (in Bengal), 31, 318, 330, 331, 341, 350, 370, 436.
Tanderah, 395.
Ṭarfán, 460.
Táshkand, 540.
Tattah (Thathah), 106, 143, 194, 206, 279, 314, 317, 332, 335, 361, 362, 363*n.*, 364, 378, 420, 422, 451, 457, 459, 472, 481, 511, 576*n.*
Tenasserim, vide Dahnásarí.
Teráh Mount, 356, 361, 471.
Thálner, 503.
Thánah Langar, 418.
Thánéswar, 104, 538.
Thorí, 398*n.*
Tibbat, or Tibet, 37, 90, 132, 149, 201, 297*n.*, 310, 456, 474, 607*n.*
Tibaupúr, 393.
Tihárah, 133, 396.
Tilah, 486.
Tilpat, 415.
Tilwárah, or the Biáh, 317.
Tirmbak, 478.
Tirmiz, 322.
Tis-hah, 395.
Tissang, 395 (where wrong Tsang).
Todah, 283.
Tons River (Banáras), 339.
Tukaroí, in Oṛisá, 375, 379, 407.
Tulsípúr, 395.
Túrán, 23, 64, 65, 132.
Turkey, 112, 132, 279.
Turshíz, 605.
Ṭús, 609.

UCHH, 544.
Udaipúr, 357, 358, 400, 478, 519.
Ujjain, 31, 312, 333, 373, 406, 429, 478 494, 513*n.*
U'nchhod, 122, 618.
Uṇḍchah, 356, 458, 458*n.*, 487, 618.
U'ntgir (Ootgir), or Deogarh, 550.
U'rchah, vide U'ṇḍchah.

VAZÍRABÁD (Panjáb), 419*n.*
Vhalnah, 394.

WÁSIṬ, 390.
Werkopái, 608*n.*

YAMAN, 82.
Yazd, 92, 93, 603*n.*, 616.

ZÁBULISTÁN, 333, 340, 344, 349, 360.
Zafarnagar, 503.
Zahák (Zahák-Bánáiyán), 444, 446.
Zamánia, founded, 320; 382, 427.
Zanzibar, (Zangbár) 270.
Zirbád [Zorbád], east of Sumatra, 614, 616.

00044216

Digitized with financial assistance from

NSDL
Technology, Trust & Reach

on 07 January, 2017